THE PICTURE THAT WILL LIFT YOU TO THE HEIGHTS!

No. 685 Straight from the Shoulder Talk by Carl Laemmle, President of the Universal Pictures Corporation

FEW STAGE OR SCREEN PRODUCTIONS CARRY THE EMOTIONAL THRILL OR SOUL-UPLIFT that you will get when you see and hear "Captain of the Guard."

THIS IS THE PICTURE WE ORIGINALLY CALLED "LA MARSEILLAISE." I CHANGED THE TITLE because of the difficulty so many people had in pronouncing the French title.

THE SMARTEST EXHIBITORS IN THE WORLD LIKED THE ORIGINAL TITLE FOR SENTIMENTAL reasons, but when it came to box-office reasons they unanimously preferred "Captain of the Guard."

BUT WHATEVER THE TITLE, THE TALE IS SUGGESTED BY THE WORLD-FAMOUS SONG "LA Marseillaise."

AND — MARK MY WORD — WHEN JOHN BOLES COMES MARCHING OVER THE COBBLED streets of Paris at the head of the patriots singing that glorious song, you are going to get a tingling up and down your spinal column such as you have not had for many a year.

THIS, OF COURSE, IS BUT ONE OF THE MANY HIGH SPOTS IN A MASTER PRODUCTION directed by John Robertson.

REMEMBER, TOO, THAT THE MUSIC FOR "CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD" WAS WRITTEN BY Charles Wakefield Cadman, who has composed some deathless songs of the past.

YOU NEVER SAW NOR HEARD THE REAL JOHN BOLES BEFORE. YOU NEVER KNEW the richness and range of his magnificent voice as you will know it in "Captain of the Guard."

IN PRODUCING "CAPTAIN OF THE GUARD" WE PAID, FRANKLY, BUT LITTLE ATTENTION TO historical accuracy. Our aim was to make a great entertainment and at the same time give a handsome setting to the glorious song which stirs the souls of men, no matter what their nationality.

THAT WE HAVE SUCCEEDED HAS ALREADY BEEN DEMONSTRATED, FOR "CAPTAIN OF THE Guard" is one of those very rare pictures such as you get only when those responsible for its making are at least temporarily inspired.

FOR IT IS AN INSPIRATION AND IT WILL LIFT YOU TO NEW EMOTIONAL HEIGHTS—AND keep you there!

Buy All That's Holey

Some exhibitors feel that's what they've done many times after signing a contract for a block of Sound Shorts.

And they have the same feeling as they set in play dates.

Every exhibitor who fails to consider the improvement he can make in every show he puts together by the careful selection of short subjects, contrasting them carefully in theme with the features, is keeping money out of his box office.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS has a world of facts to prove that statement and will record them in a special section on Short Subjects in its issue of April 19.

"UNDER A TEXAS MOON"

THE "inside" from Coast previews is that this is one of those naturals that come along once in a blue moon. The public is going to rave about it.

Frank Fay in the dashing role of a gay caballero is the answer to the maiden's prayer. He's an all around bad hombre, who lies his way into feminine hearts and laughs and fights his way out of danger.

"Under a Texas Moon" will be hailed as one of the season's greatest—a glamorous entertainment—replete with thrills and laughs—the lure of fair women—the melody of Spanish guitars and the picturesque beauty of old Mexico in dazzling hues of Technicolor. (All Outdoors.)

Committee Striving To Agree On Legal Means To Restore Arbitration System

Correct!

Two big guns in the industry, on different occasions this week, were discussing a certain New Yorker well known in the business but not half as important as he thinks he is. And, strangely enough, both topped off their discussions with the same statement:

"He's the biggest leech in the industry."

NEWS Loses Its Columnist On Favoritism Gag

"What price humor?" has an answer in the disappearance from MOTION PICTURE NEWS of the weekly column by Harry Reichenbach, roastmaster of the industry.

The weekly feature was started with enthusiasm, plus hopes, by its author and its publisher. It had indications of being a good stunt for reader entertainment, with the saving grace of helping filmdom's heavy-minded industrialists preserve a sense of humor.

Reichenbach's income tax return reports his greatest source of revenue from the creation of ideas for stories that command space in trade papers as well as newspapers. Contemporaries of MOTION PICTURE NEWS somehow or other managed to see his weekly column in its pages.

Rumblings, whisperings, recording on the wax of the roastmaster's ears, all to the effect that certain of the NEWS' contemporaries regarded his column of comment as evidence of his preference for MOTION PICTURE NEWS against the field, raised the point of "business first."

Whether or not Harry really indicated his preference for the NEWS over all comers is something which the reader will have to determine. The record does show, however, that it was these columns from which emerged the darts of Reichenbachian humor.

Harry's hair is white, but not so white that it can't be worried into an even brighter platinum shade. His livelihood is space and editors and publishers control it. Good business judgment prompted the belief that antagonism of space dispensers wouldn't help lengthen his string of clippings, so, by agreement, but with regret by red-headed, red-covered MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the weekly shaft of delectible drollery has been discontinued—whether temporarily or permanently is another mystery.

Exhibitors Protest Inclusion of Music License Clause in Contract

Arbitration will be restored in the industry if members of the contract committee now in session in New York are able to draft a system which will stand the test of legality.

This is emphasized in proposals of the Hays association, Allied States Association and the M. P. T. O. A., drafted for consideration of the committee. It is reflected also in the attitude of committee members, and their expressed belief that a form of voluntary arbitration will result from the present sessions.

The contract meetings, which got under way Thursday after a day's delay, are being held by an abbreviated group of the 5-5-5 committees, with two members representing each of the respective organizations. Five clauses were considered at yesterday's session. The meetings opened harmoniously after it had been reported during the week that a rift was in prospect.

Proposed elimination of the score charge, or consolidation of it with film rental, will not be provided for in the contract, committee members decided, holding that the matter properly is one between the exhibitor and distributor in each instance. Effort is to be made, however, to arrive at a solution of this problem.

Rental's 4 Days in Advance

The sessions started with speed and despatch Thursday, with five clauses considered during the day's session. One of the most important decided was provision that rentals are to be paid four days in advance of shipment, unless other arrangement is improved by the distributors' home office.

Under the plan, a master contract will be drafted, with a short form contract used in individual transactions. Every exhibitor will be given a copy of the master contract.

Objection of exhibitors to the distributors' efforts to place in the contract a warranty that the theatre is licensed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, blocked action on that clause, which has been laid on the table. Distributors state that their contracts with Electrical Research Products and RCA-Photophone make inclusion of such a clause mandatory.

Exhibitors will be permitted to play available pictures in any order desired, providing they are not behind on their playing arrange-

"The Bookies"

One of Times Square's biggest bootleggers was formerly a big gun on the technical staff of Dr. Lee DeForest, working on sound equipment, and was responsible for the perfection of many parts now in use. He turned thumbs down on the sound proposition because it offered slow pickings, turning to liquor running for a quick haul.

D. W. Gets Dough In Texas After Schenck Split

D. W. Griffith's new financing, reported on the Coast to have been arranged following "D. W.'s" tilt with Joseph M. Schenck, will be obtained, for one picture at least, from a group of Texas capitalists, according to information received by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The picture will concern various phases of the history and development of Texas, be based on a story by Griffith and be an all-color sound production. United Artists will release. Shooting of exteriors was begun recently at Fort Worth by Albert G. Grey, Griffith's general manager. Interior dialogue sequences will be made at Hollywood. D. W. now is on the Coast completing "Abraham Lincoln," and the row with Schenck is said to have been over the latter's reported move in shaving the production budget for the Lincoln film.

"J. D." Sponsoring Fulvue Screen in British Empire

London—J. D. Williams and E. Bruce Johnson, formerly general manager and foreign manager, respectively, of First National, and later connected with World Wide Films, are introducing a new wide screen on the market here which is creating a sensation in film circles owing to its novelty and low price.

The distinctive feature of the new device, the Fulvue, patent rights of which have been obtained from its British inventors by Mr. Williams, is that, while it permits a considerable widening of the film, the height remains unchanged. Standard projection machines can be used with the Fulvue.

British exhibitors are said to be enthusiastic about the device, which will sell for about $100.

THE MUSICALS STRIKE SOME SOUR NOTES

MENTION musicals to many big circuit heads and you find yourself greeted with dubious shakes of the head. The fellows who pay and pay—sometimes—for pictures aren't so hot about this type of picture. Purely a reaction engendered by box-office performance, you understand.

As a matter of faithful reporting, the general inclination is to place this type of talker in the same museum category as courtroom dramas for which, you will recall, there was once a real vogue.

Speculating over the reason for the failure of musicals to tinkle their way through the cash register, the inevitable conclusion is that the producer himself is to blame. The copy-cat tactics which have prevailed in this industry ever since there was such an industry unloosened on the market near and real melodic films in such a flood that it was inevitably apparent the public would tire of them. Just like those courtroom sagas of some months ago did the musicals come through. Everybody had them and it wasn't very long before the imitators found the negatives as well as headaches on their chests.

They'll Click If Super-Fine

And yet, in the face of this condition, there should and probably won't be any real reason why current and future topnotchers built in the musical mould shouldn't prosper. They will have to be super-good, super-deluxe and super-entertaining to get by. The middle ground has been swept away by blundering business tactics and the usual ambition to skim all of the cream from all of the milk at one fell swoop.

The trend no question is definitely away from musicals, but toward what? Nobody knows, least of all the producers whose difficult job it is to supply the public with entertainment.

Pictures Everywhere

This inquiring but unanswered observation is merely a step removed from the bigger query of what types of pictures will dominate the coming season. The job of selecting material to accommodate the needs of a business which ill-advisedly insists upon grinding out six to eight hundred features a year grows increasingly difficult with the passage of the years.

The evil is at the root and centers around the fact that too many pictures are being made. Every year, there is desultory talk about trimming production and, for a time, indications are the intention is serious. But somewhere between the conversational promise and the actual deed the objective is lost and output remains at its set figure.

So it is that the public is fed a spotty entertainment fare. To question the intention of the producer is foolish. He wants to turn out the best product he can and maps his plans accordingly. But what he overlooks is that the system which he himself was largely responsible in setting up has given him two left feet with no right to guide him.

Yet there is some hope. With producer domination in the theatre field, the ever-evasive pledge of fewer and better pictures is closer to realization. Control of outlets has been responsible for the steadily increasing development of extended runs at popular prices in all key cities. The practice has demonstrated to the producer that the idea is feasible and lucrative to boot.

Fewer Pictures, More Money

His revenue is increasing by leaps never before imagined possible, and where once it took a half dozen or more pictures playing a week each to roll up a wad of dollars, experience is demonstrating daily that one picture, rich in box-office draw, can reach the same end. The conclusion is quite apparent. Fewer pictures, better made.

What the subsequent runs will do to pull themselves out of the hole into which curtailed production would propel them is merely this:

They will have to follow the example of the deluxe theatre and prepare themselves for holdovers or make up their minds that the parade is swinging by them. All over the nation it is apparent that the second, third and later runs understand this and are making ready for the new order. Two and three-day bookings are common where one day stands almost universally had prevailed.

If and when the movement reaches a real momentum, and the signs are definitely pointed that way, it will then be possible for producers to check with themselves and really do something to make the legend about fewer and better pictures come true.

Lloyd Corp. Reported Displeased With Publix Percentage Deal: Seek Change?

Al Selig's Big Posting Campaign

Overriding difficulties in the billposting field, Al Selig has completed a nifty job of posting for "Journey's End," his sniping campaign covering a 70-mile radius. The picture, which opens Tuesday at the Gaiety, New York, has been billed via 24's, 8's, 3's and signs throughout Manhattan, Bronx, Long Island, New Jersey and Connecticut. Some 2,500 pointing hand signs are directing traffic to the Gaiety. Al is said to have had the help of the billposting king in completing the "Journey's End" showing.

Goldstone and Schenck Racing "Resurrection"

Hollywood—When Joseph M. Schenck of United Artists stated last week that his company intended to star Dolores Del Rio in a talker remake of "Resurrection" he stirred up plenty of fast action at Tiffany.

The latter has planned a musical version of "Resurrection" for some time. In fact, the adaptation and music had been prepared by Phil Goldstone prior to his joining Tiffany as production head. In his deal with the company, Goldstone was to produce his musical "Resurrection" on a percentage arrangement; and various sets were constructed. Delay was occasioned through casting difficulties in securing singers for the leads, and the picture has been brushed aside to get out the regular program releases. Then it was found United Artists would remake "Resurrection" as Del Rio's next. Tiffany will get right into production with their musical.

Edwin Carewe produced "Resurrection" with Del Rio starred about three years ago as a silent production. The property carries no copyright, and is in the public domain.

Talker Ouster Brings Musician Alimony Cut

Rochester—"Too much talk" won a cut in alimony for Seward W. Seward, once $80-a-week leader of the Gayety orchestra and now employee of a calculating machine firm, in court last week.

Seward's plaint was that inability to obtain a musician's job because of the advent of sound films made it impossible for him to keep up the $20 a week alimony to his ex-wife, Mrs. Maude Seward. Seward has been out of music since the Gayety closed six months ago. The court cut the payment in half.

Fox Fortifies for Advent of Warner in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Fox intends to fortify its position here preparatory to the Warner invasion of the city, and in May starts building of a 4,000-seat house on Wisconsin Ave. There is three-cornered opposition here now, with Fox Midwesco, Universal and L. K. Brin the points of the triangle.

Exhib Yanks Out 'Johnny Jones' as Below Standard

Ottawa—Don Stapleton, manager of the Centre, withdrew First National's "Little Johnny Jones" after its first performance on the ground that it was far below par as entertainment, and substituted "The Furies" for the balance of the week, apologizing in two-column ads for the quality of the picture.

Stapleton looked at the film the night before the play date and decided to put in another picture, but was unable to get a print until late Saturday afternoon. After the first show the substitution was made. The afternoon newspapers carried the changed advertising and the apology ad appeared Monday morning.

Although he declined to comment on his action, it is interesting to note that Stapleton's father, Ben Stapleton, was one of the original franchise holders in the Associated First National organization, the only other charter franchise holder in Canada being the late Harry Brouse of Ottawa.

The Center has always been regarded as the first-run First National house here, although buying other pictures on the open market. Ben Stapleton is the pioneer exhibitor of this city and Don had direct charge of the Centre for some years.

Stapleton's Apology Ad

An Apology - - -

We regret to announce that the picture "Little Johnny Jones," which was advertised to show at the Centre Theatre starting Saturday, was not up to our standard of picture entertainment.

After previewing "Little Johnny Jones," we arranged to replace this feature by the much superior production, "THE FURIES," starring H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson. We recommend "The Furies" to all our patrons.

The Management
CENTRE THEATRE

Producer Representative Has Checked Country on "Welcome Danger"

Reports persist that there is dissatisfaction by officials of the Harold Lloyd Corporation with percentage and flat rental deals on "Welcome Danger," especially in Publix houses, and that the contract held by Paramount for distribution of additional Lloyd pictures may be subjected to changes before the next picture is delivered.

It is known that Leslie Whelan of the Lloyd staff has been on an extended tour of key towns checking results of the "Welcome Danger" runs particularly in Publix houses, and that reports of business done in the majority of instances have strengthened the opinion of Lloyd Corporation officials that Publix should modify its attitude toward the existing percentage arrangements.

Company Wants 60%

It is said that the crux of the dissatisfaction is in the refusal of Sam Katz, head of Publix, to agree to the percentage terms asked by William Frazer, general manager of the Lloyd Corporation, and Katz's insistence that any 60-40 deals, with the heavy end going to the picture, should be reversed with Publix getting the long side.

When the Paramount-Lloyd contract was made, it was reported that an important consideration in Frazer's estimation was the first runs assured in the big majority of key cities through Publix houses or affiliations, these to serve as demonstration engagements in each territory of the real box office value of each Lloyd release, with the results to be used by Kent's staff as conclusive selling arguments in deals for subsequent runs.

Frazer is said to feel that the Publix method of distributing overhead to various of its theatres, and the limitations on local advertising and exploitation campaigns for many of its houses made it difficult for a picture on a percentage basis to fairly reflect its true box office worth and give the producer his just returns unless the percentage is better than 50-50 for the production.

Decisive Conference Soon

Against this Katz is reported to take the position that every picture receives the benefit of a made-to-order audience in any Publix house, because of the regular clientele he believes each theatre under his direction has built for itself, and that producers playing Publix on a percentage cannot expect to benefit beyond the normal or average rental price allotted to pictures played on a flat rental basis until the established clearance figure for average business per house is reached.

Frazer is reported to be planning a trip to New York in the next few weeks for what may be a "change or break" conference with Paramount and Publix officials.

An Insider's Outlook

BIG business as conducted in Hollywood:

Some months ago a certain executive who doesn't know nearly so much about the business as he thinks, stepped into his own studio, fired the producing head via the cash settlement route and began introducing his own system.

The first step was to hire another executive. In the meantime and from the sidelines the representative of a certain raw stock manufacturer began to work on the big boss. Entertained him at week-ends and dinner parties. What the raw stock man was after was to prevent that studio's business from constantly slipping away to a competitor. So he figured the best "in" was to persuade the executive—who didn't-know-it-all-but-thought-he-did to take on another fellow to handle the studio.

The Digging-In Game

And as these matters go, the chiseler finally had his way. His man landed the job. The new producer moved in and, as he dug further into his job, valuable manpower on the lot left. About this time, the Big Boss began to take a lesson or two in haggling from his production chieftain. The arguments over pennies waxed more merrily while the important business of making good pictures was forgotten in the bickering.

The Big Boss thinks he made a swell deal for himself when the record shows his studio is considerably behind schedule. Of the product turned out, one picture had to be remade entirely and another, for which much promise is held, was produced on the lot but independently of the studio mogul.

A New Napoleon

Now comes the laugh. The man controlling the money bags has developed a huge Napoleonic complex. He thinks he's a producer—a great producer—and proposes to use what is really his all too limited knowledge to run the plant himself.

Insiders are conjecturing over the future if what is now in this man's mind comes to pass. They point to an almost identical situation prevailing on this selfsame lot some years ago and are freely predicting a return of a regime of disorganization.

How It's Done

This is only one of the many yarns floating in and out of the Hollywood boulevards. Still one of the choice topics of discussion among those who know is the incident which tells of how an extremely important figure in this industry violated every known business standard and threw ethics clear into the Pacific in an attempt to wheedle away a big male star from a competitive organization. The circumstances ran something like this:

Sunrise

BELIEVE it or not, the 5-5-5 and their diminutive, the 2-2-2, may get somewhere. The open sesame meetings held in New York on Thursday indicated exactly that.

Seemingly, the desire to work out a new contract with an arbitration system that is legally and equitably inside the pale is there. And, if we may be permitted to invite a shower of brickbats, allow us to quote proverb number eleven by reminding that "where there is a will there is a way."

The time was, not so long ago, when the Allied group was scrutinized as a group of rabid revolutionists. Either those who have hurled the remark about have been tainted with the strain themselves or they have suddenly turned broad-minded.

These times sure do move.

The star was really a big timer. As a matter of fact near the top of the heap. His association at the time was pleasant; and although he has now moved to other pastures, there was no reason at the time for dissatisfaction. In view of these circumstances you would think other producers would be courteous enough to let the ham alone. Not so.

The dubious hero of this yarn, more than slightly drunk with power, set his cap for Mr. X and vowed he would leave no stone unturned to reach his objective.

And so, when the star traveled to 'Frisco, this producer hopped an airplane and followed. Through third parties, he endeavored to plant the seeds of discord. He even persisted in his efforts after the star took the precaution of advising by letter that he was entirely happy in his association and actually proposed to renew his then current contract. And still the sabotage continued until, confronted one day by this star's producer flaunting a copy of the incriminating letter, this prominent industry figure backed enough water to land him in China.

The New Chastisement

In Chicago they take 'em for a ride. In the film business, the latest method of delivering verbal punishment assumes this form:

Three principals in this. All big names. All extremely well known. All top-notchers by virtue of accomplishment. No. 1 Man was doing a great job for his company — the balance sheet emphasized the bitter truth to his competitors.

He was stepping along at a fast clip, signing people on all sides. So as to further bulwark his organization. One day he bid and nabbed a choice bit of manpower with whom No. 2 and No. 3 Men had been negotiating. They turned peevish and figured No. 1 Fellow should be told whose path he was crossing.

So they determined upon a dinner. And who would you think was the honor guest? Right, No. 1 Man. All very pleasant. Really quite de luxe. The various courses had spent their course and Corona time had arrived. They retired to the library and hardly had the door closed when No. 2 and No. 3, as one, began to swish the verbal lash. It raged hot and heavy and fists were about to fly.

But No. 1 keeps himself in pretty good physical trim. Swims, boxes and that sort of thing. Therefore, nothing happened. The conclusion of this yarn is merely this:

If you should find three studios launched on a marauding program with two of them centering their barrage on the third, you will then learn who the principals are. You won't from us.

Invasion of Pennsylvania by Sam Katz Seen as Secret Move in Warner Behalf

U. S. Silent

Washington—Officials of the Dept. of Justice decline comment upon what effect, if any, the Thacher decree may have upon the contract conferences now being held in New York. They also refuse to indicate informally as to what course the department might pursue in the matter.

Warner Deal for Brunswick Co. Is Reported Closed

Negotiations which have been under way for a considerable time for the taking over by Warners of part of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., business, thus affording the former an entry into the radio field, are understood to have been settled. The details of the deal could not be obtained owing to inability to reach any executives who would be in a position to confirm the report, considered authentic, although others in both concerns refused to comment.

Flinn, Lally Indicted For Pathé Studio Fire

Indictments charging manslaughter in the second degree have been voted by a New York Grand Jury against John C. Flinn, vice-president, and Henry F. Lally, studio manager, as a result of the disastrous fire last December in the Pathe Studio in New York, which caused the death of eleven persons. Three weeks ago another Grand Jury refused to vote indictments, although both men were fined $500 each by Magistrate George W. Simpson. Following the failure of the first Grand Jury to indict, the men were discharged in Homicide Court. They have appealed the conviction in the Magistrate's Court.

U. S. Sets Date for W. C. Protection Trial

Los Angeles—After several postponements, the Department of Justice expects to bring to trial its long-pending action against West Coast Theatres and a long string of prominent distributing companies.

The extensive protection required by West Coast and granted by distributors is the question under Government fire. The trial was slated for April 1, but was again postponed until the end of the month. No more delays are expected.

Publix Scouts Surveying Territory for Theatres, Reports State

Philadelphia—The inside of Sam Katz's avowed intention to invade the Warner stronghold in Pennsylvania is arousing considerable curiosity here.

Is the move really on behalf of Publix or is it an undercover effort to keep others out? In view of the close working arrangement between Publix and Warners some see in the latest of checker-board plays a desire on the part of Publix to protect the extensive Warner holdings in Philadelphia.

On the surface, the story has it that Publix has its scouts out surveying the Pennsylvania territory preparatory to a building campaign. Katz is declared to have decreed an extensive invasion of the stronghold of Harry Warner's lieutenant, Spyros Skouras.

Katz for some time is reported to have been surveying the Pennsylvania situation but has found no big chains left, except the Comerford circuit of 130 theatres.

Publix, the yarn states, will build a downtown Philadelphia house, despite the fact the city already is overseated. Publix, it is said, for months has been contemplating an expansion here. Some time ago it was rumored that the proposed Al Boyd chain would be backed by Publix.

Meanwhile, Joseph Plunkett, general manager of RKO, also is reported scouting sites and possible acquisitions throughout the state.

Localities see no particular reason for Publix entering the city in view of the extensive play which Paramount pictures get over the Warner string. This factor is pointed to as evidence that the Katz avowal embraces something under cover which surface purveyors of news don't get.

Boyd Acquires Strand in Allentown; Chain Grows

Philadelphia—Al Boyd has purchased the Strand, Allentown, from B. H. Stuckert and O. H. Gernert. The house operates under a Paramount franchise.

Boyd takes possession the end of March.

Mary Nolan Says 'Uncle' And Gets a Happy Ending

Universal City—It's all hunky-dory now between Mary Nolan and Universal, and the company has "big things" planned for the star. A quick patching up of things followed the recent controversy, when Miss Nolan walked off the lot in a huff. She had objected to her role in "What Men Want," so Pauline Starke was substituted in the part. A real blow-up between star and company followed. Now, Miss Nolan swears by—not at—Carl Laemmle, Jr., and says she guesses that both "just acted hastily."

Oh Yeah?

One good thing about the master and short form of contract being proposed at the conferences now under way, said an exhibitor conferee, is that the clause relating to payment of music license will appear only in the master form, and the "exhibitor won't be insulted by it every time he signs the short form contract."

Film Men Are Again Indicted In Julian Case

Hollywood—With new evidence presented to District Attorney Buron Fitts in the Julian Oil Company smash of 1927, the Los Angeles County Grand Jury has returned indictments against four film men and 34 others in Los Angeles charging them with usury.

Included in the list were: Adolph Ramish, former executive of West Coast Theatres; H. W. Chotiner, independent theatre magnate; Motley Flint, former local banker who was financially interested in Warner Brothers several years ago; Louis B. Mayer, vice-president in charge of production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer; and Joe Toplitsky, real estate operator of prominence and well known in the motion picture industry.

Blanket return of the indictments, which were served and dismissed three years ago, was necessary on account of the state law on statute of limitations. Many of the 38 named by the grand jury are said to be innocent victims of stock pools reported to have been recommended by certain local banking interests.

In the case of Louis Mayer, as well as others, it is understood that he participated in the stock pool on the advice of bankers who indicated the corporation had hidden assets and new oil fields which would boom the stock to high figures. Mayer, like most of the others in the group of 38, had no idea that the stock pools were organized to cover up the stock over-issue. Close observers of the situation feel that most of the 38 men indicted will be cleared when they come up for trial on the usury charges.

The report of Paramount-Famous Lasky Corp. for the year ended Dec. 28, 1929, shows consolidated net income of $15,544,544, after charges and provision for Federal taxes, equivalent to $5.78 a share on the 2,685,313 no par common capital shares outstanding Dec. 31. This compares with $8,713,063 in 1928, or $4.22 a share.

Otterson Opposed To Compromise By Bankers In Fox Financial Muddle?

Seen as Stumbling Block to Proposed Get-Together of Rival Banking Groups

Despite efforts of the banking interests to get together on a compromise in the Fox financial tangle, likelihood of any settlement is seen as remote, MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns, because of asserted opposition of John E. Otterson, president of Electrical Research Products, to any compromise.

Otterson, one of the trustees, figures his position a strong one, it is asserted, due to the Supreme Court ruling upholding the trusteeship, and refusal of the Federal Court to interfere with jurisdiction of state courts in the case.

The week's developments in the Fox situation included the following:

Fox bought 224,000 shares of Gaumont British on margin without knowledge of his bankers, and his companies were facing financial ruin when Fox turned to Otterson and Harry L. Stuart, Joseph M. Proskauer, counsel for the co-trustees, asserted in opposing a motion by attorney for Fox to withdraw the action he brought in Supreme Court to dissolve the trusteeship agreement. The withdrawal is being requested on the ground that a broader suit in which the trust agreement will be tested has been filed in Federal Court.

Sheehan Sues for Reported Debt

Winfield R. Sheehan, who is suing for an injunction to restrain Fox from carrying out the Lehman-Bancamerica-Blair-Dillon, Read refinancing plan, this week filed a second action against Fox to recover money he says Fox owes him.

Meanwhile, the sponsors of this financing plan are understood to have withdrawn their offer, demanding that Fox pay $975,000 or 1½ per cent of the principal of the proposed loan. A statement by Samuel Untermyer, attorney for Fox, states that the letter sent by the banking group to Fox directors offered to relieve them of their agreement to carry out the plan, but that the situation otherwise is unchanged.

F. N. Star Suffers From Overdose of Own Publicity

Hollywood—First National is said to be having plenty of trouble with one of its lady stars who is reported to have developed a keen line of temperament since she took her first mike-and-camera test on the lot.

A ritzy manner toward everyone, from the top executives to the gateman, plus a daily dozen of complaints about everything on the lot, from the company trade mark to the dryness of the climate, are among the temperamental evidences which imply an early showdown, with a chance that there will be an open break.

New Compson-RKO Pact

Hollywood—Betty Compson has signed a new contract with RKO which calls for featured appearances in three productions during the coming year.

"U" Making 20 Features Next Season

Twenty features and proportionately fewer number of shorts will comprise Universal's output for the coming year, Last year, the schedule was 50 features. Brands and brand names will be eliminated, according to plans. All pictures are to be handled individually as units at the studios. The policy change was announced early this year by MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Two production units already have been headed respectively by E. M. Asher and Alfred De Mond.

Insull Seeking to Destroy Fox Firm Attorney Charges

Invasion of the industry by the powerful Insull public utility interests of Chicago, via control of Fox through Halsey, Stuart, is planned in an "amazing conspiracy" to destroy the Fox firm, Samuel Untermyer, counsel for Fox, charged in Federal Court, in his unsuccessful argument to restrain Harry L. Stuart and John E. Otterson from exercising any power as trustees.

Harry L. Clark, president of General Theatres Equipment, which is allegedly controlled by the Insull interests, was associated with Halsey, Stuart in effort to obtain control of the Fox firm, Untermyer asserted. Richard E. Dwight, counsel for the trustees, protested against Untermyer's outlining of the plans for an offer for control of both Fox companies and Loew's. His motion, however, was overruled.

It has been persistently reported for several weeks that Clark has been angling to secure for cash Fox's Class B stock in Fox Film and Fox Theatres. The "B" stock of the film corporation controls the voting and is the block held in the vaults of the Bankers' Trust Company under the trusteeship agreement signed by Fox with Stuart and Otterson on December 3.

Wilmer Denies Circuit Sale to Warner Brothers

Richmond, Va.—What loomed as the biggest theatrical deal in this section of the country in recent years has come to naught for the present, at least, according to Sydney Wilmer, who denies that the Wilmer and Vincent properties in Virginia have been sold to Warners.

"Negotiations were under way for several months, but the matter was dropped," said Mr. Wilmer, who added that Mr. Vincent is on the Coast and nothing will be done in his absence. He declared that there is nothing in the reports that the chain of theatres in Virginia and the Keystone state had changed ownership.

Hughes Bidding $37,500,000 for Fox W. C. Chain

Hollywood—Howard Hughes, millionaire producer of the $3,000,000 picture, "Hell's Angels," is reported to have offered $37,500,000 for the outright purchase of the Fox West Coast Circuit. While a million denials are made, the report persists.

Local insiders also claim that several months ago a deal was started whereby Fox was to borrow $20,000,000 from Hughes, with the latter to receive fifty-one per cent of the stock in the West Coast chain as security. Hughes, it is said, balked at a provision demanded by Fox that at the end of two years the latter would have the right to buy back the fifty-one per cent for $22,000,000, with Hughes insisting on a permanent interest, despite offers of a ratio of the circuit's profits during the two-year period.

Now, according to reports, Hughes senses the possibility that the present Fox financial problem might be met in part by acceptance of his offer, which would immediately make him a factor in chain theatre circles, and provide a big wedge in negotiating distribution for his productions.

Academy Awards Issued To Mary, Baxter, M-G-M

Hollywood—Annual awards by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences for especial production accomplishments during 1929 brought several surprises when they were announced at the yearly banquet.

Warner Baxter was presented with an award of merit for his performance in "In Old Arizona." Mary Pickford received a similar award for her performance and Southern accent in "Coquette." Frank Lloyd was honored with an award for his direction of "Weary River" and "The Divine Lady," with Cedric Gibbons getting the honors among art directors for his work on "The Bridge of San Luis Rey." Photography was recognized with an award to Clyde DeVinna for his achievements in angles and effects in "White Shadows in the South Seas."

Hans Kraly got top position among writers with an award for writing "The Patriot," and M-G-M took a collective bow with an award for "Broadway Melody" as the pioneer outstanding filmusical.

Trust Busting Tactics Due For A Fall; Goaded Industry Sees Relief In Sight

Laws Restricting Expansion of Legitimate Trade Are Doomed

Washington — Dissatisfaction with the operation of the anti-trust laws is gradually developing to a point where serious consideration will be given to the desirability of enacting new legislation to modernize statutes now many years old and designed for a period of far different business practices and needs.

The Sherman anti-trust law was enacted to meet the trust-building ambitions of business leaders of a day of ruthless competition which threatened to drive the smaller business man out of the field, leaving only an octupus which would drain the people of their money. This was the basis of the famous Roosevelt "trust busting."

That the anti-trust activities of the government a quarter-century ago were of extreme value and benefit to the country has never been denied. But since then, business and business ethics have changed; there are today well-defined trusts which are of admitted benefit to the people through the lower prices made possible by economical, efficient production—but they are operating under laws which many leaders declare to be as obsolete as the old English statute requiring that every railway train should be preceded by a man on foot, carrying a flag.

In the past few years there has come a demand for changes in laws—both more repressive and less restrictive. This divided sentiment is shown in legislation now pending in Congress. The less-repressive element is embodied in the so-called Kelly fair trade bill, which would permit manufacturers of trade-marked or named commodities to fix the prices at which their goods may be resold, now prohibited by anti-trust law.

No Chance for Bills This Session

The more restrictive faction is represented by the Tinkham and Brookhart bills requiring that corporations engaging in interstate commerce should secure licenses from the Federal Trade Commission, which would first make an investigation to determine the legitimacy of their proposed activities and which at all times could meet any threat of undue restriction of trade or monopoly by the revocation of license. The Brookhart bill goes further than does that of Representative Tinkham, dealing with such matters as dividends, salaries, etc.

None of the pending legislation will be enacted this session. It is, however, indicative of the thought which is being given the subject of business regulations. The Tinkham bill is possible—that is, it could be enacted, possibly with modifications, without materially handicapping business, once business became reconciled to the idea that the Government has adopted a definite policy. In some quarters, legislation along this line is declared to be preferable to the present uncertainty of Department of Justice action and the Government's "he loves me, he loves me not" policy.

Brookhart's Bill Is Tough

The Brookhart bill, however, is far more forbidding than any anti-trust legislation the government has ever adopted; a paternalistic measure, with the threat of a spanking hanging over every business man who seeks to extend his activities, however legitimately. It is the voice of agriculture crying out in the wilderness for that ideal socialistic state of society in which no man's earnings shall be more than another's. By the mere limitation of earnings, initiative is taken out of industry, for men go into business in the hope of making good returns and few indeed invest their capital for purely altruistic purposes.

As the Kelly resale-price maintenance bill is indicative of the feeling of impatience with out-dated laws, so the Tinkham and Brookhart measures bespeak the distrust, possibly more in the manner of their enforcement, of the statutes designed to prevent the formation of industries which will dominate their field. The present anti-trust laws cover the horizontal trust, but within the past decade or so there has been developed the vertical trust.

The difference, briefly, is that the horizontal trust is the amalgamation of groups in the same line and on the same level of business—in the motion picture industry, for instance, the merging of all producers would be a horizontal trust; the vertical trust is one in which an organization is totally independent, owning or controlling every activity from the production of the raw material to the retail sale of the finished goods—Henry Ford is by way of being a vertical trust and there are organizations in the film industry which are vertical trusts by nature, producing and distributing their own pictures and showing them in their own theatres. Some years ago, in Germany, Hugo Stinnes was a combination of horizontal and vertical trust—a house which fell of its own weight once the sustaining hand and mind of its creator was lost.

Confusion of Effort

So into the situation today—and this applies particularly to the motion picture industry—there has come the effort to cope with the vertical trust by the methods designed for control of the horizontal trust. And there has come, too, a realization that a trust, per se, is not a pernicious organization, but may meet a real need by bringing the order of controlled, efficient, economical production, distribution and sale out of the chaos of unregulated competition between small units, with their duplication of effort and consequent waste. But the vertical trust is not fitted by the coat of horizontal trust legislation, and the good trust is no more permissable than the octupus of 1905.

Congress, of course, moves slowly in the enactment of remedial legislation for anything short of a calamity, and there is no complaint on that score which safeguards against hasty legislation, but there is growing the realization of the need for modernization of our anti-trust statutes which in the next few years will crystallize into an intelligent reconsideration of the need for business legislation which will clearly define the line of demarcation between what is right and what is wrong, eliminating "codes of ethics" and "informal approvals" and all uncertainty.

Hoping for Relief

Modernization of the anti-trust statutes to cope with existing business conditions, in the opinion of many, would be a welcome relief for the industry. A number of actions against film concerns have been brought under both the Sherman and Clayton Acts, charging monopoly, the contention often having been made that prosecution was under laws antiquated by business development.

At present, a number of anti-trust actions are pending against various concerns and individuals in the industry.

Motion Picture Industry to Benefit from Fight on Trust Laws

Eastman Kodak Profits Break Earning Records

Rochester, N. Y.—The Eastman Kodak Co. and its subsidiaries broke all previous records in 1929 with a net profit of $22,004,915, and earnings after preferred dividend payments were equal to $9.56 a share on the common stock.

Playing Ball

Providence—So interested are local fans in pictures that the "News-Tribune," "Journal" and "Bulletin" have innovated a new reviewing policy, catching first runs a day prior to openings and plugging them before the run commences. Showmen say the gag has a decided influence on the box office, receipts jumping considerably in the first week.

The Way of All Flesh

Hollywood—"There are many funny situations existing in Hollywood" states a recent arrival from New York.

"For example, when a producer's wife is starring in a picture, you'll never find that producer around the stage or sets but when the star in a picture happens to be a producer's "find" just try and pry him loose from the set, location, story conference or cutting rooms."

Top Money Asked for "Journey's End," So NEWS Gets Audience Type Review

Checks for Exhibs with Special Showing to Get Woman Angle

Learning that Oscar Hanson expects Tiffany's sales staff to get top money from exhibitors for its production, "Journey's End," Motion Picture News asked for a private screening for a group of people selected by it to check the degree of feminine appeal and the probable average audience reaction to it.

The play, one of the record money makers of all time, is among the first of the outstanding legitimate hits to be transferred to the screen in sound with scarcely any change from the stage script. Motion Picture News believed that much of the screen value would depend on the success of capturing with microphone and camera the subtleties and fine shadings of characterization which have made critics rave in their reviews of the stage show.

Further, from a motion picture audience angle, demanding generous measures of romance, comedy and action in its average screen fare, "Journey's End" provided little of the conventional formula, and hence might be a serious problem to exhibitors in figuring what they can safely pay for it.

Not one of the individuals invited to review the picture for Motion Picture News is in the film business. They were lawyers, bankers, mothers, clerks, stenographers, houseworkers—each fairly representing a cross section of the population in any city or town.

What they think about "Journey's End" is presented here, good or bad, for exhibitors who will be asked to take the tap for a record price to book it.

Cora Willett, Clerk

"'Journey's End' cannot be expressed in words. From faintest of war's rumble in the beginning the mind and body become a part of the tragic drama over the ocean. The hopelessness and despair of humans who are held to the rules of the war game—the sportsmanship of even the weakest are remarkable and I am sure never forgettable in this picture.

"The sounds in the picture are too realistic to promise an audience a peaceful evening. The action throughout the story could not be better played.

"Those who still have the least dislike for sound pictures should see and hear 'Journey's End' for an unusual and stirring evening."

Mrs. Camilla McVickar

"The human emotions that are presented and pictured in 'Journey's End' are a great achievement in motion talking pictures. Words are not enough to express one's feelings after seeing and hearing this picture."

Nifty

According to one wiseacre, explorers who film elephants in the jungle track them to their haunts by the smell of peanuts on the elephants' breath.

They DO Think

Hollywood—A member of the film colony recently exhibited real presence of mind when his auto struck a lawyer. He engaged him on the spot to defend him in case of a suit for damages.

Donald McVickar, Stock Broker

"Was not in war. Never saw play.

"However, Tiffany production of 'Journey's End' so well directed and executed that it was ghastly.

"However, think that in certain parts (particularly beginning) that it was much too long drawn out—that it would not hold public interest through that period whereas spoken drama with the people in front of you might. I think that talking moving pictures need more action (or interruption) per period of time than a spoken play."

Mrs. L. M. Chisholm, Housewife

"A most stirring performance by a company of exceedingly intelligent actors. The director deserves unlimited credit."

Dr. Israel Wang, Physician

"Pictures of this character should and must be produced and shown to the masses before and during a war. Then the work will be accomplished and the picture will be unnecessary. A glorious piece of work!"

Madolin Wang, Housewife

"An excellent picture. As good as the play, if not better."

Elsie Klemmer, Housewife

"Realistic. Superb acting. Should make for peace."

Sara Gordon, Clerk

"A gripping and powerful story very well acted. It shows the fears and emotions that the men go through in the trenches."

Sallye Phillips, Clerk

"A stirring and powerful story. Intensely real. The war in its most gruesome aspect. Its characters are true to life. The acting is by far the best I have seen. Captain Stanhope is a character well to be remembered. Although it leaves one with an unforgettable memory of its great vastness it will stand out as one of the greatest of war pictures. This picture will long be remembered. It holds one's interest to the end."

L. C. Klemmer, Executive

"So exceptional in illustrating intimate feelings under trying conditions it cannot help but catch the sentiment of the public to the extent of magic. The personal interest of so many of us through our connections with men in the war will unquestionably cause many others to see the picture.

"The photography is rather good for the possibilities war scenes afford—and this combined with the human element involved should make the picture one of the features of the year."

Mary Higgins, Clerk

"'Journey's End' is the best war picture I have ever seen barring none. The action and realism is so true to that which I have always imagined it would be. Everyone played their parts to perfection, especially Captain Stanhope.

"It should please most of the general public who like their pictures to have plenty of thrills and all that make a picture worth while seeing."

Hazel Blair, Clerk

"I certainly did like 'Journey's End.' The picture was more vivid than anything I have ever read about the war. It shows the futility of war, and may I say the disarmament conference might benefit by seeing it?"

Nina Aporte, Secretary

"Until I saw 'Journey's End' I had never had a clear idea of what a war is. I never thought it was so terrible and so sad."

Marie R. Pelletier, Stenographer

"I certainly did enjoy 'Journey's End.' It gave me a better idea of the war, of what the men in the trenches went through and how they lived than any book I have read or other pictures I have seen of the war."

F. C. Fisher, Lawyer

"The most stirring war exhibit of them all. It is more convincing than the stage production. The trench raid in which Osborne was lost was the most realistic display of modern warfare that I have witnessed.

"The sound effects were perfect; the photography faultless, and the faint glow of the candle in the dingy dugout was an effective ending. I thought the last scene between Stanhope and Raleigh was too long. The miracle of Stanhope's work was that not one hair became misplaced."

Julia A. P. Fisher, No occupation

"Screen version of 'Journey's End' follows the play very closely but seemed to me to move very slowly. The entire cast was excellent. The direction of the picture was good and no dramatic effects were overdone. A very fair picture."

War Picture Is Hailed As Stirring and Up to Stage Play

W. E. Denies Infringement of Aleograph Patents

San Antonio—General demurrer has been filed in the local Federal Court by the Electrical Research Products, in which the company denies infringing on any patents of the Aleograph Co. Erpi sets up that patents set up by the Aleograph company alleged to be infringed upon are owned and were developed by Erpi for its various sound processes.

No date has been set for the trial. In the suit, Aleograph seeks an injunction to prevent Erpi from using certain patents on the grounds of infringement. An accounting of profits derived from these inventions is also asked.

Sound Increases Iowa House Business by 300%

Dayton, Ia.—Henry Killinger, who has had sound equipment at his theatre for the past year, reports that the new pictures have increased his business 300 per cent. He has the only theatre in Dayton, a town of 900. He draws from a wide surrounding community.

Dazed Producers Trying to Dope Out Public Taste; Shortage Threatened

We Hope It's True

Hollywood.—A local reporter covering studios here reports the doom of Hollywood's "hey-hey" girls in this manner:

"Oscar Strauss's operetta 'Danube Love Song' is almost ready to shoot. The name promises sentiment and sweetness, a gradual progress toward the dignified beauty of other days. Each development along this line is driving the hey-hey girls farther from the centre of interest.

"They are the lassies who made this village the hey-hey's. Flask in garter, hair brushing about their pert faces. Dimpled knees showing. Clothing scant and close-fitting. Conversation. Ideas defunct."

Fall Product Release Dates Advanced to Meet Acute Situation

Theatres are facing a shortage of pictures for summer showings, which will require speed and co-operation if it is not to become acute.

With the industry and public tastes changing so rapidly that some producers are having difficulty in keeping pace, schedules are being re-arranged and pictures discarded, in a measure which presages hard sledding for some theatres during the summer ahead.

For instance, a number of producers who had scheduled revues and backstage dramas on their current programs, now are discarding these vehicles, feeling that the public is surfeited with films of the type.

To meet this situation, companies are endeavoring to revise and speed up schedules, with some of them planning to pre-release some of next season's product in May and June to help out.

Exit the Writer

Hollywood.—While completing scenariotizing the climax of a dramatic assignment, a writer under contract to one of the major studios got a quick call from the front office.

He was calmly told that the studio desired to cancel the unexpired term of his contract, and would make a settlement with him. No explanation was given, and the deal was made right there, with the writer moving out without finishing his story assignment.

Report has it that measure was taken on account of morality clause—just what the studio had on the particular writer could not be learned.

Battle Raging in Canada Against Ban on Children

Montreal—Col. John A. Cooper, president of the Motion Picture Distributors of Canada, and N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Famous Players Canadian Corp., were the principal speakers at meetings of the Provincial Theatre Managers' Association of Quebec when the latter organized a campaign to oppose enforcement of the measure prohibiting admission of children under 16 to picture houses and the Lord's Day act forbidding Sunday performances. In newspaper interviews they stressed the possible losses resulting from enforcement.

Considerable money was spent by the Quebec organization in lobbying while test cases were arranged when the anti-juvenile law became effective, these being carried through several courts until the intimation was given that an agreement had been reached whereby the exhibitors of the province mutually submit to the law concerning juveniles, on the understanding that exhibitors would not be molested for Sunday performances.

The Quebec association then became more or less inactive, but the heavy legal fees and legislative expenses are largely unpaid, it is said. It is also reported that the large companies, such as Famous Players, United Amusements, and Consolidated Theatres, will shoulder the obligations, reputed to be $60,000, because of lack of response on the part of the average exhibitor.

Corrigan Aids Schwab

Hollywood—Lloyd Corrigan, Paramount contract writer, will assist Larry Schwab in the direction of "Follow Thru," Paramount's filmusical version of the stage musical comedy. Corrigan has been with the company nearly five years.

'Red' Meetings In Canada Theatres Imperil Licenses

Windsor, Ont.—Exhibitors in this city have become involved in the fight against the anti-government activities of the Communists and as a result they find themselves in a precarious situation. The Canadian Legion, which is bearing the brunt of the anti-Red campaign, has become incensed at the action of motion picture theatres in renting their houses for Red meetings, and the war veterans have sent petitions to the government asking that the license of theatres allowing such meetings be revoked.

Promotions and Additions Liven Sono Art Sale Staff

Budd Rogers, director of sales for Sono Art-World Wide, has added the following men to the sales staff: Thomas McDermott at Pittsburgh; M. Edwards, Buffalo; C. A. Anderson, Charlotte; J. McBride, Omaha; Harry Flarity, Washington; Frank Leonard, Philadelphia.

Mr. Rogers also promoted Jack Graham to feature sales manager at Pittsburgh; Russell Wehrle of Philadelphia, in addition to being feature sales manager, has been promoted to district feature sales manager covering Philadelphia, Washington, Charlotte and Atlanta; Andy Dietz of the St. Louis office, in addition to being feature sales manager, has been promoted to district manager covering Dallas, New Orleans, Omaha, Des Moines and Kansas City.

Flexibility for Records Claimed By New Process

Washington—Disc records that bend easily and will not break, are not affected by heat or moisture, and that improve with use, are said to have been perfected in Germany, where the U. S. Commercial Attache reports perfection of a process by the German Dye trust (I. G. Farbenindustrie), in co-operation with the Rhenish-Westphalian Explosives Co. The new raw material is a special cellon product, and is more expensive than the shellac used in the present method. A new company, Phonycord G. m. b. H., Berlin, was formed to market the records.

Features of the new records are said to be great flexibility, very light weight and absolute proof against breakage. The weight of the new records is only one-seventh of that of shellac records, and the thickness only one-fifth. Apart from a considerable reduction of transportation expenses, the usual insurance against breakage will become superfluous, it was pointed out.

Furthermore, it is claimed that the records are not affected by heat or moisture, that they are non-inflammable and less sensitive to mechanical actions than the shellac products. The sound reproduction is claimed to be just as good as from shellac records.

Must Use Blunt Needles

The new records must be played with a blunt needle. As a result they can be played almost indefinitely without being played out. As a test a part of the record was played 250 times and was then played before an audience none of whom were said to be able to indicate what part of the record had been subjected to the test.

Although the new record is very thin, it can be played from both sides as the needle stretches the groove which contracts again immediately after. There is practically no noise from the needle.

"Pictures Must Be Sold in Wholesale Blocks," Hays Tells Radio Audience

Small Theatres Cannot Have Proper Product Without This System, He Says

Twenty million radio listeners heard Will H. Hays, as a guest of "Nation's Business" magazine on NBC network, relate the trials and tribulations with which our industry and the M. P. P. D. A., has had to contend in recent years. The vast unseen audience heard Hays say that "pictures must be sold in wholesale blocks. Otherwise it is impossible to serve the small theatre at film rentals guaranteeing to suburban and small town audiences the same quality of entertainment enjoyed by their big city neighbors" and "because, under that system, it is possible to include in the year's programs an increasing supply of pictures made in advance of old box-office standards." Block booking has been under heavy fire by the government over a lengthy period. The Federal Trade Commission turned thumbs down on the practice when that body declared it illegal.

Hays' address was in the nature of a three-thousand word boost on the industry and M. P. P. D. A. He touched the major phases in detail, admitting that "in the fulfillment of 10,500,000 yearly contractual obligations, there is a vast room for honest differences of opinion," and stated that "distributor representatives are now in conference with various groups of theatre owners, working out a revision of the arbitration system, in the light of changing conditions." Of course, Hays omitted mention of Judge Thacher's decree which declared arbitration illegal.

Tells of Entrance Into Films

Hays gave "examples of the many factors that caused the industry to undertake, in 1922, the general policy of self-discipline which I have had a part in shaping and executing." He said "the silent motion picture business passed from speculation to solidity. It became possible to secure money for needed business expansion at fair terms of interest; fair trade practices were developed; responsibility was recognized and public accountability accepted."

Markum to Run Again for Representative

Indianapolis—Louis R. Markum, local theatre operator and Indiana state representative in 1929, has announced his candidacy for renomination on the Republican ticket. He recently refused appointment by the governor to the newly-created office of commissioner of the game warden service, in order to become a legislative candidate. He has been in the theatre business here for twelve years and was secretary of the state and city organization of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America for some years.

Buys Vitacolor Processes

Negotiations for the acquisition of the color processes of Vitacolor, Inc., by Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., have been concluded.

Hays a Liaison Officer?

Will H. Hays, in his radio speech as guest of "Nation's Business" magazine, told the listening public that the M. P. P. D. A., which he heads is "the liasion between the motion picture industry and the people — and, on the other hand, the messenger of public opinion which transmits to our industry the constructive criticism, study and cooperation which socially-minded elements in our community are able to focus upon our public problems."

Talkers Ousted 20,000 Musicians, Green Maintains

Washington—Twenty thousand musicians have been thrown out of work by talking pictures and no place can be found for most of them, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, told the Senate commerce committee in testifying about the extent of unemployment in the country.

"The hands and muscles of these men are soft," he said, "and they are unfitted for manual labor. They have spent their lives developing an art and it is almost impossible for them to find other work under present conditions. Some of them have become insurance agents."

Ohio Censors Allow O. K. Leader at End of Film

Cleveland—Censorship leaders may now be shown either at the beginning or at the end of sound pictures exhibited in this state, according to John L. Clifton, director of education and head of the Ohio Censor Board. Formerly all censorship leaders were required to be placed at the beginning. Local exhibitors had placed before Director Clifton the fact that this location of the censorship leader put the picture out of synchronization.

Shun French Talkers

Ottawa—A French language picture has gone begging in Ottawa, local exhibitors refusing to touch it in spite of the large French colony. Managers apparently are laying off French talker versions despite the success of "The Love Parade" in both French and English form some weeks ago at the Imperial and Regent theatres.

M-G-M Gets Lambert

Eddie Lambert, musical comedy and vaudeville star, will remain in Hollywood to starve or succeed in talkers. Lambert, who recently finished a series of comedies for Educational, moved over to M-G-M for appearances in "The Big House" and "March of Time" revue.

Mack Buys L. A. House

Los Angeles—D. Mack has purchased the Hidalgo from M. Trallis.

Europeans Form Unions Against American Films

Washington—Unprecedented activities in film circles in many sections of Europe indicate that the ground work is being laid for reciprocal combinations aimed to combat the hold of American pictures in foreign lands. Sound is to be used extensively and English versions made for this market.

The tendency of European film and cinema interests should be toward consolidation and a united front against extra-European interests, declared Ludwig Scheer, president of the German C. E. A., in a London interview recently, and his expression is accepted as the keynote of the new movement. He declared that a closer cooperation between British and German producers and exhibitors should be effected, with similar alliances with France, the objective being a united front to bargain with American film interests.

The Tobis concern announced a short time ago that it is negotiating for a joint production agreement with the Svensk Filmindustrie of Stockholm, the outstanding point being the scheduled production of Swedish versions of German sound films.

Spain, likewise, is exhibiting signs of competition with the rest of the world. Following the completion of the film "La Cancion del dia" the producers left for London to edit it for English-speaking countries.

"Unborn Child" Draws 2 Capacity Houses in K. C.

Kansas City—Nugent J. Flynn has reopened the Globe playing "Her Unborn Child," which he expects to hold for an extended run. The first two days saw capacity houses. After this picture closes, Flynn is planning a schedule of picture and vaudeville programs. The Globe has been closed for several months.

Winnie Returns

Hollywood—Winnie Lightner, Warner star comedienne, arrived back in Hollywood from an eastern personal appearance tour, and immediately starts production of her next filmusical, "The Life of the Party," which Roy Del Ruth will direct.

All Serene at Hays Meeting as Code Of Ethics for Producers Is Adopted

To the Pure

Under a strict interpretation of the Code Hays, a director would not be permitted to picture Eliza crossing the ice without throwing the sympathy on the side of the bloodhounds. —N. Y. Herald Tribune.

"Graphic" Calls For Ouster of Film Censor

An attack on the activities of picture censors and demanding that the people, instead of "snoopers," be allowed to exercise their own judgment as to picture standards, was delivered by the New York Graphic in a full-page editorial based on the adoption of the Hays code. The editorial follows.

"In deciding to censor its own product, the motion picture industry has taken a wise step to avoid the interference of meddling boards and agencies.

"But for all that, the work of the snoop brigade can be detected in the set of rules which has been adopted as the standard under which motion pictures must be made.

"These standards are to a large extent highly worthy.

"In other elements they are highly questionable.

"No one, for instance, can question the desirability of reflecting in drama and entertainment the better standards of life, in so far as they serve the interests of truth.

"But it is beyond all question that some of life's most poignant episodes are based upon situations that do not reflect higher standards.

"If, in the past, dramatists and authors had confined their pens to a portrayal of better standards alone, the world would have lost some of its greatest literature.

"We think that Will Hays has a clear notion of what is needed.

"He says that "good taste and a proper regard for the sensibilities of the audience must regulate the treatment of low, unpleasant, although not necessarily evil, subjects."

"Undoubtedly were he to have personal supervision over the production of every film, the line between good taste and bad would be carefully deserved.

"There is danger that certain producers, in a desire to keep well within the safety bounds, will lean so heavily on the side of smug hypocrisy that the great art of the motion picture will be gradually reduced to a state of complete uselessness—an empty portrayal of the Polyanna side of existence.

"Such boards, as has been proved time and again know no limitations. They are an offense to the ideals of liberty to which this nation is dedicated.

And now that the film industry has gone to its present extremely liberal limits in restricting itself, it is time that every official censorship board meddling with the movie industry be put out of existence.

"And now that the film industry has gone to state of New York."

"Dissatisfaction" Evaporates Into Thin Air as Hays And Others Re-elected

Everything was serene at the annual meeting of the Hays organization, which re-elected Will H. Hays to the presidency of the organization and adopted the new Code of Ethics for producers. All other officers were re-elected. The alleged dissension which advance reports doped to crop out at the meeting apparently—and perhaps mysteriously—evaporated into thin air as harmony prevailed at the Monday meeting.

Adoption of the code, says Hays, marks "the latest and greatest step" taken by the industry in the direction of self-government to the end that pictures shall conform to the best standards of the art and to "the wholesome instincts of life."

The code provides that every effort shall be made to reflect better standards of living, bans ridicule of natural or human laws, and the creating of sympathy for law violation. It also provides that presentation of murder or brutality shall be in manner which will not inspire imitation, bans justification of revenge as a motive and provides that use of liquor in American life, shall be restricted to actual plot requirements.

A Long List of "Don'ts"

Sanctity of the institution of marriage and the home is provided as well as ban on justification of adultery, and on white slavery and sex perversion, or ridicule of any religious faith or the showing of clergymen as comics or villains. Respect for the flag, use of scenes of passion only when essential to plot, fair representation of the history, institutions, prominent people and citizenry of other nations. Also forbidden are: pointed profanity, obscenity in word, gesture, reference, song, joke or by suggestion and dances which emphasize indecent movements; such subjects as hangings or electrocutions, third-degree methods, brutality.

The Hays Paddle

Several important member companies of the M. P. P. D. A., completely disregard suggested picture changes offered by the Hays organization, despite the fact that these companies are warned beforehand of censorship jams on certain types of material, which inevitably result in costly deletions in certain territories.

Many of these off-color situations are not necessary, but still these obstinate producers fail to abide by the Hays suggestions. Two companies are known to be flagrant offenders. Others deliberately disregard the tipoffs only occasionally.

One of the offenders, relegates all change suggestions to the wastepaper basket, and, as a result, an attempt is understood to have been made to chastise by using certain agencies to knock pictures which were allowed to ride without making advised alterations.

Kathleen Mavourneens

More than $10,000,000 in "rubber checks" were given to distributors by exhibitors last year, the contract committee was told Thursday. Rentals during the year totaled $200,000,000, it is estimated.

Hays and Moses Get a Big Hand From Brisbane

The industry's leaders were wise when they selected Will H. Hays "to keep them on the straight moral path," Arthur Brisbane, Hearst editorial writer, asserts in commenting upon the adoption by the Hays association of the new code of ethics drafted for producers. Commenting upon various "Don'ts" embodied in the code, he states that Moses "coming down from the mountain could hardly do better." His editorial stresses the fact that the code was adopted voluntarily.

Chance to Kill Anti-Censor Law Lost in N. Y.

Albany—Any hopes that motion picture censorship might be abolished in New York state through the Post bill introduced in the Legislature were dispelled last week when the rules committee took over several hundred bills, including the Post measure, which means that these bills will never be reported out of committee between now and April 11, the day of adjournment.

Yes, We Have No $7.50 Supers in Milwaukee

Milwaukee—Exchanges are not obligated to accept low rentals for their pictures, the Dept. of Agriculture and Markets has ruled in deciding that the Milwaukee Film Board and exchanges are not guilty of unfair competition and unfair trade practices.

A complaint to the department under the Wisconsin statutes, relating to methods of competition and trade practices, had been made by Leo and Joseph Atanasoff, exhibitors operating the New York Theatre. Their alleged grievance was that they had been unable to obtain motion pictures except upon unreasonable terms.

It was claimed that these exhibitors wanted to pick the outstanding productions of the various exchanges and offered to pay merely a minimum rental of about $7.50 to $10.00, which the exchanges refused to accept.

Distributors To Be Asked To Drop Score Charges By Contract Framers

Abandonment or Consolidation With Rental Sought; Not Contract Proviso

Proposed elimination of the score charge, or consolidation of it with film rental, will not be undertaken by the contract committee now in session in New York. There will, however, be considerable discussion of the matter, with effort made to induce all distributors to drop or consolidate the charge.

Warned that effort to eliminate score charges may constitute price fixing, illegal under Federal statutes, the committee decided not to try to put this provision into the contract. After completion of the contract meetings, the committee will discuss the situation. Subsequently, a meeting of distributors will be held which will be told that it is the consensus of opinion that score charges should be dropped.

Warners and First National are seen as the stumbling block in the move against score charges, as these firms' scores are supplied by Vitaphone.

Exhibitors have opposed the score charge since the introduction of sound, some of them charging that they bought sound prints in the belief that the deal covered the sound, only to find that they then must negotiate for discs, and so were "out on a limb" so far as price is concerned.

Standard License Agreement

Recommended by

Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc. and

.....1930.

Agreement of license under copyright made the.....day of ....., 193....., between....., a corporation, hereinafter referred to as the distributor, and the exhibitor, hereinafter named, operating the theatre hereinafter designated.

Witnesseth:

Warranty as to Form

FIRST: The distributor warrants that this license agreement contains all of the provisions of the "Standard License Agreement" recommended by the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and....., an authenticated copy of which has been filed with each of said organizations. That any and all additional provisions contained in a rider, if any hereto annexed, shall be of no force or effect unless signed by the exhibitor.

License and Time and Place of Exhibition

SECOND: Subject to the terms and conditions hereinafter stated, the distributor hereby grants to the exhibitor and the exhibitor accepts a limited license under the respective copyrights of the motion pictures designated and described in the Schedule hereof, and if in such schedule it is provided that this license is for sound motion pictures, under any copyright of any matter included in any sound recorded therefor, to exhibit publicly said motion pictures and to reproduce for public performances such recorded sound in synchronism therewith, but only at the said theatre for the number of successive days and for the fixed sums in the said schedule specified and for no other use or purpose. Each such license so to reproduce such recorded sound is granted upon the exhibitor's express warranty and upon condition (a) that the sound reproducing equipment in the said theatre will operate reliably and efficiently to

Text of M. P. T. O. A. Proposals

Five principal points are embodied in the contract proposals of the M.P.T.O.A., which hopes to make the present form of contract the basis on which any new form of agreement will be predicated.

This is emphasized in a letter by the M.P.T.O.A. committee to S. R. Kent of Paramount, who is chairman of the contract conferences. Members of the M.P.T.O.A. committee are: M. A. Lightman, president of the M.P.T.O.A., Frank Walker, general manager of the Comerford circuit, and Fred Wehrenbergm, president of the southern Illinois and eastern Missouri association.

"Our organization is in favor of a fair system of arbitration," the letter read, "but thinks that two forms of contract should be offered the exhibitor, viz., one containing arbitration and an alternate form excluding it.

"With reference to the contract, we are of the opinion that if three or four forms of contract are submitted to the committee for consideration, the task of revising these various contracts into one that will be generally acceptable will be greatly increased, and deem it more advisable to work with one contract, either the existing one or any one that is proposed, and alter, amend or revise that contract as nearly to the satisfaction of all members of the committee as possible. We think, however, that there are several matters of great importance not covered in the old form, and we herewith submit paragraphs covering some of these items that our organization wants included in the contract finally adopted."

Five Points Stressed

Arbitration, availability, score charges, percentage and censorship are the big points at issue as the M.P.T.O.A. sees them. Otherwise, the association would continue provisions of the present standard exhibition contract.

Among the modifications and adjustments to the contract being advocated by the M.P.T.O.A. are:

Public exhibition of any photoplay at popular prices for more than one day in any zone shall be construed as a general release of the photoplay in that zone and will be available for general exhibition.

Where an exhibitor buys a group of pictures from a distributor having its own or an affiliated or a franchised first run outlet the exhibitor shall not be required to play any picture in the group which has not received its first run within 60 days after the picture has been generally released.

A photoplay shall become available to a subsequent run subject to terms of protection on 66 days after the date of availability to the first run.

The exhibitor shall have the right to play pictures that are available in any order provided: (a) that he is not behind in his playing arrangement. (b) that all pictures released prior to the exhibition of any photoplay, which the exhibitor is required to play, will be dated within 60 days of date of said exhibition of said photoplay.

Good Prints Demanded

The distributor shall be required to deliver to the exhibitor for exhibition, prints in good physical condition and capable of reproducing clear and acceptable sound on standard equipment. The sound sequences shall not be affected by cutting.

Electrics' Order To Force Music License Payment Riles Exhibitors

Text of Allied States' Proposals

Master Exhibition Contract

Recommended by Motion Picture Producers & Distributors of America, Inc., Allied States Ass'n of Motion Picture Exhibitors, and Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, Inc., to govern the relations between distributors of copyrighted motion pictures and exhibitors of such pictures. An authenticated copy of this masters contract shall be filed with on 1930, and thereafter the provisions hereof may be adopted by reference in any short form license agreement thereafter executed between any distributor and any exhibitor involving the licensing of such copyrighted motion pictures.

First: The distributor grants and the exhibitor accepts a license under the copyrights of photoplays designated in the schedule to any short form license agreement made pursuant hereto, and if in such schedule it is provided that the license is for sound motion pictures, under any copyright of any matter included in any sound recorded therefor, to exhibit publicly said motion pictures, and to reproduce for public performances such recorded sound in synchronism therewith, but only at the theatre or theatres, and for the number of successive days, and for the fixed sums, specified in said schedule, and for no other purpose. The excution of any short form license agreement containing in the schedule a description by name of the equipment on which such recorded sound is to be reproduced, shall constitute an approval of such equipment by the distributor for the purposes of the license. If the license is for the exhibition of pictures containing copyrighted music, the exhibitor warrants that he has a legal right to reproduce such copyrighted music. The distributor reserves the right to record the sound for reproduction in synchronism with the exhibition of said motion pictures, or any of them, on the prints thereof, or on records, discs or any other device; provided, that if recorded sound for any picture is delivered in a form which the exhibitor is not equipped to reproduce, he shall have the right to cancel as to such pictures. If more than one theatre is designated in the schedule, no motion picture licensed thereunder shall be for exhibition at more than one of such theatres unless otherwise specified in said schedule.

The word print when used in this master contract in respect of sound motion pictures shall be deemed to include the records, discs and other devices on which sound is recorded.

Contract Committee Hits at Effort to Compel Showman to Pay Music Fee

Stipulation of Electrical Research Products and RCA Photophone that distributors must insert in the new contract a warranty clause was under fire at Thursday's opening session of the contract committee, which met on the legality of the stipulation appealed as a means for relief.

Insertion of the clause, it was contended by exhibitors, puts them at the mercy of the Society in collecting the fee of ten cents per seat per year. This clause, in effect, would force every theatre in the United States to secure a license from the Society. Distributors pointed out that their hands are tied in the matter, as the stipulation was made a condition of their licensing agreement, a previous agreement to this effect having been made by the society and the electrics.

No action was taken on the proposed clause, which was laid on the table upon exhibitors' insistence. Allied States Ass'n contends that a warranty that the exhibitor has a legal right to show the picture concerned, is sufficient.

Can't Approve Equipment

Their contract with the electrics also prevents distributors from approving any but equipment manufactured by the two com-reproduce such recorded sound with adequate volume and high quality whether recorded upon a print or upon records, discs or other similar devices; and (b) if copyrighted musical compositions are included in such recorded sound, the exhibitor now has or will have at the date or dates of the exhibition of each of such motion pictures and the reproduction of such recorded sound, an effective license from the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers to perform publicly the copyrighted musical compositions in the repertory of said society. The distributor reserves the right to record the sound for reproduction in synchronism with the exhibition of said motion pictures or any of them on the print thereof or on records, discs or any other device as the distributor may from time to time determine. If more than one theatre is hereinafter designated no motion picture is licensed hereunder for exhibition at more than one of such theatres unless otherwise specifically agreed upon in the Schedule.

Provided this license is for sound motion pictures and the recorded sound is not recorded upon a print, all references hereinafter made to a print shall be deemed to include the records, discs and any other device upon which sound is recorded for reproduction in synchronism with the exhibition of a print.

Payment

THIRD: (a) The exhibitor agrees to pay to the distributor for such license as to each such motion picture the fixed sums specified in the Schedule at least seven days in advance of the date of delivery of a print thereof at the distributor's exchange or of the date of shipment thereof to the exhibitor by another exhibitor.

Payment upon Percentage Basis

(b) If any part of the license fee of any of said motion pictures shall be computed upon the exhibitor's gross receipts, such payment or part thereof shall be made to the distributor at the end of each day's exhibition, together with a correct itemized statement of the gross receipts of said theatre for admission thereto upon the exhibition date or dates of each motion picture for which payment is so required to be made, signed by the exhibitor or the exhibitor's manager and the exhibitor's cashier or treasurer. Should the distributor so require, such itemized statement shall be made upon forms furnished by the distributor. Upon said date or dates an authorized representative of the distributor is hereby given the right to verify the sale of all tickets of admission to said theatre, and the receipts therefrom; and for such purpose shall have access to the theatre, including the box office, and also the right to examine the exhibitor's books and records relating to such gross receipts. The distributor, or its authorized representative, also shall have access for a period of one year after the receipt by the distributor of each final box office statement, to all of the exhibitor's books and records for the purpose of verifying such box office statement. The distributor agrees that any information obtained pursuant to the provisions of this clause will be treated as confidential, excepting in any arbitration proceeding or litigation in respect to this license.

Liquidated Damages for Breach If Licensed upon Percentage Basis

(c) If payment hereunder of the license fee of any of said motion pictures shall be computed, either in whole or in part, upon a percentage of the gross admission receipts of said theatre, and if the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit any such motion picture as herein provided, the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor as liquidated damages for each day that the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion picture, a sum equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre during the period of 30 operating days immediately prior to the date or dates when said motion picture should have been so exhibited and in addition any fixed sums payable hereunder in respect thereto provided, however, that if the exhibitor shall exhibit such motion picture for less than the full number of days provided for in this license the sum equal to such percentage shall be computed, upon a sum equal to 75 per cent of the gross receipts of said theatre during the last day of the exhibition thereat of such motion picture. A sworn statement of the said daily gross receipts shall be delivered by the exhibitor to the distributor upon demand therefor.

FOURTH: The term of this agreement shall begin with the date fixed or term determined as hereinafter provided for the exhibition at the said theatre of the first motion picture deliverable hereunder and shall continue for a period of one year thereafter unless otherwise in the schedule provided.

Delivery and Exhibition of Prints

FIFTH: The distributor agrees during the term of this license and within a reasonable time after each of said motion pictures become available for exhibition by the exhibitor hereunder to deliver to the exhibitor a print in physical condition for exhibition, and the exhibitor agrees to exhibit such print of each of said motion pictures in the order of their general release by the distributor in the territory in which the said theatre is located, and if this license is for sound motion pictures to reproduce the recorded sound in synchronism therewith, upon the date or dates during said term fixed or determined as provided in Article Seventh hereof. The date or dates so fixed or determined shall be for all purposes the exhibition date or dates of each such motion picture as though definitely specified in the schedule before execution hereof by the exhibitor.

The distributor shall make deliveries hereunder to the exhibitor, or the exhibitor's authorized agent, by delivery at the distributor's exchange, or to a common carrier, or to the United States postal authorities. If deliveries are made to a carrier they shall be made in accordance with the carrier's delivery schedule in time to reach the place where the said theatre is located at least one hour before the usual time for the opening of the said theatre.

Selection or Designation of Playdates

SEVENTH: The exhibition date or dates of each motion picture, unless definitely specified or otherwise provided for in the schedule or otherwise agreed upon, shall be determined as follows:

Notice of Availability

1. Subject to prior runs and / or protection granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors and within a reasonable time after a print or prints of any of said motion pictures are received at the exchange of the distributor out of which the exhibitor is served and any such motion picture then being available for exhibition by the exhibitor hereunder the distributor, provided the exhibitor is not in default hereunder, shall mail to the exhibitor a notice in writing of the

110,000 Violations

One hundred ten thousand cases of contract violation, involving $30,000,000 have been brought to distributors' attention during the last five years, Gabriel L. Hess, general counsel of the Hays association, Thursday, told the contract committee. Last year, before arbitration was discontinued, 30,000 cases were heard.

Electric's Stand On Music License Riles Exhibitors

panies, it is stated. Allied had proposed a clause providing that the execution of the contract, constitutes approval of the reproducer over which the film is to be shown.

Harmony prevailed at the opening session of the committee meeting, despite spirited debate between the conferees. Progress was rapid, however. The session is open to the trade press, setting a precedent in the industry. Decision to make the meetings open, followed a request for such procedure by Motion Picture News.

Start with Open Minds

Committee members are going about the drafting of a contract with "open minds," S. R. Kent, chairman, at whose suggestion the conferences are being held, said in opening the meeting. The idea being followed is the drafting of a suggested master contract, embodying standard clauses, with the individual transaction to be embodied in a short form contract. This latter is slated to have an arbitration agreement.

The purpose of the present abbreviated committee sessions is to agree on principles. This done, the full committee will meet to pass upon phraseology of the agreement. Allied States Ass'n, the M. P. T. O. A., the Hays organization and affiliated exhibitors are represented at the meetings.

Abram F. Myers, president of Allied, believes the electrics' stipulation is illegal. Distributors, however, are averse to risking revocation of their license by the electrics, hence this particular clause is slated for considerable discussion.

In the new contract form, prints must be designated, so that the exhibitor is assured film or disc, according to his equipment, in the form specified in the schedule.

Four Day Advance on Rentals

After lengthy discussion, a clause was adopted providing for payment of film rental four days prior to shipment, unless other arrangement is made. This means that the money must be received by the distributor before the film is shipped. The four day period was determined upon to give checks opportunity to clear. Allied held out for a preferred credit rating for exhibitors, but this was modified to provide for the cash basis, unless the exhibitor secures credit from the home office. No difficulty in securing credit for exhibitors with good credit records is anticipated by the committee. Distributors had proposed a seven-day advance payment, and exhibitors three days.

On the Line

Everything in the contract, with no side agreements of any kind to be countenanced, is the platform which Allied States Ass'n. is backing at the contract conferences. The organization takes the position that making possible or winking at contract violations undermines the contract, and makes exhibitors "contract jumpers."

To prevent bartering of the credit privileged, the clause stipulates that the credit arrangement must be made after signing the contract.

Percentage splits must be made daily, the report to be signed by the exhibitor or manager, his cashier, treasurer or other person. Distributors have been ganted four months instead of the usual 60 days in which to make an audit of the record of the run.

Exhibitor opposition to employment of resident checkers for percentage engagements resulted in a clause barring local checkers unless they are regularly employed by the distributor or accountants. The latter, it is felt, will not divulge operating information, because of professional ethics.

Refusing to play a percentage picture will make the exhibitor liable for an amount which equals the guarantee and the stipulated percentage of the average daily gross computed over the preceding 30 days. For pulling a picture, the penalty is to be 65 per cent of the average daily gross. This represented a compromise from the 75 per cent demand of distributors and the 50 per cent figure demanded by the M. P. T. O. A.

Delivery of prints at a theatre in time for a rehearsal is provided in a clause expected to be adopted. Setting of a time before showing when it must be delivered is to be done following a check-up of exchanges' facilities.

Prints are to be delivered in good physical condition, with the print capable of clearly reproducing sound in synchronism, under another clause.

Can Choose Running Order

Order of showing came in for considerable discussion, exhibitors finally winning the right to play available pictures in any order they choose, providing they are not behind on their playing arrangement, and provided they agree to play or pay for within 60 days undated available films.

The necessity for switching dates, to take advantage of the popularity of a certain picture and to provide the desired program variety, spotting in the good pictures and weak sisters at the most opportune time, was stressed, as was the juggling of dates by exhibitors to get out of playing certain pictures.

Showing Is Zone Release

Showing of a picture in a zone, releases the film in that zone, even though the picture may not be released generally in that territory, it was pointed out, in discussion of action in holding back a big picture to force playing of undated available films. Under terms of the new clause giving the exhibitors the right of selectivity on available pictures, if the exhibitor violates his agreement to play or pay for undated films within 60 days, he will be denied the privilege to choose order of run in future.

3-Day Payment Stipulated

Second (a) The exhibitor agrees to pay for such license as to each production the fixed sums specified in the schedule at least three days in advance of the date of shipment from the distributor's exchange or from the last previous exhibition of the respective print thereof, unless the exhibitor shall have been notified by the distributor in writing that he has been placed on a preferred credit list, in which case payment shall be in accordance with such written notice.

(b) If the schedule calls for payment or any part thereof computed on the exhibitor's gross receipts, such payment or any part thereof shall be made daily, together with a correct itemized statement of the gross receipts of said theatre for admissions upon the exhibition date or dates for each photoplay for which payment is so required. Should the distributor so require such itemized statement shall be made upon forms furnished by the distributor. Upon such date or dates an authorized representative of the distributor is hereby given the right to verify the sale of all tickets of admission to said theatre, and the receipts therefrom; and for such purpose shall have access to the theatre, including the box office, and also the right to examine the exhibitor's books and records in so far as they relate to such gross receipts. The distributor, or its authorized representative, shall also have access for a period of 60 days after the receipt by the distributor of the final box office statement to all of the exhibitor's books and records for the purpose of verifying such box office statements. The distributor agrees that any information so obtained will be treated as confidential except in any proceedings to enforce its rights under the contract. The distributor agrees, unless such representative be a regular employee of the distributor, not to employ as such representative any person, a resident of or regularly employed in the town in which the exhibitor's theatre is located except with the consent of the exhibitor.

Provides for Liquidated Damages

(c) If payment hereunder of the license fee of any of said motion pictures shall be computed either in whole or in part, upon a percentage of the gross admission receipts of said theatre, and if the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit any such motion picture as herein provided, the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor as liquidated damages for each day that the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion picture, a sum equal to such percentage of the average daily gross receipts of such theatre during the period of 30 operating days immediately prior to the date or dates when said motion picture should have been so exhibited, provided, however, that if the exhibitor shall exhibit such motion picture for less than the full number of days provided for in this license the sum equal to such percentage shall be computed upon a sum equal to 75 per cent of the gross receipts of said theatre during the last day of the exhibition thereat of such motion picture. A sworn statement of the said daily gross receipt shall be delivered by the exhibitor to the distributor upon demand therefor.

Third: The term of this agreement shall begin with the date fixed or determined as hereinafter provided for the exhibition at the said theatre of the first motion picture deliverable hereunder and shall continue for a period of one year thereafter unless otherwise in the schedule provided.

Warranty on Fitness

Fourth: The distributor agrees to deliver to the exhibitor on the date or dates herein provided a print of each motion picture which the distributor expressly warrants shall be fit for use in said theatre or theatres, provided said print is used within a reasonable time after it becomes available.

Fifth: The distributor shall make deliveries hereunder to the exhibitor, or the exhibitor's authorized agent, by delivery at the distributor's exchange, or to a common carrier, or to the United States postal authorities. If deliveries are made to a carrier they shall be made in accordance with the carrier's delivery schedule in time to reach the place where the said theatre is located at least 5 hours before the usual time for the opening of the said theatre.

Protection Procedure Outlined

Sixth: Subject to prior runs and/or protection granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors and within a reasonable time after a print or prints of any of said motion pictures are received at the exchange of the distributor out of which the exhibitor is served and any such motion picture then being available for exhibition by the exhibitor hereunder the distributor shall mail to the exhibitor a notice in writing of the date when such motion picture will be available for exhibition by the exhibitor, such date being hereinafter referred to as the "available date." Such notice shall be mailed to the exhibitor at least 15 days before the "available date" therein specified.

The exhibitor shall within 14 days after the mailing of such notice select the exhibition date or dates, within the period of commencing with the available date and ending 30 days thereafter, by giving to the distributor written notice of the date or dates so selected. If the exhibition date or dates so selected by the exhibitor are not open for the exhibitor because such date or dates have been previously assigned to another or other exhibitors then the exhibition date or dates shall be determined as provided in the following paragraphs (a) and (b).

(a) If other dates within said 30 days period are open the exhibitor shall immediately select from such other open dates another date or dates, failing to do so then the distributor shall have the right to designate such date or dates within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the date first selected by the exhibitor and written notice thereof shall be given or mailed the exhibitor 14 days before the date so designated by the distributor.

(b) If no other date or dates within said 30 day period are open then the exhibitor shall designate the date or dates which shall be within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the last day of the said 30 day period and written notice thereof shall be immediately given or mailed to the distributor by the exhibitor. If the exhibitor fails to so designate such date or dates then the distributor shall have the right to make such designation within the same period and written notice thereof shall be mailed to the exhibitor 14 days before the date so designated by the distributor.

date when such motion picture will be available for exhibition by the exhibitor, such date being hereinafter referred to as the "available date." Such notice shall be mailed to the exhibitor at least 15 days before the "available date" therein specified.

Selection by Exhibitor

2. The exhibitor shall, within 14 days after the mailing of such notice, select the exhibition date or dates, within the period commencing with the available date and ending 30 days thereafter, by giving to the distributor written notice of the date or dates so selected. If the exhibition date or dates so selected by the exhibitor are not open for the exhibitor because such date or dates have been previously assigned to another or other exhibitors then the exhibition date or dates shall be determined as provided in the following paragraphs (a) and (b).

(a) If other dates within said 30-day period are open the exhibitor shall immediately select from such other open dates another date or dates; failing to do so, then the distributor shall have the right to designate such date or dates within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the date first selected by the exhibitor and written notice thereof shall be given or mailed the exhibitor 14 days before the date so designated by the distributor.

(b) If no other dates within said 30 days are open, then the exhibitor shall designate the date or dates, which shall be within the period beginning not earlier than two weeks and ending not later than six weeks from the last day of the said 30 days and written notice thereof shall be immediately given or mailed to the distributor by the exhibitor. If the exhibitor fails to so designate such date or dates, then the distributor shall have the right to make such designation within the same period and written notice thereof shall be mailed to the exhibitor 14 days before the date so designated by the distributor.

3. If the exhibition date or dates of any motion picture are not selected by the exhibitor as hereinbefore provided or otherwise agreed upon or the exhibitor fails or refuses to exhibit such motion picture on the date or dates designated by the distributor if designated as provided in paragraphs "a" and "b" hereof than the sum or sums payable hereunder for the license as to such motion picture forthwith shall become due and payable and the grant, if any, of the run and/or protection period in respect to such motion picture shall be deemed revoked with the right to the exhibitor upon making such payment to exhibit such motion picture provided authority for the exhibition thereof is requested in writing by the exhibitor within 60 days after the available date therefor upon a date or dates not in conflict with any run and/or protection period granted or hereafter granted to other exhibitors; failing to make such request within said period of time the license of such motion picture granted hereunder shall be terminated and revert to the distributor.

Assignment upon Sale of Theatre

EIGHTH: This license shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other, provided, that if the exhibitor sells the said theatre or transfers any interest therein and is not in default hereunder, the exhibitor may assign this license to the purchaser of the theatre or of such interest without the written consent of the distributor, but any such assignment shall not be valid or of any effect hereunder unless a written acceptance thereof by the assignee assuming the obligations of the exhibitor shall be delivered to the distributor. Any such assignment shall not release the exhibitor from any liability hereunder unless such release from liability is consented to by the distributor in writing.

Verbal Promises, Changes in Writing

NINTH: This license agreement is complete and all promises, representations, understandings and agreements in reference thereto have been expressed herein. No change or modification thereof shall be binding upon the distributor at its main office in New York City.

Return of Prints by Exhibitor

TENTH: The exhibitor shall promptly, after the last exhibition on the last date of the license period of each motion picture, return the print thereof, with the reels and containers furnished therewith, to the distributor's exchange or deliver the same to a carrier designated or used by the distributor for delivery to such exchange or as otherwise directed by written instructions of the distributor for delivery to another exhibitor and the exhibitor shall pay all transportation charges therefor in each case adequately valued or insured.

Loss of or Damage to Prints

ELEVENTH: The exhibitor shall immediately notify the distributor's exchange by telegram of the loss, theft, destruction of or damage to any print and the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor a sum equal to the cost of replacement at the distributor's exchange for each linear foot thereof and for each record and for each record case, lost, stolen, destroyed or damaged in any way in the interval between the delivery to and the return thereof by the exhibitor. Provided, the exhibitor is not in default hereunder the distributor shall at the option of the exhibitor repay or credit to the exhibitor any sum so paid for a lost or stolen print, excepting newsreels, upon the return thereof to the distributor within 60 days after the date when the same should have been returned hereunder. All claims by the exhibitor on account of the condition or the late or non-arrival of a print, or by the distributor because of damage thereto by the exhibitor shall be barred hereunder unless any such claim, if made by the exhibitor, shall be made by a telegram setting forth fully the condition complained of sent by the exhibitor to the distributor prior to the second public exhibition thereof, if delivery of a print has been delayed, within one hour of its arrival; or if any such claim is made by the distributor unless a notice in writing by the distributor is sent to the exhibitor within 48 hours, Sundays excepted, of the receipt by the distributor of a damaged print or of a notice by another exhibitor that a print was received by such other exhibitor in a damaged condition.

Description

TWELFTH: The exhibitor shall not be required to accept for any feature motion picture described in the schedule as the motion picture of a particular star or of a particular director, any other motion picture of a different star or different director. The distributor shall have and hereby reserves the right in the sole discretion of the distributor to change the title of any of the motion pictures specified in the schedule, to change any story, book or play, to make any change in or adaptation thereof and to change the cast or any member thereof, and the director of any thereof excepting the director of those described in the schedule as the motion picture of a particular director.

Reissues

THIRTEENTH The distributor warrants that none of the licensed motion pictures are reissues of old negatives or old negatives retitled, excepting those specifically set forth as such in the schedule.

Advertising

FOURTEENTH: The distributor warrants that the said motion pictures will not contain any advertising matter for which compensation is received by the distributor.

Cutting or Alteration of Prints

FIFTEENTH: The exhibitor shall exhibit each motion picture in its entirety and shall not copy, duplicate, subrent or part with possession thereof; nor shall the exhibitor cut or alter the same, excepting to make necessary repairs thereto, or when required by any duly constitutted public official or authority or with the written or telegraphic consent of the distributor; and the exhiibtor shall return each print in the same condition as received, reasonable wear only excepted.

Advertising Accessories

(a) The exhibitor shall not copy, duplicate, lease, sell or give away any advertising accessories purchased from the distributor and all advertising accessories purchased from the distributor and used by the exhibitor in connection with the exhiibtion of any of said motion pictures shall be destroyed by the exhibitor promptly after the expiration of the license period of each of said motion pictures.

Protection and Run

SIXTEENTH: The distributor shall not grant a license to exhiibt and of said motion pictures for exhibition on a date prior to the "run" or prior to the expiration of the "protection period," if any, in the schedule specified at any theatre named in the schedule or within the territorial limits therein specified, such period of protection as to each of said motion pictures to be computed from the last date of the license period theerof, provided that if protection is granted against a named theatre or theatres indicating that it is the intention of the distributor to grant such protection againts all theatres in the immediate vicinity of the exhibitor's theatre, then, unless otherwise provided in the schedule, such protection shall include any theatre in such vicinity hereafter erected or opened.

If the exhibitor is granted hereunder a second or subsequent "run" of the said motion pictures the distributor shall have the right in its sole discretion to grant to the exhibitor in respect to any thereof a "run" prior to such second or subsequent "run" by giving notice in writing to such effect to the exhibitor and the exhibitor agrees to exhibit any such motion picture in accordance therewith.

Advertising Prior to First Run

If the exhibitor is granted hereunder a second or subsequent "run" of the said motion pictures, the exhibitor shall not advertise any thereof, excepting by means of advertisements inside the said theatre not intended for removal therefrom by the public, prior to the exhibition of any of said motion pictures by any other exhiibtor having the right to the first or a prior "run" thereof. For a breach of the provisions of this paagraph the exhibitor shall pay to the distributor a sum equal to the damage, if any, so caused such other exhibitor. The distributor shall not be liable for any breach of the provisions of this article caused by any other exhibitor.

Taxes

SEVENTEENTH: The exhibitor shall pay to the distributor, upon demand, any tax, fee or other like charge now and (or hereafter imposed or based upon the delivery and) or the exhibition of prints of motion pictures and) or upon the sums payable under this license by the exhibitor to the distributor. If under any statute or ordinance any such tax, fee or other like charge is or shall be payable or paid by the distributor and the exact amount payable hereunder by the exhibitor is not therein definitely fixed or cannot be exactly determined, then the exhibitor shall pay such part of any such tax, fee or other like charge paid or payable by the distributor as shall be fixed in the manner determined by the then president of the American Arbitration Ass'n.

Admission Charge

EIGHTEENTH: The exhibitor during the whole of the license period of each of the mition pictures shall charge for admission to said theatre not less than the sum of ten cents unless a greater minimum admission charge is herein elsewhere specified. If during any such period less than said sum of ten cents or such other minimum charge is charged for admission to said theatre, the license of the motion picture then being exhibited shall forthwith terminate and revert to the distributor.

Prevention of Performance

NINETEENTH: If the exhiibitor shall be prevented from exhibiting or the distributor from delivering any of the said motion pictures for causes beyond their direct control, then this license in respect to each such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the distributor without liability on the part of either party provided reasonable written notice of such termination and the cause thereof is given.

Pictures Not Generally Released

TWENTIETH: If any one or more of said motion pictures excepting the motion pictures which may be 'roadshown," shall not be generally released by the distributor for distributio nin the United States during the period beginning .....and ending....., each such motion picture shall be excluded from this license unless the exhiibtor shall give written notice to the distributor not later than 30 days after the said last mentioned date the the exhibitor elects to exhibit hereunder all such motion pictures. If written notice of such election be given aforesaid, the distributor shall deliver and the exhibitor shall exhibit each such motion picture when available for exhibition hereunder excepting that any thereof not so "generally released" within two years after said last mentioned date shall be also excepted and excluded from this license. The distributor shall have the right to exhiibt or license the exhibition of any motion pictures so excepted and excluded when and where desired by the distributor and all claims of the exhibitor in respect therof are hereby expressly waived by the exhibitor.

Option to Exclude If Group Licensed

TWENTY-FIRST: If the license herein granted shall apply to an entire group of feature motion pictures offered by the distributor to the exhiibtor at one time, and not otherwise, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this license up to but not exceeding 10 per cent of the total number thereof, but only if the exhiibtor shall give the distributor written notice to such effect at any time not later than 14 days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of any such motion picture, and if at the same time the exhiibtor shall pay to the distributor one-half of the license fee payable in respect of any such motion picture. In computing said 10 per cent of the total number, fractions of less than one-half shall be disregarded. If any such motion picture shall, because of such exclusion, he thereafter again licensed by the distributor for exhiibtion at another theatre for the same run as that specified in this license and at which there such excluded motion picture wolud not have been exhibited if not so excluded, then one-half of the license fee (up to but not exceeding the amount paid by the exhiibtor to the distributor as a condition of so excluding such motion picture) received by the distributor for such relicense, shall be credited to the exhibitor by the distributor.

Should the distributor fail or refuse to make such designation any exhibitor having a subsequent run of such picture shall have the right to cancel out of this contract the picture which he has thus been delayed in exhibiting.

(c) Wherever the exhibitor, having a subsequent run, is prevented from securing a playdate for a picture or pictures on account of the failure or delay of the distributor in securing a prior run, within a reasonable time, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this contract the picture or pictures which he has been so delayed in showing.

Responsibility on Sale

Seventh: This license shall not be assigned by either party without the written consent of the other, provided, that if the exhibitor sells the said theatre or transfers any interest therein the exhibitor may assign this license to the purchaser of the theatre or of such interest without the written consent of the distributor but any such assignment shall not be valid or of any effect hereunder unless a written acceptance thereof by the assignee assuming the obligations of the exhibitor shall be delivered to the distributor. Any such assignment shall not release the exhibitor from any liability hereunder unless such release from liability is consented to by the distributor in writing.

Eighth: This master contract plus the short form license agreement and schedule shall be deemed a single instrument, complete in itselt, and all promises, representations, understandings and agreements shall be deemed to be expressed therein; provided, that all work sheets, photographs, press books and any other printed matter employed by any representative of the distributor to induce the exhibitor to enter into the contract shall be considered in any controversy arising hereunder for the purpose of identifying the product licensed; provided further, that the exhibitor shall not be deemed to have violated the copyright of any of the pictures involved in this contract by relying in good faith on written or telegraphic authority from the distributor's exchange.

Ninth: The exhibitor shall promptly after the last exhibition on the last date of the license period of each motion picture return the print thereof, with the reels and containers furnished therewith, to the distributor's exchange or deliver the same to a carrier designated or used by the distributor for delivery to such exchange or as otherwise directed by written instructions of the distributor for delivery to another exhibitor.

Tenth: The exhibitor shall pay to the distributor a sum equal to the cost of replacement at the distributor's exchange for each linear foot of any positive print lost, stolen or destroyed or injured in any way in the interval between the delivery thereof by the distributor and the return thereof by the exhibitor in full settlement of all claims for such loss, theft, destruction or injury. Such payment, however, shall not transfer title to or any interest in any such positive print to the exhibitor or any other party, nor release the exhibitor from liability arising out of any breach of this contract.

The distributor shall at the option of the exhibitor repay or credit to the exhibitor any sums paid by the latter for lost or stolen prints, excepting news reels, upon their return to the distributor within 60 days after the date when the same should have been returned hereunder. The exhibitor shall not be liable for the damage or destruction of any positive print, provided the exhibitor establishes such damage or destruction occurred while in transit from the exhibitor. The exhibitor shall immediately notify the distributor's exchange by telegram of the loss, theft or destruction of or damage or injury to any positive print. If any positive print shall be received from the exhibitor by the distributor or any subsequent exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition it shall be deemed to have been so damaged or destroyed by the exhibitor unless the latter, prior to the second public exhibition thereof shall have telegraphed the distributor's exchange that such print was received by the exhibitor in a damaged or partially destroyed condition, and setting forth fully the nature of such damage and the amount of footage so damaged or destroyed.

Substitutions Defined

Eleventh: The exhibitor shall not be required to accept for any photoplay described in the schedule as the photoplay of a star, or of a director, or based upon a specified story, book or play, or by an identifying description, any other photoplay of a different star or different director, or based upon a different story, book or play, or not corresponding to such identifying description, as the case may be. Nothing herein contained shall limit the right of the distributor to change the title of any such photoplays, or, as respects any photoplay based upon any story, book or play, prevent the making of any alterations, changes in or adaptations thereof.

The distributor warrants that none of the photoplays licensed hereunder are reissues from old negatives or old negatives renamed, except those specifically set forth as such in the schedule.

Twelfth: The distributor warrants that the said motion pictures will not contain any advertising matter for which compensation is received by the distributor.

Thirteenth: The exhibitor agrees to run photoplays (excepting news reels) as delivered without alteration, excepting with the written or telegrapric approval of the distributor, subject to requirements of duly authorized public authorities necessitating any change.

Protection Defined

Fourteenth: During the life of this contract the distributor agrees not to exhibit or license the exhibition of any such photoplays in conflict with the "run" or "protection period," if any, in the schedule specified. Unless otherwise provided herein such "protection period" shall be computed from the last date of exhibition of each photoplay as filmed herein. If "protection" is granted hereunder against a specified theatre or theatres which "protection" shall indicate that it was the intention of the distributor to grant such "protection" against all of the theatres in the immediate neighborhood or vicinity of the exhibitor's theatre, unless otherwise provided in the schedule, such "protection" shall be deemed to apply to and include any theatre that may hereafter be opened in such neighborhood or vicinity.

If the license fee for any such motion picture so excluded is to be computed either in whole or in part upon a percentage of the gross receipts of the exhibitor's theatre, then for the purpose of computing one-half of such license fee payable hereunder in respect of such motion picture, the gross receipts for each day that any such motion picture is licensed hereunder for exhibition shall be deemed to be equal to the average daily gross receipts of such theatre during the period of 30 operating days immediately prior to the date of availability of such motion picture.

Racial or Religious Subject Matter

TWENTY-SECOND: If the exhibitor shall claim that the exhibition of any motion picture licensed hereunder at the said theatre will be offensive to the public in the place where such theatre is located, because of racial or religious subject matter, and if the exhibitor shall give written notice to the distributor of such claim within a reasonable time prior to the date fixed for the exhibition thereof hereunder, such claim shall be immediately submitted to the board of arbitration herein specified. If such board of arbitration shall specifically determine that the exhibition of such motion picture at said theatre will be offensive to the said public because of racial or religious subject matter, then such motion picture shall be excepted from the license and the license thereof revert to the distributor. The distributor may exhibit or license the exhibition of any motion picture so excepted when and where desired by the distributor free from all claims of the exhibitor.

If the distributor shall be of the opinion that any motion picture licensed hereunder will be offensive to the public in the place where the exhibitor's theatre is located, because of racial or religious subject matter, the distributor shall have the right to except and exclude such motion picture from this license, upon condition that such motion picture shall not thereafter be licensed for exhibition in such place unless such racial or religious subject matter is eliminated therefrom, in which case such motion picture shall again be deemed licensed hereunder.

Roadshows

TWENTY-THIRD: The distributor shall have the right to exhibit and / or cause to be exhibited as a roadshow at any time prior to exhibition hereunder, any of the feature motion pictures specified in the schedule which the distributor may select, but not to exceed in the aggregate a total of four thereof. Any "two-a-day" exhibitions, exclusive of extra shows, at advanced admission prices for one or more weeks prior to release for general distribution of any such feature motion picture shall be deemed an exhibition thereof as a roadshow. Upon the exhibition of any such feature motion picture as a roadshow and upon written notice to such effect to the exhibitor it shall forthwith be excepted and excluded from this license agreement and the license thereof hereunder shall thereupon revert to the distributor with the right to be distributor thereafter to exhibit and / or license the exhibition of such feature motion picture when and where the distributor desires, free from all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereto.

For each feature motion picture so excluded and excepted by the distributor the exhibitor is hereby granted the option to except and exclude from this license agreement one of the other feature motion pictures licensed hereunder provided the exhibitor shall give to the distributor written notice to such effect not later than 14 days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of such other feature motion picture, and upon the giving of such notice the license of such other feature motion picture shall thereupon revert to the distributor with the right thereafter to exhibit and / or license its exhibition when and where the distributor desires, free from all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereto.

Acceptance of Application

TWENTY-FOURTH: This instrument shall be deemed an application for a license under copyright only and shall not become binding until accepted in writing without alteration or change by an officer of or any person duly authorized by the distributor and notice of acceptance sent to the exhibitor as herein provided. The deposit by the distributor of any check or other consideration given by the exhibitor at the time of application as payment on account of any sums payable hereunder or the delivery of a print of any of the motion pictures or the sale of any advertising accessories shall not be deemed an acceptance hereof by the distributor.

Unless notice of acceptance of this application by the distributor is sent to the exhibitor by mail or telegraph within the number of days after the date thereof hereinafter specified (immediately following the name of the city wherein is situated the exchange of the distributor from which the exhibitor is served, or if such city is not hereinafter named, then within the number of days specified immediately following the city hereinafter named nearest thereto) said application shall be deemed withdrawn and the distributor shall forthwith return any sums paid on account thereof by the exhibitor. Albany 10; Atlanta 20; Boston 10; Buffalo 10; Charleston 15; Charlotte 15; Chicago 15; Cincinnati 20; Cleveland 15; Dallas 30; Denver 20; Des Moines 15; Detroit 15; Indianapolis 15; Jacksonville 15; Kansas City 15; Los Angeles 25; Little Rock 15; Louisville 15; Memphis 20; Milwaukee 1; Northern New Jersey 7; Minneapolis 20; Butte 30; New Haven 10; New Orleans 15; New York City 7; Oklahoma City 20; Omaha 20; Peoria 15; Philadelphia 10; Pittsburgh 14; Portland, Ore., 30; St. Louis 15; Salt Lake City 30; San Francisco 25; Seattle 30; Washington, D. C., 14.

This application and any application for other motion pictures of the distributor executed by the exhibitor at the same time shall be deemed, but for the purpose of this article only, one application unless an agreement to the contrary contained in the schedule is specifically signed by the exhibitor.

Security

TWENTY-FIFTH: The exhibitor shall pay to the distributor upon the execution hereof the sum of.....dollars as security for the performance by the exhibitor of all of the terms and conditions herein on the part of the exhibitor to be performed. Said sum to be retained by the distributor until the complete performance by the exhibitor of all of the said terms and conditions, and then at the option of the distributor applied in payment or reduction of the last sums payable or any sums due or any damages determined to be due the distributor hereunder, the balance, if any, to be returned to the exhibitor or if this applicament. This clause carries with it an agreement to play or pay for within sixty days, any previously released films included in the contract.

Among other clauses adopted are: Warranty as to fit physical condition of prints and their capability of clearly reproducing sound in synchronization; extending to four months the time limit in which the distributor has access to audit entries made in the exhibitor's books on a percentage engagement; setting penalty of 65 per cent of the average day's receipts for pulling off a percentage picture, and an equal percentage of the average day's receipts for a percentage film not shown; provision for receipt of a print by a theatre in time for a rehearsal are among other points tentatively agreed to.

S. R. Kent is chairman of the meetings, with Gabriel L. Hess also representing distributors. Abram F. Myers and Nathan Yamins are representing Allied; M. A. Lightman and Frank Walker representing the M. P. T. O. A. E. A. Schiller, of Loew's, is representing affiliated exhibitors.

The meetings are expected to continue for about two weeks, although one estimate is ten days. They were preceded by separate meetings of all directors of Allied States Association, and by a meeting of the M. P. T. O. A. committee.

Allied States to Establish School Of Showmanship

Allied States Association in sixty days will establish a department of showmanship for its members. This department will have for its object the better presentation of pictures and better operating standards in theatres of the association.

Expert opinion on various phases of theatre operation will be available to Allied members under the plan. The name of the head of this proposed department has not been revealed as yet.

27 at Allied Meeting

Drafting of the Allied States Ass'n. proposals was completed Wednesday night at the meeting of the board of directors held in New York. Twenty-seven board members from as many regional units of Allied, are in attendance at the New York meetings. Allied directors at a meeting Monday, strongly endorsed the co-operative deal with Sentry Safety Control. The directors Tuesday inspected the Sentry plant at Philadelphia. Inability to get its contract suggestions ready in time led Allied Wednesday to request a day's postponement of the sessions.

Accountants As Checkers Urged By Sidney Kent

Sharp swing to percentage has brought about an acute situation, so far as manpower is concerned, in obtaining "the right kind" of checkers for percentage engagements, according to S. R. Kent, who says Paramount is experimenting with a plan of employing accountants as checkers. The experiment is being conducted in New England.

If the New England experiment is successful it will be extended nationally, Kent says. The employment of checkers, it was pointed out at the contract meeting, is a costly proposition, for exhibitors object strenuously to the employment of local men as checkers, fearing the resultant spread of information concerning their business.

Kent advocates a corps of accountants located at strategic points throughout the country. Accountants, he points out, as a matter of professional ethics, cannot divulge information. Their standing, too, he says, will eliminate the gypping now going on throughout the country.

The committee voted to ban employment of resident checkers, unless the checker is regularly employed by the distributor or is an accountant.

Producers 'Cheat' On Film Lengths, Exhibitors Charge

Philadelphia—Something brand new in the way of governmental aid will be solicited by the eastern Pennsylvania and southern New Jersey exhibitor unit, which will ask Congress to pass a law regulating the length of features. The tendency toward shorter features is the cause. Producers are being asked to correct the situation which the exhibitor association claims is alarming. If this request is not heeded, a Pennsylvania congressman will introduce a bill which will provide minimum lengths for features. This would become operative under the bureau of standards.

Minimum lengths for features should be 6,000 feet, for single reelers 900 feet, and two reelers 1,800 feet, the organization has decided.

Fifteenth: An exhibitor having protection against the operation of more theatres in a given zone may not waive such protection against one such theatre without waiving the same as to all; and the distributor hereby agrees not to permit the use of prints of any picture designated in the schedule hereto by one theatre in whose favor protection has been so waived without at the same time making them available to the other theatres subject to like protection.

Blocked from Plugging Subsequents

Sixteenth: If the exhibitor is granted protection against the operation of subsequent runs of the said motion pictures, the exhibitor shall not advertise any thereof, except by means of advertisements inside the said theatre not intended for removal therefrom by the public, prior to the exhibition of any of said motion pictures by any other exhibitor having the right to the first in a prior "run" thereof. The distributor shall have the right to eliminate from this contract any picture advertised by the exhibitor in violation of this clause.

Seventeenth: The exhibitor shall pay to the distributor upon demand, any tax, fee or other like charge now and/or hereafter imposed or based upon the delivery and/or the exhibition of prints of motion pictures and/or upon the sums payable under this license by the exhibitor to the distributor. If under any statute or ordinance any such tax, fee or other like charge is or shall be payable or paid by the distributor and the exact amount payable hereunder by the exhibitor is not therein definitely fixed or cannot be exactly determined, then the exhibitor shall pay such part of any such tax, fee or other like charge paid or payable by the distributor as shall be fixed in the manner determined by the then president of the American Arbitration Ass'n.

Ten Cents Minimum Admission

Eighteenth: The exhibitor during the whole of the license period of each of the motion pictures shall charge for admission to said theatre not less than the sum of ten cents, unless a greater minimum admission charge is herein elsewhere specified. If during any such period less than said sum of ten cents or such other minimum charge is charged for admission to said theatre, the license of the motion picture then being exhibited shall forthwith terminate and revert to the distributor.

Nineteenth: If the exhibitor shall be prevented from exhibiting or the distributor from delivering any of the said motion pictures for causes beyond their direct control then this license in respect to each such motion picture shall terminate and revert to the distributor without liability on the part of either party provided reasonable written notice of such termination and the cause thereof is given.

Provision for Exclusion

Twentieth: If any one or more of said motion pictures excepting the motion pictures which may be "roadshown" shall not be generally released by the distributor for distribution in the United States during the period beginning and ending each such motion picture shall be excluded from this license unless the exhibitor shall give written notice to the distributor not later than 30 days after the said last mentioned date that the exhibitor elects to exhibit hereunder all such motion pictures. If written notice of such election be given as aforesaid, the distributor shall deliver and the exhibitor shall exhibit each such motion picture when available for exhibition hereunder excepting that any thereof not so "generally released" within two years after said last mentioned date shall be also excepted and excluded from this license. The distributor shall have the right to exhibit or license the exhibition of any motion pictures so excepted and excluded when and where desired by the distributor and all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereof are hereby expressly waived by the exhibitor.

Twenty-first: If the license herein granted shall apply to an entire group of feature motion pictures offered by the distributor to the exhibitor at one time, and not otherwise, the exhibitor shall have the right to exclude from this license up to but not exceeding ten per cent of the total number thereof, but only if the exhibitor shall give the distributor written notice to such effect at any time not later than 14 days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of any such motion picture.

Only Two Road Shows

Twenty-second: The distributor shall have the right to exhibit and/or cause to be exhibited as a "roadshow," at any time prior to the exhibition thereof hereunder, such of the photoplays licensed hereunder as the distributor may from time to time select and determine, provided, however, that such roadshow exhibitions shall be at theatres at which admission prices for evening performances during such exhibitions thereof, of not less than $1 shall be charged for the majority of the orchestra seats, and further provided that, except in the cities of New York and Los Angeles, not more than two of such photoplays shall be so roadshown.

If any such roadshow exhibition shall be in the city of New York, and if the exhibitor's theatre be situated in a territory then served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges located in said city, the distributor shall have the right to accept and exclude from this liecnse any such photoplay (not exceeding in the aggregate two of such photoplays) so roadshown in said city upon sending written notices to that effect to the exhibitor not later than eight weeks after the commencement of such roadshow exhibition in such city, provided the distributor shall by like notice except and exclude from this license any such photoplay (not exceeding in the aggregate two of such photoplays) so roadshown in said city upon sending written notice to that effect to the exhibitor not later than eight weeks after the commencement of such roadshow exhibition in such city, provided the distributor shall by like notice except and exclude such photoplays from all other contracts containing this clause and licensing the exhibition of such photoplay in such territory. Such exception and exclusion shall not be affected in case the distributior shall inadvertently omit to send such notice to any of such other exhibitors.

If any such roadshow exhibition shall be in the city of Los Angeles, Cal., and if the exhibitor's theatre be situated in the territory then served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges located in said city, the distributor shall have the right to except and exclude from tion shall not be accepted as hereinbefore provided, said sum shall be forthwith returned to the exhibitor.

Arbitration If the Exhibitor Shall Not Elect to Arbitrate as Provided in Article Twenty-Sixth Opposite Hereto Said Article Shall be Stricken by the Exhibitor from This License Agreement and Here Initialled by the Exhibitor

TWENTY-SIXTH: The exhibitor and the distributor, respectively, freely and voluntarily agree that as a condition precedent to the commencement of any action or proceedings in any court by either of them to determine, enforce or protect the legal rights of each hereunder, each shall submit to the arbitration board hereinafter provided for in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the distributor from which the exhibitor is served, or if there be no such arbitration board in said city then to the arbitration board in the city nearest thereto (unless the parties hereunder agree in writing that such submission be made to an arbitration board located in another specified city) all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination by such arbitration board (hereby expressly waiving the oath of the arbitrators constituting such board) pursuant to Rules of Arbitration, copies of which have been deposited with the American Arbitration Ass'n., 521 Fifth Ave., New York City, bearing date.....and identified by the signatures of the respective duly authorized officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Allied States Ass'n. of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and by this reference made a part hereof as if herein full set forth, a copy of which shall be furnished to the exhibitor and to the distributor upon request therefor.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such arbitration board and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the law of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force.

If the exhibitor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration such claims or controversies or to abide by and comply with the award of such arbitration board in respect thereto, the distributor may at its option suspend the deliveries of the motion pictures provided for in this and in each other existing license agreement between the parties hereto and / or terminate this and each such other license agreement; and upon such termination the aggregate of the license fees of all motion pictures specified in this and any other such license agreement then not exhibited forthwith shall become due and payable by the exhibitor.

If the distributor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the decision of the award of an arbitration board in respect thereto within the number of days specified in Article Twenty-sixth hereof following the name of the city in which such arbitration board is located, the exhibitor may at the option of the exhibitor terminate this and any other existing license agreement between the parties hereto by mailing a notice to such effect to the distributor within seven days after such failure or refusal.

Any such termination by either party shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy which the party so terminating may have by reason of any breach by the other party of this or any other existing agreement between the parties.

Each of the parties hereto, without notice to the other, may apply to any court having jurisdiction to make this agreement to arbitrate a rule or order of such court.

Recommendations

The undersigned distributor and exhibitor organizations respectfully recommend to all distributors and exhibitors of motion pictures in the United States the use of the following Standard License Agreement.

That a copy of every application signed by the exhibitor be left with the exhibitor at the time of signing and in the event of acceptance as therein provided a duplicate copy signed by the distributor be forwarded to the exhibitor within a reasonable time thereafter.

That the schedule thereof shall appear on the same page or side of the instrument upon which it will be executed by the exhibitor.

That in the schedule there be specified (a) whether the license is for the exhibition of sound or silent motion picture or both; (b) the license fee of each motion picture; (c) the number of days for which each is licensed; (d) the run and protection period, if any, agreed upon; (d) any provision in respect of the exhibition date or dates of the several motion pictures; and (f) an identifying description of each motion picture, excepting in long term and / or franchise and / or service license agreements providing for more than one year's "releases," the motion pictures may be generally identified as motion pictures released by the distributor or any like general description, and in such long term and / or franchise and / or service license agreements the provisions of the Standard License Agreement may be incorporated therein, excepting further that any short subject motion picture may be identified or described by a brand or other similar description.

That no reissue of motion pictures or old negatives renamed be included in any group of new motion pictures; and that no short subjects or newsreel be included in any group of feature motion pictures.

That newsreels or short subjects be licensed without requiring the licensing of feature motion pictures or vice versa, excepting that the distributor may include in any long term, franchise and / or service license agreement feature motion pictures and / or short subject motion pictures and / or newsreels.

That the following clause be added to the schedule only in respect of photoplays produced by a producer not controlled by the distributor and only if the distributor's contract with such producer provides that such pictures shall be sold separately and apart from other pictures distributed by the distributor, and that it be of no effect unless specifically agreed to in writing by the exhibitor:

"The distributor's right to approve or reject this application or any other application signed by the exhibitor at the same time, or at any other time, is not dependent upon the approval or rejection by the distributor of such other application or this application."

Unions Operate Denver Theatre To Provide Jobs

Denver—Union organizations of musicians and stagehands in Denver will open the Denham theatre during the latter part of April. Local union officials state that the move is purely a local matter brought about by the steadily growing unemployment of union musicians and stagehands. The decision to open the Denham theatre was made at a conference soon after the change of policy in the Denver theatre which created unemployment for 15 musicians and half a dozen stage employees. This new addition to the ranks of the unemployed of these union organizations made it necessary to in some way relieve the situation.

Local union officials are emphatic in a statement that the Denham is being opened to ease the employment situation and not for the purpose of entering the competitive field with any other theatre of the city. It is the question of policy for the theatre that is now being carefully considered as it is the purpose to give employment to their own members and at the same time cause as little interference as possible with the operations of any other city theatre.

Exhibitors of the city seem to realize the purpose of the unions as no resistance is being made to the move. No fight is expected against the move by any other theatre operators. The local movement is in no way connected with any national policy of the American Federation of Musicians. It is merely an attempt to create some relief for some fifty local musicians and stagehands.

It is hoped that a small profit will be realized from the undertaking although if only enough is realized at the box office to pay salaries and expenses the venture will be considered a success.

Daylight Saving Still on Shelf in St. Louis

St. Louis—Introduction of a daylight saving bill before the Board of Aldermen is being considered by Alderman C. J. Krueger of the largest ward in St. Louis. Krueger will present the measure to the new board in April. He said that he had sounded out several other aldermen on his contemplated measure and found them favorable to it, but stated he would not present the measure until he is sure there is a strong sentiment in favor of it.

A year ago the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce took a straw vote on daylight saving and found 8,062 against the plan and 6,206 for it. Labor organizations and motion picture theatre owners were the principal opponents of the plan. St. Louis is one of the few large cities of the country without daylight saving, Alderman Krueger said.

Providence—The Uptown has been taken over by J. Jamotti, owner of the building, who reopened the theatre this week.

Text of M.P.T.O. Proposals For New Agreement

If the exhibitor fails to exhibit a percentage picture the full number of days stipulated in the contract he shall pay the distributor for the unplayed days film rental based upon receipts equal to fifty per cent per day of the receipts of the last full day the picture was exhibited.

Protection on Censorship

No censored print shall be shipped to a non-censored theatre.

Where the average film rentals do not exceed $50 per picture for a given block of pictures the score charge per picture shall not exceed ten per cent of the film rental.

There shall be no score charge made by the distributor where the engagement is straight percentage.

Score charges shall be added to the film rental in computing the split figure where there is a percentage clause.

Pay-As-You-Go Arbitration

At the time of filing a claim the party filing same shall be required to pay to the secretary of the board the sum of $2.50. In the event the plaintiff prevails in the presentation of his claim he shall be assessed costs to the sum of five per cent of any money judgment recovered. But in no event shall said costs exceed the sum of $50 nor shall the minimum amount be less than $5. The costs so recovered shall be deposited with the secretary of the Film Board in a separate account. Said fund shall be dispersed at the direction of the board of arbitration for the purpose of paying the expenses incident to arbitration. Any exhibitor against whom a claim is filed and prevails at the hearing upon such claim or any exhibitor who successfully files and prosecutes a claim shall be reimbursed for expenses incurred by him and the arbitrators in an amount to be determined by the board of arbitration of the funds deposited with the secretary of the board.

The Set-Up

The Board of Arbitration shall consist of five representatives of distributors and five unaffiliated exhibitors, the exhibitors to be appointed by the president of the exhibitors' organization in the zone. If there is no exhibitor organization in the zone, then the president of the Film Board will call on the president of the nearest exhibitor organization to appoint five unaffiliated exhibitors at large in said zone. The exhibitor whose case is to be tried is to choose, at his option, either two or three exhibitor members of the board to try his case. The distributor shall choose a like number of distributor members. The board of four or six members shall try the case.

The defendant is to receive a minimum of 14 days' notice that his case is to be tried. In the event he has not filed his selection of arbitrators within seven days of date notice was sent, then the president of the exhibitor organization shall appoint them.

In the event the board cannot decide the case on account of a tie vote then these members shall choose one additional member. In the event that the board cannot select the additional member then the president of the Chamber or Board of Commerce shall apoint one.

If either party fails, without cause, to appear at the hearing of a case, then the case shall be carried over to the next meeting of the board. A similar occurrence at the next meeting shall constitute sufficient grounds for entering his default.

this license any such photoplay (not exceeding in the aggregate two of such photoplays) so roadshown in said city, upon the same terms and conditions above provided for the exception and exclusion of photoplays roadshown in the city of New York.

If and when any such roadshow exhibition (except any roadshow exhibition in New York and/or Los Angeles, shall be in the territory served by the distributor's exchange or exchanges serving the exhibitor's theatre, such photoplays so roadshown in such territory shall forthwith be excepted and excluded from this license. The distributor shall send written notice to that effect, to the exhibitor within 14 days after such roadshow exhibition commences.

Availability on Roadshows

The distributor may so exercise such right to except and exclude any such photoplay from time to time, in the respective territories, as above defined, in the United States. Any photoplay so roadshown in any place in the United States, and not excepted and excluded from this license as aforesaid, shall not be deemed available for exhibition hereunder until after the completion of such roadshowing of such photoplay in the United States, and such photoplay shall be exhibited hereunder as and when available.

For each photoplay that the distributor shall except and exclude, as aforesaid, the exhibitor is hereby granted the option to except and exclude from this license one of the other photoplays licensed hereunder, but only if the exhibitor shall give to the distributor written notice to that effect not later than 14 days before the date fixed for the exhibition hereunder of such other photoplay. The distributor may exhibit and/or license the exhibition of any and all photoplays excepted and excluded from this license by the distributor and/or the exhibitor, as aforesaid, when and where desired by it, free from all claims of the exhibitor in respect thereof.

Shorts Stand on Own

Twenty-Third: This instrument shall be deemed an application for a license under copyright only and shall not become binding until accepted in writing without alteration or change by an officer of or any person duly authorized by the distributor and notice of acceptance sent to the exhibitor as herein provided. The deposit by the distributor of any check or other consideration given by the exhibitor at the time of application as payment on account of any sums payable hereunder or the delivery of a print of any of the motion pictures or the sale of any advertising accessories of news reels or short subjects groups shall not be made a condition of licensing the exhibition of feature photoplays or vice versa, provided that the distributor may include in any long term, franchise and/or service contract, feature photoplays and/or short subject photoplays and/or news reels.

If the photoplays named herein are not made by the producer whose productions this contract purports to license they shall be so designated in the schedule.

Twenty-Sixth: The rental for the picture showw on the schedule of this contract shall constitute the full consideration to be paid by the exhibitor for the right to reproduce the picture with all sound accompaniment and no further charge in the nature of a score charge shall be imposed.

Arbitration Provided For

Twenty-Seventh: The exhibitor and the distributor, respectively, freely and voluntarily agree that as a condition precedent to the commencement of any action or proceedings in any court by either of them to determine, enforce or protect the legal right of either hereunder, each shall submit to the arbitration board hereinafter provided for in the city wherein is situated the exchange of the distributor from which the exhibitor is served (unless the parties hereunder agree in writing that such submission be made to an arbitration board located in another specified city) all claims and controversies arising hereunder for determination by such arbitration board (hereby arising hereunder for determination by such arbitration board (hereby expressly waiving the oath of the arbitrators constituting such board) pursuant to rules of arbitration, copies of which have been deposited with the American Arbitration Ass'n, 521 Fifth Ave., New York City, bearing date and identified by the signature of the respective duly authorized officers of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, the Allied States Ass'n of Motion Picture Exhibitors and the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., and by this reference made a part hereof as if herein fully set forth, a copy of which shall be furnished to the exhibitor and the distributor upon request therefor.

The parties hereto further agree to abide by and forthwith comply with any decision or award of such arbitration board and consent that any such decision or award shall be enforceable in or by any court of competent jurisdiction pursuant to the law of such jurisdiction now or hereafter in force.

Suspension as Penalty

If the exhibitor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claims or controversy or to abide by and comply with the award of such arbitration board in respect thereto, the distributor may at its option suspend the deliveries of the motion pictures provided for in this and in each other existing license agreement between the parties hereto and/or terminate this and each such other license agreement.

If the distributor shall fail or refuse to submit to arbitration any such claim or controversy or to abide by and comply with the decision of the award of an arbitration board in respect thereto within the number of days specified in Article Twenty-sixth hereof following the name of the city in which such arbitration board is located, the exhibitor may at the option of the exhibitor terminate this and any other existing license agreement between the parties hereto by mailing a notice to such effect to the distributor within seven days after such failure or refusal.

Any such termination by either party shall be without prejudice to any other right or remedy which the party so terminating may have by reason of any breach by the other party of this or any other existing agreement between parties.

Each of the parties hereto, without a notice to the other, may apply to any court having jurisdiction to make this agreement to arbitrate a rule or order of such court.

"Bigotry Trust," Out to Kill Public Rights, Faces Two-Fisted Opposition

Flury Body Campaigning in Many Spots to Help Win Sunday Shows

By HENRY FLURY

President, National Association Opposed to Blue Laws

Washington—With the introduction of Rep. William C. Lankford's bill for a nation-wide blue law to make the country "blue" on Sunday as well as "dry" and the support it has from the Methodist Board of Prohibition, Temperance and Public Morals, the W. C. T. U., the Ku Klux Klan, the Lord's Day Alliance, the International Reform Federation, and other organizations that make it their professional seven-days-a-week business to pry into the private personal life and "morals" of honest men and women, the attention of intelligent people is once more being focussed upon individual rights.

Everywhere one goes, there is heard the chaffing over petty personal restrictions. The average citizen has just about reached the point where he is ready to explode. One indignity after another has been pyramided upon the bent, defenseless back of John Doe and Mary Roe. But watch out! The worm is beginning to turn. From Coast to Coast, from the Great Lakes to the Rio Grande, the harassed citizens are getting restless and are rising in revolt against all sorts of blue laws and especially those that cramp their style (in respect to innocent amusements) on the first day of the week. Folks are getting sore at the silly exhibitions of clerical presumptiousness, at the dictatorship of the intolerant church minority. Church members themselves, in many cases as well as intelligent and liberal-minded clergy, are joining in the demand for the rational Sunday as opposed to the dull or closed Sunday.

Battle Raging on Many Fronts

At the present time, a fierce battle is raging along many fronts in the mountainous state of West Virginia, against blue laws. Under the able leadership of the National Association Opposed to Blue Laws, which was organized in 1925, and has led many fights against indigo statutes, the moving picture houses are being opened on Sundays. Huntington, Wheeling, Parkersburg, Carles, Fairmont and other cities of West Virginia are running shows in defiance of ministerial thunderings and threats. In Wheeling, recently, the grand jury refused to return an indictment against 112 persons who had been arrested for "violating" a Sabbath law that did not exist.

There is no law against Sunday amusements in the state of West Virginia. There is a law against compelling employees to labor seven days a week. However, the owners of the movie houses were able to prove that they did not compel seven days of labor but permitted one day of rest, though not necessarily the first day of the week or Sunday. They pointed out that gasoline filling stations were open for patronage of joy riders.

The Lord's Day Alliance, which, as a professional head hunter's organization, is usually on the job whenever suppression of normal, innocent recreation on Sunday is invoked overlooked one good bet this time in West Virginia. The reason was two-fold. First, they were too cocksure that West Virginia was "safe in the fold." Second, the adroit and skillfully planned strategy of the National Ass'n Opposed to Blue Laws working quietly and unostentatiously among the citizens for several weeks helping to organize the intelligent ones and planning a long battle front in several cities simultaneously threw a monkey wrench into the Lord's Day Alliance.

Political "Head Hunting"

The Alliance has never had to meet just such a situation before. In times past protest against the dull Sunday has been weak and unorganized. When some little town did pluck up courage to defy the "bigotry trust," it soon felt the whack of the big stick of the highly organized though small and efficient L. D. A. Any independence on the part of citizens was quickly smashed by the usual methods of boycott of business, and head hunting. By head hunting, I mean that any official that honestly tried to grant the people a little more freedom and recreation on their one free day had his head taken off by the clerical black hand. But this time, in West Virginia, the L. D. A. was caught napping, did not have enough funds for the long battle front that covered practically the whole state. They did not realize that the citizens were being organized under experienced leadership that was probably as astute as theirs. They are beginning to realize it now.

But West Virginia is only one of the states that is resolved to put an end to tyrannical legislation made in colonial days when church and state were one. In Utah, the state Supreme Court refused to sustain a conviction of a lower court for a case of Sunday violation in the city of Provo. In Colorado, in the case of the People vs. D. J. Mooney, the latter being charged with operating a movie on Sunday, Jan. 6, 1929, in Ordway, District Judge Samuel D. Trimble dismissed the charge against Mooney, holding that the blue statute was indefinite, ambiguous, uncertain and did not apply. There was an appeal taken to the state Supreme Court whence a decision is expected within a few weeks. There is no doubt in my mind that the decision will sustain Judge Trimble.

A Few Instances—

In Nebraska, in the town of Weeping Water where local option of Sunday movies is in effect, a special election to vote upon this issue resulted in an unusually heavy balloting and a sweeping victory for Sunday movies. In Kansas, a news item sent out by the International News Service Oct. 15 says that editorial writers of the sunflower state are busily engaged in writing editorials entitled "What is the Matter with Kansas?" These writers maintain that Kansas is so widely advertised for its anti-cigarette, anti-saloon and other blue laws that potential residents are frightened away. While more liberal and sensible states have shown an increase, Kansas has barely held its own, in population. The Kansas Chamber of Commerce is making a survey to ascertain the cause of the slump.

In cities in Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Ohio, balloting on Sunday amusements has been going on for some time with varying results. In Florida, in the village of Live Oak and some other places, since local option is in force, Sunday movies have carried the day. Compare this with "civilized" Texas, the state that boasts Two Gun Norris, the shooting preacher; where John M. Sayeg of Waxahachie, who was charged with operating a movie on Sunday was fined $25 and costs by the county court. The fine was appealed to the court of criminal appeals but it was affirmed by that court. In Kentucky, in Louisville and other cities there is strong agitation for Sunday amusements of a rational and legal kind to take the place of the "bootlegged" kind that now prevails.

Aroused to "Menace"

It is impossible to mention all the cases in various parts of the country where blue laws are being put to the legal test. It is encouraging that citizens with backbone are beginning to waken to the menace of blue laws which are the "entering wedge" of more drastic and far-reaching control of the private life of the individual. Hitherto, much of this antiquated legislation has been allowed to sleep on the statute books, all but forgotten except by historical scholars, but in some narrowminded communities such as Ocean City, N. J., in full and literal force even to the stretching of heavy chains across the streets on the Sabbath to prevent entrance and operation of automobiles. Nor need I mention the case of Sunbury, a thriving little city in eastern Pennsylvania, where Dr. Brown, the head of the local airport, was arrested for permitting flying on Sunday,

Here's An Argument

Strong campaign against efforts to foist Sunday closing upon municipalities has been waged by the National Ass'n. Opposed to Blue Laws. The Organization is disseminating information concerning disastrous effects of the antiquated laws, and pointing out the danger of such suppression. The association was organized in 1925. The accompanying article is a strong indictment of the "blue" movement. It can be used to advantage by exhibitors in their local press to offset "Sour Sabbath" propaganda.

It Really Happened

George, the colored stock room boy in a New York home office was fired. After pounding pavements for three weeks, he became desperate and when he spied an ad plug in the window of a Madison Ave. bookstore reading "Dickens works here for $22." he hustled to the manager and told him that he would perform the same duties for $15. An ambitious boy, George.

$50,000 Title Change

Change of the title of "La Marseillaise" to "Captain of the Guard" cost Universal $50,000, the company states. The change was made due to the pronunciation difficulties feared by retention of the French title. The $50,000 represents posters, lobbies, photographs electric lights, prints and other accessories which had to be discarded when the change was made.

Ghost Of Early Disc Talker Stalks In Court As Gotham Sues Bristol

Auto Toys Cause Brush With Police

Rochester—Too realistic publicity for "Officer O'Brien" at the RKO Palace brought Hay Nash, publicity director, into a brush with Police Chief Kavanaugh, but gave him and his manager a sense of satisfaction as well.

Fully 100 drivers walked into the Police Traffic Bureau to straighten out traffic tags and found they had been cited only for "failure to see Officer O'Brien'." The chief told Nash to identify his tags with big and black enough letters to spare the traffic bureau. That and a police night, at which cops staffed the house, calmed all parties.

First National Set to Produce Forty Pictures

Hollywood—Announcing a program calling for the expenditure of $17,500,000 on forty pictures at the First National Studio at Burbank, J. L. Warner, vice-president in charge of production, yesterday outlined plans for the organization's product for the coming year. Ten will be all-Technicolor.

First National has twenty famous authors and playwrights represented on its production list. These include Rafael Sabatini, James Oliver Curwood, Booth Tarkington, Rex Beach, Paul Armstrong, Owen Davis, David Belasco, Sir Gilbert Parker, Arthur Knoblock, John Monk Saunders, Porter Emerson Browne, William Byron Mowrey, W. B. Burnett, Martin Favin, Samuel B. Shipman and John B. Hymer.

An innovation is a new $250,000 music arts hall, which is now nearing completion, to furnish facilities for the composers and lyric writers now engaged in working on musical film productions. This building will also house a large and small theatre, and a library of 250,000 musical scores, published and in manuscript. An additional feature will be a complete recording and "play-back" equipment in each of the various studios.

Fox to Make Fifty-Two

Hollywood—Fifty-two productions at an estimated cost of $20,000,000 are scheduled for the 1930-31 program of the Fox Film Corporation. Grandeur and Fox color are to form an important part of the program. As a result of the increased program, four more than last year, two additional stages are to be started immediately at Movietone City.

Hollywood—"Her Fortune," a story by James Montgomery, has been selected as Joan Crawford's next starring talker for M-G-M.

Michael Gorman Dies

Ottawa—Michael Gorman, showman and turfman, is dead, after a long illness. He and four surviving brothers have been widely known in theatre circles for years.

Public All Set To Sock "Blues" In North Dakota

Bismarck, N. D.—Sunday shows will be submitted to the voters at the spring election. This was made certain when petitions bearing 28,000 signatures were submitted to the attorney general by the Sunday Theatre Law Repeal Ass'n. Only 10,000 signatures were necessary to assume a referendum.

The W. C. T. U. is credited with leading the fight against change of the "blue" law. The proposal calls for local option on the question of Sunday shows. The sentiment demonstrated in the signing of petitions shows that there is a changed attitude in the state, as regards a liberal Sabbath.

Sunday Shows Enjoined

Fairfield, Ia.—Sunday movies met with a temporary setback following the effort of the Day brothers to prove that they could operate on Sunday because their religious faith is that of the Seven Day Adventists. An injunction was brought against them to prevent the showing there on Sunday. The case against the mayor for malicious persecution suits brought by the Day brothers was dismissed by the judge. A large percentage of the people of Fairfield are in favor of the Sunday shows and it is thought that the question will meet with favorable action at the time of the elections in another year.

Sabbath Shows Win Out

Hillsboro, Ill.—The city commissioners have passed an ordinance permitting the operation of motion picture theatres on Sundays. The measure becomes effective in thirty days. It was strongly opposed by the Protestant ministers of the city.

Okays Sunday Referendum

Albany—The villages committee of the Senate has reported favorably the Goodrich-Mastick bill authorizing the Peekskill village trustees to conduct an official referendum on Sunday shows. The Assembly already had passed the bill.

Bristolphone in "Embryonic State" Is Charge; Counter Suit Filed for $15,000

manufacturers, with an inside track on small theatre business, are to be heard in suit for [illegible] brought in Gotham Bldg., New York, against William H. Bristol, Waterbury, Conn. The action has been transferred from the state to Federal Court.

Gotham contends that the two films it recorded via Bristolphone were commercially unsaleable because the apparatus was "in such an embryonic state." The pictures are "Times Square" and "The River Woman."

In addition, it is alleged, Bristol failed to live up to his contract to install recording equipment in the Gotham studios. Damages are asked for asserted injury to reputation and loss of revenue.

Denying the charges, Bristol has asked $15,000 for the use of his Waterbury studios in the making of the two pictures concerned.

Gotham and the Bristolphone Corp. two years ago were regarded as leaders in the disc reproduction field, in which the firms pioneered. The equipment was one of the first, other than Western Electric, to reach the market. Sam Sax and Charles and Budd Rogers were chief executives of Bristolphone.

Warner Building Eight

Herman L. Wise[illegible] struction for Warners, announced that work has commenced on eight new buildings to house the combined exchanges of Warner Bros., Vitaphone and First National Pictures in Dallas, New Orleans, Kansas City, Chicago, Minneapolis, Cleveland, Buffalo and Philadelphia. He is also supervising construction on eight new Warner theatres in Youngstown, O., Erie, Pa., Wilkinsburg, Pa., West Chester, Pa., Milwaukee, Wis., Torrington, Conn., Ridgewood, N. J., Morgantown, W. Va.

Reisner Switched

Hollywood—Charles Reisner, who has been directing M-G-M's current filmusical revue "The March of Time" for several months, has been taken off the production and switched to direction of "Spring Fever." No reason was given.

Charles Dorian, assistant director, has been moved into Reisner's post.

Tampa House Closes

Tampa, Fla.—Harry Weiss, general manager of the Tampa Publix houses, announced the closing of the Victory following the Sunday night performance. The house will be entirely remodeled.

Columbia Signs Stanwyck

[illegible] "Ladies of Leisure," Barbara Stanwyck has been signed by Columbia for four pictures.

THE Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences is no more and certainly no less than a company union. . . . Given the proper encouragement it might grow up and get out of control unless that control was carefully plotted beforehand. Stop the presses! Dust off the headlines! Mae Murray and Eric von Stroheim are friends again! They had not spoken for five years. Not since those hectic and fatal days when Von directed Mae in "Merry Widow."

It happened at the Mayfair dance. Von gave a big party. Mae was at another table. Von had interesting little favors to symbolize the various pictures he has directed. One of them was a miniature of Mae and Jack Gilbert dancing the "Merry Widow" waltz.

In a moment of good cheer, Von sent the statuette over to Mae's table. She came to Von and threw her arms about him. A spotlight was thrown upon the happy pair while everybody applauded. And another Hollywood hatchet is buried—Photoplay.

Hate to be pessimistic about the career of a young man who is trying to get on in the world, but I fear that a great many thousands are growing inarticulately bored with the theatrical talents of Charles ("Buddy") Rogers. Society Woman Loses Stanley Patent Suit

Wilmington, Del.—Federal Judge Hugh M. Morris has ruled against Mrs. Mary Hallock Greenwalt, Philadelphia society woman and inventor, in her patent infringement suit against the Stanley Company of America. She charged infringement of her invention for the timing of gradual variations of light with rhythmic sound.

While holding that Mrs. Greenwalt was rightly the inventor of the process, Judge Morris asserted that her action in demonstrating her invention two years before receiving a patent voided the rights she held under the patent because she charged admission. Because of this technicality her attorneys said that they will take steps to correct it and may appeal the decision.

Film "Monsieur Le Fox" in Five Languages

"Monsieur Le Fox" has been placed in production under Hal Roach's direction, with versions in five languages being made at the same time by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Barbara Leonard, new screen discovery, plays the heroine in every language, while Gilbert Roland will appear opposite her in the English and Spanish transcriptions, Andre Luguet, noted Continental actor, in the French adaptation, and Jean De Briac, formerly associated with Sarah Bernhardt, in the German and Italian versions. Arnold Korff, seen on Broadway last year in "The Age of Innocence," has a featured character role in the German, English and French versions of the photoplay.

Theatres Help Parkers

Baltimore—By a co-operative arrangement between the Granby and Loew's State of Norfolk, Va., a newspaper advertisement was run advising the public that they could save ten cents by parking on a lot next to the Bell Telephone building in that city.

The advertisement said that through the courtesy of the theatres arrangements had been made for the ten cent reduction of parking during the repaving of Granby street.

Floaters Taking Lunch to Shows, Find Them Haven From Cold Weather

Unemployment and hard times in various cities of the United States are cutting into theatre turnover, even though box offices are getting the floating population in the various towns.

The reason is that the drifters, with nothing to do, are flocking to the theatres to kill time. Quite a few managers report that people bumming come to the theatres early mornings and bring their lunches with them. Then they park in the theatre for two or three shows, figuring the low morning matinee tariff is better than walking the streets in the cold.

In cities where the climate is more or less unfavorable during the winter months, the tendency to soak up heat in theatres is more pronounced. Patrons also use the theatre to grab off an hour or two's sleep. This gag is figured as cutting into gross receipts, for the reason that the occupied seats represent but one admission for several shows, whereas ordinarily, there would be a regular turnover.

Just how theatres can protect themselves against chiseling of this kind is a problem to managers, who are alarmed over the spread of the practice.

Record Business Being Chalked Up For "U" Newsreel

Universal is chalking up a record with its newspaper newsreel. Since January, when Graham McNamee began newscasting in the reel, the company has written what is said to be a record-breaking number of contracts. Starting last Saturday, the reel was made available with sound-on-films prints. Previously McNamee's voice had been recorded only on discs.

Fifty-eight metropolitan dailies throughout the country are co-operating with Universal and sponsoring release of the newsreel in their respective territories. Six newspapers were added to the list last week, with the number increasing steadily. All newspapers in the hook-up aid in publicising the release.

Changes in Publix Omaha Staff Will Be Permanent

Omaha—Shakeup in the Publix organization begun several weeks ago promises to be a permanent attraction for the chain's three local houses. Latest news is the transfer of the 12-piece Paramount stage band to the World for a split week policy of pictures and vaudeville. Acts will be booked from the Chicago William Morris office to fill the Saturday, Sunday and Monday gap. The Orpheum (RKO) has the only other stage show in town since the Paramount went all sound two weeks ago. Richard F. Emig, formerly of the Columbia, Davenport, Ia., has been made manager of the World. He succeeds Lionel Wasson, who has been promoted to city manager and supervisor of the Paramount.

Walter L. Fleck, city press agent, has been replaced by Irvin Waterstreet who comes from the Schine chain at Lima, Ohio. Fleck goes to the Des Moines Publix division.

Irving Colvin, manager of the State is slated to go to the Paramount at Waterloo, Ia. His successor has not been named.

Imported from Broadway

Hollywood—Wynne Gibson, comedienne of the Broadway stage, has been brought to the Coast by RKO under a term contract.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

DOES a pair of sixes beat a hand with a queen the high card in a game of poker? Ask Charlie Ruggles. Yeh, he learned about cards from Frank Morgan during shooting of "Queen High" under Fred Newmeyer's direction at the Paramount Long Island studios. Incidentally, the card scene is one of the funniest bits we've ever seen.

Frank Morgan, after his toil was o'er (blame it on the weather) seemed very much depressed and after an exhaustive search cried, "Has anybody here seen my pants?" Beg pardon, he had one pair on, but it was his street pair that was missing. "Mouse," the prop boy, finally recovered the garment.

Three writers and one director have been added to the staff at the Eastern Vitaphone studios. The writers are Homer Mason, author of the Vitaphone comedies, "Money, Money, Money" and "At Your Service," Walter Butterfield and Burnet Hershey. Roy Mack is the new director.

THE STUDIO SLEUTH.

Sight and Sound Broadcast from London Studio

London — The first public "sight and sound" program, a combination of television and the regular radio entertainment, was broadcast from the Brookmans Park studio of the British Broadcasting Co. It was successfully received in homes having television sets, the heads and shoulders of several speakers and singers being shown on two wave lengths—one for vision and the other for sound. The experiment augmented the demand for the television device, and the company is rushing their manufacture.

Plugging New Songs

DeSylva, Brown & Henderson are preparing to launch an extensive campaign on the song numbers in the Warner production, "Hold Everything," which will be the opening feature of the new Hollywood Theatre. The songs are "When the Little Red Roses Get the Blues for You," "Sing a Little Theme Song" and "Isn't This a Cockeyed World?", written by Al Dubin and Joe Burke, and "To Know You Is to Love You" and "You're the Cream in My Coffee," which are from the original scores written by DeSylva, Brown & Henderson.

Boosts Music Abroad

J. J. Robbins, of the Robbins Music Corp., has instituted a new department which will co-operate with the M-G-M distributing agencies throughout the world. With songs playing a great role in the successful merchandising of the film product, it is Robbins' belief that close contact with the distributor abroad is essential if the utmost is to be realized from the music.

Writing "Hot Curves" Music

Violinsky and Silverstein, writers of "Honolulu Eyes," "Pretty Little You," "When Frances Dances With Me" and others, have been signed by Phil Goldstone to write music and lyrics for the Tiffany picture, "Hot Curves."

New Songs for "Caught Short"

Hollywood—Two new songs have been written for the M-G-M comedy, "Caught Short," featuring Marie Dressler and Polly Moran, with Chuck Reisner directing. The songs are "I'm Spanish Now," written by Dave Snell and Ray Egan, and "Somebody," composed by Roy Turk and Fred Ahlert.

Feldman Here for Songs

Bert Feldman, English music publisher and London sales agent for Warner-Witmark songs, has arrived in New York and is looking over the music preparatory to selection of his new catalogue

Flying officials claim that the song, used as the aviation "bon voyage," will not only prove entertaining to the passengers, but will also tend to dispel signs of nervousness.

With the signing of McHugh and Fields, Joseph Meyer and Harry Woods by M-G-M, the Robbins Music Corp. is assured of another steady batch of hits. Bernard Prager, sales manager for the Robbins firm, has announced additions to the sales and promotion staffs. Nelson Ingham has been placed in charge of Eastern Canada, supervising Robbins activities in Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton and London, Ontario, making his headquarters in Montreal; Phil Julius will cover Pittsburgh, Cleveland and New York State, with headquarters at Cleveland; Eddie Van will assist Sig Bosley at the Los Angeles office and Dick Arnold has been transferred from Minneapolis to San Francisco.

While on the Robbins subject we would like to put on "the rave" about the way George Lottman, director of publicity, keeps developing interesting and novel copy, thereby making this chronicler's job so much easier. McCormack Leads Race at Boston Taking $16,000

Boston—Box office returns jumped all along the line this week. Metropolitan took $35,000 with Paul Ash and "Honey." Anita Stewart in person with "Anna Christie" did well above average at Loew's Orpheum for a second week's showing. Both the Keith and Keith-Albee theatres grossed high on "Case of Sergeant Grischa" and "Cameo Kirby," while the city's only road show, "Song o' My Heart," with John McCormack, packed them in at the Majestic at every performance with an outlook of several week's business and the peak not yet reached. Uptown's increase in prices, which went over well for a week or two, doesn't look quite so good and there was a decrease in gross from that quarter. It sent "Song of the West" to the week's low ($11,000 on a 90% rating).

Weather: Fair, mild.

Opposition: "Honey," Paul Ash in person and stage band at Metropolitan; "Case of Sergeant Grischa," Keith's Memorial; "Song of the West," Uptown; "Cameo Kirby," with 25 Lillyputians, Keith-Albee; "Girl Said No," State; "Anna Christie," which moved over from Loew's State, and Anita Stewart in Person, at Loew's Orpheum; "Cohens and Kellys in Scotland," held over, Park; "China Express," Park; "Mexicali Rose," Scollay Square; "Song o' My Heart," Majestic.

Southpaws

There was an embarrassing moment when Rudy Vallee and Graham McNamee met for the first time, and it looked as though they were fighting. However, it developed that both were left-handed and they finally managed to shake. Then they fell into a discussion about famous men who were southpaws, such as Napoleon—stop laughing!

"Lillies" Flops In Portland On A $6,450 Gross

Portland, Ore.—In spite of additional summer sunshine, and Lent, excellence of film offerings plus heavy exploitation resulted in a slight increase in box office returns, but not above par. "Vagabond King" shot into the lead early in the week and word-mouth-advertising brought its rating to 123 per cent, with a gross of $12,000. "Ship from Shanghai" brought $10,225 to the Fox Broadway, with a representative figure of 112 per cent.

Lowest percentage was reached at the Alder's, "Lillies of the Field," rating but 89 per cent, with $6,450. "Puttin' on the Ritz" (at United Artists) should have scored better than 95 per cent. with $7,150. Complete program for week follows:

Weather: Ideal summer, top 72 degrees.

RKO's "Framed" Dies in Balto. Grosses $2,300

Baltimore—Cool [illegible] stubbornly refused to allow business at box-office level. During the week, all of the 11 big runs grossed below normal, except three.

The Rivoli hit the highest mark, $10,000, a rating of 125 per cent, with "Colleen" and Kellys in Scotland." Stanley and Valencia came next with [illegible] per cent ratings, the former taking $17,500 with "Girl Said No," starring Haines, while the latter grossed $3,500 with "Rogue Song," after that picture had played one week at the Stanley.

A surprise of the week was the gross of $900 piled up at the art theatre, the Little, which means an average of 90 per cent, made by the all-Japanese picture, "Yoshiwara." The low mark hit the Auditorium with "Framed," which took in $2,300, or 35 per cent.

Eight of the eleven pictures figured in the resume went below par.

Etiquette

Hollywood—Yes, sir, the good old days are gone forever. You've heard about the perfect hostess who, when a guest knocked over a glass or cup, did likewise to cover his embarrassment. However, the other night at a dinner party a film actor bumped over his cocktail and the hostess drank her own for fear the actor would grab it.

'Ranger' Western Lassoes $14,000, Topping K. C. List

Kansas City—An off-week for the bigger houses in town saw the honors go to a western at the Pantages, where "Lone Star Ranger" took in $14,000, building up a percentage of 140. Next in line was "Honey" at the Newman, with $12,500, or 125 per cent.

The two big houses fell below average, "Sky Hawk" at the Midland drawing only 85 per cent, and "Case of Sergeant Grischa" doing practically the same at the Mainstreet. The Royal did normal business with "Phantom of the Opera."

Weather: Clear and cold.

Opposition: "Lone Star Ranger" and five vaudeville acts headlining McCormick and Collum revue, Pantages; Chester Conklin headlining five vaudeville acts, and "Sky Hawk," Midland; stock company playing "Skidding," Orpheum; revue headlining vaudeville and "Case of Sergeant Grischa," Mainstreet; "Honey, Newman; "Phantom of the Opera," Royal.

Barthelmess Is Low With Gross Of Twenty Grand

Cleveland—Of the three new pictures offered here last week, "Sarah and Son" walked off with first place honors, doing big business ($25,000) in face of a bad blizzard that gripped the city all week. "Rogue Song" held up well during its third week, business being stimulated by a concert appearance of Lawrence Tibbett, his broadcasting radio program and the attendant newspaper publicity, bringing a $15,000 gross. "Son of the Gods" (Barthelmess-

Careers of stars will be prolonged 10 to 15 years by color photography, according to Dr. Herbert Kalmus, president of Technicolor, who states color is making 'em young again, blotting out sagging chins, wrinkles and tell-tale lines around the eyes.

We have in mind at least two dozen Hollywood "beauties" who are breathing easier since Kalmus announced this new hope for rejuvenation.

Shooting the Works

"Bob" Sherwood tells the yarn about Montague Glass, who made the great mistake of selling his "Potash & Perlmutter" to Samuel Goldwyn on a royalty basis. Instead of being paid a flat sum for an outright sale, he agreed to accept a percentage. In due course, Goldwyn started sending statements to Glass, listing all debits and credits so that he would have an exact estimate of his share of the booty, if any.

Glancing at the debit side of a statement, the author noticed an item of $7,000 for an expense incurred by Goldwyn in tendering a banquet to prominent exhibitors, "to promote interest in the picture."

When Glass considered the cost of this feast, and realized that he had unknowingly been sharing in that cost, he sent a telegram to Goldwyn, asking: "Did you have to serve pheasant?"

Arliss, Billed With Lightner, Takes $14,300

Providence—Fay's Majestic hit the high spot last week with a double feature bill headed by "Green Goddess." which clicked for $14,300, a percentage of 125%. Loew's State and Victory did fair business, chalking up percentages of 90. Wrestling and hockey cards provided stiff opposition.

"Glory" Bites The Dust With An $800 Intake

Oklahoma City—"Blaze o' Glory" (Sono Art-World Wide) brought tears to the eyes of the Empress manager. The Eddie Dowling film just curdled up and died in a three-day run. Great ballyhooing aroused interest in the film, but not sufficient to send the gross over a 50 per cent rating, which means eight hundred bucks for the house.

It was the only flop for the week, others all hitting their quota mark and some jumping far ahead. "Murder on the Roof" (Columbia) and "Montana Moon" (M-G-M), for instance, chalked a 125% rating, with the former taking $2,760 in four days, and the latter $5,000 for a full week.

Des Moines—"Honey" (Para.), with a whopping good supporting bill, but the best box-office figure that the Des Moines theatre has had for the past six months. It grossed $14,220, rated as 200 per cent. "Slightly Scarlet," next door, ranked as the outstanding opposition, doing better than average on a four-day run. The popular stage band show was also a contributing factor in the box office in this Paramount show. No pictures fell below average and all received favorable comment.

It's a Phoney

Eva Le Gallienne's first appearance on the American stage was with Harrison Gray Fiske in "Mrs. Boltay's Daughter" and, according to Sid Skolsky, the star's father, Richard Le Gallienne, who hadn't seen Eva since she was three years old, attended the performance. Eva had the role of a colored maid. Mr. LeGallienne on seeing her exclaimed: "My God—is that my daughter!"

Be Seated, Please

A striking view of eight assistant directors in their shirt sleeves and sweaters hard at work assisting the director to take a scene of Mae Murray in "Peacock Alley." The strain on assistant directors is terrific. In all our years of close association with Hollywood we have never been able to figure out why a director is invariably seated when dirscting a picture. This study clears up the matter once and for all. You will kindly note the eight assistant directors arduously standing up. True they are doing nothing; but the indubitable fact still remains that they are doing it standing up. It takes an assistant director an average of twelve years to become a director. And after standing up steadily, doing practically nothing for twelve years, can't you see why a director's first official act is to sit down?

Warner-F. N. Now

Hollywood—The Warner Brothers name finally has gone up on the billboards of First National studios. Boards along the highway now read "Home of Warner Brothers-First National-Vitaphone Pictures." Previously the signs did not carry the Warner Brothers name.

S. O. S.

Shortage of cartoonists for picture work has placed at least one New York producer in a jam. He arranged for financing and was all set to launch a new series when he discovered there were no pen-and-inkers available, with all talent tied up and no signs of new men for the jobs.

Since the advent of sound, there has been a wild scramble by cartoon producers to outdo each other in sketch tricks and musical synchronization. This keen competish has resulted in a fine crop of comedy material in the cartoon field, with exhibitors giving considerably more attention to bookings of this type of short.

Fire Panics Averted

Rochester—Presence of mind of theatre men prevented panics and saved valuable equipment in two theatre fires here. Manager H. M. Addison of Loew's Rochester, biggest downtown house, calmed an audience of 4,000 when a stage entryway blaze filled the place with smoke. The fire was extinguished with slight loss and the performance went on uninterrupted.

Leroy Flower, operator for the Regent at Geneva, saved projection and talking apparatus by throwing a tarpaulin over them when an attic blaze burst into the projection room. He announced the fire to the audience, which left orderly. The blaze was extinguished in a few minutes.

Langdon in "Come Easy"

Hollywood—Harry Langdon returns to features through a role in Warners' "Come Easy." Langdon is on a layoff period at the Roach studios.

Falls—And Collects

Albany—Suing for $3,000, a woman resident was awarded a verdict of $150 against the Troy (N. Y.) Theatre Corp. by a jury for injuries suffered in a fall in the theatre.

"Are You an Ostrich?"

Is your head so buried in comfortable prosperity that you are blind to the growing menace of fanatic interference in legislation? You have seen, in prohibition, what powerful religious organizations can do, but your very prosperity has kept you from suffering and also from making a protest. Liquor is plentiful and you have plenty of money. It will be the same when these fanatics ban other pleasures which make for the enjoyment of living. You won't suffer. Your money will enable you to have all these prohibited things just the same.

Is that the kind of ostrich you are?

Well, that's the kind of an ostrich the reformer is! His head is buried in fanaticism, and he has plenty of money too. His money puts over blue laws and your money breaks them. What a great example for the great mass of people who are not so well off! Is it any wonder there is no longer any respect for law?

Isn't it time we thought less of money and more of principles? The principles for which our forefathers fought. The principles of rights and liberties, tolerance and temperance!

Tax on Outdoor Ads Considered By Iowa Board

This week's crop of legislative activity affecting the industry, directly or indirectly, is exceptionally llght in comparison with recent weeks. Regulation of fire prevention devices, an outdoor advertising tax and protection of certain phases of music publishing are the outstanding highlights.

In South Carolina, both houses passed a bill relating to the construction of fire insurance contracts providing for automatic sprinklers or other fire prevention devices. The bill is now awaiting signature of the governor.

Governor Roosevelt, New York, signed a bill making it a misdemeanor to print, publish or sell copyrighted musical compositions without the consent of the owner. Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Authors, Composers & Publishers told the governor that the measure is aimed at the song sheet sellers now active in New York City. The governor added that the measure ought to point the way for similar action in other states.

Iowa May Tax Billboards

State board of assessment and review, in Iowa, is considering a recommendation to the next legislature that a special tax be imposed upon billboards and other outdoor advertising along all highways of the state. Billboards are now assessed at the ad valorem rate and few of them are being placed on the tax rolls. One half million dollars is the anticipated annual revenue from the proposed measure. The boards now are barred from highway property, but thousands of them have been erected on abuting private lands. Only billboards advertising the products or services of the owner of the land on which they are located should be exempt, believes John W. Foster, tax board member.

New Legislative Survey

Although a majority of legislative activities recorded in this regular weekly Motion Picture News survey do not affect the industry directly, they do influence its operation through the channels of general business. Number of each bill, name of its author, a brief description, and the committee to which it was referred for action are included in the current compilation, which follows:

Well, Fifi, What's Stopping You?

"My grandmother, she 'ave twenty-two children. My mother, she 'ave thirteen. For me—oh, Mon Dieu—I 'ope I 'ave two—well, maybe, three or four.

"Baby I adore. I want to be married. Oh, 'ow I love to be married. If I marry, it weel be to 'ave beeg family. I love keeds."

Thus, Fifi Dorsay, "Hollywood's newest sensation," dishes the dirt to Katharine Albert, via "Photoplay," where the sob sister describes Fifi in this manner:

"Bright as Clara Bow's returned engagement ring, clever and canny as a Scotch lawyer, radiant as the California morning sun.

"She rolls those beeg, beeg eyes—ooh, la, la—and, if you're a woman you decide to visit the masseuse or the modiste, or just quietly slip away and swallow a beeg dose of poison.

"She shrugs those slim shoulders and —if you're a man—you try to remember that awfully good attorney who said he'd get you a divorce cheap.

"Fifi is French, fiery and twenty-two. Oh garcon, she has everything. She mows 'em down and leaves 'em writhing!"

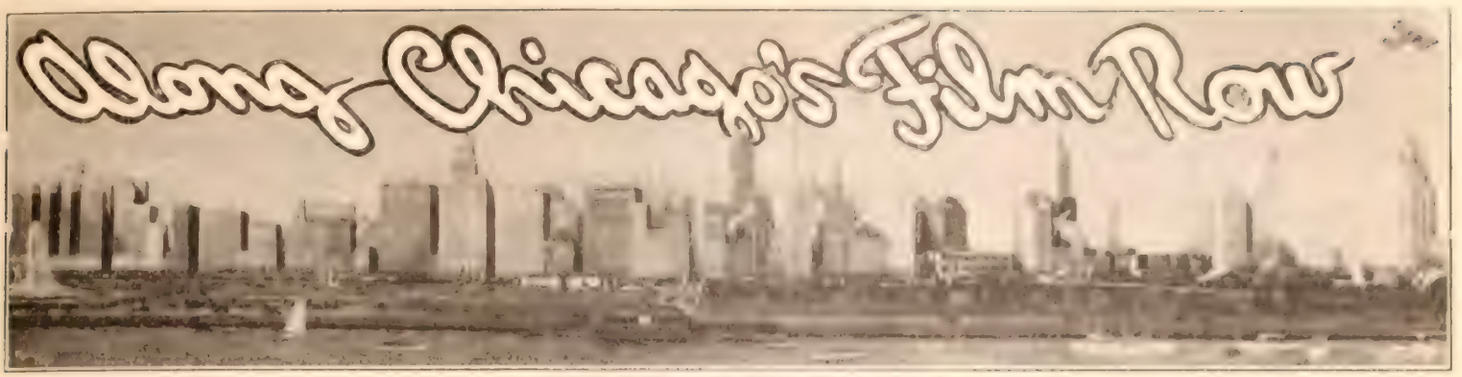
nor the little village of Sawyer in the same state where a man was arrested and fined for cutting some wood so that his wife might cook Sunday dinner.

Witchcraft, which is closely allied to the Puritanical Sunday, flourishes within the shadow of the state capitol at Harrisburg, as we noted from newspaper accounts from York and vicinity. An editorial in "The Milwaukee Sentinel" speaks about the ancient Wisconsin statute that was invoked in Racine to prohibit Sunday amusements and declares it was a case of spite work. Therein lies a potent danger of restrictive "moral" legislation that slumbers unrepealed in the law books. When some narrowminded individual sees fit to bring pressure upon a timorous or fanatical executive or petty town official then is the law revived. In fact, I have even known the governor of a state to cringe abjectly before the lobby of the Lord's Day Alliance, which openly boasts in its literature that it brings pressure to bear to defeat bills seeking to repeal the old blue law of that state. As the editorial in the "Sentinel" says: "Some of these laws have been forgotten even by those whose duty it is to enforce all laws. Some are remembered unofficially, but forgotten officially. Sometimes a forgotten regulation is dug out of its mould to be enforced in a particular case, in reprisal or in malice." Such statutes as that create disrespect for all law and should be repealed.

Calls Coercion a Fallacy



In looking over the whole field of individual liberty, human rights, and the freedom of the average citizen to exercise his talents and inclinations according to his heart's desire, provided he does not infringe or curtail his neighbors' rights and enjoyment, a normally-minded person cannot see where open Sunday amusements whether paid or free can in any way subtract from the rights of others to worship, ride in autos, or play golf. If the movie is open, no one can force me to go. If the church is open, no one can force me to stay away if I wish to attend. The attempt to coerce people into church attendance by making the first day of the week "blue" will be about just as successful and about just as obnoxious as the attempts to make people refrain from drinking tea or beer or light wine or "freezing mixture." It will be about just as successful as old King George's attempts to enforce a stamp tax on the unrepresented colonists. It was not the tax they resented so much as the unjust principle. It was the same principle that led a mob to dress up as Indians and throw overboard tea in Boston harbor years ago. I don't know, they may have had something better or more courage-inspiring to drink before their little adventure. It has come to the point where Americans must organize for liberty.

Coston Refutes Merger Reports Of Bird String

The Bird Theatres Corp. announces that, in acquiring control of the National Theatres circuit here, it is acting as an independent organization and not in the interests of any large circuit, as has been reported in various trade circles. James E. Coston of the Coston Booking Circuit, who has been operating the nine National playhouses for the Chicago Title & Trust Co. under the receivership which was effected eighteen months ago, will continue their operation as vice-president and general manager of the Bird Theatres Corp. Robert O. Farrell of Chicago is president of the corporation, the offices of which are located in the Coston Booking Circuit quarters here.

The theatres affected by the dissolution of the receivership are the Capitol, Avalon, Stratford, Jeffery, West Englewood, Chatham, Grove, Cosmopolitan and Highland, all located on the south side.

Dey Opens Branch Office

The Fowler studios of Hollywood will open a branch business office here in the near future, according to Larry Dey, representative of the company, who will have charge. Fowler specializes in production of comedies and short subjects that are made for advertising purposes but are said to have entertainment merit enough to warrant a program showing. The manufacturer's name or product is presented only incidentally in the films, which are distributed to exhibitors without charge.

Jack at the Avalon

Jack Dempsey has been booked to appear in a comedy skit for one week at the Avalon. A page of theatre advertising announced Dempsey's appearance. The ad, in the form of a welcome, was placed with the "Evening American" by theatre products manufacturers and the Bird Theatres Corporation.

Millinery Note

Fashion note: Filmack, Chicago trailer house, has received a prophetic order for one of those ancient "Ladies, please remove your hats," flashes, the first of its kind on record here in years. Femmes are wondering if it augurs a return of the wide brimmed headpieces to popularity.

Snow Stuff

Max Balaban, so the story goes, was seated in his homey, warm office a week ago, gazing out of the window on Chicago's 19-inch snowfall, a look of "God help the sailor on a night like this" on his face.

"Certainly glad I don't have to be out in it," he murmured, turning to answer a phone call.

At the end of a cryptic conversation he sighed and reached for his hat and coat.

"Get me whatever reservations are available on the Century," he directed a secretary. "I'm leaving for New York."

"But your luggage?" objected the secretary.

"Making the train is more important," he called back from the doorway.

Expansion Talk 'False' Declares Balaban & Katz

Publix-Balaban & Katz discredit report that new theatres are contemplated for 63rd St. and Union Ave., Western and Devon Aves., and Wacker Drive and State St.

"There is nothing to indicate that construction is contemplated on the South Side in the near future," said W. K. Hollander. "As for the North Side theatre, the Gateway will be completed about May 15th. I do not know of any other North Side location where construction is contemplated."

The Gateway is at Lawrence and Western Aves. and has been under construction for some time. Hollander disclaimed knowledge of any construction plans for the Wacker Drive site.

Changes at United Artists

Opinions On Pictures

King of Jazz Revue

(Universal—All Talker)

Very Big If Musicals Go

(Reviews by Walter R. Greene)

UNIVERSAL'S "King of Jazz Revue," with Paul Whiteman starred, is unquestionably the most sensational filmusical of the industry. Other companies are going to hesitate plenty before attempting to top this one. The only questionable angle revolves around the public reaction to musicals which some circuit heads feel are on the wane.

"The King of Jazz Revue" is a symphony of color and music; with a blending of comedy, sensational settings, and intimate numbers to make the production commanding entertainment.

Conceived and staged by John Murray Anderson, the production clearly shows his hand in assembling a musical revue to obtain the utmost results in entertaining qualities. Anderson has combined stage and screen technique for startling effects in lighting, staging and tempo.

Paul Whiteman and his band predominate throughout with musical numbers presented in gorgeous backgrounds. Accompaniments for various song numbers are also provided by Whiteman's crew. Paul does a little acting himself, and demonstrates ability in that line.

Of Whiteman's band numbers, "Rhapsody in Blue" is the standout. The number is rendered as only Whiteman can and is presented in a gorgeous setting with blue predominating.

John Boles scores tremendously in two song numbers, "Monterey" and "Song of the Dawn" —both in startling backgrounds and each a high spot in the production.

From the animated color cartoon at the start, showing a comedy conception of how Whiteman was crowned King of Jazz through to the stupendous "Melting Pot" finale, the all Technicolor production is packed with genuine entertainment.

There is an exquisite spectacle, "The Bridal Veil"; a comedy music presentation, "In The Park"; Whiteman's Rhythm Boys in two song specialties; Billy Kent running throughout in sketches and blackouts as comedian; various specialty song and dance numbers and flash presentations. In fact, the production is one grand kaleidoscopic effect of dazzling proportions, yet retaining an intimacy for direct audience attention.

The finished production of "King of Jazz Revue" is worth all the difficulties and headaches that Universal encountered during preparation and production. Those critics in and out of the business who took a keen delight in calling the production "Universal's Folly" will now place it among one of the biggest accomplishments in the history of the industry.

Paramount on Parade

(Paramount—All Talker)

A Wow Entertainment If—

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

THERE'S a continuous parade of entertainment in "Paramount On Parade."

Every one was speculating on just what Paramount would do with a film revue to follow similar productions of other companies. Its layout and structure are originality itself with an intimacy that strikes a new note in variety of entertainment and audience appeal.

"Paramount On Parade" is a natural to click for plenty big grosses everywhere. It's a box office setup in the plainest language. The only dubious factor is a possible public reaction against straight musicals.

The production is novel in that it does not strive for bigness of sets and spectacles. Rather, it goes in more for audience appeal through intimate numbers and sketches. The trio of masters of ceremonies—Jack Oakie, Skeets Gallagher and Leon Errol—introduce the various numbers with short blackouts that carry plenty of laughs in themselves.

Opening with a smart song and dance number featuring Buddy Rogers and Lillian Roth, the production swings through the entire list of Paramount stars and featured players. Maurice Chevalier carries a good portion of the Revue with three separate numbers—each a natural in itself. Bancroft is in there with a slapstick sketch that is a riot.

Ruth Chatterton hits one of the many high notes with a dramatic sketch that equals anything that has been done on the talking screen. Little Mitzi Green, Paramount's youngest featured player, stops the show with imitations of Chevalier and Charles Mack of "Two Black Crows" fame.

Then there are Nancy Carroll, Gary Cooper, Harry Green, Helen Kane, Dennis King, Nino Martini, William Powell, Clive Brook—in fact, practically every player on the Paramount contract list.

Previewed in rough form, "Paramount On Parade" shows definite qualities of cinch box office excellence. It will draw heavy money.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Supervised by Elsie Janis. Directors, Dorothy Arzner, Otto Brower, Edmund Goulding, Victor Heerman, Edwin H. Knopf, Rowland V. Lee, Ernst Lubitsch, Lothar Mendes, Victor Schertzinger, Edward Sutherland, Frank Tuttle. Dance ensembles by David Bennett. Cameramen, Harry Fischbeck and Victor Milner. The Cuckoos

(RKO—All Talker)

A Laugh Hit

(Reviewed by Walter H. Greene)

"THE Cuckoos" should rank pretty close to "Rio Rita" in public fancy—not as a $2 attraction, but rather one that can step into runs for plenty of business. The picture stacks up as a "money" proposition in big cities and small communities.

Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, comedians of "Rio Rita," take advantage of every laugh opportunity. The comedy is low-brow and unsophisticated—much of it good substantial stuff that has proven successful in the past. There is a plot, but no one takes it seriously. In addition, a musical background is provided with serious and comedy songs, and several dance ensemble "flashes." A few Technicolor sequences, inserted to heighten production value, are unnecessary.

The story details the experiences of the pair of adventurous comedians around the Mexican border. Opening shows them at a Mexican resort, presumably Caliente, where trouble begins with a tribe of gypsies. Switching back to San Diego, the pair finally hop off to the interior of Mexico for plenty of adventure, with finale back in San Diego. Backgrounds and story are only excuses for putting over the many comedy sequences and pieces of business.

Paul Sloane directed most capably, and his work demonstrates the reason why the company signed him to a term contract. Jobyna Howland, six feet tall, is a sure-fire comedienne for the screen. Dorothy Lee and Mitchell Lewis are prominent in cast.

Dramatic shorts and newsreel fit here.

Produced and distributed by RKO. From stage play, "The Ramblers," by Guy Bolton, Harry Ruby and Bert Kalmar. Adapted by Cyrus Woods. Directed by Paul Sloane. Photographed by Nicholas Musuraca. Length, approximately 8,100 feet. Running time about 90 minutes. Release date, May 4, 1930.

A Scenic Wow!

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

IF your customers are fond of tropical rum orgies, mean-shaking hula hula dancers and beautiful shots of Hawaii and the South Sea Islands, they'll go for this. There are no other qualifying factors, which is just too bad considering the opportunity they had to make a much finer picture. It flops hard because of the amateurish— and at times idiotic and unnatural style in which is bungled a fine cast, topped by

Captain of the Guard

(Universal—All Talker)

Impresses Here and There

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

UNIVERSAL promised much for "La Marseillaise," now dubbed "Captain of the Guard," but the picture fails to bear out the forecast except in unfortunately too few sequences.

As a box-office commodity, the production will give general satisfaction. Its chief faults are stereotyped direction, indifferent acting and the almost complete submergence of the dramatic possibilities ripe in a story of the French Revolution in favor of musical interludes.

This being a musical spectacle—the description is the producer's—it was to be expected that the film would be predominantly melodic. But so heavily are theme and other songs stressed that the tempo is slowed up to a point which made this reviewer fidget in his seat.

A main title at the outset explains that history has been left at the crossroads in favor of drama. The story concerns the events leading to the birth of La Marseillaise, the stirring national anthem of the French. Very sketchily and rarely convincingly are the dramatic potentialities developed.

John Boles plays Rouget de Lisle, music teacher and captain of the king's Hussars, who later turns from the monarchy and while confined to quarters, conceives the song. Laura La Plante, as the village inn keeper's daughter, supplies the love interest in undistinguished fashion.

Houston Branch, the author, makes her abandon a deep-rooted allegiance to the throne when the king's soldiers ruthlessly kill her father. In a manner left largely to the imagination, she swings to the revolutionary cause and establishes herself as The Torch, a symbol to whom the downtrodden people turn for renewed inspiration. Arrested and thrown into the Bastille, it was inevitable that the revolution should break out, thereby effecting her rescue for the final and happy clinch.

The mass movements in "Captain of the Guard" are impressive. Of the entire footage, the following sequences alone contain power and imaginative treatment:

The dinner of the Hussars, the night meeting of the revolutionists with The Torch, the march of the men of Marseillies to the rhythm of de Lisle's impressive song and the battle scenes. Paul Fejos claims, and Universal concedes, credit for directing them. Hand color was used for the flame of torches and to add emphasis to musketry fire. It is extremely effective.

In the early sequences, Gilbert Warrenton's camera is not kind to Boles. A number of angles from which he was shot show him to decided disadvantage, but once he doffs the uniform of the Hussars, his pictorial appearance takes on a decided improvement. Miss La Plante was, in the main, photographed very well. Camera work, as a whole, was spotty and for this the fact that some of the original sequences were shot by Hal Mohr is undoubtedly responsible.

There is little question but that the mediocre direction of John S. Robertson must be blamed for many of the banalities which burden down the production. Robertson followed the set formula in the usual Hollywood manner and the result is what you see on the screen.

The mass scenes, further, were cut into intimate sequences with too little regard for the whole. So it is that the spectator is taken abruptly from a love scene between Boles and La Plante to a long shot of the revolutionists' meeting. The procedure jars.

When the players don't talk or sing, a symphony orchestra is hard at work. The fallacy of this treatment is perhaps best demonstrated in the scene where the priest comforts La Plante prior to the execution which you know is slated but which equally well you know will never happen. All through this the theme song is played when it doesn't belong, first because the music detracts from story value and secondly because, in this opinion, it appears to be a breach of good taste.

Whether or not Boles professes to be an actor or merely a musical comedy lead warbling his way through sound pictures is something the record doesn't show. It is a fact, however, that his performance in "Captain of the Guard" is stagey and bombastic. But again, perhaps it is supposed to be.

Sound cartoons and [illegible] comedies will go well. Don't overlook the newsreel.

Produced and distributed by Universal Story by Houston Branch. Directed by John S. Robertson. Adapted by Arthur Ripley. Dialogue by George Manker Watters. Music composed by Charles Wakefield Cadman. Shorts Improving

Richmond—Change for the better is reported in short subjects by the Virginia censor boards. Subtitles previously used were the point of objection on the part of the censors, but producers are eliminating vulgarity, it is asserted. A number of producers gave the censors assurance that such improvement would be made, it is claimed. Few silent films now are being presented for censorship.

Noah Beery, Myrna Loy and Monte Blue. Betty Compson is grossly miscast.

Miss Compson operates a hotel and rum joint in a tropical town which is ruled under the iron hand of Beery, who drives a marriage bargain with Compson when the latter's liquor-soaked mother is in danger of losing the property because of her dissipation. At about this time, Boles finds his way to the island while escaping from a savage band, and immediately incurs the enmity of Beery, chiefly because of Miss Compson's obvious affection for Monte Blue. It is padded considerably with scenic shots, majority of which are very attractive and the only redeemable feature in the whole piece.

Hello, Sister

(Universal—All Talker)

It's There!

(Reviewed by Robert Hoag)

THE [illegible] part of the same but honest youth who loves a rich girl and must stifle his manly emotions is the basis of this tale, but it has been developed with so many unusual twists and moves so naturally and logically throughout that it provides entertainment good enough for any type of theatre.

Special credit should be given to the dialogue. At times it is brilliant, again it sparkles with humor, and at all times it is restrained and natural. "Hello, Sister" proves that a picture made at a moderate outlay need not be lacking in box office values.

Olive Borden and Lloyd Hughes as the leads evoke a sympathetic response that is infectious and a New York audience gave audible vent to its appreciation. There were too many close-ups of Miss Borden, but this team proved ideal and their voices register extremely well. The support, especially George Fawcett, is good.

Miss Borden plays the role of a social butterfly whose wings are clipped by her grandfather's will, compelling her to forsake the giddy pathway for six months, eschew liquor, tobacco and night life, and enjoining her to engage in church work. There she falls in love with a handsome young deacon, who proves to be her attorney's spy, but when he doesn't come across with the expected proposal she goes out on a bat—with only a few hours to spare before the probationary period runs out.

You can boost this picture. It is life-like in every respect and mingles fast action with delightful humor.

Balance with musical featurettes or similar shorts. The picture has enough comedy for a program.

Playing Around

(First National—All Talker)

Ho! Hum!

THEY didn't do right by our Alice this time. The cash customers want to see considerable portions of Alice's lingerie and torso, and, but for a brief flash of the young woman disrobing for a shower, all they got was Alice in the humble habiliments of a lowly stenographer. In fact, the only S. A. in the picture was Alice's own comment, to wit: "That's the only auto horn I ever heard that had sex appeal."

The story itself is literary hash. Alice's goofy beau, a $35-a-week soda jerker, takes her to a swell cabaret with only a finif in his pocket, but Alice saves the day by entering a pretty legs contest staged just at that moment, the judge being no other than "Nicky Solomon," a bandit dude. It may be ungallant to say so, but the poor eyesight he displayed on that occasion, with scores of Hollywood's nether limbs a la femme parading across the stage, may have been responsible for his failure to kill her father.

However, although he thinks he killed the old man, he takes Alice out for a big night. It leaves a bad taste. The direction is slipshod and the whole production has the "quickie"

Cause for Murder

Hollywood.—Mollie Merrick, the N.A.N.A. sobbie, tells of an incident where a famous New York playwright was brought to the Coast by one of our biggest and best studios, which put him to work on a story. It was weak, but he labored to build it up. He put in harder hours toiling on dialogue for this than he ever had on his own works.

Seven days later an assistant to the assistant of the producer's assistant burst into the room.

"Quit working on that story—boss's orders—we don't own it!"

Anybody's War

(Paramount—All-Talker)

Plenty of Comedy

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

THE Two Black Crows appear entirely in burnt cork in their second Paramount production. Little attempt is made to get serious, with the result that "Anybody's War" carries plenty of comedy—most of it sure-fire.

With the starring team established in its present spot of prominence through comedy past performances, "Anybody's War" will probably be a better attraction than "Why Bring That Up?".

For the week runs and subsequent bookings, the picture will prove satisfactory comedy entertainment, with calibre of draw depending entirely on standing of the Crows in each particular community.

Richard Wallace turned in a fine piece of direction, and had a nicely tempoed story with dialogue to work with. Charles Mack shoulders most of the burden of the picture, with his partner acting mostly as "feeder." A dog, Deep Stuff, darned near carries off the interest.

The Crow boys, Amos and Willie, after much hesitation, join the army and go overseas; finally coming back as heroes with the attendant decorations. The story is light and episodic, but full of humor and laughs. Walter Weems, besides writing the dialogue, played a prominent part as a negro sergeant to satisfaction.

Musical shorts and news weekly will blend here.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Story by Charles E. Mack. Screen play by Lloyd Corrigan. Dialogue by Walter Weems. Adapted by Hector Turnbull. Directed by Richard Wallace. Week's Lineup Of Shorts Hits New High Mark

"The Golden Pagoda"

(Pathe—Talker—2 Reels)

Don't Fail to Get This

If others in the new "Vagabond Adventure" series measure up to this initial release, by all means book the group. It has thrills, keen interest and picturesqueness. And entirely different from anything on the boards today. What more could you ask for?

Tom Terriss, the "vagabond" director, gathered several thousand feet of unusual camera studies of interesting spots in foreign lands. The material was split up into a group of shorts and dubbed with verbal descriptions of the highlights, spoken cleverly by Terriss, who has a likable English accent. Running time, 11 minutes.

Fine for practically any type of picture

"Pretzels"

(Educational—Sound—1 Reel)

Clever

Paul Terry's latest creation in his new series of "Terry-Toons" series stack up with the best in cartoon subjects with voice and musical synchronization. A nice job, handled intelligently. Running time, 6 minutes.

Okay for a dramatic feature, offering nice relief.

"Ride 'em, Cowboy"

Snappy Stuff

A FOLLIES" musical comedy with a Western background and directed by Arch B. Heath. Principally deals with clever song and dance numbers, interspersed with humorous dialogue by Lester Dorr. Thelma White heads an effective cast which includes Eddie Elkins and orchestra. Running time, 21 minutes.

Good comedy or dramatic talker, without music, will go well here.

"Dixie Days"

(Pathe—Sound—1 Reel)

Fine Fun

A SOUND cartoon take-off on "Uncle Tom's" Cabin, done before in pen-and-ink style, but surely no more effectively than in this short, in which many highly entertaining gags are pulled by Van Beuren. Running time, 7 minutes.

Ideal as relief for heavy dramatic feature material.

(Pathe—Sound—1 Reel)

Mildly Diverting

THREE out of four units incorporated in the current review just about hit par. The last one clicks heavily. It shows 50 crackerjack girl swimmers in various forms while in a large indoor Viennese pool. Particularly appealing because of its unusualness. Running time, 10 minutes.

Book this one with a comedy feature.

They May Be Short in Length But the Public Is Always Searching for Them

(Pathe Sound—1½ Reels)

A Pip!

ONE of the most intelligent reels turned out by Terry Ramsaye, who dug deep into the files of Pathe News and unearthed historical shots taken by Pathe News cameramen who attended various events of American history. Ramsaye burlesques the discovery of America, the battle of Bunker Hill and other notable phases of early life in the States with funny captions, done a la early newsreel style. Good stuff!

The old porcelain nicknacks are brought into play for the opener, in which Ramsaye attempts to portray a brief analysis of prohibition history. This is done cleverly, but might cause a squawk where prohibition is frowned upon. Number two in the reel reveals parts of the show being staged in New York by the recently arrived Japanese players. This is a crackerjack subject. It runs 17 minutes.

Will fit well with a musical comedy or dramatic feature.

"Tee Time"

(Sullivan-Copley Films—1 Reel)

Out of Tune

IN a desperate effort to prove that a cartoon comedy can be just as versatile as a sound feature, and create just as much noise, the producers of this "Felix the Cat" offering lost their sense of humor somewhere along the way, and the laughs are few and far between. The main idea was to get a musical note out of every object pictured, from a convertible rhinoceros-piano to a golf ball, but it doesn't click.

Play it if you have to, but it's not up to par. Needs strong support.

(Vitaphone Varieties—No. 941)

Entertaining

BARRY and Whitledge in a vaudeville act that gets over satisfactorily, the patter being somewhat subtle at times, but quick-trigger and original to a considerable extent. Miss Barry sings one song—but it's all in fun.

O. K. for any type of house, although they won't rave about it.

"Hello, Thar"

(Vitaphone Varieties—No. 930-31)

Could Be Worse

IT'S billed as "a howling travesty on the Klondike Gold Rush," with Eddie Buzzell trying hard against odds to wring laughs out of the audience, but many of the spoken wisecracks entertained our grand parents at one time. It got two laughs out of a Broadway audience. You couldn't fool Eddie, though; he knew the camera was there all the time. He is not so hot in pictures.

Satisfactory as an adjunct to a strong feature.

"A Western Knight"

(Educational—Talker—2 Reels)

Don't Miss This One

EDDIE LAMBERT at his best. No more can be said for any man.

Eddie is seen here as a cowboy and the entire reel is done as a burlesque on Westerns, with the usual shoot 'em up business featuring Eddie and his gang of cluck cattle chasers. Stephen Roberts directed. He did a fine job. Running time, 20 minutes.

Run it with heavy feature stuff.

"The First Seven Years"

(Our Gang—Metro—2 Reels)

Great Stuff

THERE ought to be a law to compel every adult star in Hollywood to see every "Our Gang" comedy and learn how to act, thereby saving millions of pains in the neck daily. For these youngsters are so natural and so camera-unconscious that it is unalloyed bliss to watch them. In this one the piece de resistance is a duel with swords that's a scream, especially when the fighters transfer their battle to a yard filled with Mammy's wash hanging out to dry. When they get through it looks like No-Man's Land. This one clocks a lot of laughs. Directed by Robert MacGovern. Running time, 20 minutes.

Don't be tongue-tied about it! O. K. with any feature.

"Brown Gravy"

(Chester—Paramount—2 Reels)

Silly Stuff

THIS is much ado about a spiritualistic faker in Birmingham's Darktown, who tries to promote a widow for the dough left her by friend husband. He warns her against her new suitor and instructs her to turn over a grand as first payment on an operation to be performed on her late husband in the spirit world. Tiresome and silly. Running time 30 minutes.

You'll need strong support for this.

"When My Dreams Come True"

(Advance Trailer—Sound—1 Reel)

Very Good

ANOTHER of the animated song reels, which fit nicely on any program. They have good follow-up value, and can be used for community song-fests. This one has Gene and Glenn, radio entertainers, singing the number, which is a good one. Running time 9 minutes.

Good with any feature.

"A Perfect Match"

(Pathe-Talker—2 Reels)

Something Different

THE late George LeMaire's last production. It centers around Jewish dialect and is funny enough, until they lay it on too thickly near the end. Cut shorter, this would click nicely. It's different than the usual run-of-the-mill stuff. Running time, 20 minutes.

Slip this in with a light feature.

How Come?

"Incidentally," writes B. A. Rolfe, "with the growth of the talkie industry, producers are finding it necessary to open studios in many of the foreign capitals.

"One movie maggot seemed much perturbed in his office. 'What's wrong?' asked a friend, 'You look upset.'

"'Hey I got trouble!' the film man answered. 'Here I hev to open an office in Tokio and I don't know who to put in charge. I hevn't a seengle relative there!'"—N. Y. Daily News

Slip this in with a good dramatic feature in need of light comedy.

"Follow Me"

(Universal—Silent—2 Reels)

Just in Between

THE plot is stale and Arthur Lake's alleged humorous antics are proving monotonous. They should persuade him to deviate a little from that long-legged looseness of his, which is no longer funny. The story concerns the time-worn haunted house gag, so old that it kills whatever angles Director H. Edwards used to put it across. Running time, 19 minutes.

"Brats"

(Hal Roach—M-G-M—2 Reels)

Full of Laughs

THE funny team in a new twist. Here you get two of Laurel and two of Hardy in the same comedy. They play the father of the brats and the brats themselves. A novel turn and different from the usual run of comedy. The comedians are very amusing in both roles and the sequences drolly clever. Holds up well with the preceding releases in this topnotch group. Directed by James Parrott and produced by Hal Roach. Running time, 21 minutes.

Episodes in Composer's Life

AS one of the Famous Music Master Series of shorts this comes pretty nearly being a leader in entertainment value. Liszt not only was a great composer, but his life, which ended as a cloistered abbe away from the women he loved in his youth, was drama personified. His Second Hungarian Rhapsody and "Dream of Love" are played with accompanying incidents that inspired them, one a gypsy love scene that has real merit. Running time, 11 minutes.

Authors Demand Passage of New Copyright Bill

Washington—The patents committee of the House held hearings this week on the general copyright revision bill, which will affect the motion picture rights of literary property, and numerous authors whose stories have appeared on the screen appeared to urge the passage of the measure.

The new bill, which proposes the first extensive modification of the copyright law since the act of 1908, has as its chief purpose to bring the United States under the rules of the International Union; to bring the old law up to date so as to deal with the inventions of the last twenty years, such as motion pictures, radio, television and talking pictures, and to extend copyright from the present limits of twenty-eight years and twenty-eight years renewal to fifty years after the death of the author.

The proposed law would also permit the author to distribute his copyright into various entities, giving a magazine copyright, a book copyright, a motion picture copyright, and so forth, with full legal title in each, to each of the various interests to which he sells. This cannot be done under the present law except by trade practices, a cumbersome method when legal disputes arise.

Vernon's Reasons

St. Louis—Wally Vernon, master of ceremonies at the Granada, apparently ate himself out of house and home, as meals form the largest items in the debts he listed in connection with his voluntary bankruptcy case now pending before the Federal Court. His schedule shows debts of $2,270 and assets of but $290, including $90 in furniture and $200 in clothing for which he claims exemption. Among his creditors are a sheet music concern, $650 for attorney fees, $750 due a finance company on a straight 8 automobile and a $350 judgment.

Whitbeck's Showman Book

Hollywood—Frank Whitbeck, advertising and publicity manager of Fox West Coast Theatres, is writing a book on showmanship, advertising and publicity which will be circulated to managers of all houses on the circuit. Whitbeck is not taking an authoritative angle," but is handling every branch of theatre advertising with explanations of fundamentals—then telling the readers to use their showmanship without limit, but with good, common sense.

Sunday Shows for Palmyra

Before me, a Notary Public, in and for the State and county aforesaid, personally appeared E. J. Hudson, 729 7th Ave., New York City, who, having been duly sworn according to law, deposes and says that he is vice-president of Motion Picture News, Inc., the Publishers of Motion Picture News, and that the following is, to the best of his knowledge and belief, a true statement of the ownership, management (and if a daily paper, the circulation), etc., of the aforesaid publication for the date shown in the above caption, required by the Act of August 24, 1912, embodied in section 411, Postal Laws and Regulations, printed on the reverse of this form, to wit:

1. That the names and addresses of the publisher, editor, managing editor, and business managers are:

Publisher, Motion Picture News, Inc., 729 Seventh Ave., New York City.

Editor, Maurice D. Kann, 729 Seventh Ave., New York City.

Business Manager, E. J. Hudson, 729 Seventh Ave., New York City.

2. That the owner is: (If owned by a corporation, its name and address must be stated and also immediately thereunder the names and addresses of stockholders owning or holding one per cent or more of total amount of stock. If not owned by a corporation, the names and addresses of the individual owners must be given. If owned by a firm, company, or other unincorporated concern, its name and address, as well as those of each individual member, must be given.)

First sketch of $500,000 theatre to seat 1,800 planned by Warners at Huntington Park, California. E. Marcus Priteca of Los Angeles is the architect

Ultra-Modern Is How Warners Describe Plans for West Coast

Wide Film, the Acme in Sound Reproduction Among Construction Problems These Theatres Will Encounter

NEW theatres of the most modern design and involving joint expenditure of over $1,000,000 are to be built by Warners in San Pedro and Huntington Park, California, at once. J. L. Warner states plans are nearing completion and bids will be asked for at an early date for these two enterprises.

The Huntington Park theatre will be an 1,800-seat house in Italo-Spanish design, with a main floor and balcony. The structure will occupy the entire lot on Pacific Boulevard between Zoe and Saturn Streets, with a frontage of 114 feet and depth of 150 feet. The building will house six stores in addition to the theatre and will cost when completed over $500,000. It will be called Warner Bros. Huntington Park.

The San Pedro theatre will seat 2,000 and will be built on Sixth Street, just east of Pacific, occupying a frontage of 150 feet. There will also be six stores and twelve offices in the building, and the entire enterprise will cost $600,000.

Both of these theatres, it is promised, will represent the most advanced types of architecture and construction and will be complete in every detail. The plans include air conditioning and refrigerating plants, pre-set remote control switchboards and other modern features found only in the big theatres of metropolitan cities. Both theatres will be built to accommodate the new large screens, identical with those which will shortly be in use in Warners' largest Eastern theatres. Plans for both have been drawn by E. Marcus Priteca of Los Angeles.

Warners' Beverly Hills theatre will be the next addition to the rapidly expanding chain on the Coast. Warner Brothers Pacific Coast Theatres has acquired from the owner, Harley J. Hoyt, the property at the southwest corner of Wilshire Boulevard and Reeves Drive, opposite the Beverly Hills branch of the Bank of California, and will at once start construction on a 2,000-seat deluxe theatre covering the entire site.

This will be the third new theatre in the greater Los Angeles district to be put into construction by the Warners immediately, as only a few days ago they announced that work would start at once on deluxe theatres in Huntington Park and San Pedro.

The Beverly Hills theatre will house all Warner and First National pictures. The theatre, while not quite as commodious as the Warner Hollywood, will nevertheless be comparable in design, treatment, equipment and comfort to that structure.

It will be entirely modern in architectural treatment. Located in the heart of the Beverly-Wilshire district, the theatre will be accessible to residents of the surrounding communities. With Warners' Forum, opened recently, and Warner's Hollywood, Downtown and Whittier theatres in full operation, as well as Warners' Fresno, expansion plans of the company are rapidly developing.

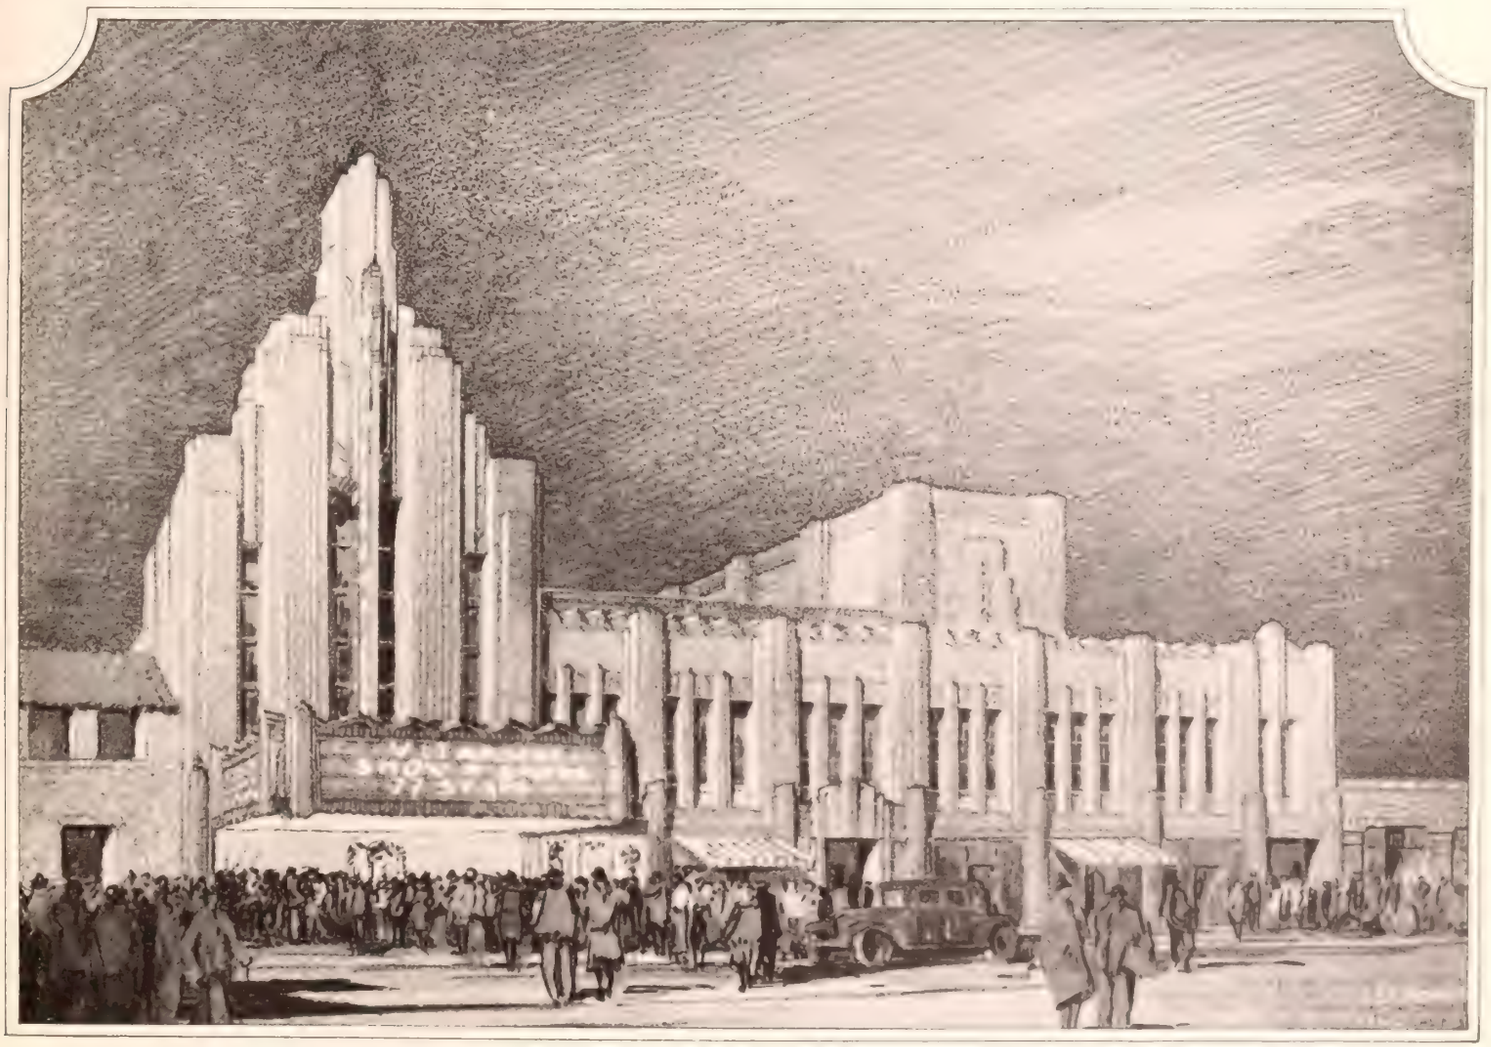
The program, now reaching its stride in the nation-wide race for theatre domination with Publix, Fox and RKO significant factors in the field, gives the former organization its first opportunity to embody in proposed theatres actual application of its experience in sound reproduction.

Acoustical improvements, model projection booths with the manifold devices now on the market available for better sound, are to receive particular attention. Auditoriums are to be submitted to treatment in order to assure a maximum result in tonal quality and, in connection with this, it is entirely possible that changes in line and design may be brought into play to meet the vagaries of sound waves rather than adapt the present type of auditorium to talking pictures.

Pioneering Again

JUST as they took the lead in experimenting in and developing sound picture recording and reproducing, Warners again are planning pioneering ventures in the field of theatre construction, furnishings and equipment.

The company for some time has been quietly working on a number of new theatre features, THE SHOWMAN has been informed, some of them declared to be of a revolutionary nature. Acoustical treatment is one of the big features of this development program, it is stated.



The Warner organization has been at work for some time on a wide screen process of its own. While the experimental work has been kept quiet, THE SHOWMAN understands that progress under the guidance of Joe Hornstein has been substantial. The development entails entirely new problems in the booth which architects and builders of new theatres realize they must take into consideration.

Power lines and floor area for the larger equipment are among the drastic changes necessary in the booth and, while wide film may prove to be slower in arriving than many industry leaders anticipate, plans for new theatres must be elastic enough to meet the change over if and when it comes.

Placing of seats is another problem which confronts new theatre building. Unless there is developed a process which eliminates distortion, difficulties are foreseen in the disposition of chairs flanking the new large-sized screen required with wide angle film.

Warners, it is said, have given both of these angles careful study, and developed a plan of seating arrangement which will assure maximum effectiveness for sound distribution throughout the theatre auditorium. New materials to help assure volume control also are said to be included in these tests.

A number of other problems of improved acoustics are said to have been solved by the Warners, who will introduce them in their new houses now under construction or planned.

San Pedro is one of the first towns on the Warner building program for the West Coast. This is how the architect envisions the $600,000 house planned for that city

Another Contribution to Ranks Of the Atmospheric Theatre

The Spanish Motif Stressed in the New Texas in San Angelo, Robb and Rowley's Sixtieth

THE Texas at San Angelo, Texas, newest addition to the circuit operated by Robb and Rowley in Texas and Oklahoma, is the latest to the growing roster of atmospheric theatres springing up all over the nation.

Designed by W. Scott Dunne of Dallas, a specialist in theatre architecture and well known to exhibitors in the section of the country in which he functions, the Texas reproduces with fidelity a Spanish hacienda. The opportunities for decorative touches which this style of theatre permits have been utilized by both architect and builder to secure the maximum in effects.

Interesting twists have been given to the columns supporting the balconies. Hanging shawls are a part of the balcony decorations.

The Texas is another demonstration of the feasibility of the One Contract Plan of the National Theatre Supply Company by which this house was equipped. It is the second of the Robb and Rowley chain to be so handled, the other being the Ritz at Corpus Christi, for which Dunne also prepared plans.

Indicative of the many elements which go up to make the modern theatre is a partial list of the commodities supplied the Texas by National. They range from Crystalite changeable letters for use on the marquee, Belson flood lamps for exterior illumination as well as regular lighting lamps, admission signs, various types of electric signs, lobby frames, rails for the box-office, stage rigging, stage scenery and drapes, carpets, carpet padding, acoustical felt for use in conjunction with sound reproduction.

National's participation embraced deliveries of furniture for the lounge and rest rooms, lighting fixtures, the Spanish shawls which enhance the charm of the hacienda windows. Projection equipment includes Simplex machines while other lines of accessories used in the Texas embrace the Brenkert F-7 apparatus, Peerless hi-intensity lamps, Ross lenses, Gold E Kwik change lense mounts, enclosed rewinds and eye shields. The booth tables are those supplied by National as are the real cabinets. Strong supplied the change over-devices, Hertner the tranverters and Simplex the ticket selling machines.

National's plan calls for the building of a theatre from the ground up, on a one contract basis. National aids from the time of selecting the site, arranges financing if required, provides the architect and designs the plans to completely equip the finished theatre, arranging for or supplying every needed accessory or item of equipment.

The plan was inaugurated soon after nationalization of the company a few years ago and since has been utilized by many theatres in all sections of the nation.

Conforms an interesting treatment of columns supporting the balcony of the Texas Theatre and that always vital requisite—comfort for the patron.

Build Wisconsin House To Meet Talker Needs

BUILT especially for sound, A. P. Desormeaux's new Eastwood, a neighborhood house on Madison's East Side, is being heralded in southern Wisconsin for its acoustical qualities. The theatre seats 1,000, and its atmospheric treatment echoes the romance and dignity of Old Spain.

The provision of a free automobile parking space adjacent to the theatre, accommodating 500 cars, for the use of patrons is a unique expression of showmanship on the part of the management. The illuminated dome of the Eastwood may be seen practically the whole length of Atwood Avenue, which is the main artery of one of Madison's most thriving community centers.

The entrance lobby is a tower room. It rises 37 feet above the floor, and contains the ticket booth done in hammered gold and Benau-jaune marble. High on the grey and rose walls are eight murals depicting the Mediterranean along the Spanish coast. On each of the four walls is a balcony of hand-wrought iron, draped with Spanish shawls, and surmounted by tall etched mirrors. A chandelier in Spanish motif lights the tower room. It is five feet in diameter, and is made up of stained glass and crystal.

STAGE LIGHTING

IN THE MASTBAUM THEATRE, PHILADELPHIA.

THE new Mastbaum, said to have cost $5,000,000, is Philadelphia's largest theatre. Thousands of dollars are spent each week on stage presentations of the highest type. Nothing is sacrificed in the newest and largest member of the Stanley Co. of America Chain to present entertainment of the finest sort.

Stage lighting plays a part of tremendous importance in each week's show. As is the case in most of the world's leading theatres, Vitrohm (vitreous enamelled) Dimmers, are used to give an unequalled range and flexibility of lighting effects. To the successful stage presentations in the Mastbaum, Ward Leonard Vitrohm Dimmers are contributing their full share.

The newest, largest and best known of Philadelphia's motion picture theatres specified Vitrohm Dimmers — they are backed by 38 years' experience in the design and manufacture of equipment for the complete and accurate control of lighting.

Bulletin 75, describing Vitrohm Dimmers and their applications to stage lighting, will be sent upon request without charge.

Better Reproduction Claimed for Sound-on-Disc over Film Method

Expert Concedes One System Has Advantages Over the Other, But Explains Why He Favors the Disc

PRACTICABILITY, economy and better reproduction are advantages claimed for sound-on-disc as contrasted with sound-on-film recording in an address made Wednesday by Porter H. E. Evans, chief engineer of the western Vitaphone studios, before the International Association of Radio Engineers in New York.

Porter stressed the development of sound pictures and their analogy to radio broadcasting. Warners, he said, chose and is continuing disc recording, because the company found this system produced best results. If results with sound-on-film become superior, he declared, Warners will switch to this method of recording.

"There are many things to be considered in comparing the relative merits of disc and film—in some, the advantages lie with film, in others the advantages lie with disc," Evans pointed out. "It might be well for us to pause long enough to look at one or two of the factors to be considered.

"When the sound track is placed on the film alongside of the picture, it is necessary to replace the entire print whenever a new sound record is needed," he continued. "Inasmuch as a 1,000-foot release print costs many times that of a disc, it is only natural that there is a marked reluctance to retiring a print before it is absolutely necessary. As a result, sound film is frequently retained in service long after it would be desirable from the sound standpoint to retire it. No definite information is available on the life of film containing sound track and what is available is not reliable because there are no established standards for determining when the useful life of sound track has been passed. With disc recording, additional records are furnished to replace the records in service whenever there is a noticeable depreciation in the quality of the reproduction—the exhibitor being advised not to play one record over 20 or 30 times.

"It is frequently stated that a better result can be obtained with film than with disc recording. This statement is based on tests made in the laboratory where every step in the recording, developing, printing and reproductions is under the control and supervision of engineering experts. In practice, however, where film must be developed and exhibited in large quantities, it is impossible to get the expert handling which is required to obtain satisfactory results—this is especially true on the exhibition end.

"From the standpoint of the equipment, a disc reproducer is simplicity itself—the only attention the reproducer requires in the projection booth is the insertion of a new needle for each new disc—if anything goes wrong with the reproducer a new one may be installed quickly, easily and cheaply. On the other hand, the film reproducer is complicated by comparison. There are a number of adjustments which must be made with a high degree of precision in order to obtain satisfactory results. Two additional stages of amplification are required, in which the energy level is extremely low and the afore, the problem of excluding extraneous noise is very difficult. As the projectionists in the booth become more familiar with the handling of sound track and more expert in the maintenance of the sound track reproducer we may expect the results in the theatre to improve.

"On the surface there appears to be a marked advantage in the use of sound film in the editing process. In practice, however, this operation is not so simple as it appears at first. While sound film has its use in editing it also has its limitations.

"It is interesting to compare the film and disc record of the same sound. As the wave form of a photographic record is more evident in the variable area method than in the variable density method, we will make a comparison between the disc and the variable area method.

"In a disc reproducer the induced voltage is proportional to the transverse needle velocity. This means then that for uniform output level the amplitude of the sound track on a disc record is inversely proportional to the frequency.

"In a photoelectric cell, the current output is directly proportional to the instantaneous value of the light entering the cell—in other words, the amplitude of a photographic record for constant output is independent of the frequency.

"Figure 3 illustrates the effect of frequency upon amplitude in the two types of recording. It will be noted that in disc recording the amplitude at 3,000 cycles is only one per cent of the amplitude at 50 cycles for the same sound output level while in the case of film recording the amplitude is the same at both frequencies for the same output level.

"To illustrate this effect a little further we have imagined a base violin, a cello and a violin playing simultaneously at equal volume. To simplify this illustration further, we have assumed that the instruments produce sinusoidal waves bearing a frequency ratio of 1, 3 and 9 and have shown the resulting wave form that would be obtained on the film and disc record. Figure 4 is very interesting.

Frequency characteristic — experimental dynamic reproducer

The high frequencies are scarcely evident on the disc record by comparison with the film record. An inspection of figures 3 and 4 illustrates why the presence of high frequencies need not be considered in establishing the level for wax recording while they must be considered in establishing the level for film recording.

Cites Relative Recording Levels

"It will be observed that if the level of the low frequency sounds are kept within the prescribed limits on wax recording that the monitor man need not pay much attention to the high frequency sounds. In film recording, however, it is essential that the sounds of single frequency be recorded at a relatively low level in order to prevent overloading when complex sounds occur.

"When we observe the relatively low amplitudes which are involved in recording high frequencies, it makes it easy to understand why it is difficult to eliminate surface noise from disc recording and why this surface noise is high pitched. It is extremely difficult to obtain a surface on the wall of the groove which is free from slight irregularities. If these irregularities occur at frequent intervals they need only be of molecular proportions in order to produce relatively large volumes of sound.

"It is interesting to note what the limiting factors are in extending the frequency range beyond that in current use. In this connection a study of the wave length of the recorded sounds is valuable. In order to keep the length of one reel of film long enough to be practical, it was necessary to materially lengthen the playing time of the commercial phonograph record. This was accomplished by increasing the diameter of the disc and by reducing the speed of rotation. Commercial records rotate at 78 r.p.m., while Vitaphone records rotate at 33 1-3 r.p.m. It will be evident that this change in speed will materially effect the wave length of the recorded sound.

"It is obvious that if the radius of curvature of the recorded sound becomes less than the radius of the reproducer needle that it will be impossible for the needle to follow the sound wave. It is also evident that for a given wave length the radius of curvature decreases as the amplitude increases and, therefore, for wave lengths corresponding in magnitude to the diameter of the reproducer needle there will be a limit to the amplitude which it is capable of reproducing. In addition, there is an effect in reproducing these frequencies which is analogous to overloading in an amplifier or radio transmitter. As this effect is usually confined to the last octave, the harmonics generated fall outside the range of the loudspeakers and produce no objectional sounds.

"In order to determine whether it was the frequency characteristic of the reproducer or the wave length phenomena, which is at present limiting the frequency range of reproduction, a laboratory reproducer was constructed and used in playing a standard frequency record of constant velocity. Curve 'A' in Figure 5 is the result obtained. The speed of the record was then approximately doubled with the frequencies corrected to correspond with the new speed. Curve 'E' shows the results of this test and indicates that the reproducer which we used had no resonant peaks below 8,000 cycles and that, therefore, the decrease in output with increase in frequency in Curve 'A' must be the result of the wave length phenomena. It is to be expected that if the recording level on the constant velocity standard frequency record was reduced that the breaking point on Curve 'A' would be shifted to the right more and more as the recording level was reduced. As the normal amplitude of sounds above 3,000 or 4,000 cycles is ordinarily very much below the amplitude of low frequency sounds, it is doubtful whether the wave length phenomena would be an obstacle in attempting to add another octave to the present frequency range.

Theatre Advantage Claimed

"As pointed out above, a study of Figure 3 indicates that the amplitude of the low frequencies is a limiting factor in disc recording. By reducing the amplitude of these frequencies the high frequencies can be recorded at a considerably higher level and, therefore, the ratio between the recorded sound and the surface noise is increased. When this was done it was found in reproducing these sounds in the theatre that the results were more pleasing than when the low frequencies were recorded and reproduced in their true proportion. At first, this was baffling but the explanation can be found in the study of the theatre acoustics. Figure 6 illustrates the way in which the sound absorption in the average theatre varies with

Revolutionary Improvements In Architecture And Sound, Moss Aim

Theatres Shaped Like a Bell to Enhance Talker Reproduction, New Slants on Projection Proposed for New Circuit

NEW features of architecture and acoustical treatment, which he says are revolutionary will feature the circuit of sound theatres to be built up on a national scale by B. S. Moss, head of the former New York circuit which bore his name.

Moss, who retired from show business two years ago with sale of his holdings to Keith-Albee-Orpheum (RKO), intends to build a chain of 50 sound houses. Eugene De Rosa is architect for the proposed theatres.

The first is a house at Eighth Ave., and 23rd St., in the Chelsea district of New York. It will be called the B. S. Moss Talking Picture Theatre and will be built at a reported cost of $2,000,000. The house will seat between 2,000 and 2,500, Moss states.

The Chelsea will be a modernistic structure, its facade resembling other houses which have been built embodying similar design. The interior will be the shape of a bell, cut in half, and will embody many radical innovations, which will contribute to the quality of sound reproduction, according to Moss.

The seats will be arranged similarly to an extended fan. There will be no architectural flourishes in the auditorium, which will have flat or curved surfaces throughout with no recessions or boxes. The surfaces will be treated with dampening materials, in a manner which Moss says will enhance quality reproduction.

Sound proof walls and ceilings, and remote control of amplification so that it may be regulated from any part of the auditorium, thus assuring constant volume and to eliminate dead spots also are planned for houses which will comprise the Moss group. Each theatre is to have full stage facilities and be equipped with wide screen. Entire floor space of the houses will be covered by carpeting.

A number of features of sound reproduction now are being worked out by Moss and his associates, some of which, it is said, will be exclusive features of the Moss houses.

Former Colony, Key House

Key house of the circuit will be the Colony at 53rd and Broadway, which May 31 reverts to Moss. This house will be remodeled throughout, and will be equipped for sound along with the proposed new acoustical principles. Previously, it has been stated that the theatre would become a musical comedy house, but according to exclusive information given to MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the theatre is slated to become the key house of the Moss chain. Its name will be changed to the Broadway, to perpetuate the name of the ace house of the former Moss chain.

With construction beginning on the Chelsea district theatre, which will open next fall, Moss has acquired three additional theatres in Greater New York. One of these is the former Shubert at Jamaica, and a house at Mineola. The Jamaica house is being remodeled.

In addition, Moss has sites for six additional theatres in the metropolitan district. Among these are theatres at 207th St., and Broadway and a house at Elmhurst, L. I.

Moss has acquired a site for a theatre to be built at Cincinnati, it is understood. This proposed house is to cost $1,000,000. At Pasadena, Cal., option on a Green St., site is declared to have been secured, with houses reported in prospect for Los Angeles and San Diego.

"The principal feature in our new type of perfect sound theatre will be the elimination of the old time gallery and the introduction of a perfectly constructed "mezzanine," says Moss. "As a result of this new type construction the entire building will be reduced in height and the projection booth will be lowered so that the angle of the throw will be almost on a direct line with the screen."

"We have studied the latest development in sound so thoroughly that we believe our key theatre will be most revolutionary in character. If we succeed in cutting down the height or throw of the projection we lessen eye strain, and the picture will appear natural from every seat in the house. There will be no elongated or out-of-proportion projection."

"Our new type of balcony will no longer have a pitch to it, there will be no stairs to climb in order to get the best seats in the house. The new order of the day is a small, beautifully constructed and pitchless mezzanine together with a rounded construction in the body of the theatre so that no possible avenues of escape will be available for the perfect production of sound. It is our idea to make the mezzanine seats the best and most expensive in the house. Further we plan each seat a divan, with plenty of room in the aisles and now there will be no necessity of having to take an elevator to reach the desired seat.

"Our engineers are at this moment studying the problem of outside sounds and have assured me we will be able by a process of special treatment on the exterior of the building to eliminate virtually every sound which accrues from street traffic, building elevated railroads and other big city noises."

Interior Like Horn

"Beginning from the stage the interior of the theatre will have the appearance of a huge horn of wood composition, and the wood construction will be a feature throughout the entire house. We know by tests that wood will give us most perfect sound reproduction and will better satisfy the discriminating audience. Nowadays in the standard motion picture cathedral audiences sense the fact that the sound comes from metallic speakers and the illusion that the character is really speaking is lost. This, with our plan of projection and construction, will be entirely eliminated."

Couldn't Quit

ALTHOUGH but 50 years of age, B. S. Moss is one of the real pioneer showmen of the industry. He graduated from the ranks of New York newsboys to found and develop one of the country's strongest chains, which he operated until his retirement two years ago, following sale of his holdings to Keith-Albee Orpheum (RKO).

His first theatre venture was the Washington in Washington Heights, and his success was so pronounced that he soon opened in quick succession a chain of houses in the Greater New York area, among them the Colony, Broadway and Cameo on Broadway.

Two years ago, he sold all of his holdings, save the Colony, which since has been operated by Universal under lease. The house reverts to Moss May 31.

Retirement from show business irked Moss, who now is returning to the fold, planning a national string of sound houses.

"Further I expect to equip all houses, whether newly constructed or revamped with the most perfect type of projection machines. We will be prepared to handle the standard type of film and the larger film, when and if it is generally adopted. Our projection rooms will be larger and contain the newest and best mechanical equipment possible to buy.

Equipped for Standard, Wide Film

"Another feature will be the careful construction of the stages. The prosceneum arch will be built to take care of either size film and the stage itself will be constructed so the sound will be perfect even though parts of the equipment and curtain will be movable. We know now in the present day theatre the moving in and out of speakers tends to give poorer sound, but this will not happen in any of our theatres. Our remote control system of sound reproduction will take care of the matter just mentioned and the general effect in every nook and corner of the house will be exactly the same as that in your own home when you set the volume of your radio to suit your convenience.

"I expect to install ear phones for those whose hearing is impaired and to have every known device which will give complete audience satisfaction."

"I have talked to many exhibitors regarding their needs in the matter of sound reproduction and have found for the most part they are up against a problem that is difficult. I feel when we have completed our first perfect sound theatre at 23rd St. and Eighth Ave., we will have done something truly constructive for the motion picture industry as a whole. We are not interested in harming any individual in the construction of our new type theatre. Rather we feel ourselves pioneers in this field and our show house when finished will serve as a model for future construction. Audiences after all are the ones to be pleased and I know from my own experience that most theatre-goers are far from satisfied with the present method of presenting talking pictures.

Sees Venture as Duty

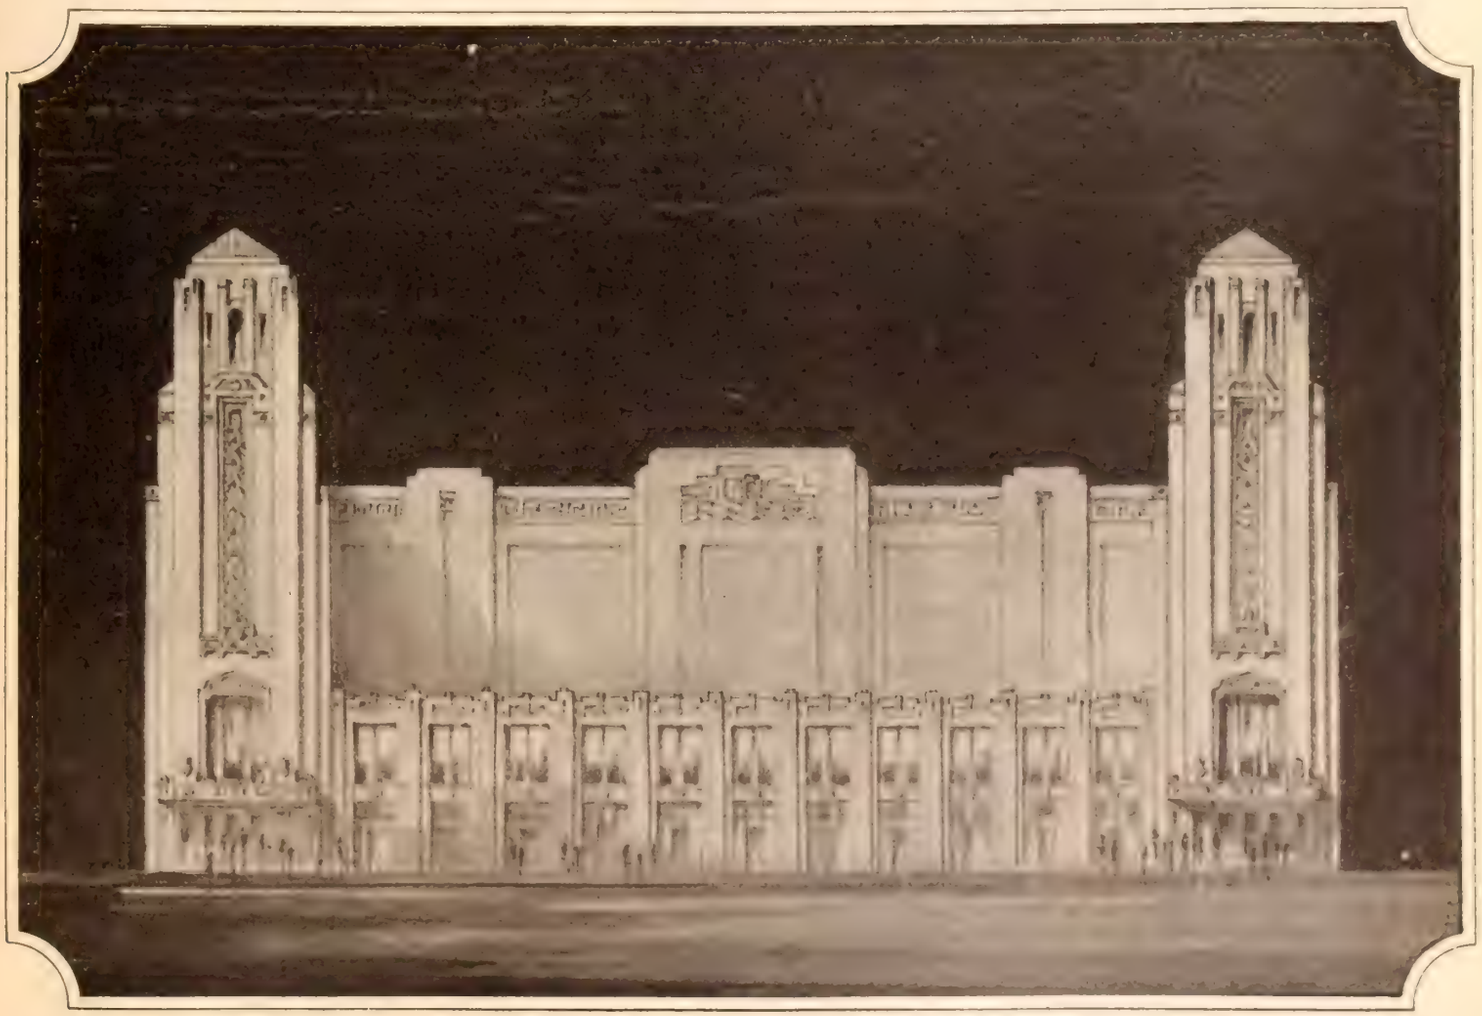
"That is why I feel it a duty to try to further the interests of the motion picture business by the introduction of the perfect picture theatre."

Moss is losing no time in getting back into harness. He is opening new offices at 57th St. and Lexington, drafting and redrafting plans for embodiment in his new project, studying architect's drawings, arranging for the buying of materials, equipment and furnishings for the chain of houses which he will erect.

Off Beaten Track

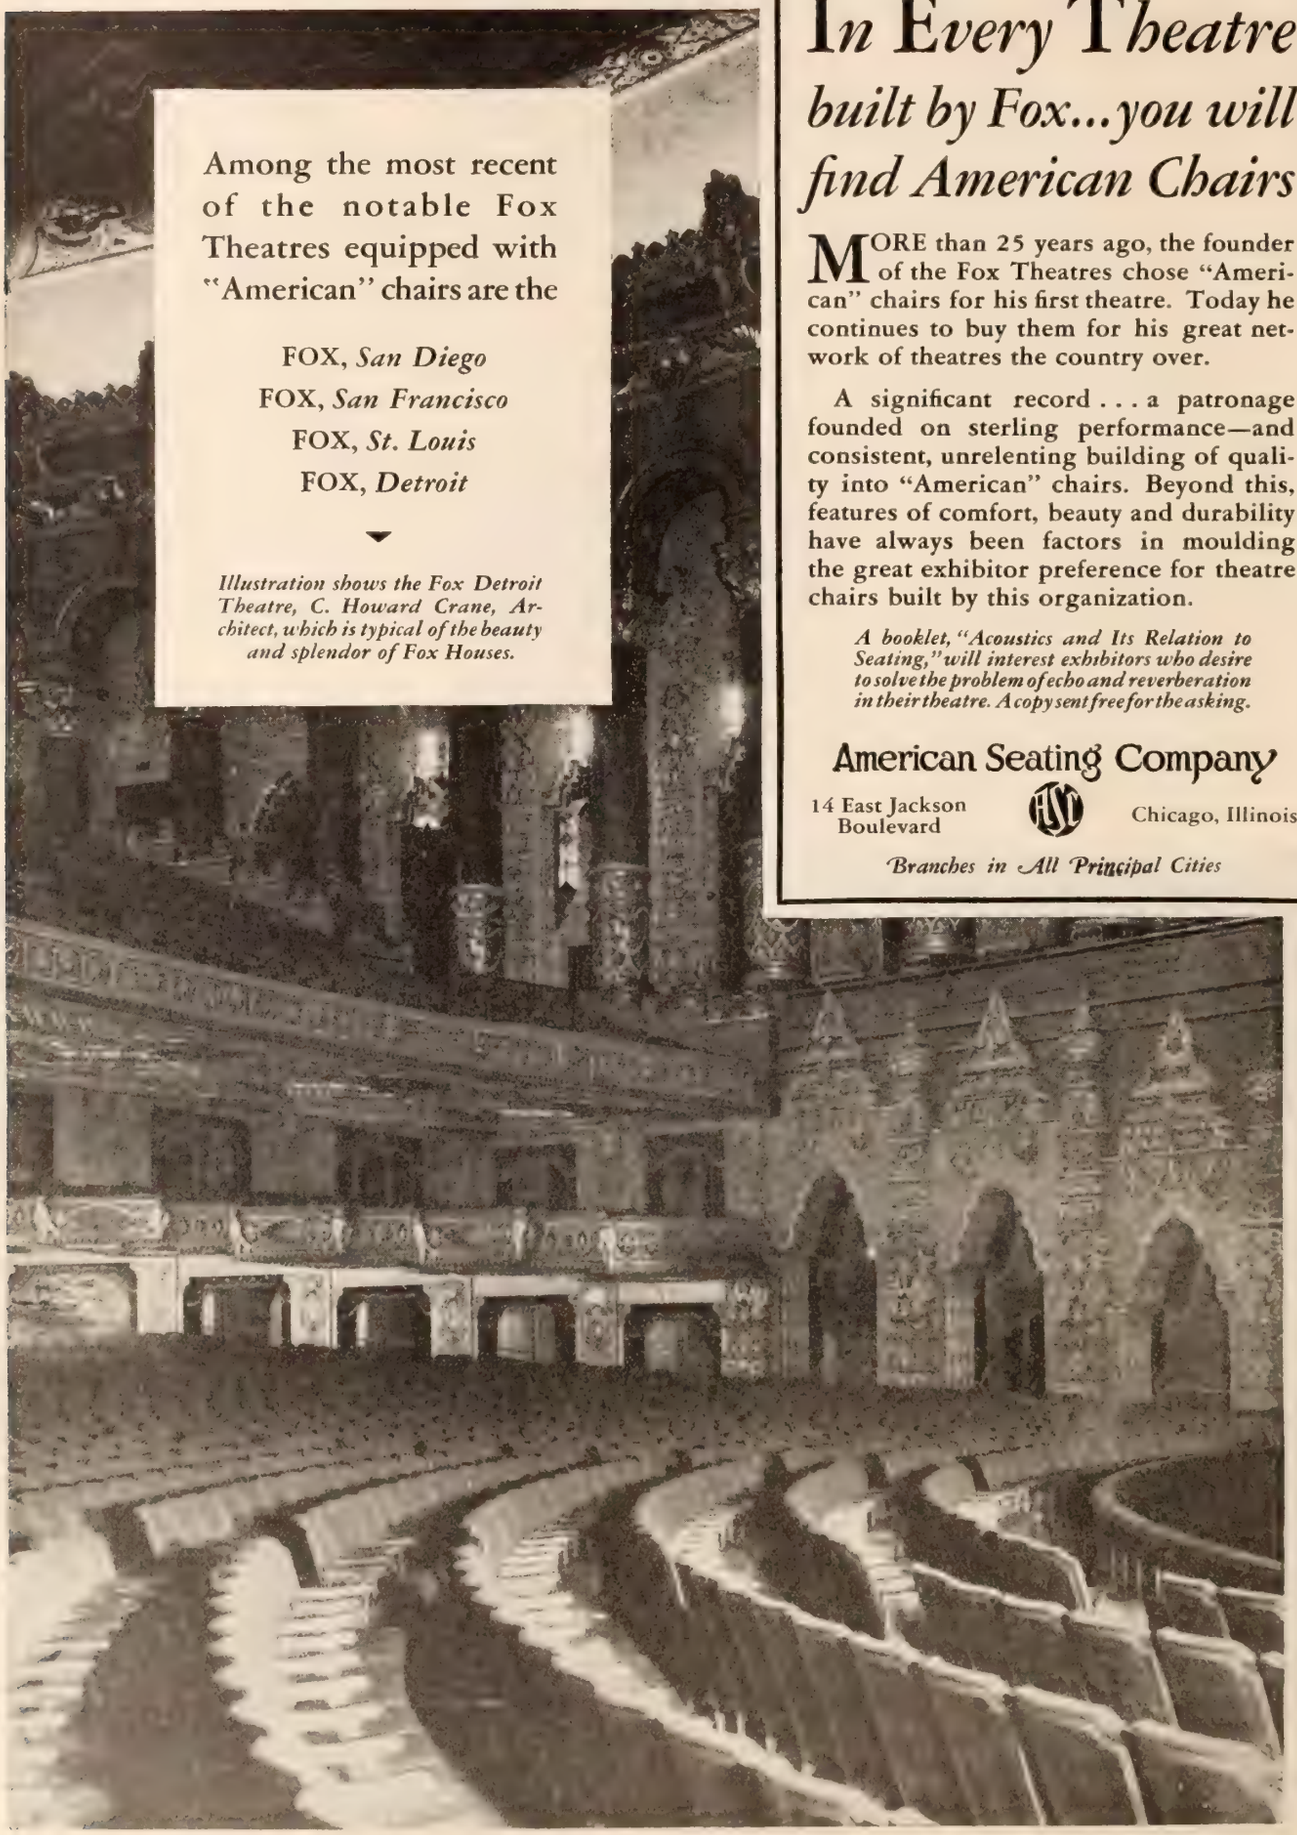
Construction of his new house at Eighth Ave. and 23rd St. will await outcome of negotiations to house the theatre in a proposed apartment hotel project. However, preliminary work is proceeding, so that no time will be lost in erection of the house for completion by next October.

While the theatre is off the beaten track for a house of its type, Moss has no qualms on that score. Anticipating development of theatre possibilities has been one of the keynotes of Moss' career.



The right kind of theatre giving patrons the best in picture and sound values will draw patrons, overcoming the location handicap if the site is not a "natural," Moss believes. He proved it with his vaudeville houses, some of which were built over protests of well-meaning advisors, and he intends to repeat the procedure with his new talking picture theatre chain, in cases where choice locations may not be available.

In this connection, it is recalled that when Moss launched the Cameo project years ago, there were many who called the venture foolhardy. Among the skeptics, it is said, was the late E. F. Albee. So sold was Moss on the idea, that he offered Albee a "piece" of the house, a partnership which proved profitable to Albee.



Will Buy, Too

B. S. MOSS plans to buy as well as build theatres in development of his independent chain of sound houses. With construction of approximately 50 theatres called for in his program, he also will seek to acquire through purchase or lease strategic key city houses.

He also will operate houses for independents, offering to them alliance with his circuit. He has no tie-up with any distributor.

MORE than 25 years ago, the founder of the Fox Theatres chose "American" chairs for his first theatre. Today he continues to buy them for his great network of theatres the country over.

A significant record . . . a patronage founded on sterling performance—and consistent, unrelenting building of quality into "American" chairs. Beyond this, features of comfort, beauty and durability have always been factors in moulding the great exhibitor preference for theatre chairs built by this organization.

With 264 Seats, This Theatre Makes Money

Showmanship Puts Over Small House in Indiana Town of 750

The Rialto at Walkerton which, despite its 264 seats consistently stays in the money class

WALKERTON, Ind.—This is an account of a 264-seat theatre, located in a town of 750 population, that has been making money since 1922.

Albert G. Schultz, who until that year had been inside a theatre only on the rarest of occasions, convinced himself that prosperity had departed from the rural soft drink emporiums and was on the lookout for a new business enterprise. Prior to that time he had been a carpenter in LaPorte, and before that a farmer in the vicinity of the same city.

While visiting a brother in the little town of Walkerton, population 750, Schultz learned that the local theatre, which had sent two former owners to the poor house, was for sale. He looked over the property and, while the natives snickered, laid $3,300 on the line for the 264-seat Rialto. That was in 1922. Today, it is not only making money, but is paying a better dollar for dollar return on the investment than any other local enterprise of comparable size.

How Schultz Operates

The same principles that govern show business in the big cities apply to show business at the crossroads, Schultz believes. Give them the best in equipment and the best in programs. Be responsible. If you're stuck with a poor program and they ask your opinion, be honest. Spend money and you'll make money. Those are the essentials that have guided Schultz and made money for him.

When he took over the Walkerton theatre eight years ago — with its history of failure behind it—it was a run-down, poorly equipped hall. Before reopening it, Schultz did everything but erect a new theatre. He re-decorated inside and out, constructed a new front, put in panel and plaster wall interiors, hung draperies, installed new lighting, new screen, new curtains, a new stage floor and footlights. He ordered upholstered, leather-cushioned seats to replace the old plain wooden ones; he installed a new heating and ventilating system, motor fans for the summer time, and a new electric piano and organ combination.

From time to time he repaired and replaced equipment as required, and when sound became popular, the little 264-seat Rialto was not slow in being wired. Acoustics in the theatre are remarkable, but then fire ordinances in this little village are not nearly so severe as they are in the big city where sound reproduction, in consequence, often is not as good as it is here.

And all the time features were being booked here when they were really new; often in advance of their appearance in Chicago, and occasionally in advance of their appearance in the nearer cities of LaPorte and South Bend, Indiana. Schultz kept his Rialto abreast of the times.

Newspaper Ads Out

His drawing territory extends about 15 miles to the north, and perhaps 25 miles south, east and west. Walkerton is 19 miles south of La Porte, and 25 miles southwest of South Bend. There are no other theatres in the intervening territory. His clientele comprises a farming population, the bulk of which is just as liable as not to be snowed in for weeks at a time from December to March. Balancing the scale in this respect, however, is the crowd of summer vacationists who are attracted to Koontz Lake, four miles distant, in the balmy season—many of whom become his most dependable patrons on week-end nights.

He does no newspaper advertising whatever; engages in no contests, gives no free tickets, runs no matinees. His admission scale is 15 cents and 35 cents for all-talking programs; 10 cents and 25 cents for silents, and a top of 50 cents for specially advertised road shows.

Each month Schultz has 2,000 monthly programs printed. They are eight pages. Fifteen hundred of them are mailed to prospective patrons out of town, while 500 are peddled from house to house in Walkerton. This is the extent of the Rialto's advertising.

His typical program includes, in addition to the feature, a good two-reel comedy, a Color-tone revue and, on Sunday nights, an up-to-the-minute news reel. Big nights [illegible] are scheduled, are Wednesdays, Saturdays and Sundays. On a summer time seven-day schedule, the resorters help to boost business on Thursdays and Fridays as well. Westerns and comedies are inevitably popular. "The Covered Wagon" hung up a record of a three-day run at capacity that has not been equalled here since.

Schultz lists Tom Mix, Norma Shearer, Lon Chaney and Greta Garbo as the local favorites. The influx of the stage names with the talkies, and more recently the trend toward operatic stars, fall on the percepti-

Good Sound and Good Seats spell BOX OFFICE SUCCESS!

THE talkies have changed box office appeal. Today, with hardly any "presentations," "jazz bands," etc., the battle for patronage is based on good pictures, good sound equipment, and COMFORT—especially in theatre seats where your patrons spend over 90% of their time. That is why a practical investment in Heywood-Wakefield theatre seats will help to increase box office profits. These luxurious theatre chairs have been developed to give restful comfort and enjoyment to your patrons. Publix, Warner Brothers, West Coast, Roxy, and scores of other prominent showmen have specified Heywood-Wakefield seats because they have patron appeal—box office pull. Mind Readers, Food Shows, Dancing In Lobbies To Keep Standees Happy

New Showmanship Slant Used Extensively by Publix Points Way to Hold Waiting Crowds and Attract New Ones

WHAT about theatre standees and what to do to take their minds off their feet while waiting for seats? Many circuit heads see in the new policy of lobby entertainment already extensively used by Publix and growing daily in proportions, an answer to the problem.

The Katz organization, certainly one of the best organized chains in the United States, and, in the opinion of many, the leader, views the lobby entertainment slant from at least two important angles:

One keeps the standees from growing too restless by diverting their attention to other interests.

The second is the influence which attention-getting stunts brings to bear on new patronage.

This problem of what to do with standees, provided the exhibitor was lucky enough to have them, has been given serious consideration only recently. The many who bought their tickets stood on line until the seats were ready for them and said nothing. That is, nothing audibly, but what they thought was often plenty.

A lot of customers were lost in this way. No one knows how many potential patrons have been discouraged from even attempting to gain admittance to a theatre whose lobby is packed with waiting hundreds.

To cope with this situation, so long entirely ignored, Publix at least among the chains, has devised a varied form of informal entertainment staged in the lobby, the lounge and, in many instances, even extended to the S. R. O. line outside on the street.

A Check-Up Made

A check-up on the Publix activities along these lines has been completed by THE SHOWMAN, the observations covering a period of three weeks at two of Publix's largest houses—the Brooklyn Paramount and the New York Paramount. The entertainment provided for the standees, the staging and the public reaction follows. Unless otherwise specified the entertainment was staged at the Brooklyn Paramount:

Gene Dennis, known as the Kansas Wonder Girl, was the chief entertainer for the standees for four continuous weeks. She answered any and all questions put to her at random by patrons who have got as near to their seats as the lounge. Miss Dennis occupied a conspicuous place in the grand lounge. She was announced at the break of each stage show by the organist. She worked from a raised platform in spotlight. In a tie-up with the newspapers Miss Dennis answered questions which had been published the day before, and part of her work was done over the radio.

The reaction as reported by the Brooklyn Paramount management was the development of an unusual following among women patrons, some remaining as long as four and five hours in the theatre to get their pet question before the performer. The ushers were beseiged with questions as to what time and when Miss Dennis would next appear. The stunt, the management claimed, not only held the interests of the standees, but served as a magnet to draw customers.

That Standee Problem

FORTUNATE is the exhibitor who has to worry about the S. R. O. sign. Many of them had to, but didn't. They laughed it off and unconsciously added, "Let 'em wait."

Some of the "thinking" chains reason differently. They began considering those standees while they had them, not waiting until they, by chance, might not.

In the accompanying article THE SHOWMAN, following a check-up of lobby entertainment, passes the word on to the next fellow who may have them standing and lets them stand.

Mind Reader Act Draws

A mind reader also was found used, the reader being a woman "fed" by a man scurrying among the standees in the lobby. The woman, blindfolded, stationed in a specially designed stand, answered all comers, the questions including "whose hat is this," the hat in question having just been removed from a patron's head by the man of the act at an appreciable distance from the blindfolded woman.

There is nothing new in this. This type of act circled the vaudeville circuits for many seasons but always arouses curiosity. Many conclusions have been drawn on just how it's done. The method makes no particular difference, according to managerial report, the stunt proved so attractive to standees that in some instances it continued for as long as two hours at a time. When you can hold the attention of lobby hold-outs for two hours with a mind reading stunt there must be something to it.

Other Divertissements

The piano and a player always serve as entertainment whether in the lobby of a theatre, in the orchestra pit, or on the stage. Even the player piano has been brought into play, as have the phonograph and the radio.

One of the best lobby attractions noted at this theatre was an exhibition picture of Byrd's Antarctic expedition, the material supplied by the "New York Times." An attendant was on hand to answer all questions. And there were many.

The patrons' reaction was described as "splendid" by the management. A trailer ran on the screen in the nature of a ballyhoo.

Food Show Tested

In conjunction with a grocery chain of 550 stores the grand lounge staged a food show. There were 20 booths, each occupied by a national food concern. Every woman patron was given approximately $1 worth of food. The show lasted one week and was reported a good business getter.

A radio show, Postal Telegraph display, were among other novelties staged for lobby standees.

At the Brooklyn house one of the most popular divertissements was dancing in the lobby. A special five-piece orchestra furnished the music. Any couple was permitted to go into a half Nelson and flit off across the floor of the lobby. Young people grabbed this one with a lot of zest, thinking more of it as a pastime than the show they were waiting to see. Dancing was confined to Wednesday night.

These efforts at keeping the standees in the right mood indicate a permanent place in the theatre for lobby amusement, especially in larger theatres where standees are more the rule than the exception.

The Sketch Artist Gag

A lightning sketch artist was another diversion for the standees. Dorothy Dwin was the center of attraction, making sketches of patrons selected at random. The number was not set. The artist worked until she became tired. Plugging this number a trailer on the screen informed patrons that they could meet Miss Dwin in the music room. On the back of each sketch made

Doctors As Tenants Simplify Renting Problem in Theatre

Medical Men Make Good Neighbors and Lighten Proceedings for Exhibitor, Rigaumont Says

Arranging Office Suits For Doctors' Use

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

A recent article in THE SHOWMAN mentioned a Medical Center suite of offices above the stores in a Schine theatre designed by you. I like this idea and would appreciate a fairly detailed idea of how this layout is arranged. Also, is the amount of extra work involved in excess of that usually involved in the ordinary office construction?

I think the idea is perfect for making the theatre an institution in the community.

J. R. K.

Answering J. R. K.:

In a small town, such as the one you are located in, the assembling of doctors under one roof makes your renting proposition more simplified than if you were to sublet it haphazardly. Doctors are very good tenants.

The fundamental idea is to permit the doctors to economize on the overhead expense, and also centralize their various equipment so that they may be able to assist one another when the occasion arises. The layout includes a general waiting room, nurses' room, sterilizing room, and drug room or pharmacy. Along the front of the building are located the various offices of the doctors.

Investment Possibilities Of Art Theatres

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

What is your opinion about building an art theatre in a residential neighborhood? We should like to have about 600 seats, larger than the ordinary capacity for these houses, and lots of lounging space. Can a fireproof building be built simply and inexpensively and yet serve as a good theatre for a profitable investment, which we intend to operate ourselves?

T. S.

Answering T. S.:

Community theatres are nice little things for those who can afford to own them and not want to make any money. There are very few, if any, community theatres that are profitable ventures and merely placing the name "Art Theatre" is not sufficient. It is difficult to imagine what the name "Art Theatre" really means. The real art of the theatre is on the screen, or formerly on the stage, and the various gyrations of decorations that from time to time have evolved upon the walls of the auditorium have been merely an attempt to overbalance the real attraction. Yes, a fireproof building can be built simply and with good ideals and comfort, and the question of creating a good theatre depends upon the architect who is a specialist in this type of construction. Theatre designing has just passed through a razzle-dazzle stage and exhibitors are becoming aware of the fact that the essential fundamentals of theatre design are in harmony and comfort—not gawdiness.

Explains Need for Large, Ample, Projection Room

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

Can you give us any information as to the changes in the projection booth which have been made necessary by the coming of the wide screen pictures?

J. A. C.

Answering J. A. C.:

Yours is really a question for a projection department to answer. However, when you build a new building, it is very desirable to make the projection booth big, commodious, and have the various dependency rooms in direct communication with it. There are all sorts of things that are necessary in conjunction with a booth. Keep in mind that the stage nowadays is in the projection booth and that it is there to stay for a long time to come.

Complying with Law on Fireproof Drapes

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

Will you kindly tell us if acoustical drapes can be made fireproof? We are also very anxious to learn whether or not our present drapes which are both attractive and serviceable can be treated with some form of fireproofing.

W. C.

Answering W. C.:

Certain cities require the auditorium draperies to be fireproof. This can be done easily by a responsible firm without spoiling your materials and, since you must comply with the law, why not do it?

Escalators As Means To Bolster Balcony Trade

Dear Mr. Rigaumont:

We experience considerable difficulty in convincing our patrons that the balcony is a fine place from which to see the show, and it is very difficult to get them to go to the balcony even when the main floor is filled. Someone suggested installing an escalator.

W. J. P.

Answering W. J. P.:

The idea is very practical and it would unquestionably make your balcony very desirable for the crowds. There is only one hitch. It is very questionable if the state authorities would permit an escalator because when it is operating it is always going up. And, in case of panic, it could not be used as a means of exit for the simple reason that it is going the wrong way, and your crowd could never get to the street quickly enough. Perhaps, if you would submit a scheme which would pass state approval, your idea would be "bully."

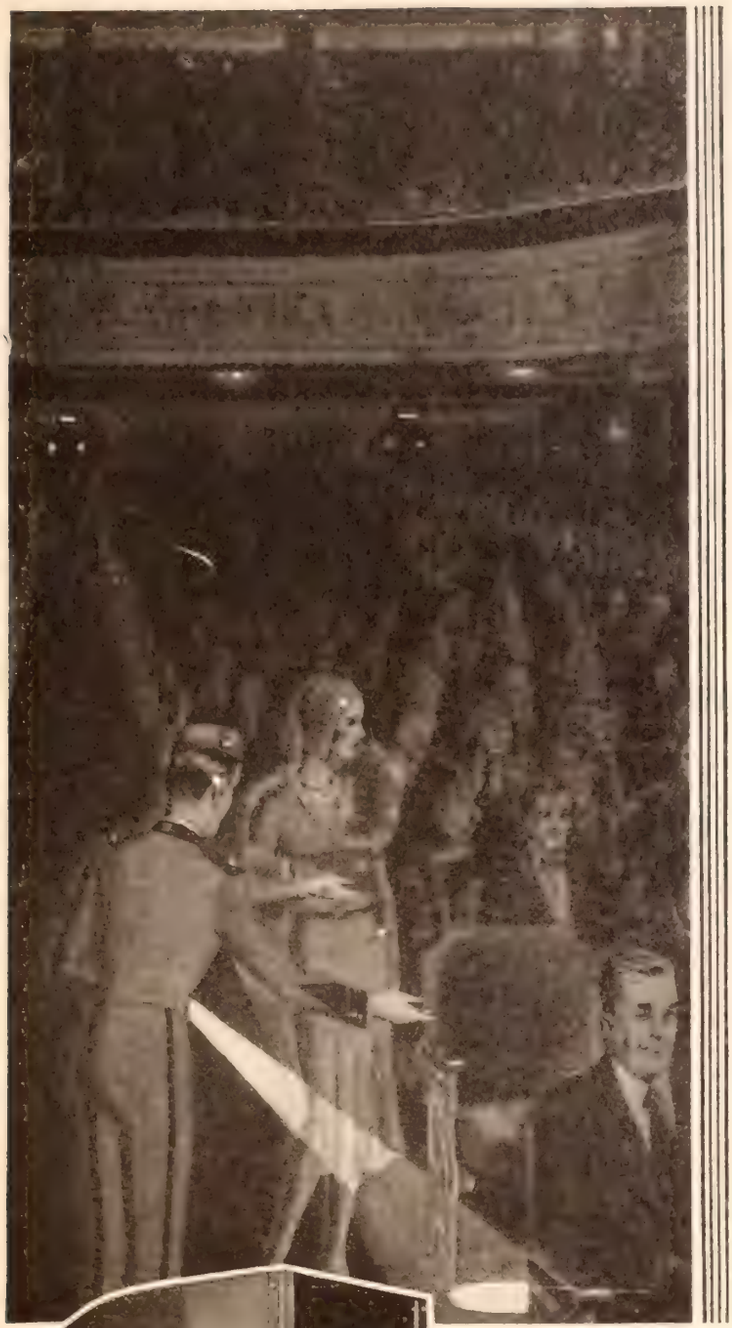
Theatres' Sound Troubles Aided

Boston—Claim that the Saf-3 Mixer makes sound reproduction more natural is borne out by the rapidity with which the device is being adopted in theatres, according to Siplimus, Inc., manufacturers of the equipment.



Pointing out how selectors have aided in meeting problems of recording in studios, Siplimus declares the Saf-3 Mixer accomplishes the same objective in improving the quality of reproduction in the theatre.

The mixer was built to correct defects encountered in reproduction after the studios have done their part. It is designed to add brilliance and depth to reproduction, thereby making the voice sound more natural and music more true.

When reproducing an orchestra, the Saf-3 claims to take out the base horn without affecting the higher pitched instruments. It also takes out high, shrilly notes without affecting the lows, the makers assert.

The device is not a volume control, but a quality control. It can be compared to a triple valve or gate which can be set to stop sounds of a certain pitch without affecting others of another pitch. It is similar to an electrical sieve which has the faculty of sorting out the frequencies, stopping some and permitting others to pass, and can be adjusted to apply at any degree of correction desired to the sound frequencies.

In voice reproduction, the Saf-3 will eliminate the low, drummy sounds which muffle the speech and will bring out the high frequencies necessary to clear articulation and pronunciation, claims made for it assert.

Projection Group Plans Expansion

Expansion of activities of the Projection Advisory Council is planned under regime of Thad C. Barrows, of the Metropolitan, Boston; newly elected president. Committees already have been named to carry on the extended work of the organization. Sidney Burton of the Metropolitan studio, Hollywood, is first, and Lawrence J. Katz, Harrisburg, Pa., second vice president. Harry Rubin of Publix, New York, is treasurer and Laurence Jones, of Loew's, secretary.

New expansion plans will take the form of a drive for members in all sections, as well as widening of the scope of the organization's activities. Industry leaders are appreciating the work the council is doing and have promised active co-operation in the organization's future work, according to Barrows.

James J. Finn, New York, is chairman of the ways and means committee just named by the new administration. Other chairmen are:

Safety—George C. Edwards, New York.
Projection Room Planning—M. D. O'Brien, New York.
Sound—R. H. McCulloch, Los Angeles.
Effects—Harry Rubin, New York.
Law—Hirsch E. Stein, New York.
Awards—Thomas A. Reed, Washington.
Resolutions—Benjamin Stern, New York.
Public Relations—Harry Sherman, New York.
Finance—Otto Kafka, New York.
History—Will C. Smith, New York.
Publications—P. A. McGuire, New York.
Theatre Managers—Charles E. Lewis, New York.
Publicity—James R. Cameron, Brooklyn.

At the first annual meeting of the council, held this week, the following regional vice presidents were elected:

Charles F. Eichhorn, vice-president Local 306, New York, New York; Roger MacKelvey, business agent Local 171, Pittsburgh, Middle Atlantic States; Theodore H. Eckerson, business agent Local 150, Los Angeles, California; Arthur Gray, Lancaster Theatre, Boston, New England; Frank Sutton, Loew's, Norfolk, Va., the South; Victor A. Welman, secretary Local 160, Cleveland, the Middle West; Chauncey L. Greene, Hennepin Theater, Minneapolis, the Northwest; C. A. Dentelbeck, president Local 170, Toronto, and Canadian supervisor of projection for Paramount, Canada.

Jesse J. Hopkins, Paramount, New York, is chairman of the board of directors. Others are Joseph Clayton, Lester W. Bowen, Ed Keller, Charles F. Eichhorn, Victor Armand, W. C. Ricks, William S. Roberts, Otto Kafka, Rudolph Miehling, P. A. McGuire and Lester B. Isaac.

Heads Council

THAD C. BARROWS, new president of the Projection Advisory Council, has been in the industry since 1906 when he joined Howard M. P. Co., at Boston. He became a projectionist in 1907 and in 1910 helped organize and secure a charter for the I. A. T. S. E. for Boston Local No. 182. After serving in various offices, he became president of the local and since has been reelected annually without opposition.

From 1913 to 1930 he was chief projectionist, at the Park, Boston, and when the Metropolitan was opened, as the first of Publix New England De Luxe Theatres, he was made supervisor of projection.

Operator Citizen Bill Defeat Seen

Albany—Little chance for passage of the operators' "citizenship" bill is seen here. The legislature is to adjourn April 11 and all Assembly bills now are committed to rules. The operator bill, which is in committee, would require that every projectionist must be a citizen of the United States and be at least 21 years of age.

New U. K. Projector

London—Marketing of a "non-intermittent" projector made for showing of both standard and 16 mm. film is planned throughout Great Britain by Continuous Projectors, Ltd., recently formed. The company is headed by E. D. Waley and W. Vinten as directors.

Better Projection Object of Survey

Los Angeles—Raising of projection standards through better care of prints and records is being undertaken by the M. P. T. O. of Southern California. The organization is calling upon managers to secure itemized reports on the condition of films and discs used at each show, and is supplying a report blank for the purpose.

This, the association feels, "will aid materially in the operator assuming more responsibility for the product in his hands; in the theatre manager keeping in closer touch with the physical aspect of the films he uses and in the exchanges being able to render better and more efficient service to exhibitors."

The Film Board here also is distributing a form calling upon exhibitors to make similar reports, but the two moves are independent of each other.

Exhibitors in Southern California, Arizona and New Mexico are being canvassed in the surveys.

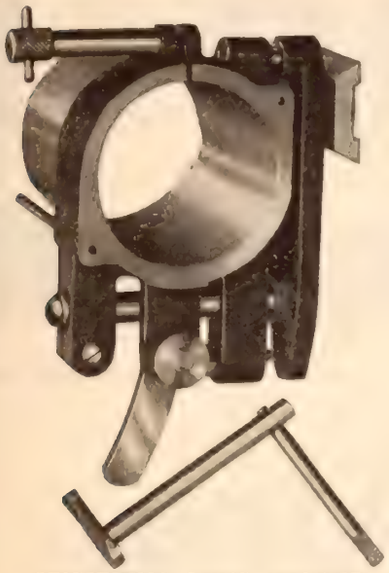
Would License Operators

Elkhart, Ind.—Examination and licensing of operators here by a city board of projection examiners is provided in a bill before the city council.

The board would consist of the city electrician and two projectionists appointed by the mayor for terms of two years each, and the board would hold examinations at intervals of three months for the licensing of operators.

It further is proposed that no one under 21 years old should be licensed and no one operate a motion picture machine in any place of assembly, either public or private without a license, excepting toy machines or small projectors using non-inflammable film and having a light source not exceeding 100 watts. The measure would provide that the license fee for the first year should be $5 and each subsequent renewal $1 annually.

New W. E. Device Ready in July



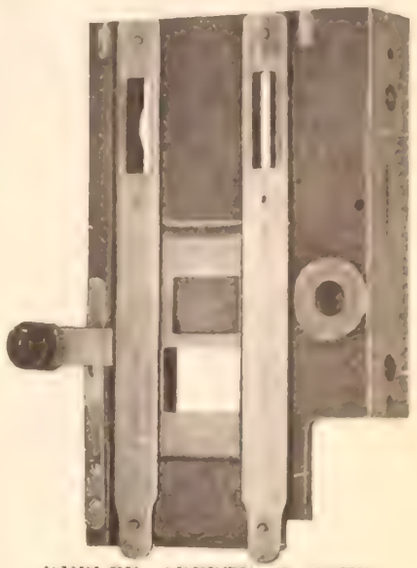
New small theatre equipment to be manufactured by Western Electric will be placed on the market about July 1 by Electrical Research Products. The new equipment is to be supplied at about $3,500 for sound-on-film reproducer. Disc equipment is to be $1,250 additional, it is stated.

For Greater Projectionist-Managerial Harmony

FOUNDED upon a platform that a projectionist must be more than the operator of a machine, but an engineer and showman as well, the Projection Advisory Council was formed just one year ago. Betterment of projection standards through dissemination of information and suggestions on the subject, giving emphasis to the show-adage that "The Show Must Go On," the council has made considerable strides in the first year of its existence.

This record has won for the council an international reputation, and its work has been reflected in improved projection standards in theatres throughout the world. Numbering in its membership outstanding leaders in the profession of projection, the council for the future proposes to improve relations between projectionists and managers. Its ability to understand problems of all branches of the industry merits for the Projection Advisory Council the support of the entire industry. Under leadership of Thad C. Barrows, the council's new president this work is to be expanded and extended.

MODERN PROJECTION NEEDS



CENTERING LENS HOLDER

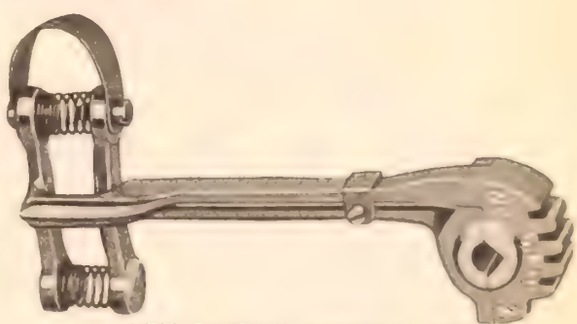
The Centering Lens Mount for Simplex, here illustrated, is endorsed by projectionists everywhere as the simplest, most accurate and efficient device for effecting instantaneous lateral adjustment of lens when changing from regular to sound track film and vice versa. Can be placed in machine in a few minutes without cutting or machining. Holds lens rigid and vibrationless.

Price each complete as shown—$25.00

The Duplex Aperture Gate for Simplex carries a vertically shifting plate having both the regular aperture opening and also one for movietone. The sound on film aperture may be either proportional or one which simply masks off the sound track, as you prefer.

Price each complete as shown—$35.00

DUPLEX APERTURE GATE



The Dual Focus lens permits instant changeover from regular film image to proportional movietone or vice versa maintaining the same size screen picture in either case. Prices on application.

ILEX DUAL FOCUS LENS

The Gem Carbon Jaw is designed expressly for use with the Peerless High Amperage Reflector arc lamp. Made of a special heat resisting alloy which will outlast any material now in use for this purpose. It is composed of but two castings. Type of construction insures carbon being held parallel and positive crater is always precisely at focal point. Because of lasting qualities it is by far the most economical carbon jaw to use.

Price each — $12.00

More Money Poured Into Theatres

FOR the thirty-day period ending March 15 THE SHOWMAN publishes the following statistics on theatre building:

For the United States, a total investment of $19,535,000 has been scheduled for investment in 29 new theatres, the combined seating capacity of which will total 75,250.

These totals compare with the following figures as published in THE SHOWMAN for April, 1929:

For the United States and Canada, a total investment of $14,700,000, in 55 new projects having a total seating capacity of 72,050.

Thus for the second period of the current year new building operations exceed those of 1929 in point of dollars invested, while the volume of projects is considerably smaller than those announced for similar periods last year.

The bulk of new building thus far reported is sponsored by the larger circuits and call for the more elaborate type of theatre housed in combination office, store and theatre buildings.

A feature worth noting at this time is that at the close of the period on which this report is based and during the latter part of March a great number of new projects of the smaller type of theatre sponsored by independent interests were announced in points scattered widely over the country.

Index To Map

The map of the United States shown here is divided into seven territories, with shading indicating the division of new theatre buildng reported during the period from February 15, 1930, to March 5, 1930. This new construction is represented in valuation of dollars and cents rather than number of projects.

The shading is in four densities; dark, representing greatest value of proposed theatres; medium, second in valuation of new construction; light, showing conservative building; and the very light areas, where investment in new theatre projects was comparatively light. The information was obtained through reliable sources, and the map is to be considered as very nearly accurate in representing comparative theatre building activities in various sections of the country.

This was a development looked for in many quarters where theatre properties of the right type were regarded as attractive and certain to find a response from capital as soon as money became easier. The stability of theatre business during 1929 as compared with diminishing activities in the majority of business lines last Fall brought them into a prominence and favor which is reflected in the sensational recovery of the leading amusement shares on the New York market.

Averages in cost per project and cost per seat are unusually high for the period on which re report, due to the several large-scale projects announced. The average cost per project for the 29 new theatres announced is $673,206. Average seating capacity is 2,250, with the average cost per seat reaching the high mark of $272.93.

The statistics for each of the seven territorial divisions of the United States is well in the lead for this report. $8,850,000 is planned to be invested in 9 new theatres, 3 of which theatres will cost several million dollars each.

The average cost per theatre in this territory is $983,333 with an average seating capacity of 2,500. This gives $397.34 as the average cost per seat.

Second in point of investment called for is the North Atlantic division. Ten new projects were announced, calling for a total investment of $5,925,000, and a total of 24,900 new seats. The average cost per project here is $592,500, with an average seating capacity per theatre of 2,440. This gives an average cost per seat of $237.95.

In third place, but far below the two leaders, is the New England territory, where it is planned to build two new theatres at a total cost of $1,850,000, having an average seating capacity of 2,900 and an average cost per project of $925,000. The average cost per seat in this territory is $318.96.

The Southwestern territory reported four new projects in which a total of $1,100,000 is to be invested. The average cost per project here is $275,000, and the average seating capacity

To Rent Wide Film To Theatre Owners

Wide screen pictures, and increase of the number of "good seats" in any theatre by 25 per cent, are promised by Natural Vision Pictures, soon to be placed on the market by Sono Art-World Wide Pictures. The Natural Vision wide-film process, developed by Robert Greathouse, covers both the filming and projection of 56 mm. film. Associated with Greathouse in developing the process is William Bitzer, veteran cameraman.

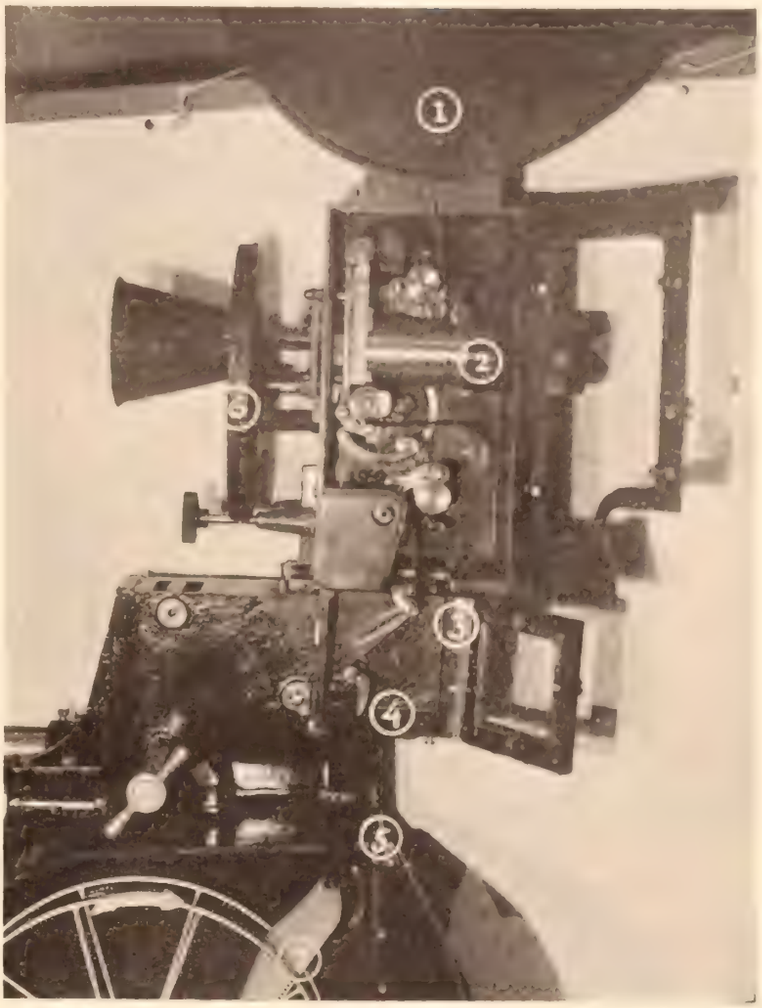
By virtual elimination of any distortion, side seats now regarded as unsuitable, will be made as good as others where the patrons receive a direct line of vision, Greathouse declares.

The new process is to be available to all producers on a royalty per real basis. The projection equipment will be marketed by Sono Art-World Wide. It consists of a projector head and magazine, which is attached to the Universal base. The unit is to retail for around $550, making a two-unit installation slightly more than $1,000.

The projector attachment can be installed in about 30 minutes, requiring change of the head, magazine, two rollers, and film chute. These can be replaced at will for the showing of standard-size pictures. The attachment weighs under 100 pounds.

The 56 mm. width was decided upon, Greathouse explains, because that width is the maximum size which can use the lower magazine of a standard projector with Universal base. With wider film a new base is needed, he says. The 55 mm. width, he also contends, is the most desirable from the standpoint of eliminating buckling.

Standard Projector Used



The Natural Vision Pictures projector head uses the standard lamp and all gears of the projector remain the same. It projects film at the standard speed of 90 feet per minute, so that there is no need for any change in the take-up mechanism. The gear ratio in the projection head is changed to correspond with the gear ratio now used for showing of standard film, so that the time is the same, even though the standard film runs 1,442 frames in 90 feet and the Natural Vision film runs 1,152 frames. Standard cut sprockets are used, and wear and tear is no greater than on standard film, according to Greathouse.

The Natural Vision Pictures are projected in ratio of 2 to 4. A picture as small as 2½ by 5 feet can be projected, and as large as 22 by 24 feet, he says.

To Rent Equipment

Quantity production of the projector attachments is to start within 30 days, it is planned. Meanwhile, Sono Art is preparing to start work on the initial feature which will employ the process. Under the plan, the initial picture probably will be roadshowed, the projector attachments routed with the picture on a flat rental basis. After that, sale of the equipment to exhibitors may be determined upon.

Greathouse for years was with D. W. Griffith and in the legitimate field, while Bitzer was chief cameraman on a number of Griffith and other films.

Kids Sent Home at Night by Theatre

Chicago—Parental duties are part of the day's work at the Rosewood, a genuine neighborhood house, which is a community center in its district. The Montrose Ave. theatre, long established, co-operates closely with parents to see that their children do not stay out later than parental authority might wish.

The old showman adage that "the kids of today are the adult patrons of tomorrow" is strikingly demonstrated at the theatre, which has witnessed patrons grow up, marry and send their children to the theatre, they themselves continuing to attend. And the parents know that their children are in sympathetic hands, and that they can depend upon the theatre's co-operation, in case the kiddies "stay for a second show," or are overstepping the parental time limit.

When such missteps occur, the parent calls the theatre upon the phone and makes known the situation. At the first opportunity thereafter a theatre attache appears on the stage and reads off the names of the children who "must go home at once."

Wires House For Deaf Audiences

Chicago—The nation-wide movement to equip sound theatres with equipment which will allow the deaf and near-deaf to get full value from sound pictures has hit Chicago.

The first sound amplifying seat equipment to be installed in the city is scheduled to go into the RKO State-Lake. Mort Singer made this announcement in answer to scores of complaints that 300,000 Chicagoans of impaired hearing were being deprived of picture entertainment since the talky regime.

A small main floor section of not more than six seats will receive the amplifying equipment at first, Singer said. If it proves popular the reserved section will be enlarged rapidly. The equipment will be connected with the theatre's speakers and amplified as it is transmitted to the seats. The seat apparatus will permit "plugging in" with connections to the individual's ear phones.

The section to be thus set aside will be at the rear of the house. No extra charge is to be made for use of the apparatus. Other theatres here are expected to follow suit shortly.

Theatre Maintenance Important In Managers' Operative Scheme

Keeping the Theatre's "Insides" in Tip-Top Working Order Seen As One Way to Avoid Breakdowns and Trouble

By Charles E. Lewis

Editor, Managers' Round Table Club Section of Motion Picture News

NOT so long ago I used an expression on the Round Table Club pages to the effect that a showman who knows the value of the dollar in theatre management is not only a showman but an executive.

That this applies particularly to the maintenance of the equipment and other parts of the theatre we will endeavor to point out in this article dealing with this all-important phase of theatre management. And those real managers who are constantly fighting to keep the overhead as low as possble will back up every statement we make on the subject.

In dealing with the general equipment of a theatre, we have reference to everything which is subjected to hard usage and wear, such as booth equipment, carpets, ushers' uniforms, seats, signs.

In this era of so-called chain operation efficiency, both the big circuits as well as the little independents have learned a lot about keeping their equipment in first-class condition rather than wait for it to break down entirely and then replace it with new equipment.

The part a house manager plays is of the utmost importance because everything in the theatre is really under his supervision, regardless of how much he may shout about supervisors who check him up, maintenance departments and others, all part and parcel of the chain's management. But, boiled down to plain hard facts, it still follows that, as house manager, he is the one who is responsible for a close check on his equipment so as to catch anything beginning to show wear and correct, if possible, before it is too far gone to do anything but make a new purchase.

A manager who waits for some one on his staff, regardless of how efficient his staff may be, to call his attention to something wrong in the theatre, is a slacker and shows lack in ability to handle the job for which he is being paid.

While it is a good policy to have the head in each department trained to keep the manager posted on everythng under their charge, the only way that you can be certain that they will be on their toes continuously is by making regular and frequent inspections of your house.

These inspections should be so thorough and careful that they serve as an example to every member on the payroll. It will also stimulate them to try and catch trouble before you catch it and call their attention to things that they should have found without your running after them.

A "real" house inspection should start with the roofs of the theatre and cover every nook and corner, besides the usual portions of the house where your routine duties bring you in contact any number of times in the course of a day's work. The hanging ceiling, much forgotten and yet a dangerous part of your theatre, should be gone over with plenty of light to show if there is any accumulation of rubbish.

The porter's closets, ushers' dressing rooms, rooms back-stage, and, most important of all, the cellars and boiler room. They all constitute trouble spots to the manager, who gets into a rut of leaving things to others and never checks up himself.

Years ago while managing a theatre in Brooklyn we had a system of house inspections under the supervising manager which became a sort of a circus to almost every manager on the circuit because of the supervisor's habit of wasting time looking for cobwebs in isolated corners of the house and peanut shells under the radiators.

So I worked out in my spare time (don't laugh, it's a fact), a plan whereby each employee accounted for a certain part of the theatre's operation. For example, if the operator had to check up on the lubricating of the motors for the sign flashers, ventilating fans, etc., he carried a chart marked off to show that he covered these items once a week.

If the head usher was responsible for ushers' uniforms, dressing rooms for the boys and the poster room, he carried a similar chart. So when we started out to make our regular inspection of the theatre, each one was with us. When anything turned up that needed an explanation, the proper party was there to have his say for the condition which existed. Then we checked his chart to see if it was covered by his own inspection. In this way we could generally detect if a man had marked his chart with an O. K. when a report to the manager should have been made, calling attention to a bad condition.

Assigning the Job

Of course, in every locality the situation may differ, but for the purpose of a general discussion we would suggest that you make up charts as outlined above and place them in the hands of those responsible, such as the chief operator for his booth, projection and sound equipment. Head usher for the condition of the uniforms, cleanliness of the ushers' dressing rooms, etc. Stage manager

Inspections Important

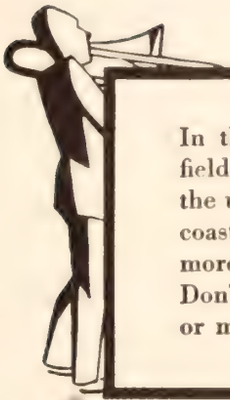
FREQUENT house inspections, together with the members of your staff in charge of the different departments of the theatre, will result in everyone taking special care to insure a good rating on such inspections. This can only be accomplished by making them all understand that you have placed responsibility with them and that they must prove their capability by the condition of their department.

A Few Pointers

A MANAGER who waits for trouble generally gets plenty of it.

Try to anticipate and forestall breakdowns in your equipment by carefully inspecting every inch of the theatre from the cellar to the roofs.

Only such inspections will reveal the condition of the house and show you what is in need of immediate attention.



Particular emphasis should be stressed on the booth, boilers and other operating equipment more susceptible to breakdowns.

Equipment Care Vital

PROPER care of your equipment is just as essential to good theatre management as any other phase of your work. If you permit your house to get into a dirty, dilapidated condition, it will drive patrons away faster than mediocre pictures. It's all part of your job and you should be capable of shouldering this responsibility together with your other duties.

Outdoor Air in the Theatre, A Guarantee of Satisfied Patrons

Seasons Mean Nothing Under Modern Ventilating Methods—An Expert Explains Why and Describes a Few of the Fundamentals

By D. C. LINDSAY

Physicist with Carrier Engineering Corporation

LET us outline the ideal conditions which should be maintained within a theatre and follow the process of their accomplishments:

1. Air should be relatively clean, washed or filtered to protect the health of patrons and to preserve the beauty of the decorations and draperies.

2. During the summer months a temperature of approximately 75 degrees F. and a relative humidity of 55 percent is in most cases comfortable, though there is a tendency now to carry a slightly higher temperature and a correspondingly lower relative humidity. During the winter months a temperature of approximately 70 degrees F. with a relative humidity of from 35 to 50 percent is found practicable and comfortable.

3. The proper quantity of conditioned air to be supplied to the theatre is generally conceded to be about 30 cubic feet per minute, per person. This is not based upon the quantity of air which one person breathes in a minute. The average person inhales little more than one cubic foot of air per minute. The quantity of air is based rather upon the heat dissipation of the average individual which is sufficient in one minute to raise the temperature of 30 cubic feet of air approximately nine degrees F.

Velocity Regulated

4. Finally, this quantity of air must be carried to and distributed uniformly throughout every portion of the building. Since the air is cooled, the greatest care must be used in regulating the velocity and the direction at which it is delivered in order to avoid draughts. In other words, reference must be made to the comfort chart and the velocity of air delivered carefully adjusted to establish a comfortable combination with the existing temperature and humidity.

5. A certain quantity of fresh outdoor air should always be a part of the air delivered to the house. The practice in this regard varies rather widely. Some cities have ordinances which require that all of the air delivered to the theatre be fresh outdoor air and forbid re-circulation of any portion of the air within the building. Such a requirement is absurd and would subject the owner to a prohibitive expense either to heat or to cool his theatre. Air conditioning engineers and numbers of health authorities have pretty generally agreed that a constant minimum dilution of 25 per cent of fresh outdoor air, or approximately eight cubic feet, per minute, is ample from every point of view.

We have outlined five general problems to be solved in establishing ideal air conditions within the theatre.

Consider now a theatre completely equipped with a typical air conditioning and refrigeration system.

Assume there is an outdoor temperature of 85 degrees F. and a wet bulb temperature of 75 degrees F. This is not an unusual summer day.

Under these conditions the outdoor relative humidity is found on the psychrometric chart to be 63 per cent. The dew-point or condensation temperature of the outdoor air is about 71 degrees F. We wish to establish, as outlined in the requirement in No. 2 given above, a temperature of 75 degrees F., and a relative humidity of 55 per cent.

We find from the chart that this condition calls for a dew-point of approximately 57 degrees F. in the theatre. We have not only to cool the air from 85 degrees to 75 degrees but we have to dehumidify, that is, to condense sufficient water out of the air so that the dew-point is lowered from 71 degrees to 57 degrees. Here is how it is done:

We have as a part of the air conditioning equipment a spray chamber within which hundreds of small nozzles are atomizing perfect clouds of water. During summer operation the water supplied to this chamber is cooled by refrigeration to a temperature of about 45 degrees F. By means of the large centrifugal fan, air is drawn through the chamber in intimate contact with the water spray. Here it is completely washed, meeting requirement No. 1 as set forth above. Here, also, the air is cooled to a temperature of about 50 degrees F.

The air has given up its heat to the water, and the water temperature has risen about five degrees. Observe, also, that cooling the air to this extent we have gone below the initial dew-point of the outside air.

It follows, therefore, that water vapor must have been condensed out of the air. In other words, we have reduced the dew-point of the entering air from 71 degrees F. to 50 degrees F.

Re-Circulation Follows

From this chamber the air is drawn into the fan. It would not be desirable to admit air at 50 degrees F., saturated, as it is, upon leaving the spray chamber. Some economical means must be adopted for raising the temperature of the air and incidentally for reducing its relative humidity.

One very economical method of doing this is a patented scheme of re-circulation. Some warm air is drawn from the theatre and intermixed with the cold, saturated air at the intake of the fan. The mixture has a temperature ranging from 62 degrees to 65 degrees F., and the dew-point of this mixture has been slightly increased by the vapor carried in the warm re-circulated air.

The fan then delivers the air through a metal duct system to outlets carefully located in the high ceiling of the theatre, in the ceiling beneath the balcony and at other points throughout the building where cooling is required.

The location and design of the outlets have been a matter of careful investigation on the part of air conditioning engineers. The air delivered through these is not blown into the building, but is delivered at adjusted velocities and is so directed that the result is one of diffusion, a blanket of air, passing downward over the audience.

Insuring the Health of the Picturegoer

IN the onrush of innovations and improvements incident to the exhibition of motion pictures there perhaps has been no one step taken that has brought more real comfort to the millions who visit the theatre daily than that which brought with it proper ventilation.

During the past six years approximately hundreds of theatres in the United States have installed air conditioning systems. There are 1500 additional which are prepared immediately to add such equipment.

Insurance against breathing bad air is worth something to the patron. That is what the air conditioning system insures. And that is why THE SHOWMAN is passing along Mr. Lindsay's detailed account of just how it's done.

in SYNCRODISK SALES In The Last 6 Months!

This is no self-satisfied boast. We blame it on the product—it's good.

Syncrodisk is never high-pressured into a projection room.

Each buyer has bought because he learned that it is the best turntable for his needs.

If a single owner regrets it he has never told us—and there is a standing satisfaction-guarantee with every Syncrodisk.

SYNCRODISK IS THE STANDARD BY WHICH ALL OTHERS ARE JUDGED

It has never been cheapened or built down to meet a price.

Syncrodisk was designed and is manufactured, owned and sold by the Weber Machine Corporation, in their own factory.

One principle pervades every operation in construction — accuracy plus strict fidelity to one man's philosophy that anything which bears his name—Weber—must be absolutely "right".

Why This Rapid Growth?

The eating has proved the pudding good.

The reasons are numerous—as many as there are parts in each turntable.

Syncrodisk is vibrationless, steady, smooth—due to the famous Syncrodisk Spring Suspension and its weight per unit of more than 150 pounds. It gives absolute synchronization. It is tough—built for long service. Easily connected to any make projector in one hour's time. Does not drive off the intermittent. Has two needle pockets built into the metal guard which surrounds the disk. Comes equipped with a nickel-plated adjustable lamp to illuminate the needle track—a convenient feature.

Over 1,200 sets in operation every day.

New Sound Reproduction Equipment

New Lens Mount as Aid In Projection

A new development for interchangeable projection of silent or disc recorded films and sound-track recorded prints with the same screen proportions maintained, for both has been brought to the market by the GoldE Manufacturing Company. The new device is called the GoldE Uni-Lens Mount, and, as its name implies, uses a single lens, the standard lens in use at any theatre, in a mount which enables the projectionist to change instantly from silent to sound-track films by insertion of a mask and the throwing of a lever which recenters the picture with precision action.

The mount requires no change from one lens to another, does not employ prisms, and refocuses and recenters the picture by a simple operation. The change from full picture image of silent or disc recorded prints to Movietone or other sound track prints is made instantly, so that both types can be coupled on a reel and the full screen proportions maintained throughout the running of the reel. This enables the theatre to couple both silent and sound news shots.

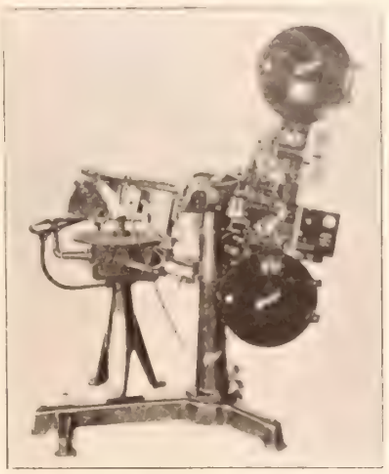
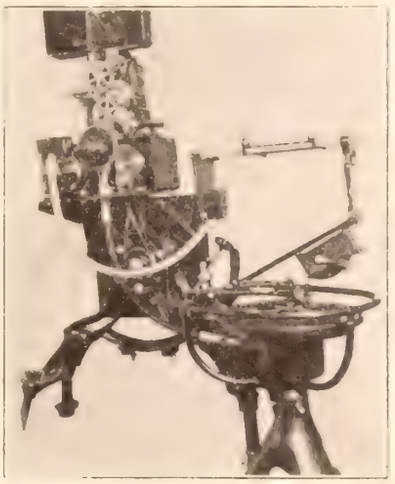
One touch of a lever on the mount is all that is necessary to prepare for either sound or silent projection. The installation of the device is very simple, and, as already stated, only the mount is required, the same lens already in use with the projector being employed. The GoldE Uni-Lens Mount is being distributed by National Theatre Supply Co.



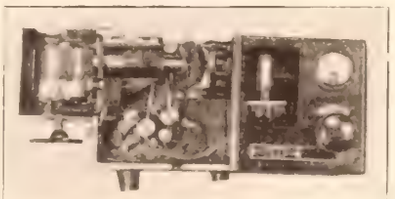
3 New Models of De Forest Device

Featuring a number of improvements over former models, three new type De Forest Phonofilm equipments have just been brought out by General Talking Pictures.

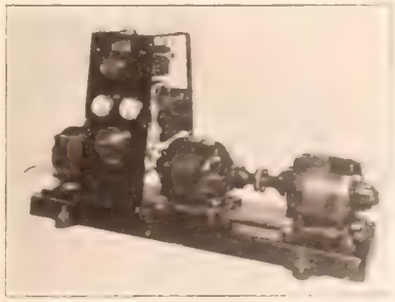


The new models have been in process of development for a number of months. Each model, states Dr. Lee De Forest, has more than sufficient volume to meet requirements. Application has been improved considerably, it is stated, with distortion claimed eliminated, even when the reproducer is carrying peak loads.

The new models are the Special, designed for theatres with seats up to 750. This model sells for $2,500. The Challenger is for houses with seats from 750 to 1,200 and is priced at $3,500. The Monarch is the heavy duty machine for theatres over 1,200 seating capacity and is listed at $4,250. These prices are for sound-on-film only. With disc equipment, they are $1,000 additional.



New RCA Equipment



Model C-4. RCA Photophone equipment for small theatres. Battery operated with soundhead attachment and synchronous disc attachment for Model "S" Simplex projector

Model C-3. Motor generator operated: soundhead attachment and synchronous disc attachment for Power's 6 B projector.

Scratch and Hiss Corrector Ready

[illegible] and correct needle scratch from records, hiss from films, static, microphone noises, etc., the Samson Qualpensator [illegible] developed by Samson Electric Co.

In order to attain compensation, the relative volume of high, low and middle frequency ranges is controlled with the Qualpensator. Any of these ranges may be reduced independently, or the high and low ranges may be reduced simultaneously. The device is provided with three switches which select the frequency range or ranges to be softened. The degree to which the volume is reduced, depends upon the setting of the variable compensation control. The total volume is subject to the remaining control.

The low frequency range is selected by a switch on the left of the Qualpensator. The high frequency range is similarly selected by the right-hand switch. The middle range is selected by the central switch. Selection is accomplished by throwing the switches to the right.

Compensation may be effected by the insertion of the Qualpensator between two proper circuit elements of a reproducing system. In general, the Qualpensator should immediately precede the main amplifier, following pick-ups, head amplifier, microphone amplifiers, or radio set detectors. Two or more of these instruments may be used where it is necessary to compensate for undesirable conditions in different sources, in which case, selection of channels must follow the Qualpensators.

Sterling Markets New Recorder Unit

Disc-recording apparatus for synchronous recording of sound with motion pictures to market for less than $10,000 has been introduced by the Sterling Motion Picture Apparatus Corporation.

The recording machine with air suction attachment, 18-inch turntable, self-contained stroboscope, recording at 33 1-3 R.P.M. or at 78 R.P.M., sells for a list price of $4,250. Complete with recording amplifier, mixing cabinet for five microphone positions, microphones, etc., the equipment is sold for a list price of about $7,000.

Features of the recording unit are: Starts cut on 7-inch diameter; 6th to 7th inch allowed for test cut; spiral starting line is cut automatically; insulated web construction to absorb all vibrations; motor drive separate unit entirely insulated from recording mechanism; horizontal and vertical screw adjustments for cutter-head; recording carriage on bronze bearings sliding on ground and lapped steel bars.

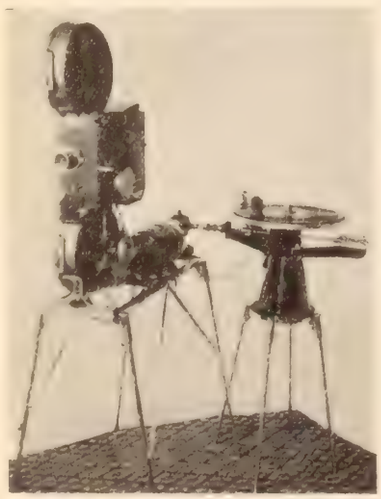
Major Areaflood Madein NewModel

Chicago — New model Major Wide Angle Area Flood has been developed for varied theatre uses, including stage olivettes, back drop and cyclorama lighting and flood the stage from overhead. Major pipe clamp mounting is standard equipment with the flood, but the lamp also can be used with the crowfoot base or tall standard.

The lamp is especially designed for short and medium throw work, where wide beam angle and smooth distribution are desired. It has a one-piece heavy aluminum spun reflector oxidized aluminum finish inside and kristokrak black outside. It has one-piece oxidized aluminum reflecting surface.

The color frame groove is spun with the lamphood. Spring brass clips hold the color frame against the lamp housing at the top, to prevent leakage of light around the frame. Gelatine is recommended for quick color changes and intermittent use, and the lamp has a two-piece metal color frame, with wires on either side to hold the gelatine sheet.

Wide angle area flood being morketed by Major particularly designed for short and medium throws



Silver-Marshall Ready With New Speaker Line

Chicago—A new line of auditorium speakers is announced by Silver-Marshall, Inc. The new speakers, designated as the "860 series," are said to handle musical tones as low in pitch as 30 cycles (lowest C on the piano) and as high as 8,000 cycles (a full octave above the highest note on the piano).

The speaker head is the same in all instruments of this type, but it is furnished for either A. C. or D. C. use, and each of the models is furnished with or without the input transformer—the latter item being sometimes included in amplifiers used in theatre sound systems, so that it is not always required in the speaker.

Cooling Plants Trailers

Acme Film Co., New York, has prepared a series of trailers to sell cooling systems to patrons.

New Wall Tile for Theatre Use Ready

Asbestos wall tile, offered in a wide range of color combinations, has been placed on the market by Johns-Manville Corp. The tile is expected to have special application in theatre lounging rooms.

The new tile is formed of asbestos fibres and Portland cement, united under great pressure, into large sheets and grooved off into squares to give the effect of single units. The new tile is declared to be durable, waterproof and fireproof. Special lacquer enamels are used.

Ease of application is claimed for the new tile. The large sheets reduce installation costs, can be cut with a hand saw and erected without recourse to cement. Brass retention clips hold the sheets in place. Brass strips, lacquered to match the tile lock into the clips concealing the joints.

New Change-Over Device Patented

St. John, N. S.—A change-over device has been patented by Herber K. Jones, service manager for K. C. Irving, Ltd., and Edmund A. Chase, projectionists at the Strand. It is described as a "reel for motion picture apparatus comprising a pair of discs, a hub part, connected with the central parts of the disc, a member of resilient material surrounding the hub part and having a slit for receiving the inner end of the film placed on the reel."

Tonlux, New Screen

Chicago—A new sound screen known as the Tonlux has been placed on the market by L. V. Kuttnauer, 208 N. Wells St. The new screen is priced at $50.

It is pointed out by the manufacturer that the Tonlux screen is of all-porous construction and allows all the sound to pass through the entire screen surface. This is achieved without holes or perforations.

The screen is made with eyelets for lacing to present frame. It may be obtained flame proofed for $10 additional, and may also be obtained in Magna screen size.

Lupton Features Steel Cabinets

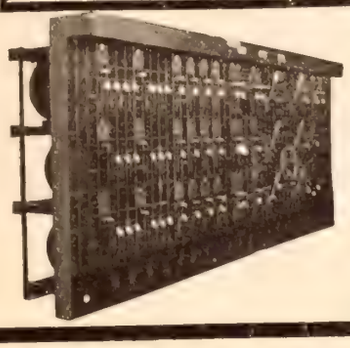
When sound pictures invaded the screen's silence, the problem of storing various accessories had to be met.

As one answer, David Lupton's Sons, Inc., of Philadelphia, developed a line of steel furniture. Record cabinet, slide, photo and insert racks, inspection table, wardrobe, trailer film cabinet were among accessories manufactured for the trade.

Pathe equipped its exchange in Pittsburgh with Lupton poster racks, as did Warners Pittsburgh exchange. Vitaphone disc racks are installed in the New York office.

Webster Has New Pick-up For Disc

Chicago—Webster Chicago is name of a new electrical pick-up placed on the market by the Webster Co., which manufactures power amplifiers, faders and other reproducing accessories.



The ratio of the weight of the pick-up on the disc to the tone arm and head is claimed to be so timed that the movement of the needle will not overcome the inertia of the tone arm or head. At the same time the needle is free to follow the disc grove, thus eliminating the tendency to "jump" and preventing excess wear on the record. A magnet of cobalt steel is used. Volume control is of the voltage divider type. It is furnished in the standard type for phonograph and radio reproduction as well as in the theatre type for 16-inch records.

Testing Clay for Acoustical Values

Local theatre owners are awaiting with interest the outcome of certain clay material tests being conducted by the Structural Clay Tile Association. The new clay product is said to possess unusually fine acoustical properties and in addition its surface may be partially glazed to provide a finished wall surface. The process employs ground up clay treated with chemicals which give it a porous body, making it sound absorbent. Final tests are expected to be made in the near future and, if successful, production of the material will be begun commercially immediately. The product, it is believed, will effect appreciable savings for either insulation or wall finish uses.

Are you— "in the dark" about theatre lighting control?

There is no need to be in doubt. Hundreds of successful showmen have used and are using this system of lighting control to the great benefit of box office returns. Light is as much a drawing card to the public as it ever was and should be used consistent with other modern programs.

One of the $15,000 Publix Sound Limousines

Only the Finest of Speakers Could do Justice to This Fleet

The tremendous Publix organization is selling sound to millions of theatre-goers. It was vital to them that they install in their fleet of twelve sound trains the finest reproduction equipment possible to secure. And it was only natural that they selected Wright-DeCoster Speakers.

Perfect Reproduction—Always

There is a type and size of Wright-DeCoster reproducer for every purpose ranging from giant reproducers for outdoor or theatre use down to small ones for home radios. They all represent the utmost in true, clear reproduction.

1,512. The average cost per seat is $181.81.

The West Coast is in last place with only one new project, announced during the period. Here the estimated investment is $1,000,000 for 2,500 new seats. The average cost per seat thus is $400.

New projects, supplementing those previously published in Motion Picture News, include:

MEMPHIS, TEX.—Hollis Boren will erect a new 1,100 seat theatre.

STAMFORD, TEX.—Stamford Amusement Co., will erect a $50,000 theatre here.

DALLAS, TEX.—R. and R. Theatre Corporation is planning a new $300,00 house here.

RAPID CITY, S. D.—Black Hills Amusement Company, is planning a $100,000 theatre here, to seat 2,000, according to Leo Peterson, manager of the Elks.

YUMA, ARIZ.—Fred L. Smith, hotel man of Los Angeles, and William A. Brown, real estate operator, will erect a six-story hotel and theatre building to cost $750,000. It will be located at Southwest Third and Main streets, and will seat 1,000.

HOLLYWOOD—Wilshire Amusement Co., is sponsoring a theatre at Wilshire Blvd. and Hamilton Drive, Beverly Hills. S. Charles Lee is architect.

TUSCON, ARIZ.—Joe Gross, former Los Angeles theatre owner, will start construction immediately here of a house on West Congress St. Roy A. Place, of Tuscon is architect.

BURLINGTON, VT.—A Burlington theatre will be added to the Publix string soon. Mowll & Rand, of Boston are architects.

ROUSES POINT, N. Y.—W. F. Kennedy of Champlain, will open a new house here, about May 1, is the tentative opening date.

CINCINNATI—A new $1,000,000 theatre building at McMillan Street and Gilbert Ave., Peebles Corner, is planned. A six or eight story structure is planned.

XENIA, O.—James T. Hibbert, proprietor of the Bijou, is considering erection of a house on West Main St. The two-story building now on the site will be razed.

POINT PLEASANT BEACH, N. J.—Harry May will start construction this week on a new theatre to seat 1,000. The contemplated building will stand at Arnold and Richmond Streets.

OAKLAND, CALIF.—Warners have made plans for a new $750,000 theatre to occupy a site at Broadway, Franklin and Twentieth Sts. F. Albert Lansburgh, of San Francisco, is architect.

MIDDLETOWN, O.—Property has been acquired on Broad St., for a $500,000 theatre building by Midland Realty Co.

BAKERSFIELD, CALIF.—Contract bids have been submitted for a new $250,000 theatre for Fox West Coast Theatres, Inc. It will seat 1,600 persons.

SANTA BARBARA, CALIF.—Joseph McManus, real estate operator here, reports a Los Angeles theatre man is contemplating erection of a house on the Coast Highway, at Olive Hill, near here.

NEW YORK—Plans for $500,000 theatre in Queens now on file represent the largest building project in this section for February. The theatre will be at Greenpoint Ave. and 45th Street.

YREKA, CALIF.—Walter H. Leverette, of Medford, chain owner will erect a $70,000 theatre here. Tourtelotte and Hummel, of Portland, are the architects.

PLACERVILLE, CAL.—Roger W. Browne will erect a $60,000 theatre, office and store building on Main St. Construction work is expected to start soon.

OKOLONA, MISS.—Work has begun on a new $20,000 theatre on Main St.

YBOR CITY, FLA.—A theatre of Spanish architecture to seat 1,500 and to cost $100,000 will be erected here, according to plans of Mrs. Ignacio Haya.

COLUMBUS, O.—Springfield Theatre Co., is planning a $750,000 sound house. It will seat 2,500 and be in the downtown section.

PASADENA, CALIF.—Chotiner Amusement Corporation, of Los Angeles, will erect a $180,000 theatre at Berkeley Avenue and Colorado Street.

CLARKSTON, WASH.—With the coorperation of the local Chamber of Commerce, O. P. Pring, is promoting a new theatre on a site yet to be selected.

RAYMONDSVILLE, TEX.—The new theatre at San Perlita is expected to open on April 15.

RIDGEWOOD, N. J.—The Stanley-Fabian Corp. has informed local authorities that it will start construction on July 1 of a new theatre here.

VAUCOUVER, B. C.—Excavation work has started on the protected $225,000 theatre on property purchased by Frederick Guest of Hamilton, Ont. Hodgson & Simmonds are the architects.

MILFORD, MASS.—Representatives of a large chain have been spending several days here looking for a theatre site.

PLACERVILLE, CALIF. — Placeville's new theatre is expected to be ready for occupancy on June 15.

BUCYRUS, O.—Rapid strides are being made on the construction of the new Moose, $250,000 house scheduled for opening Aug. 1.

HOT SPRINGS, S. D.—Opening of the new Hot Springs Theatre by the Black Hills Amusement Co. is expected May 1. The company is also building in Rapid City.

CENTER OSSIPEE, N. H.—Ansel Sanborn, operating the Chamberlain Hall, is starting work on a new

by the artist there was an imprint with institutional copy on coming attractions.

Two birds were killed with one stone in this number. Patrons who fell for the sketches of themselves carried them away to show them to their friends. At least, so the management doped it out.

The Accordion Player

An accordion player jumped into the breach as an entertainer on another occasion. Frank Judnick proved not only a good accordion player but a good mixer and was not averse to carrying his music and personality right out to the street to keep the prospective patrons waiting in line in an anticipatory mood. He usually appeared during the peak periods and after a few days of this became of almost equal importance as the average master of ceremonies. He was called by name and all that sort of thing.

After two weeks of such capers Frank was joined by a clarinet player. Occasionally an usher who could sing was rushed into the breach as a complement to this two-some.

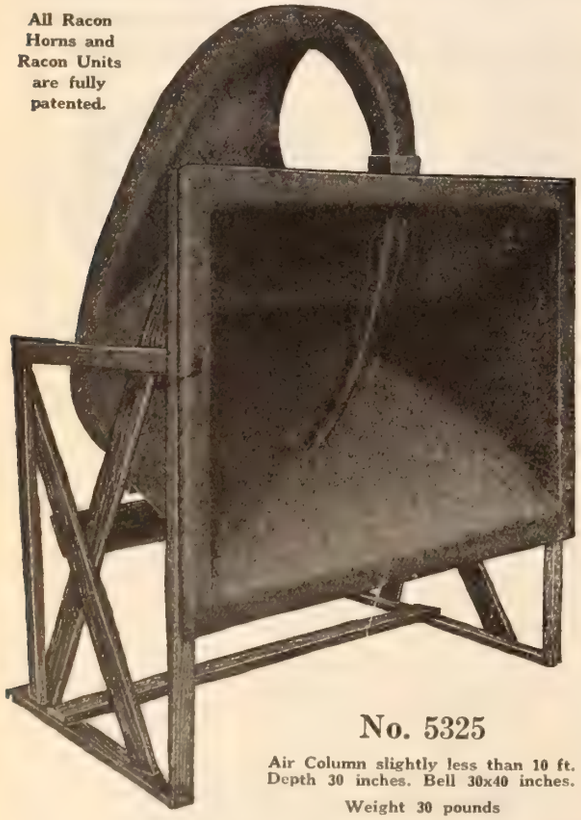
Pianist Holds Spot

For a bit of diversion THE SHOWMAN dropped in on the New York Paramount to check up on lobby entertainment. He found Hans Hanke, who boasts a repertoire of 325 compositions, on deck. Hanke occupied the spotlight in the music room, at times, at others the Elizabethan room at the beginning of the first afternoon spill from 1:30 to 4:30. At night from 7:30 to 10:30 he would hold forth.

Licensing Deal?

CONTRARY to popular opinion it should be noted that Vitaphone, Movietone and Photophone are registered trade marks for a product and not the name of a process. As a result of the patent license agreement between the manufacturers and inventors of the different processes, it would be legally possible for either the General Electric or the Western Electric to provide their licensees with anyone of the three processes for recording under their respective trade marks, Porter Evans, chief engineer of the Eastern Vitaphone studios, Wednesday told members of the International Ass'n. of Radio Engineers.

And never once did a note of jazz music emanate from the ivories. This, in itself, is quite some novelty for a picture theatre.



Good Freak Number

One of the outstanding, unique, attractions found at the house was in sole control of a mere boy whose name makes no difference. Said boy based his entire stunt on music emanating from a violin. He knew nothing of music, not even the rudiments, could not tell one note from another, nor fiddle properly. The press department said so, and, even if it sounded like stretching a point, the crowds vulnerable.

Here's how it's done. Everyone recalls the old radio sets whose wave length reception was disturbed by the proximity of a human body. The static and electricity in the human body influenced the reception of the radio set to the extent of a disturbance in the nature of a hum.

This principle has been embodied in what is known as the Theremin. The illusion, as well as the actual music, produced by the performer standing before the apparatus and drawing the notes out of the air by the waiving of his fingers proved intriguing to the crowds in the lobby. The theatre management attempted to make a check and came to the conclusion that new patrons were brought in by the presence of the Theremin.

Cue Meter Simplifies Change-Overs

By

R. H. McCulloch

Sound Engineer,
Fox West Coast Theatres

The cue meter which is in use in many theatres. This meter eliminates the long written cue sheet, which takes considerable time to arrange. Change overs are made more accurately by use of this meter.

MAKING good change-overs seems to be a great difficulty to many projectionists. I have found that the cue sheet supplied with the print is of little value after the print has been used for some time.

This applies mostly to Movietone, because after a print has played several theatres many frames are cut off the ends of certain reels while making up 2,000-foot reels and many film exchanges are requesting that Movietone subjects be run on 1,000-foot reels, so that good change-overs may be made on an indicated cue, without cutting off important dialogue.

Making change-overs has been simplified by the use of a cue meter. This can be used for making change-overs on disc and Movietone subjects. The meter has two hands and a dial, which indicates the footage of the reel numerically. A flexible shaft is attached to the shutter shaft of the projector mechanism which extends to the instrument on the front wall near each projector. The correct footage of each reel from the starting frame to the end is obtained by the use of a footage meter.

When threading the projector, the starting frame is threaded to the projector aperture and the total footage of the reel is set on the cue meter and as the film passes through the projector mechanism, the footage decreases on the dial of the cue meter. When the hand comes to the last 100 feet, the arc is struck on the proceeding projector and as the hand comes to the last 25 feet this is a stand-by cue, when the hand reaches the last ten feet this is the start motor cue for the proceeding projector and finally the dowsers are operated and the change-over is made with one and two feet of the end of the reel, which makes a perfect change-over. This new instrument eliminates the long written cue sheet, which requires considerable time to arrange.

How Footage Meter Works

Many projector mechanisms are equipped with a footage meter which can be used for the purpose of making change-overs. When making change-overs with the footage meter on the projector set the meter at zero with the starting frame. The footage meter will increase as the film passes through the projector and change-overs can be made similar as mentioned with the use of the cue meter.

The meter is also useful for re-synchronizing disc prints. When the film breaks above the top sprocket, it is necessary to stop the projector, rewind the reel and start all over again. As an example, suppose the film broke above the top sprocket and the projector kept running for several feet and you stopped the projector. You will find the footage indicated along the edge of most disc prints. The film broke leaving seven frames past 635 feet. The total footage of the reel was 920 feet and the meter showed 275 feet left to be projected after the projector was stopped. Turn the projector back by the use of the flywheel on the projector motor shaft, leaving the reproducer arm with needle on the record groove until the meter reaches 285 feet and then thread the frame which is numerated along the side of the film at 635 feet, to the projector aperture, and then run the film down so that sufficient length is adequate for rethreading the remainder of the mechanism. After threading the projector, it is possible to resume operation in perfect synchronism, without the long interruption which takes considerable time to rewind and rethread.

Must Watch Threading

Great care must be exercised in threading the projector for film reproduction—otherwise, lack of synchronism will be the result. First of all, see that the sound-track mask, at the aperture, is in position. When threading a Simplex projector for film reproduction, thread in the usual manner, with the exception that the loop between the Intermittent Sprocket and lower sprocket should be such that the film just comes in line with the edge of the mechanism. For Powers and Motiograph projector mechanisms, allow a two-finger loop between the intermittent and lower sprocket.

There should be a length of 19 1/3 frames or 14½ inches between the center of the projector aperture and the light gate aperture in the reproducing mechanism. In threading from the projector mechanism lower sprocket to the sprocket of reproducing mechanism always allow the slack of two sprocket holes.

If the reading on the synchronous motor control box meter does not stay within specified limits, check the projector mechanism immediately, and also the working parts of the driving attachment. Excessive friction at some point in the mechanism will cause the meter reading to read high on AC, or too low on DC. See that the projector working parts are lubricated at regular intervals.

One of the most important items to check on disc reproduction is the condition of the records. If the record is all right, and the needle jumps the groove, check the reproducer to see that it is tracking properly. On many occasions the reproducer has been found to be dragging on the record. Under these conditions, try a new needle, and, if trouble is persistent, block up reproducer arm by inserting small piece of rubber eraser between under side of arm at rear end and pivot base, so as to raise reproducer clear of record and allow it to swing freely by itself.

Test amplifier equipment daily before starting performance. After amplifier has been turned on, test the disc pick-up, by rubbing needle of reproducer lightly with finger. This should be clearly heard in the monitor horn. In testing the film pick-up, see that the exciter lamp filament current is at proper value. Remove the light gate. Move your finger up and down across the light beam. Every time this is done a click should be heard in the monitor horn. Test each projector in the same manner.

Correcting Hissing

WHEN sporadic hissing, crackling and frying noises are perceptible in sound reproduction, it is advisable to inspect the amplifier tubes for internal short circuits. The filaments of vacuum tubes deteriorate more rapidly than the plate and grid. As the tube filament ages it develops weak spots in one or more places, which are very apparent, because they glow more brightly than the rest of the filament, when lighted. The tube should be immediately replaced if such a condition is noticed. Many vacuum tube filaments become slack and develop sagging as they age. Such a condition will give undesirable results and besides, it is possible that the filament may drop over on the grid and cause considerable trouble. Replace the tube as soon as the filament begins to droop very noticeably.

Vacuum tubes supported in a horizontal position should be inspected quite frequently for saggy filaments. Where a meter is provided on the amplifier for the purpose of checking plate current values and when the plate currents begin to fall below the minimum values, check the amplifier tubes and if all tubes show low plate current at the same time, the fault probably does not lie with them but may be due to the rectifier tubes.

Never use a battery and buzzer to test lines for opens or shorts in amplifier or reproducer circuits, as this may upset the magnetic characteristics of the coils. Use head set to test amplifier circuits.

Before removing the rear cover of any amplifier, be sure to turn off the power, and keep it off until the cover is replaced.

If the observer's equipment does not function, and if not loud enough to enable the observer and projectionist to hear each other, or if the buzzer is weak or inoperative, make sure that the batteries are in good condition. Batteries may be changed by opening battery box by loosening screw in cover.

If you are getting distorted sound through the Movietone system, check the alignment of the photo-electric cell and see that the ring shaped conductor and window are in parallel position with the sound aperture, as it is imperative that the full beam of light is received by the photo-electric cell. When photo-electric cells are changed so that all connections are tight and keep in mind that the photo-electric cell is installed in such a position that it accepts all the vibrations set up in the projector and if the connections are not tight, they will work loose and considerable noise will be encountered. When the volume begins to drop slowly on either movietone attachment, it is an indication that the photo-electric cell needs replacement, or the potential is weak.

Always be positive that the exciting lamp is operating at the proper value and properly adjusted before changing the photo-electric cell. When the volume cuts off quickly with Movietone, first see that the exciting lamp is burning, check the milliammeter on the p. e. c. amplifier. The filaments of the vacuum tubes in the photo-electric cell amplifier are connected in series, if one tube burns out, they all go out and if no reading is registered on the milliammeter connected in the filament circuit, check for a burned out tube. If the exciting lamp ammeter and the photo-electric cell amplifier milliammeter indicates no values, check for a blown fuse in the battery charging panel.

The exciting lamp current and also the filament current for the photo-electric cell amplifier is supplied by two 6 volt wet storage batteries, which is distributed from the battery and charging panel to each projector Movietone attachment. The photo-electric cell potential and also the plate potential for the p. e. c. amplifier is supplied by two 45 volt dry "B" batteries. The one amp fuse connected in this circuit very seldom blows, unless one of the component parts in the amplifier becomes shorted.

Quick Final Test

After the photo-electric cell or other part is replaced and all meters register their proper values the quickest way to test for sound is to pass your finger up and down through the light beam with the light gate removed and the fader set on the normal operating point. While making this test with patrons in the auditorium, turn off the stage horns. Leave only the monitor horn turned on for your convenience. If no sound is heard, touch the positive terminal leading from the photoelectric cell. A very distinct click should be heard through the system. If this is heard, replace the cell as many photo-electric cells are found to be defective.

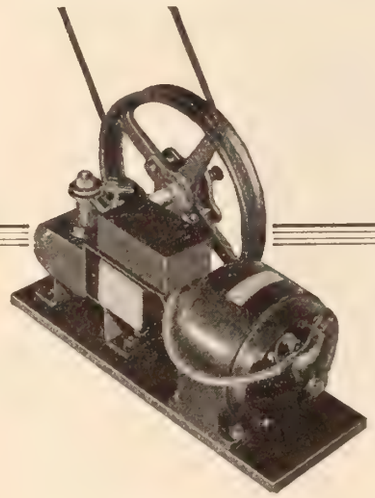
Never start up a sound projector unless you are positively sure that sound is coming through as it is very embarrassing to start a projector with motion on the screen and without sound and have to stop again. If one of the p. e. c. amplifiers is picking up machine noise, look for a tube which is not inserted properly in the socket. On many occasions I have found wires in the p. e. c. amplifier touching some component part and the vibrations set up in the projector would be carried through the entire system. It is necessary to inspect the p. e. c. amplifier quite frequently and see that no obstruction is in the path of preventing it to swing freely. Because of the high impedance in the photo-electric cell circuit, it is necessary for the positive lead from the cell to the input terminal, on the amplifier, to be as short as possible without being so tight so that machine noise will be picked up!

Radio Programs In Theatre Hit

National Broadcasting Co. is reported planning a campaign to stop radio hook-ups in theatres. Action for infringement of copyright would be undertaken, under the reported plan. The company is said to feel that diverting of radio entertainment to the theatre, hurts the home draw of the radio programs, with resultant loss in advertising value.

A number of theatres throughout the country are declared using radio programs to boost receipts. One of the chief programs diverted is the Amos 'n Andy broadcast.

Color Cameras Worth $400,000



Laying claim to the largest motion picture camera department in the world, Technicolor estimates its equipment in machines alone as worth $400,000. Thirty-five cameramen are needed to take charge of these specially built cameras.

A Technicolor camera, without equipment, is valued at $10,000. With full equipment the value is estimated at between $13,000 and $15,000. The first to be put into use as an experiment, recorded scenes in Florida in 1921.

Today practically all major producers are using Technicolor.

The inner lobby and the foyer are done in ivory and Sienna glaze. Square tapered columns lend dignity and grace to these halls. Doors of hammered gold lead to the four aisles of the auditorium from the foyer. At each end of the foyer stairways lead to the balcony. Each has a jewel post of wrought-iron surmounted by a bronze statute. The rest rooms are in the basement and are reached from the foyer.

Upon entering the auditorium, the patron imagines he has been suddenly ushered into the patio of an old Spanish hacienda. It is night and overhead the countless stars are blinking, and occasionally soft clouds drift across the deep blue sky. Dark ivory walls of antique stucco support tiled roofs along the side walls of the theatre. One has the impression of looking out over the hacienda's walls into the deep night. The walls are niched, and handsome drapes indirectly lighted decorate them. Carved masculine figures support arches above the niches.

The organ grills are made up of a Spanish sell pattern in gold, and above them are arches containing mission bells. The proscenium arch is delicately scrolled and finished in metallic tints to take the changes of color played upon it by the indirect lighting system.

The stage is deep and modernly equipped to handle a large number of change of scenery. The orchestra pit is roomy, and aside from the organ console can house a large orchestra. The Eastwood features its pipe organ as a relief from the possible monotony of sound entertainment. A hydraulic lift which turns the console toward the audience as it raises it is an added novelty.

The balcony is built over the foyer so that it projects over none of the main-floor seats. The balcony seats are at such a low level that the occupants do not have the usual "up in the attic" feeling when viewing the stage. Klein and Alford of Peoria, the architects, made provision for this.

The theatre complete was equipped by National Theatre Supply Company of Chicago and the others, representing the latest advances in this direction, by the Steel Furniture Company of Grand Rapids, Mich.

The Eastwood is one of the Wisconsin Theatres Company houses. A. P. Desormeaux, president of the company and for many years owner and manager of the Strand at Madison, is managing the Eastwood as well as directing the policy of his other houses in southern Wisconsin.

Engineers To Hold Spring Meet In May

Spring meeting of the Society of M. P. Engineers is to be held May 5 to 8, at Washington. Headquarters will be at the Wardman Park Hotel.

With 25 applications pending, the society now has a membership of 611. During the last year, 313 new members have been accepted.

The temperature of the air leaving the outlets ranges from 62 degrees to 65 degrees F. In mixing with the warmer air of the theatre, gathering up heat which has been given off by the occupants, by lights and through infiltration from out-of-doors, it reaches the breathing zone at our stipulated temperature of approximately 75 degrees F.

After passing over the audience, a portion of the air is withdrawn through mushroom openings beneath the seats or through openings arranged at other low points. This air is drawn back to the spray chamber to be re-washed and re-cooled or a portion of it may be mixed with the stream of newly washed air, as previously explained.

Since an adjusted quantity of fresh, outdoor air is at all times being drawn into the air conditioning system, a like quantity is being discharged from the theatre. In a properly balanced system the overflow occurs outward through the lobbies and exits. Thus the air within the building has a very slight outward pressure. The old and bothersome inward draughts are eliminated and the commonly used glass screen to protect the audience at the rear of the orchestra seats is no longer needed.

Downward Diffusion

This system of air circulation is known as the downward diffusion system and is pretty generally conceded by air conditioning engineers to be far superior to the former practice of admitting conditioned air at the floor line.

Automatic instruments located in the supply and return airducts are subjected to the incoming and outgoing conditions of the air and react upon systems of dampers and valves to produce the proper temperature and humidity at the breathing ozone. The automatic instruments which have been developed for this purpose are positive and extremely accurate. Once properly installed that are almost fool-proof and require virtually no attention.

Refrigeration Process

In describing the spray chamber within which the air is cooled and dehumidified we mentioned that refrigeration is necessary for reducing the temperature of the water to about 40 degrees or 45 degrees F. Most any form of refrigeration machine may be used to cool water. There are requirements, however, within a building, such as a theatre, which narrow selection of refrigeration equipment down to two types.

The refrigerating medium must, in the first place, offer no hazards to congregated people. This immediately bars the use of the familiar refrigerants—ammonia, sulphur dioxide and kindred gases that are offensive or dangerous.

The second requirement is compactness, because most theatres are limited in available space for equipment and the property upon which they are constructed is usually very valuable. Again, compactness will offer a decided saving if excavation is required.

Two Successful Systems

The two refrigeration systems which have found successful adaptation in the theatre have been the reciprocating machines using carbon dioxide as a refrigerant and the more recent developed Carrier Centrifugal Refrigeration, using as a refrigerant, Carrene one of a group of stable liquid chemicals which have been found suitable for centrifugal compression.

Pressed Plush Is Held Drapes' Aid

San Francisco—Pressed plush is the new adoption for stage curtains in Coast theatres to get away from asserted "deadness" of velour, states Mrs. Theodore Newman of the Theatre and Drapery studio, which made decorations for the Uptown here. A number of Hollywood houses have adopted this type curtain, states Mrs. Newman, who asserts that modern decoration not only is atmospheric but has a psychological effect upon audiences. The title curtain of the Uptown is of heavy gray satin.

Bootleg Systems Banned In France

Paris—Bootleg equipment or unqualified operators are to be denied sound films by members of the French Distributors Ass'n under terms of an agreement made with sound equipment manufacturers, distributors and the exhibitor systems.

A commission has been formed to work out the conditions of this agreement and carry out negotiations with the exhibitors' association and the sound-equipment manufacturers.

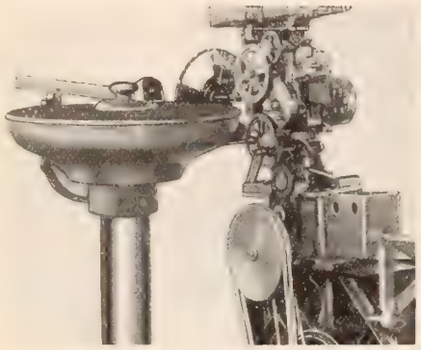
bilities of his patrons like pebbles into the sea. Even a name like Jolson has no particular meaning or drawing power here. The Duncan Sisters, Chevalier and Bordoni mean even less; while least of all are such names as Tibbett, Dennis King and Jose Mojica. Pictures made from the best selling of the "problem" novels, and bearing their names, likewise mean little. However, if it were from a Jack London or a Zane Grey story—well, now, that's different. Color, too, he said, creates but little enthusiasm.

How, then, can they be sold these strange names and pictures? Schultz was asked.

"By being your own critic," he replied. "There is no sense in spending money and effort in ballyhooing a name or a picture that means nothing to them. All you can do is give them your own estimate of the entertainment value of such a feature. Don't hold out on them. If you think it doubtful that they will enjoy the picture, tell them so without qualifications. If you do, you win their confidence. Most of them will pay to see it in spite of an adverse report, anyhow, and expecting little, the chances are they will enjoy it. At least, they will not be disappointed. But ballyhoo a new name or a famous title that means nothing to them and it will cost you their confidence, which means their patronage."

Meeting the Overhead Problem



Schultz described the overhead on his theatre as moderate. He owns the theatre building. His wife is the cashier. He employs two operators, an usher and a janitor. Advertising costs are restricted to the printing and distribution of the monthly programs. Electricity costs are moderate, but he does not stint in its use. Taxes are low. Upkeep, an important if not a major item in his policy of management, is not exorbitant.

His only competition in the winter is public school basketball games. This sport is a state institution in Indiana, and occupies a place in the public mind similar to that of religion. Basketball nights make deep inroads into box office receipts. In summer, there is an occasional circus, a carnival, a band concert whose lure must be combated. But when the roads leading in from the hinterlands are free of snow they come and they pay. And when the resorters from Chicago flock to the nearby lake, it is these urban vacationists who are first in line at the box office, crowding out the natives until the second show.

Talkies Invade Home

Auditoriums and projection rooms in private homes are going talkie as rapidly as the regular commercial theatres. Among the more pretentious private auditoriums recently to be equipped for sound pictures is that of Frank Steinhart, Jr., president of the Havana Electric Railway, in Havana, Cuba. A Mellaphone sound-on-film equipment has been installed in the completely equipped auditorium which is the gathering place of the elite of Cuba at the frequent social affairs given by Mr. Steinhart.

for the responsibility if the curtains, travelers, lighting on the stage, and the other many details all back of the footlights, whether the stage is in use or not.

The janitor should account for the condition of his boilers, and it should require little emphasis to make plain the importance of this part of your theatre. Water at the proper level, grate in good condition (unless you have oil), oil burning equipment checked up by a reliable service company or by the manufacturer of the burner.

The part the assistant manager should play, if your theatre boasts such an individual, is just what his title implies. He should be taught to cover all of these manager's check-ups on his own hook so as to qualify him when he is appointed manager in some other house. His reports should be in the nature of a confidential note to the manager, not to construe as spying as this will break down the entire morale of your staff, but more from the standpoint that his direct superior ought to know if anything is being neglected. If he can help correct something himself, fine for him, but by all means he should report what is going on.

Not a Terrific Task

All of the foregoing may sound like an awful lot of extra work for a manager to be worrying about; but if worked out in the proper way, it merely becomes part of your theatre managing routine.

You are all "gassing" that you could handle supervising jobs on your circuit, yet so many of you cannot supervise your own small staffs and the theatre you are running. It's a true sign of executive ability to be able to keep a close check on the maintenance of your theatre and its contents. Once it is worked out to your own satisfaction you will be surprised to find that it leaves your mind open for the other important task called for in the execution of your job.

Syncrodisk Put To Stern Test

The new Weber Syncrodisk sound-on-film head recently installed in a Rochester theatre rendered its initial public service before 400 sound engineers invited to a special demonstration. Included in the audience were projectionists and exhibitors.

A special demonstration film was used through the device, the purpose of which, as Dr. Carl Weber explained in his introductory address, was to show clear, unwavering reproduction of tone from the lowest to the highest frequencies. This, according to engineers, is the most severe test a device of this kind can be given on first demonstration.

In the six months' period ending March 15, more than 1,300 Syncrodisk turntables have been sold, the company reports.

Akron, O. E. J. Vallen, head of the Vallen Electrical Company of Akron, Ohio, manufacturer of curtain control equipment, has the distinction among industrial heads in the motion picture business, of being one of the very few men who have designed and supervised the building of their own plant and offices.

The administration office, as part of the plant, follows the rustic cabin style of architecture.

Vallen's private office probably gives the best example of the cabin trend. To one side is a massive fire-place, not unlike any fire-place one would expect to find in a hunting lodge, with its stone front-piece extending to the ceiling. To give the effect of the hunting lodge fire-place, without question, a powder horn, hunting rifle and revolver are fire-place accessories. The office ceiling is supported by rough-hewn timber and for lighting there is the old-fashiond hanging lamp that still is seen in the mountain cabin.

This same effect is followed throughout the executive offices and even into the plant itself.

Cudmore Latest to Join E. E. Fulton Co.

H. H. Cudmore has become actively associated with the E. E. Fulton Co. and will have general supervision of the Electrical Departments to be established by the company in all its branches, it was announced this week by C. H. Fulton, president of E. E. Fulton Co.

Cudmore is already well known in the motion picture industry, as for many years he was president and general manager of one of the largest distributing organizations of complete theatre equipment. He also has been prominently identified with the Mazda lamp business of the G. E. Company, which he represented in the sales department of Mazda lamps for projection, as well as for General Electric Motor Generator sets and other G. E. electrical equipment.

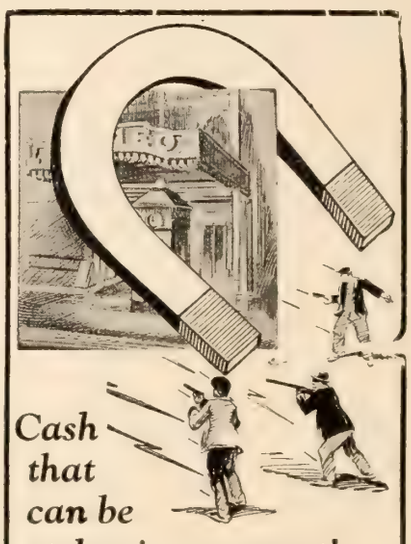
Maya Architecture For Coast Theatre

Ancient Maya architecture of Yucatan is the latest novelty in theatre design introduced at the Mayan, Los Angeles. Morgan, Walls and Clements are designers of the structure, of which Donald E. Marquis recently wrote in "Art and Archaeology:"

"The Mayan style of architecture was chosen for the decorative scheme of the design of Los Angeles' most modern theatre building, because of its great ornamental value. Though rugged and even grotesque at times, the style is especially adaptable from the standpoint of construction, logically fulfills climatic requirements, and offers a most welcome relief from the stereotyped designs of the past.

Equipment Firm Plans New Offices

Preliminary to opening new branches in several cities throughout the country, the E. E. Fulton Co. will locate sales and service representatives in Cleveland; Kansas City, Mo.; Detroit; Dallas, and Minneapolis.



The plan has been in operation experimentally for two years, and has proved successful. Roy Willett has been located in Omaha for the past two years as special sales and service representative, the arrangement permitting the company to offer customers in the Omaha territory sales and service of Fulco Projectors, G. E. Generator Sets as well as the complete theatre equipment line carried by Fulton.

When conditions warrant the company will establish branch offices in each of the key cities mentioned.

Standard For Wide Film

An early agreement on the standard width of wide film is forecast by the sub-committee of the S. M. P. E. standards committee, which is seeking a standard width satisfactory to all interests. M. C. Batsel, chief engineer of RCA Photophone, is chairman of the sub-committee. The decision will be made purely on engineering principles, the committee reports.

It is probable the subject will be discussed when the organization meets in Washington next month.

Cut Noise and Improve Sound

By John F. Rider

NOISE is one of the bugaboos of sound projection and next to non-synchronization is one of the most disturbing influences. Yet, because of its absolute simplicity one seldom interprets noise as electrical current flow in an installation and, vice versa, electrical current as noise.

Sound as made audible by a single loud speaker or a series of loud speakers is electrical current at work to set a diaphragm into motion. The electrical equivalent of that sound is a varying electrical current of definite wave shape in the amplifier. Since no one particular variation in current is required in order to produce a sound, any variation will produce a sound of one sort or other. An interruption of an electric circuit is a variation of electric current. It is maximum at one instant and zero at the next. The sound produced is a click. If the interruption is spasmodic, the click develops into a crackling sound.

An interruption of electric current is not necessarily limited to a circuit wherein is located a meter which indicates the flow of current. Current is flowing in a circuit metered with a voltmeter, since this meter indicates the electric pressure present in that part of the circuit and causing the flow of current. Any variation in the voltage will cause a variation in current, hence sound of some sort if the speaker is connected.

The current flow in a circuit is controlled by two factors, the voltage and the resistance. If the former is constant and the latter is varied, a change in current ensues, which once again means some sort of sound from the speaker. Under the circumstances it appears mighty difficult to effect some change upon the equipment without creating some sound. That is the exact truth, and is true irrespective of the perfection of the apparatus or the skill of the operator.

There is, however, another consideration, the rate at which the current changes. One can operate a fader without disturbing sounds, although the voltage being fed into the grid-filament circuit of the amplifying tubes is varied each time the control is manipulated. Yet if that same fader were adjusted over a certain arc of motion 25 times a second, a note of that pitch would be audible as modulating whatever sounds were being passed through the system. The normal operation of the fader is silent because of a gradual change in the voltage and because the circuit is at no time interrupted. Raise the contact arm from the resistance element as slowly as you can and a click will result when the circuit is broken because of a great change in current.

The possible source of noise in a sound installation are many. Each and every part of a system subjected to voltage or current is a possible source of noise. With this in mind, one can very readily comprehend that perfect operation of each such device is imperative.

Moisture and dust are great enemies of silent operation. Oxidization and corrosion are likewise great enemies of silent operation. Oxidized sliding contacts should be cleaned because they interfere with good electrical contact and as such cause current variations in the circuit—and noise.

Overloaded units, that is, current flow in excess of the rated values, is the surest way of permanently damaging a coil of wire or a resistance element. The usual result is noise if not burn-out. Such defects are not visible upon the surface. A unit may appear normal in every respect, yet is noisy in operation. Replacement is the only sure-fire test. These are simple items, but one of the greatest human failings is to overlook the simple things.

The units employed in a sound system are interlocked in many cases. Not necessarily in a mechanical manner, but electrically. Failure of one part does not mean that the effects are limited to that one point. Failure of one may cause an overload upon another, which will be manifest as noise. It then becomes a matter of attempting to locate the parts which are subject to overload by virtue of the failure of the first.

Units known to be noisy should not remain in the system. The noise will increase with use, with inevitable failure of the system. If that defective unit is located at a strategic point, immediate replacement is imperative because the outcome may be expensive.

Fuses

The fuse, in comparison with the other units in an installation, is an insignificant item, yet its position in a circuit is usually such that failure means cessation of operation. As a matter of fact, many complete systems are subject to detailed examination because the operator fails to check the fuses.

This device is simple in character—a small piece of metal designed to melt and interrupt the circuit when the current flow or the heat developed in the metal exceeds a certain temperature. Fuses are of three types:

1. In the form of a narrow flat sheet in a cartridge designed to fit into two clips.
2. A ribbon arranged in a plug to be screwed into a receptacle.
3. A very thin ribbon inside of a bulb which is screwed into a socket.

The design, or rather the capacity of the fuse, is governed by its utility and each fuse bears a definite current rating in amperes or a fraction of an ampere. This current rating is based upon the safe current flow [illegible] allowed in the system. Excessive current [illegible]

Replacement is oftimes effected by the [illegible] of a fuse or bulbs [illegible] such practice is beyond a doubt unwise. Thirty ampere fuses where five ampere fuses are required are sure to prove very expensive, if not dangerous. Current flow excessive with respect to the insulation in the circuit, yet not enough to blow the [illegible] may start a fire. This is particularly true in the case of motors which, because of some condition failed to revolve with the power "on."

Many circuits are "fused" in both legs, but this does not mean that both fuses will "go." On the other hand, neither does it mean that a good fuse in one side of the line means a good fuse in the other.

Investigation of W. E. equipment shows them to be "fused" more frequently than other systems. Each plate voltage and filament voltage lead in the amplifier systems is interrupted with a fuse. Investigation of the correct fuse should be the first step when circuit interruption is noted.

With respect to the "blowing" of a fuse, audible or visible indication at the moment of burn-out is not certain. Further interruption of low current tube circuits which are "fused" is not always accompanied by a basic failure. Many such fuses blow without an apparent cause and replacement of the fuse enables operation without further interruption.

Repeated failure of a fuse means an overload in that circuit without a perceptible indication. A short circuit in a resistance or a choke in an eliminator may cause excessive current flow through the fused circuit without visible indication upon the resistance or the choke. Prolonged operation under overload will show the short because of overheating. Such method of maintenance, however, is faulty and metered inspection should be carried out.

Correction of the difficulty by the insertion of a high capacity fuse is useless, since the short circuit will invariably impair operation. Mention was made in the item devoted to "Noise" that failure of one part may cause failure of another. Failure of one part will in many cases cause the burn-out of a fuse, hence routine checking of fuses should be a part of the maintenance.

It is difficult to estimate the number of times that much effort was wasted in the quest to locate an open circuit in a system with total disregard of the fuse in the circuit. One of the first items of importance to a projectionist introduced to a new amplifying unit is to acquaint himself with the location of the fuses in the circuit.

In 7,000 Theatres

NATIONAL Screen Service now is distributing sound and silent trailers to approximately 7,000 theatres of the United States and Great Britain, it is claimed. These include trailers advertising coming attractions, policy announcements and animated openings. The company recently added trailers with disc accompaniments to its service. Previously, the trailers were recorded on film only.

Favors Disc Over Film Reproduction

frequency, and indicates that reverberation at the lower frequencies is much more objectionable than at the higher frequencies. From this it is evident that a smaller amount of energy is required to produce a given volume of sound in the theatre in the first two octaves than in the last two. It, therefore, turns out that a modification in the frequency characteristic which is advantageous from a recording standpoint is also advantageous from the standpoint of theatre reproduction."

Small and large theatres come to Johns-Manville for scientific correction . . . of poor acoustics

Above—Princess Theatre, Columbus, Miss., the ceiling panels of this theatre were treated with J-M Nashkote "AX" ¾ in Right—Fox Theatre, Detroit, Mich., Approximately 20,000 sq. ft. of J-M Nashkote "A" acoustical material was used in the treatment of this theatre. Architect: C. Howard Crane.

Let a J-M Acoustical Engineer advise YOU

IF blurred and confused reproduction of your sound films is being reflected in your box office receipts, you should call in a J-M Acoustical Engineer. Let him tell you how this condition can be corrected with certainty and how little it will cost you.

The necessary acoustics for sound films in your present theatre are easy to obtain providing experts are employed. Our engineers are skilled in every branch of this science. As pioneers, we have developed the materials essential to the work of sound control. These materials range in price to meet the needs of every theatre and every decorative effect.

Do not experiment with short cuts which bring only useless expense. Call in a J-M Acoustical Engineer. It will put you under no obligation and from this man you will get the facts about conditions in your theatre, and how they may be economically corrected.

In buying acoustical materials . . consider the FIRE LAWS

It is not necessary to install inflammable materials in your theatre to correct its acoustics. J-M Acoustical Materials have been passed on by the strictest of building boards. By installing J-M Acoustical Treatment you can prevent unnecessary expense in the future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

CHARLES E. LEWIS
Chairman and Editor

A National Association of Showmen Meeting in MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

What a Difference!

THIS morning's mail brought, among other things, two unusually interesting letters and since they present a "pet" angle, we are lifting them for use as this week's editorial chat.

One showman writes and says: "Dear Chick: As regards my being happy here, I am sorry to say that it is far from that. The home office constantly piles up details and more details until I am almost ready to believe that they stay awake nights figuring out new ways to annoy the house managers and keep him from plugging his theatre. . . . We also have a new supervisor in this district and if he has ever had any experience in running a theatre himself, then I'm a hippo. . . . The best thing he knows how to do is to tell me how wrong I am in everything I try to accomplish. . . ."

My sincerest sympathies go to a man in a situation like the one described above. I can honestly say that this manager is NOT a kicker. On the contrary, he is one of the most "sunny" chaps I ever had the pleasure of meeting and before he took his present position he was high in hope and spirit at the prospects for the future.

But let's get on to the second letter. You will want to know more about it, I'm sure. "A." says: "Between you and me, I want to tell you that 'P.....' is the greatest outfit in the show business. . . . My district manager comes to my theatre once a week and I'm always glad to see him. He KNOWS show business, and talks my language. We discuss my problems as men ought to do; never does he convey the impression that he is my superior. He sees things that I don't see and tells me about them in a manner that makes his suggestions welcome. . . . That's the kind of spirit that makes life worth while. . . ."

What a Difference!

The above, gentlemen, are facts. And in the face of such facts, how can the inefficient superiors of real showmen continue their stupid tactics? Are they so blind to their own faults that they fail to realize what jackasses they are making of themselves? It certainly would seem so.

It happens to be a cloudy morning, but as far as I am concerned the sun is shining brightly and I can tell the world that a letter like "A's" is enough to make the day perfect for me. I can think of no better news than the fact that there are honest-to-goodness executives in the show business; men of the type that "A" expresses himself about and we only hope there are plenty more like him.

No getting away from the fact that a division, headed by a common-sense supervisor, will get further in the long run than supervisors who are so busy playing "boss" that they entirely lose sight of the importance of harmony within their divisions.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

IMPORTANCE OF THEATRE PROGRAMS!

Our arguments in favor of the use of house programs brought all kinds of reactions and results in much discussion on this subject.

Many members agreed on our stand, while others disagreed. We took all of the angles into consideration and the final analysis was:

USE HOUSE PROGRAMS, by all means.

We claim that the value of a well laid out program compares in importance with trailers or any other house advertising medium ever employed. And, besides, it offers several advantages not otherwise gained through other mediums. Especially the "Managers' Chat Column," the various announcements about your theatre's service angles, as teaser copy for a coming attraction and many other equally good ideas.

Then we come to what is, perhaps, the most important angle of all. The Mailing List which has proven its importance and effectiveness the world over. Your program is the basis for the starting of such a list and the larger it grows the more people are being kept acquainted with what your theatre is doing and showing.

We have reproduced hundreds of house programs on these pages for the purpose of letting our members and readers see the type of stuff other managers are turning out. If yours has not been shown yet, put us on your mailing list and we will be glad to reproduce your program as well as set forth the highlights, as we see them, in connection with such programs.

Irving Feinman Is Now at Ozone Park And Still Producing

There is perhaps no peppier an assistant manager on the Fox Metropolitan Theatre chain than Irving Feinman, and that being our contention we are going to stick to it, for Irving has shown us how he worked at the Leader Theatre in Brooklyn, and as he has just been transferred to another position at the Ozone Park Theatre, in Queens, we are sure that he is going to bear out, more than ever, the statement we have made concerning him and his ability.

When Irving was at the Leader you can bet your bottom dollar everything went along shipshape and just to show you what we mean, we are reproducing a picture of the Leader and as you will notice he has the front of the theatre selling everything inside the house, including the sound, as the banner hung under the marquee shows, and if you'll look closely you will notice that over the entrance doors he uses the selling phrase "From Broadway To You," as a stock catchline, and directly underneath has strung a banner announcing the picture. We would also like to call your attention to the fine copy he features on the marquee and which carries nearly all the information necessary about the picture.

Irving's activities have always been a source of great interest to us and it was with pleasure that we learned he was going to the Ozone Park Theatre to work under the tutelage of Monty MacLevey, whose showman exploits have often been seen on these pages, and we feel sure that with the knowledge of showmanship Irving acquired while working with Manager Champlin at the Leader, he will more than make a name for himself, and with Monty teaching him the little niceties of the business as only he can impart it won't be long before we start recording Irving's activities at his own house.

We wish Irving lots of luck and we know that he is going to keep up the active interest he has shown in his work and in the ROUND TABLE CLUB.

From Indications Ralph E. Phillips Sells His Shows

Ralph E. Phillips tied in with a jeweler on a stunt that netted lots of publicity for Billie Dove in "The Other Tomorrow" playing at the State Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

The jeweler offered a wrist watch and a number of tickets to the ones making the most words out of his name. This stunt was publicized by printed cards being distributed at both the theatre and at the store well in advance of play dates.

The upper half of the card contained copy, "Billie Dove in THE OTHER TOMORROW at the State Mon-Tues-Wed wears a Helbros Wrist Watch on sale in Chattanooga by Shyer's Credit Jewelers."

The lower half of card read, "Win a Helbros Wrist Watch Free! Shyer's Credit Jewelers will give a Helbros wrist watch to the person who can make the most words using only the letters in the word HELBROS (letters must not be used more than once in a word). The next ten largest lists will receive one ticket each to see Billie Dove in THE OTHER TOMORROW at the State. Use reverse side of this card, and turn in to the State Theatre."

Keep up your fine work, Ralph, we have our eye on you and we are certain that your assignment as house manager will lead to bigger and better things, as you demonstrate your ability and capacity for showmanlike activities. Your different stunts will always find a welcome on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages so the entire Industry will know what you are doing.

D. C. Harrison, By Joining Club, Runs Up Ga. Enrollment

Let's extend the glad hand of goodfellowship to another of Monty Salmon's men to enroll in the ROUND TABLE CLUB; D. C. Harrison, who is the assistant manager of the Rialto Theatre in Macon, Ga., which house is run under the City Management of our fellow CLUB member, Monty.

Working with a man like Monty Salmon, we feel sure that Harrison will be able to acquire an excellent knowledge of showmanship and before long we will record a goodly number of his activities on these pages, for after "breaking in" we don't doubt but that Harrison is going to prove a very active member.

As "D. C." is probably aware, there is a hustling bunch of showmen to be found among the ROUND TABLE members in the South so we know he sees the necessity for being a live-wire to keep up with the rest of the bunch down Georgia way, but we've got an idea that he'll fit into the picture perfectly. Let's hear from you Harrison, and we hope that your next letter will bring us news of your promotion to house manager, but if not you can bank on the statement that all you have to do is put over some stunts in a real showmanlike manner and before you know it promotion will be coming your way.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

John Najdeck and His Rise to Mgr. Reads Like Story

"Risen From the Ranks," if we recall arightly, was the title of one of the enjoyable Horatio Alger stories, which by virtue of their simplicity used to bring, and in fact still bring, thrills to the reader, be he young or old. Strange to relate, though Alger's stories would read like fairy tales, the reader, at the conclusion of the book, was sold on the idea that perseverance would win out, because according to Alger, he had to win by virtue alone.

You are no doubt wondering by now just why we should bring Horatio Alger into this story, so in order to clear up any bewilderment we are going to tell you about a real life counterpart of one of the noted Alger's tales, whose name is John Najdek.

When Paul Binstock, newly appointed District Supervisor in Long Island for Fox Metropolitan, under Ben Leo, was managing the Broadway Theatre in Astoria, L. I., N. Y., Najdek was hired as an usher. Time went by and the first thing we know he had been promoted to doorman by Binstock, who saw possibilities in him. From doorman, it was only a short step to assistant manager, working with the man he had been working under, and receiving, under Binstock's exacting tutelage, a knowledge of the inner workings of showmanship.

Najdek was an apt pupil and learned thoroughly the lessons taught him, trying always to learn more and displaying his newly acquired sense of showmanship whenever called upon. Meanwhile the men higher up had been watching Binstock, as he had been watching Najdek, and promotion came his way. Today, to make this story come to its happy ending, Binstock is a District Supervisor and Najdek is now manager of the theatre, where ten short months ago, he started as an usher, proving that Horatio Alger knew what he was talking about.

At this stage of the story, we want to comment on another young man who too, seems to be getting ahead in the show business. We refer to Sidney Auerbach, former doorman of the theatre and now promoted by Binstock to assistant manager. We shall keep our eye on this young man and see whether history, as it is depicted in the Broadway Theatre and Najdek's rise, will repeat itself.

We offer our best wishes for the continued success of these two young men.

"DIRTY BULBS"

Talking about keeping your theatre in tip-top shape brings to mind the thought that you ought to devote a morning or afternoon to cleaning all the electric bulbs on the outside of the theatre.

Maximum brilliancy can never be attained from your signs if the bulbs are coated with a winter's dirt and soot. And while discussing this subject, may be inquire when you last walked out of the theatre, on an evening, to the opposite side of the street to look over the front of your house?

We suggest you develop the habit. In fact, it's worth doing several times a week, just to get the patron's slant on what the front of the house looks like. Is it inviting? Are there a majority of lamps not burning? Perhaps the letters of your theatre's name sign is sadly in need of a coat of white paint. Maybe the attraction letters could stand a good cleaning (despite your weekly inspection).

These represent but a few of the angles that every wide-awake showman should make it a point to watch. Whatever else you may do, DON'T wait for one of your bosses to tell you that your theatre looks like a "dump". Such news generally spoils your appetite for dinner and jars the nerves.

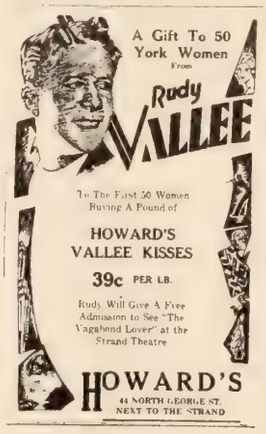
BUT-BUT-BUT!!

Introducing a now famous alibi of all times, the well known and frequently used "BUT" . . . just three letters in it . . . originally intended as a conjunction, a figure of speech, an aid to good English . . . but adopted by the "can't make the graders" as an alibi . . . Oh, how that simple little word has helped so many lazy men . . . you're bound to hear it . . . no matter where you go . . . for no matter where you go there are lazy men . . . It's so simple to say . . . "We would have had a record breaking week, BUT . . . how naturally it comes to some persons' lips . . . and how it harmonizes with their whole being . . . Their lives have been BUTS ever since the time they put out to shift for themselves . . . Wherever they went they proffered excuses when they couldn't make the grade . . . "Place the blame on somebody else," they shouted, "we could have done it, BUT . . . Then when the man with a WILL comes along they wonder what on earth they ever did that he should inform them their services were terminated . . . "Oh, the injustice of it all," they moan, "after the way we slaved and worked for that company, too" . . . "Well, you can bet that on our next job we won't slave" . . . And that's the reason why they always remain subjects of BUT . . . THEY NEVER LEARN! . . . The poor fellows are so taken up with their sense of feelings injured that they won't take time to analyze themselves and find out where the trouble lies . . . An automobile must change its oil every five hundred miles or it will suddenly develop knocks in the engine . . . It is the same way with a man . . . Unless he changes his mental oil every so often HIS engine will start to develop knocks . . . There is no need for alibis in this business . . . If a man goes about his work in the right manner and decides to use WILL instead of the destructive, demoralizing BUT . . . he won't have to find excuses when things do not seem to click . . . With WILL behind him he goes to the bottom of his problem to find out where the trouble lies . . . Suppose a ship crossing the ocean is caught in a terrible storm and the engines refuse to function . . . somebody would be in a terrible fix if the mechanics and engineers all got together and declared that the engines would function BUT . . . Those men never need BUTS . . . They say that the engines WILL propel the ship by motive power . . . and they proceed to see that the statement is carried out . . . So it is with lots of men . . . Though they know they are capable of using WILL . . . They don't care to use it . . . It's too easy to alibi . . . "why be bothered overcoming obstacles" . . . ."let somebody else do it" . . . And so that cry goes on and on . . . gaining strength with each succeeding failure . . . Until finally . . . what started out originally as a guy with ambition and WILL . . . ends up a "has been BUT" . . . Don't let BUT get a grasp on you . . . Let WILL step into the place whenever things look tough . . . and you'll find that things were only as black as they were painted . . . Every dark cloud has a silver lining . . . It's only a matter of turning it inside out . . . So it is with you . . . Whenever you feel that he did this and you could have done it too, BUT . . . Don't alibi . . . Turn Yourself Inside Out . . . It's a simple process . . . all it requires is the WILL to do . . . and after you've done it a couple of times . . . you'll say . . . like so many others are saying . . . "Whaddya mean, the sun never shines."

A. H. Vincent Had Them Sign a "Dope" Book in the Lobby

A. H. Vincent used an advance lobby stunt to get publicity for "The Bishop Murder Case" playing at the Sterling Theatre, Greeley, Colo.

A table was placed in the lobby with note book and card of special notice reading, "You have read THE CANARY MURDER CASE and THE GREENE MURDER CASE and other Van Dine novels, but do you know anything of the BISHOP MURDER CASE? Sign your name and address on the register and information will be sent you later from the Sterling Theatre on this subject."



While Vincent obtained a lot of names on the register seeking information about the picture, the lobby stunt itself caused a lot of comment and helped to put over the idea that this was the best of all the Van Dine stories.

The register also provided a few more names for the theatre's regular mailing list, and considering the number of plugs we have made in connection with theatre mailing lists, we must compliment Mr. Vincent for his fine showmanlike methods as he used them in conjunction with this particular attraction. It will be our pleasure to pass along any more of this new member's activities, so we hope he becomes a regular active correspondent. How about it, "A. H."? You can answer this better than any of us here at CLUB headquarters. Speak for yourself.

Shewell is Still Thinking Up Gags To Sell Pictures

A couple of more samples of the way George Shewell, exploitation manager for the York Theatres in York, Pa., engineers window tie-ups may be seen below in the cut we are reproducing.

On "The Love Parade," Shewell tied up with a nationally known radio corporation and used the windows of the local distributors of the product to exploit the picture. Besides grouping stills in the window Shewell made up a novel cutout and placed it in the center where it was bound to create talk among the theatre-goers.

The other cut shows how he used a window of a local confectioner to exploit Rudy Vallee's picture and also featured a candy kiss called "Vallee Kisses." This window attracted a lot of attention from nearly every passerby. Besides the tie-up in the window Shewell arranged with the dealer to give away a free ticket to the first 50 women purchasing a pound of "Vallee Kisses." In return for this the dealer ran a notice of the picture and the free offer in his regular newspaper ad. In this way the theatre came in for a bit of publicity on the regular advertising pages at no cost to the house, except fifty passes.

He also arranged with the local drug and department store where they took advantage of Valentine's Day and worked in the star of "The Love Parade" besides getting in some plugs for the theme songs of the picture. These two stores are located in a very busy section of the city and the value of tie-ups of this sort can easily be seen.

In addition to these high pressure activities, Shewell promoted a single truck co-operative ad with the local radio dealers and ran a big plug on the picture in the center of the page.

The cost of securing this valuable publicity was nominal, with the theatre, as you know, paying for what is probably the regular space, but coming in for a bigger play by virtue of the full page ad.

It is too bad that we are so cramped for space, as we would like to show you some more of Shewell's displays, but since he is always injecting new angles into his tie-ups we feel sure that the future holds a good many surprises for the Club members from him. Right George?

His Newspaper Ads Played A Large Part In Campaign

Things have been going great out on the Pacific-Northwest around Walla-Walla, Washington, where the residents of that city and the towns adjoining have been celebrating "Senior Mercy Month" in honor of the Twenty Fifth Anniversary of Frederick Mercy Sr's quarter century in show business.

The newspapers co-operated wonderfully and gave the campaign much publicity. Frank Hill, who manages the Liberty Theatre in Walla Walla, handled the advertising for the Anniversary Month and certainly turned in a fine job. If space would permit we would like to show you a batch of Frank's ads that would sell in any man's country, but we can only tell you how he handled one of his layouts.

Injecting novelty in his ads being characteristic of his work, Frank put the congratulatory telegrams, received by him, from the various movie stars and picture companies, to good use. He arranged a fine set-up and inserted them in the regular theatre ad, thereby enhancing the value of the ad and getting in a plug for the occasion. When the readers of the newspaper came across the page on which was the theatre ad it was a dead certainty that they would stop and read it as, by virtue of the layout, it was unavoidable.

Frank evidently figured on this since he decided to plug a number of his coming attractions as well and made them up in the form of announcement boxes, leaving plenty of white space in order that the titles would stand out more strongly.

It is always a pleasure to look at Frank's ads and we hope, in the near future to run a layout of his latest ones. We want to thank him for keeping us posted on the doings of himself and the Mercy Circuit and since there is a good many of the circuit's managers on the Club rolls, we feel that this lively outfit of hustling showmen will be well represented on our pages. We add our congratulations to Frederick Mercy Sr., and wish him continued success, and if we could only get out to Walla Walla, nothing would please us more than to congratulate him in person.

Valentine's Day As Observed By WitteWowedTown

Because "Second Choice" playing at the Empress Theatre, Decatur, Ill., on Valentine's Day offered Paul Witte the opportunity of using Valentine heralds, special sets of red and yellow cards were made up, the red cards being given to the boys and the yellow cards to the girls.

The left side of the card was devoted to a cut of a heart showing a boy and girl. Also a number. The other half of card carried copy, "Valentine Date Night—Empress Theatre, Fri., Feb. 14th—Dolores Costello in SECOND CHOICE. Some girl (boy) has a Valentine date card that corresponds with the serial number on this card. Find her and bring her to this Big Valentine Show as guests of the Empress Theatre—Free."

The cards stimulated a lot of interest among the boys and girls. And although there weren't many finding their partners, there was, however, a sufficient number of pairs to make it a worthwhile stunt. And incidentally, all the boys and girls naturally told their folks about the picture too which helped to increase the box office receipts.

Those of you who follow the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages week by week, will recall that Ed Hiehle was the first one to pass this stunt along to us, and we are glad to note that other managers are using it throughout the country. Incidentally, we might add at the same time that it is not necessary to wait for Valentine's Day to work a gag of this sort, as any picture that lends itself to this sort of exploitation will fill the bill just as well. Good work, Paul, and we want you to know that you handled it in a real showmanlike manner, which bears out our previous statement that you are capable of accomplishing things that you set your mind to do.

Let's hear some more of how things are going down in Decatur, and remember us to our many friends and boosters out your way.

—THANK YOU.

W. E. Stewart of North Carolina Is New Club Member

We want to say hello, at this time, to W. E. Stewart, manager and owner of the Pastime Theatre in Concord, N. C., for "W. E." is one of the latest showmen to enroll in the ROUND TABLE CLUB.

The Pastime is wired for sound and though Stewart hasn't a big city population to draw from, we know that he will more than sell his shows by putting over in the best way possible the finest kind of exploitation that his limited circumstances will allow, and in that manner boost his box office, for in his case, it's a question of having to bring them back again with every new change of show. Stewart also owns a vaudeville house in the town, which though it is now playing silent pictures with the vaudeville will eventually, as he tells us, go into sound.

So you can see Stewart will have to more than be up on his toes, thus we should be hearing some interesting things from him concerning the way he brings his patrons back again so we don't doubt but that some original ideas will be seeing the light of day and pepping up the town. At any rate we want to hear from Stewart again because we're mighty interested in finding out the manner he exploits his shows.

We look forward with pleasure to receiving a nice long letter from you "W. E." giving us some more "dope" on your showmanship, and when you send it in let's have a photo of yourself.

Damon Sold Town On Attraction By Using Good Angle

When A. J. Damon of the Lincoln-Dixie Theatre, Chicago Heights, Illinois, played "Disraeli" he realized that in order to have a successful campaign he must appeal to the intellectual classes and schools to mighty good results.

An aggressive campaign followed, the highlight of which was a tie-up with the superintendent of the city schools for allowing extra hours of credit for all members of history and dramatic classes who witnessed the showings of "Disraeli." Announcements were made in classes and assembly regarding the excellence of the attraction from the historical standpoint as well as for its dramatic qualities.

Needless to say, it was a novelty for a piece of entertainment to receive the support of such important figures in a community as the instructors and officials of schools, so the response was great. And as Damon says, the hook-up had an institutional value too, in that the efforts of the modern movie-producers were being looked upon with approval, especially when they defied convention enough to produce such an excellent picture.

To play up the importance of a special treatment in the exploitation and advertising of a picture like "Disraeli" would be too much like repetition so we hate to go into that angle again, but we certainly want to hand Mr. Damon credit for the fine way which he went about this school tie-up, and, of course, we can only hold it up as an example to our other members and readers because of its important and fine showman slant.

Let's hear some more from you, "A. J.," won't you? And tell us what else you are doing to pep up business on the different attractions that play your theatre.

Borland Sold Out His Entire House To Local Company

Letting his house in for a lot of favorable publicity is a habit with Dave Borland, the alert manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan, Can., for, according to the latest accounts we have on hand concerning his work, we find that the local newspaper gave him plenty of space on a recent theatre party he ran.

The Robert Simpson Company enabled Dave to hook up a record by buying out the entire house for the entertainment of its employees. As this was the first time an organization had leased the house for an evening, according to the newspaper, a new record was created. The local paper alloted two columns on the front page of the second section to the theatre and an account of the party, and we note with interest that Dave made quite a success as master of ceremonies for the occasion. Proving again the versatility of a showman.

Besides newspaper publicity, Dave also derives a lot of benefit from his window display tie-ups and his latest work to be brought to our attention was the display he created on "The Painted Angel." He tied up with a local tobacco store and in the store window grouped a number of packages of cigarettes around a cut of Billie Dove, the star of the film, smoking a cigarette. A testimonial plug, carrying copy relating to the picture and play date, was placed in the center of the display, with stills placed around it. The whole thing was designed to sell and knowing Dave's work there's no question but that it served its purpose.

Thanks, Dave, for keeping us posted on your work and also we want to thank you for the nice expressions of good fellowship you voice in your letter. We want you to know that we're always interested in hearing of you and your work. Give our regards to the rest of the Club up around your way and let's hear from you again real soon.

Tickets In Loaves Of Bread Was Gag That Clicked Well

A tie-up with the Federal Bakery netted Manager Clint Lake lots of publicity for "Seven Keys to Baldpate" playing at the Publix-Tivoli Theatre, Chattanooga, Tenn.

One side of these stuffers or slips of paper contained copy about the picture, theatre and play dates. And the other side contained a number and details how to win a free ticket to see the picture.

The stuffers were wrapped with loaves of bread and the 4,000 of them were distributed in advance of play dates.

In every loaf of bread, there's a slip similar to this one printed on one side of the stuffer. And each one has a number as shown in the top left corner. But all the numbers are not the same. A complete set consists of seven of these slips numbered consecutively from 1 through 7. If you save these slips and secure a complete set, bring them to the box office of the TIVOLI before Saturday, Feb. 22nd, and you will be given one free ticket to see and hear SEVEN KEYS TO BALDPATE.

Of the one or two hundred complete sets distributed, 35 were redeemed at the box office for free admission.

The stunt created a lot of talk about the picture and greatly helped to publicize it to good box-office receipts.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

A Publicist With An A-1 Record Is Tom Olsen of Fox

We want to introduce at this time one of the most active members of the ROUND TABLE CLUB and also one of the most active publicity directors we know of. Meet Tom Olsen.

Tom is the director of publicity for the Upstate Division of the Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, and since we have recorded his activities in our pages many times his work is not unknown to his fellow members. But now we want to tell you something about his career in show business.

He is a graduate of the Paramount Managers Training School, and has managed theatres in Salt Lake City and Denver for the Publix organization. While in Denver, his ability as a publicist attracted widespread attention with the result that a tempting offer was received to join the staff of E. J. Myrick and handle publicity for United Theatres and the New Orleans suburban theatres in New Orleans, Louisiana. Tom accepted the offer and landed his first big publicity assignment, working with the Myrick staff until he joined the Fox forces.

With the Fox Metropolitan group he handled the editing of their circuit organ "Progress," until his present assignment as publicity director for the Upstate Division. Incidentally, while Tom lived in Seattle, Wash., he gathered a lot of newspaper experience in the capacity of Sporting Editor for the Seattle Star, which may account for the "live" way in which he makes up his new publication "From the Firing Line," circulated among the Upstate Division.

With such a background it is no wonder that Tom is able to display such a remarkable ability as a publicist, but we know, as do all other showmen, that nothing can be accomplished without plenty of hard work and untiring efforts. We know that Tom is always on the lookout to do whatever he can to better both business and good-will for his organization and he can bank on it that his work is attracting attention. We are very glad to have him on the CLUB rolls and we want him to know that we certainly appreciate the active interest he shows in us.

Bathtub Yodeling A Pleasure When Rendered Like This

Remember not so long ago we told you that you could expect to hear some corking accounts of the work of Harold S. Kopplin, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Miami, Florida, and his organist, "Buddy" Webber? Well, here's the first one in the form of an organ novelty put on by these two live-wires.

The photo itself is self-explanatory and shows "Buddy" seated in the novel bathtub effect he achieved for his organ slide presentation of "Singin' in the Bathtub." Just to forestall a couple of anxious queries we had better inform you that "Buddy" wears the lower portion of a bathing suit, which is hidden from audience view.

This novelty, the first that "Buddy" has used down there, went over for a big hit, and judging from the success of it he is already getting set to "wow" them again. The cost of the entire stunt was comparatively small, especially when you figure the way the people responded. The tub, made of tin, was purchased from a local plumber. The front was cut out to fit the organ. During the first five slides of the number, a black cloth concealed the tub, with a small head spot being focused on "Buddy." When the first slide of the chorus was reached an usher removed the cloth and the house roared with laughter at the strange sight, as this was the first time they had been treated to a novelty of this sort.

Well, you can see what "Buddy" is doing down there and it just goes to show you that Kopplin knows what an important part of his program an organ solo can be. As we have stated before, if you have an organist, use him. It need not be a bathtub gag, it can be any kind of a novelty, and it's a sure thing that if a little care is taken in the construction that your patrons will be more than pleased with your efforts. We want to thank "Buddy" and Kopplin for passing this one along to us and we know that the future is going to hold many surprises in store for the CLUB members because when two good showmen get together something is certain to break.

Kunze's Modern ShowmanshipAgain Evident By Work

Having told you so much about Paul W. Kunze, it is not at all surprising that we should follow it up with a picture of Paul himself so you can get a more vivid idea of how he looks. (Is the above Ork with you, Paul?)

But getting right down to brass tacks compels us to pass along a peach of an idea which attracted our attention as soon as his latest letter landed on our desk. It deals with the subject of House Inspections, and every member and reader will surely recall how often we've pestered them with this important phase of theatre management.

Getting right to the point, we want you to see an inspection form used by the State Theatre in Stoughton, Mass., the house under the management of Mr. Kunze. If you will look it over carefully, its many fine points will show up as clear as a beacon on a dark night. Take a tip, brother members, and for the few cents it may cost (most theatre printers will make it up free of cost to the house) you should immediately have a few hundred run off and start the idea right away. Here it is:

This report must be filled out and delivered to the Manager before each evening performance.

This is just one of the fine points of Paul's activities, but we have a still better one in the form of a manual for the ushers which we considered important enough to hold for special use. Watch for it within the next few weeks and it will appear verbatim as used in the State Theatre.

The front of the State Theatre reminded us of one we had under our wing not so very long ago—B. C. (meaning before Club) and don't let it confuse you for one moment. The inside is a beautiful and spacious auditorium and right up to tap when it comes to decorations and appointments.

Another reproduction we show is that of the red-ink imprint of the local paper which brought forth much favorable comment besides plenty of extra business for the theatre. We've shown the same idea time and again and our chief reason for bringing it up is because we want to continue to drive this argument home. It is still to be used in many theatres and towns and it is "different" enough to create comment and business, as stated before.

Thanks, Paul, for your continued Club spirit. It's just that spirit which makes our job so doggone interesting and prompts us to try to improve the Club in every possible way. Keep up your contributions and don't mind the short delay getting the stuff into print as we must handle an enormous amount of material each week and we are trying to do justice to everything and everybody.

You might also convey our regards to the other managers on the Interstate Circuit up your way and by all means tell Eddie Anson we expect him to buy us some lunch when we get up Boston way next month. (He'll be getting off mighty cheap if that's all we want him to buy.)

But seriously, Paul, I'm certainly anxious to make your acquaintance and hope the opportunity arrives real soon. Remember me to Anson & Stoneman, too. They should recall the "almost" deal they made for the famous (?) Connecticut houses only a few short years ago.

JACK STEWART SAYS:

"A word about the MANAGER'S ROUND TABLE Section in the NEWS—This Section is the most inspiring piece of showmanship ever conceived by a trade journal, it teems with ideas for exploitation, and I am sure that the managers everywhere, are most grateful to the MOTION PICTURE NEWS for their constructive enterprise and foresight in giving them this key to increased box office receipts."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

John W. Creamer Has Own Program Circulation Staff

Out in Muscatine, Iowa, there's a showman who has proven a very active member of the Round Table Club. We might state that this particular showman is one of the earlier Club members too. Since John W. Creamer joined our organization of showmen we have had the pleasure of passing along many excellent ideas which in addition to helping him, also helped his brother members who used the stunts. Now Creamer comes through with another corking idea.

He has organized a club composed of boys residing in the town and calls it the Palace Boys Club. The purpose? To serve his house and to let the town know that the theatre has its interest at heart. The local boys have made the club a selective organization. They have their own officers and each member pays weekly dues. Though the club has been in operation only a short time now, a savings account has already been opened in the local bank for the purpose of outfitting and organizing a baseball team when spring rolls around.

Creamer donated two large dressing rooms in his theatre and meetings are held there. But—here's where the theatre benefits—in return for his work, the boys assist him in all ways possible. They fold his weekly programs, take care of the routing and distribution of them and in addition do odd jobs of exploitation for him. To the boy who displayed the greatest zeal went the presidency of the club. This boy was given the name and phone numbers of all the members, so that when Creamer had any special work that required immediate attention the boys could be mustered quickly.

On the distribution of programs, heralds, etc., the boys work weekly, in rotation, receiving passes for their labor. The youngsters are enthusiastic about the club and it is working very efficiently and the problem of proper program distribution which formerly confronted Creamer, has been solved through his showmanship.

This angle comes at a very opportune time, since many of our members no doubt are faced with a similar problem regarding how they are going to sell their attractions for spring and summer. We lay particular stress on the summer worries, as it seems to trouble a lot of showmen. But with a club such as Creamer has founded, you can give your patrons first hand information regarding your spring fashion shows, your cooling plant, your special attractions and almost everything you want to put across. And you can bet that the notices would be properly distributed.

It won't be any trouble to form one of these boys' clubs, especially if you are located in a "community" house, so if you have had any or the foregoing "headaches" concerning distribution on your mind, here's a chance to get rid of them.

"WHERE ARE YOU?"

The "Lost And Found" gag started in last week's issue of the Club pages apparently "hit the mark."

This item is being written only three days after publication of last week's edition and we have close to thirty requests to help locate different men in the show-business.

If you are looking for someone, fill out the "Lost And Found" box, which you will find on one of the Club pages, and we will do the rest. Our only request in connection with the suggestion is that you sign the blank yourself.

"Chick"

Down Where the Vest Begins

That's your "waste line" and it takes a wallop every time you fail to get the maximum exploitation possibilities out of every picture you play—features or short subjects.

We're going to grant the requests, demands and urgings of scores of members by trying to help you guard the "waste line" with reviews of new pictures for exploitation possibilities. This added feature of the Managers' Round Table Club begins in MOTION PICTURE NEWS for April 12.

Watch for these reviews—read them—use them as you now use the hundreds of ideas and suggestions contributed to the Club by its members.

PAGING SOME "LOBBY LAFFS"

Dick Kirschbaum is sorely in need of suggestions for the "Lobby Laffs" series and knowing how popular these cartoons are with our readers, we are broadcasting this request right off the Club pages.

If you stop to think for a moment or two, undoubtedly, you will recall some funny incident that occurred around your theatre and could be converted into one of Dick's "laffs".

"Keep Your Sunnyside Up" and let's all get some fun out of this series as long as Dick is good enough to do the cartooning for us.

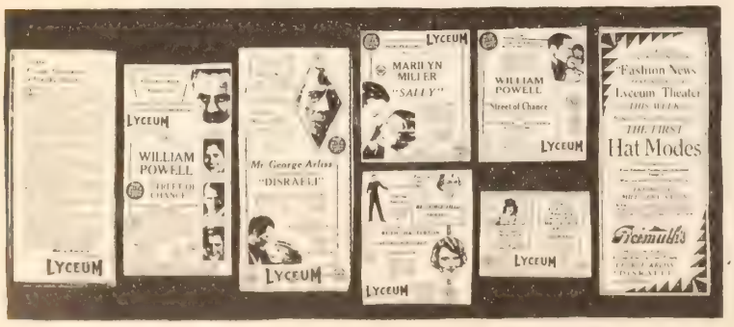
Morris Rosenthal Way Up On Top As Duluth Showman

According to Morris Rosenthal, it's pretty cold out in Duluth, Minn., where he manages the Lyceum Theatre for the Publix Outfit.



The foregoing statement, while it means nothing to showmen showmen (who don't care about the cold anyway?) is simply the way we have of leading up to the declaration that his activities which we are going to set forth will never find a cold shoulder awaiting them here.

Morris has been going like house-afire and to give you an idea of how he works we'll take as an example the campaign he used to sell "Street of Chance." Through some mysterious source a genuine roulette table, wheel, and other gambling apparatus was secured for display in the lobby. And what comment it created. Interest was so much out of ordinary that the local cops were trying to find out where the gambling apparatus came from. Through a tie-up with the local radio dealers of a nationally advertised radio he secured their cooperation and ran a double truck ad on the picture, at the same time tying in a contest. Many answers were secured through this source, and the power of the ad was proven.

On the picture "Sally" he made a valuable tie-up by arranging with the distribution of "Screen Secrets" magazine to give away, free of charge, 1000 copies of the magazine containing a story on the picture and star. The magazines were distributed two weeks in advance to all of the physicians, dentists, lawyers and other professional persons throughout the town, maintaining waiting rooms, while in the theatre lobby a girl dressed as Marilyn Miller handed copies to all women attending the matinees.

We are reproducing a number of the ads he used on "Disraeli" and other films. Incidentally, while we are talking about "Disraeli" we want to tell you about the corking campaign he engineered successfully on it.

To start off with, he held a private pre-view for the leading clergy and professional men in the town, as well as teachers and librarians, which gave him a good publicity break. He then arranged for the boys who distributed Liberty Magazine to customers in the city to insert book marks plugging the picture in every copy and in this manner the picture was brought to the attention of over five thousand people. By a tie-up with the local schools he engineered an essay contest to good results.

If you will look over the ad layouts you will notice the very effective way in which he sold "Disraeli" and other pictures. In one instance, as the ad on the left shows, he ran a special "personal" confirmation of "Disraeli's" value, addressing it to "The Younger Generation of Friendly Duluth." He tied up all the bookstores and libraries in the city, securing much valuable space. All in all the contest went over with a bang and Morris left no stone unturned. He used many more angles other than the ones we have recorded but since space will not permit an elaborate description we have tried to pick out the highlights.

In order that you may see how Morris handles his window displays we are showing you a photo of one he used on "The Love Parade." The window was secured from one of the largest department stores in Duluth and plenty of attention was paid it. If you look close you will note the small card in the front of the layout, that Morris is getting in a plug for his short entitled "Fashion News," a reel which proves an aid for tying up all women's attire dealers.

Thanks, Morris, it's plain to see that while it may be cold up where you are, you sure keep things "hot" around the theatre. And while we wouldn't mind dropping in for a brief visit there's the little matter of transportation to be consulted. However, if you can give us a solution for that angle, we'll be more than glad to greet you personally.

Special Capsule Contained Plug On John Ward's Show

Here's a couple of ideas from John V. Ward, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Niagara Falls, Ont., Canada, which we are passing on in the event that any of the CLUB members may find them useful, since they are applicable to almost any picture.

When the film "Dynamite" was booked into his house, Ward made up a novelty in the form of a "dope" capsule which was distributed throughout the town. Looking at the capsule, all that could be seen was the word "dope," but the capsule upon being opened was found to contain a rolled strip of paper about three by one inch, which when unrolled revealed an announcement concerning the picture and play date, together with some very effective selling copy. The catchlines on the "dope" read, Gaiety! Richness! Splendor! Women! Wine! Drama! This novelty did much to sell the picture, and it certainly let it in for a lot of interested comment.

A novel herald, in the form of a book mark was used by Ward as a "plug" for "The Lone Star Ranger," and carried on one side an announcement pertaining to the attraction and play dates, with the other side bearing a notice concerning the book and also an institutional plug on the talkies. No doubt the book stores were glad to handle the distribution of them and knowing Ward's reputation as a showman we feel sure he found many other effective means of distribution too.

We want to thank Ward for passing these ideas along to us as it serves as a means of our knowing that he is very much interested in the CLUB and its affairs, and also shows us that he is going to be one of our very active members. Let's hear from you again "J. V." and we hope it will be in the near future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Meet Lyman Lynn Another Showman From Washington

Here's a newcomer to the CLUB who we are predicting right now is going to make a name for himself one of these days, and we want you to meet Lyman Lynn, Manager of the Liberty Theatre in Pasco, Washington, for the Inland Theatres Corp. (meaning Junior and Senior Mercy).

Besides being a newcomer to the CLUB, Lyman is also new to the show business, but we want him to know that it doesn't mean a thing. In a little while he'll get wise to the showman angle and then we expect to see him forge ahead, because we feel that since Frank Hill proposed him for membership, he has the goods, and working under Frank's tutelage he should blossom forth a real showman.

We want to thank Lyman for the nice sentiments about the CLUB he expresses in his letter, and since he thinks so well of us it more than ever makes us sure that he is going to be a real active contributor to our pages because a man who has handled the many and varied position he was connected with in the past should make a good showman. Lyman, before entering show business, worked in politics as a campaign manager besides being associated with the newspaper business.

Of course, Lyman, it is unnecessary for us to tell you that there will be many interesting angles come up in your daily routine which will help you prove your worth to the title of showman, since you seem to have encountered a couple of them already. Anyway we want to hear from you again in the very near future if it's only a line telling us that the air around Pasco is wonderful. Oak?

Hinchman Issued S. O. S. Call For Theme Song Discs

When "No, No, Nanette" played at the Sipe Theatre, Kokomo, Ind., R. D. Hinchman arranged a theatre front display which involved the use of the song numbers "Tea for Two," "I Want to Be Happy" and "No, No, Nanette," the song numbers from the original musical comedy version which were extremely popular a few years ago.

Upon applying at his local music dealer, Hinchman found that none of the records was in stock. The dealer suggested, however, that perhaps many people in Kokomo had the numbers from their previous release, and that if he tried he would likely find that there were hundreds of them in the record libraries of private homes. The dealer reported that he had had a heavy sale on these records when they were originally released.

This gave Hinchman the idea of running a classified ad in the local newspaper, to the effect that he wanted these numbers and that he would reward the first person bringing any one of these numbers to the theatre with guest admission tickets. The ad explained that the records were wanted to assist in advertising the song hits for the forthcoming screen version of "No, No, Nanette."

A big response followed, which proved that the dealer was right. There were a lot of the records still among the record libraries of Kokomo music lovers and there was no trouble at all in getting the required records.

The newspaper thought the usage of their classified section was unique indeed, and as a matter of using some institutional copy for the page, reproduced the ad on the front page of the paper and explained the success and results Hinchman had with his classified ad.

Although this is a somewhat new Club booster, we have every reason to feel that Hinchman will make a fine active member, and we look forward with keen interest to his future contributions to the Club pages.

Let's hope we won't have to wait too long. And, incidentally, "R. D.," your own photograph with a few details of your past experience should be included so that we can give you a proper introduction on the Club pages.

YOUR PROBLEMS AND MINE!

B's Problem:

B. has been handling a theatre, not so many miles away from Club headquarters, for some time now. When he first started at the theatre he made quite a hit with the local merchants and they assisted him to the best of their ability. B. was very grateful for this help. One day he noticed that the merchants seemed depressed. Questioning brought out the fact that business had been going from bad to worse for nearly all of them. The patrons preferred to shop in New York. Why? That was the merchants' problem, but B. made it his own. For, wasn't he a merchant too? He sold entertainment.

B's Solution:

Being located in a suburban community he went to work and organized a Lions Club. He pepped up interest in the organization by appealing, in person, to all of the live-wire merchants in the town. As a result the club came into being, with B. as its presiding power. Showmanship was applied to the merchants' way of doing business. Things started to pick up almost immediately. The residents of the town suddenly became conscious of the fact that right in their own neighborhood they could procure what they wanted and save a tedious trip to New York. They started to buy at home and from what we know they are still buying.

How did B. benefit? Well, just to cite one example. He recently displayed a number of electrical appliances in his lobby for one of the local dealers. The dealer so appreciated the opportunity of working with the theatre that he donated over one thousand dollars worth of electric percolators, vacuum cleaners, toasters, irons, grills, radios, etc., to be given away to the patrons. What a stunt and how it clicked! The dealer and B. cashed in plenty. To-day these tie-ups are a common occurrence to B. for the merchants think the world of him and his theatre.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"THANK YOU JACK"

Jack Allan's story about "Passes" in last week's issue of the Club pages brought some fine comment from our many members and readers and we thought we ought to let Jack know about it in this way.

Come on, Pete Egan, don't let Jack get away with all the "honors". Shoot us something in the form of a special story yourself. Oak?

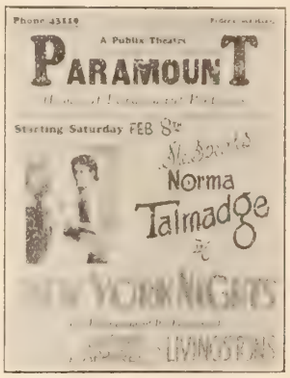
This Account of Fitzpatrick's Work Is Only A Starter

The residents of Englewood, N. J., seems to be in line to witness some mighty fine examples of the way a showman operates, now that J. L. Fitzpatrick, formerly managing the Capitol Theatre in Hazelton, Pa., has assumed his duties as manager of the Englewood Theatre.

Fitzpatrick has already fired the first gun in his campaign to put the house up with the Jersey leaders and it looks like he has scored a bullseye. A tie-up with the local newspaper, the Englewood News, whereby he obtained a special supplement, was one of the highlights of his initial campaign. Through the co-operation of the local merchants, he promoted "Booster Week" and worked it in with the supplement. The cut we are reproducing will give you an idea of its effectiveness. The town's leading merchants all bought space in the supplement, which, in addition to carrying the ads, also carried, as you note, a full page plugging the theatre.

Though he must have been very busy planning his campaign, he found time to cash in on the "Amos 'n' Andy," radio gag, which has become popular with the showman of the country, who, noticing that receipts fell off around seven o'clock, early show starting time, installed radios on the stage of the theatre or else transmitted the broadcast through the stage horns by means of a house monitor. As this was the first time the gag had been worked in Englewood, the town was all pepped up about it and many who previously stayed at home to listen, decided to go to the theatre.

Another of Fitzpatrick's activities is the Englewood "Sound News Reel," which is made up of "shots" taken of local personages and beauty places of the town. Some of the scenes in it were taken from hidden observation points and since many persons did not know whether they appeared in the reel they would go to the theatre to make sure. This stunt worked wonders with the box office receipts and also boosted up good-will for the house.



So with all these live-wire activities already under his belt, it looks as though Fitzpatrick is going to come through with some excellent stunts in the future. We wish him lots of luck and hope he is going to continue the active interest he has shown. Keep us posted, Fitzpatrick.

Solomon Offers An Angle That Is Worth Considering

No, that photo we are reproducing is not an ultra classy herald. It's a sample of the 22 x 28 merchants' co-operative card, used by S. S. Solomon, live-wire manager of the Paramount Theatre in Youngstown, Ohio, to exploit his attractions.

As you will note, the card, in addition to carrying a "still" on the picture, features a catch line on the bottom that aids the dealers. A unique plan has been hit upon by "S. S." for the distribution of these cards. His house staff is invited to secure locations for them and with every one placed, twenty-five cents is given to the member of the staff placing it. No passes are given out, since the dealers receive benefit from the "plug."

As this is one of the finest ways for securing valuable publicity we have seen recently, it would pay to study the copy on the card in the event that you would like to adopt this idea for your own use. The stunt met with immediate favor in Youngstown and forty cards are placed in as many different dealers throughout the city. Incidentally, while we are recounting Solomon's activities we would like to say a few words regarding the way he sold "Burning Up."

Since Youngstown boasts a number of auto manufacturing plants, employing many persons, he arranged to take motion pictures of the various departments and heads of departments. The film was put on at the beginning of the feature picture and almost everybody working at the plant was represented in person at the theatre. Another stunt he engineered was a tie-up with the local distributors of a nationally advertised cigarette. Seven thousand cigarettes were distributed in seven local restaurants. They were given out two days before the opening of the picture and only at the close of a meal. A pay envelope, appropriately worded, contained the cigarettes.

Solomon's campaigns, we agree, are real examples of intensive advertising, as most of his stunts strike out for a direct contact, and with his house rolling up big receipts week after week, it must certainly give him a thrill to know and to see that his work is well planned and executed.

Switched Over To NewHouse,Marpole Starts Exploiting

All of his friends will be glad to know that Jack Marpole, plugging manager of the Orpheum Theatre in Ogden, Utah, has received a promotion in the form of a switch to the "ace" house, the Paramount, in the same city.

Already Jack is pulling some corking stunts and his latest is the gag he used to plug "The Bishop Murder Case," when it played the Paramount.

A 3-sheet beaverboard cut-out showing the Black Bishop with a dagger in his hand was first used in the lobby ten days in advance and was later taken to the Berthana Ballroom, where a well-attended dance was in progress. During one of the dances, all the lights were turned out and a man proceeded to carry the cut-out through the crowded couples on the dance floor with a baby spot playing on it. During the moving of it three "plants" on the floor let out hideous screams—and this caused others to scream too.

The cut-out was then placed against a prominent spot on the wall with a floodlight playing on a sign announcing the picture and play date.

This stunt not only caused plenty of comment but insured the appearance at the theatre of almost every one present in the dance hall that evening.

Okay Jack, so long as we know you're active we can sit back and wait patiently for that letter you promised us setting forth your complete works to date and we feel that our wait will be worth while.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WEEKLY SERVICE STAFF MEETINGS

By EARLE M. HOLDEN
Miami, Fla.

Do you have a weekly meeting of your service staff? This question has been asked me more than once. I do. As a matter of fact our meetings prove to be the big event of the week at the Fairfax. They are interesting, instructive and above all things we try to make them entertaining, entertaining in the sense of the word that they do not become monotonous for the young men of the ushers' staff who attend.

If a theatre is of the size that it requires an ushers' staff, and we use 14 at the Fairfax not including a doorman, ticket taker, Chief and Assistant Chief usher, a weekly get together meeting of the Manager and his assistant with these men is most essential. It is for the betterment of the theatre and at the same time it proves to these young men that there is something in his work, that there is a future for him, provided of course that he wants to stay in the theatre business, and the type of young man picked for duty as an usher should be one who intends to make the theatre business his future work.

Our weekly meetings are held promptly at 10:30 p. m. every Tuesday evening. By this time the box office has been checked, the men have had a chance to change from their uniforms into civilian clothes.

The first thing on the program is a roll call. This is done by one of the service staff who acts as secretary and who takes notes on the meeting and the following day writes a full report to be handed in at the Manager's office. After the roll call the regular meeting is called to order by the Chief Usher and then turned over to the Manager.

All Must Attend

If an usher is late, or if he is an extra man and fails to show up for the meeting he is usually given from one to two extra hours' work per week. But all members of the Fairfax staff are usually on hand.

We do not then attempt to tell them the wonderful advantages of the organization. This they have already been told at the time they enter the employment of the theatre.

The first thing is a discussion of the program now playing. Each man present is asked his opinion of the feature and short subjects. He is given full reign in his discussion and the set up of the program is also discussed at this time.

Next the comments of the patrons are then discussed. Each usher is required to listen carefully during the week for patrons' comments and make a full report at the regular weekly meeting.

Then the following week's program is discussed and also the proposed set of this attraction. Its selling points are pointed out, the featured players are mentioned, so that when each man leaves the meeting he is able to converse intelligently with future patrons about the next week's attraction.

Selling the Shows

Then follows a discussion of forthcoming bookings. And tentative plans for the selling of these pictures are discussed. Every Fairfax usher has a part in each week's selling campaign, and every Fairfax usher is able to carry out the part of the exploitation campaign assigned him. He gets his first working start from these meetings. If he has to make cut outs he makes these from the plans as outlined at the regular weekly meetings. If he is assigned window trims he also makes plans for these at the meeting. And window trimming means that he also goes out and sells the merchant on the idea of placing in the trim.

Next follows a discussion of the physicial appearance of the theatre. If there is anything wrong with the theatre from a physical standpoint it is brought out at these meetings, as each usher is responsible for a certain section of the house and he reports anything wrong at these meetings unless the wrong is an emergency one at which time it is reported immediately.

Educational Too

And now the meeting is half over. Much more has been discussed than could be placed in type. We have had our discussion of the program, the audience reaction, the ushers are familiar with the names of the stars in the next program, they know every unit coming from the news up to the Feature. They know three weeks ahead coming attractions, they know how we are going to sell each individual picture.

Then comes a half hour of school. This has proved to be the most important part of the meeting. It is held the same as an old fashioned spelling bee, but instead of asking them to spell words, questions of the theatre from every angle are asked. When a man misses he goes to the head of the class. And these questions are not at all easy. When one man misses the question goes the rounds until it is finally answered and if there be no answer it is explained and answered by the Manager or the Assistant. And almost without realizing the men are learning many details of the theatre business that they would not know.

Here are a few of the questions that were asked at the last meeting:

1. What is meant by a projection machine.
2. What kind is used at the Fairfax.
3. Why is it necessary to have more than one projection machine.
4. What is meant when the picture is out of the frame.
5. What is a travel ghost and what would you do to remedy the cause.
6. Who is the Division Manager of this company.
7. What is the function of the exciting lamp.
8. What is the photo-electric cell.
9. What is the difference between high and low intensity lamps.
10. What time does the new reel start.
11. What is meant by a unit of a program.
12. How long is the program for next week.
13. Why is the comedy placed for showing after the feature.
14. Had the feature not been one of a heavy dramatic type, where would the comedy be placed.
15. What is the width of the Fairfax stage.
16. What is meant by the Grand Drape.
17. What is meant by the scrim.
18. What is the magnascope.
19 Explain its operation.
20. How many seats in the balcony.

We are very grateful to Earle Holden for this fine summary of his weekly service staff meetings and we feel reasonably certain that this article will be both helpful and instructive to our other members and readers.

From our own viewpoint we heartily recommend this idea to every showman in the business who wants to see his staff functioning to the best interests of the theatre.

Other angles in this connection are solicited and will be given every possible consideration of the Club pages.

Open Forum

Usually there are fifty questions asked each night and by the time the last one is over it is time for the meeting to adjourn. Questions are always new, with new things being discussed each night. However in the event that some prove very hard and require a long definition, it is usually asked several weeks later. These questions while they may seem hard to the average person who thinks ushers should not have any idea as to their answers, however are very instructive, and there is very little about theatre operation that the Fairfax usher does not know.

For instance how many managers really know the working and function of the photo-electric cell. They should know and why should any usher have to wait until he becomes a manager to find out. If he did not know what a "travel ghost" was, how could he check the picture on the screen properly and wouldn't it be annoying for the manager to always have to have an usher report some defect in projection without the usher knowing what to do to remedy the cause.

The Fairfax usher knows when there is a "travel ghost" and instead of notifying the manager he calls the booth telling which way the lines are running.

However, each theatre uses its own method of conducting meetings. Ours has proved very successful and the men look forward to their regular Tuesday night meetings. And it is a real pleasure for a manager to have some definite set plan of conducting these meetings without them becoming boreing either to himself or to the ushers and others who might attend.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"TIP US OFF"

There is no finer news than an announcement of advancement for any showman in this business and when such an event takes place you should, by all means, drop us a note so we can carry the news on these pages.

Remember, not only the members and readers of these pages want to know about it, but your personal friends and acquaintances in different parts of the country will be equally as delighted to hear such good news.

Personal publicity of this sort is far from "blowing your horn." It is just as consistent from the publicity angle as a news announcement from the heads of a national theatre chain or distributing organization. They use just such means of letting the industry know what is happening in their outfits, so you, too, should avail yourself of this method of passing along good news of your own doings.

Roy P. Drachman Believes In The Midnite Mat. Gag

A short while ago we gave you an account of a telephone gag used by Roy P. Drachman, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Tucson, Arizona, which proved an effective aid as a business builder, and now we want to show you an example of his newspaper advertising which is equally as effective.

The ad is well made up and by the judicious use of mats he has produced something that will sell. He apparently agrees with us on the Midnight Show argument we ran recently, for he is giving it a big play on the top of the ad. The midnight show will always start a lot of word-of-mouth advertising and that invaluable asset is a cinch to react favorably at the box office if the picture has any merit whatsoever.

We are glad to note that Drachman agrees with us on this, and as we have stated above, should prove a winner for him, for beyond a doubt he is ballyhooing it to the skies. The way Roy is stepping out there in Tucson leads us to believe that we are going to be in receipt of many interesting notes from him.

Now don't forget, Drachman, we expect you to keep up the active interest you are showing in the Club, and by the way, when we looked through the records we noticed that we haven't your photo, so why not send one in to us, at the same time, let's have a little data regarding your career in show business to date because we have a hunch that it will make interesting reading, and we know that your fellow managers on the Publix Circuit, many of them who are members will want to see it, too. Oak.

Making A Grab For Publicity, Dugan Secured Plenty

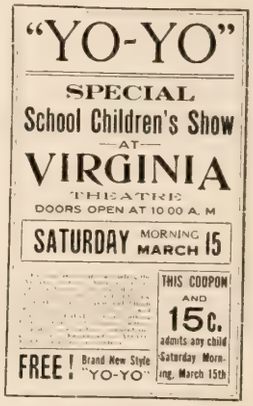
An enterprising showman up around New England way pulled a fine stunt on "Street of Chance" recently. We refer to David J. Dugan, manager of the Paramount Theatre in Newport, R. I., and his "grab bag" gag.

Through a tie-up with eight local merchants, located on the main streets, dealing in furniture, shoes, electrical supplies, drugs, etc., he secured their agreement to wrapping certain of their respective commodities in packages and placing them in a handy spot accessible to customers. A card alongside the display of packages read, "Each one of these packages contains merchandise valued at $1.00 to $1.50. Pay only 25 cents and possibly win a free ticket to see STREET OF CHANCE now playing at the Paramount Theatre."

Dugan dealt out a number of passes to the eight merchants who in turn wrapped them in several of their "prize" packages which were being sold at a price below cost. Although the customer couldn't see just what he was purchasing, he knew he was more than getting his money's worth in addition to possibly getting a free ducat to see "Street of Chance."

All the stores hung banners out front as well as placing cards in the windows about the grab-bag stunt, which bore the title of picture, theatre and play dates.

The stunt clicked from the start with the merchants getting rid of their packages and the theatre receiving a lot of valuable publicity and good-will.



We want to thank Dugan for this opportunity to pass along an example of the way he sells his shows and we hope that now he has been represented in the CLUB pages he will want to keep us posted on his future work so that we can pass it on to the rest of the showmen who comprise the CLUB. What do you say Dugan? Let's have some more.

No Fooling, We Ask You Have You A 'Yo-Yo' Complex?

A great deal of hilarity is being occasioned down around Fairmount, W. Va., where R. E. (Fuzzy) Knight is working hard to bring business into the Virginia Theatre, which he manages.

The reason for the laughter comes in the form of a novel toy called a "Yo-Yo." This novelty is really a top which instead of spinning on the sidewalk or floor, can be spun on a string dangling from the finger. The residents of Fairmount have taken to this fad like a duck takes to water. And that's where "Fuzzy" comes in.

Noting the popularity of the "Yo-Yo," he decided to put it to good use and secure business and publicity for his house. He ordered five gross of the novelties from out of town, taking care to let the newspaper know about it. The paper picked up the stunt and gave it a big play. But that was only a couple of reasons why "Fuzzy" sent away for them. The other is seen in the cut we are reproducing.

So that there will be no confusion resulting as to how the stunt was worked we want to explain that he made up cards of the type you see here, measuring three by seven inches, which stated that the card and fifteen cents would admit any child to the special Saturday morning show he was running for school children. As an added inducement he offered a "Yo-Yo" to the first 500 children attending the performance. (That's the biz. getting gag.)

The stunt went over with a big noise. Kids flocked to the theatre an hour or two before time and were battling to be amongst the first 500. The show clicked great and the theatre came in for some extra business and plenty of good-will and publicity from the papers. We would like to hear more of the red hot work "Fuzzy" is engineering down there in Fairmount.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Baby Organ Gag As Used By H. Pearl Is Very Effective

The only way a theatre can run smoothly, from a standpoint of its inner operation, is to have harmony among the employees. How well this theory is carried out is seen in the way H. C. Pearl, Manager of the Revere Theatre in Revere, Mass., operates his house.

The first photo we are showing in the cut will serve as a basis for our statements and shows how Pearl's employees had the interest of the theatre so much at heart that they co-operated with him and Louis Weir, the organist, in the attempt to put across a new novelty in Revere. The novelty, as you will note, is perhaps the world's smallest organ console, with a setting designated by Weir and constructed by Pearl and his house staff.

The baby organ sits on a pedestal made from a telephone wire cable reel, around which has been placed a covering of compo board with a number of musical notes painted on for atmosphere. The organ is hooked up to the large console, and an interesting novelty is the two-colored Neon light illumination on the keyboard, one side red and the other blue.

The setting for the solo is very effective. The special screen has sheet metal on both sides and top and bottom. The two sides also contain 25 watt blue and red lamps, hooked up onto the main control dimmers. Metal tinsel is sprinkled around all sides of the screen and with the red and blue lights on, it is exceedingly rich looking. The black draw curtains with the cut-out musical notes, also sprinkled with flitter, constitutes an atmospheric background.

Pearl's stunt has hit them heavy and he is doing additional business as a result of his whole hearted efforts, which when you come down to brass tacks are just what would be expected of a showman who wants to keep his house up with the leaders in his district, and if any of the members would like to use this stunt, we are sure that Pearl will be glad to furnish you data on the construction of the baby organ and the rest of the features, if you'll drop him a line.

Just a word now about the other photo, which shows the fine display he created for "Show of Shows," by injecting a little comedy into it in the form of the woman in the bathtub, a stunt incidentally that gets in a plug for one of the song numbers of the picture. The cutout on the right of the tub is well done and shows evidence of considerable care.

Thanks, Pearl, for keeping us posted on the way you sell your shows up in Revere and we don't doubt but that you have already received plenty of extra box office as a result of your efforts. We would like more of your interesting activities, so let's hear from you again in the near future.

"Sonny" Shepherd A New Member Is Rather Versatile

J. M. "Sonny" Shepherd is another Florida showman to join the ranks of the ROUND TABLE CLUB. Sonny is the manager of the Grand Theatre in West Palm Beach, Florida, for the Wolfson-Meyer Enterprises and if he is going to keep up with the rest of the Florida bunch we will hear some nice things from him about the way he goes about selling his shows.

Besides attending to the many little details a house manager's position calls for, Sonny manages to do his own art work for the house and in that manner is able to keep the "nut" low, and since theatre fronts should always look very attractive we surmise that he is exceptionally well gifted as an artist and we hope that he'll send us a few photos of his art display and also give us a little "dope" on his sound equipment which was made locally, and, as "Sonny" boasts, is as good as the cheaper equipment he has heard, and in addition he points out that it is not the quality of the equipment that goes to making perfect reproduction of voice, but the careful attention that is paid to the many little things which make up the equipment and must be carefully watched and "babied" along.

We think "Sonny" has the right idea regarding his sound equipment and under his supervision we don't doubt but that he is securing the utmost in reproduction from the material he is using for as long as a man tries to do the best possible with what he has on hand you can bank on it that the results will justify the energy and time expended in the careful operation of the sound, and it's the kind of pride "Sonny" is showing in his equipment which makes us believe he is going to be a mighty interesting and active member of the CLUB and we expect to hear from him again in the near future. How about it "Sonny"?

FOR EASTER WEEK

Your local florist will gladly co-operate with the theatre by furnishing plants and greens to be placed around the lobby, foyer or lounge rooms. This suggestion is particularly timely right now and helps the appearance of the theatre considerably.

Why not phone your florist NOW and work out the details before it slips your mind and you forget all about it? A little credit card is generally all they ask in return for the courtesy, and it's worth all of that in any man's town.

Here's A Display That Can Be Used On Any Attraction

Every day we come across excellent examples of showmanship and nothing gives us more pleasure than to pass on these activities of wide-awake theatre men to the rest of the Club. Especially when the work is of the sort turned out by H. C. Brown, manager of the Modjeska Theatre, in Augusta, Ga., as the photo shows.

The picture is really self-explanatory and it is needless for us to launch into a description of the stunt other than to say that the telegrams pasted alongside of the movie-star's picture carries well worded copy relating to the star's coming picture at the theatre, and if you want something to place in your lobby or pep up a window of a big store in your town, Brown has shown you what can be done.

Though we don't know the cost of a display of this sort, or whether Brown tied up with the local telegraph company we feel that any money expended in putting this stunt across will be fully returned in the added box office revenue. To avoid any confusion regarding the shape of the cut-out, since we must necessarily make small cuts to illustrate, we would like to state that it is in the shape of a horseshoe, which fits in with the copy on it. Four-leaf clovers also supply an adequate background for the telegrams.

We want to thank George E. Planck, Division Advertising Manager of Alabama, Florida and Georgia (for the Publix outfit), for supplying us with this photo, at Brown's request, because "H. C." only recently joined the Club, but from the way he has started off, we know that he is going to prove one of our most active members.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

SOUTH AFRICAN ACTIVITIES!

Once again we are privileged to present some of the activities of our South African members and to J. H. Stodel, of African Theatres, Ltd., we extend out thanks for his thoughtfulness in forwarding this material to us in line with his usual fine policy of helping his managers get world-wide recognition for their efforts. Here's hoping we hear from them again mighty soon.

"Chick"

Again we take great pleasure in presenting to the Managers' Round Table Club some of the activities of our South American member. Exploitation always has been and always will be a constant source of interest to representative showmen. And when we get a chance to show you how the other half of the show world sells its attractions, we know that you're right behind us when we say, "It's a pleasure to look them over."

The first photo shows you how Manager Matthews of the Grand Theatre in Port Elizabeth ballyhooed "The Cohens and Kellys in Paris" and if this clever creation didn't cause a lot of comment and plenty of hilarity, why we'll personally take that pig in the photo out for an airing. Matthews displays a wonderful sense of humor in the way he has conceived padlocking the pockets of the smallish looking gentleman as well as the gag of having the representative of Erin carry the porker.

The second one comes from A. H. Stodel, Manager of the Opera House in Port Elizabeth and brother of our Regional Chairman, J. H. Stodel, shows a corking window display arranged by him for "Ramona." In the background he has outlined a mountain scene, with snow capped peaks rising in the distance as "atmosphere." By the judicious use of cut-outs he has made the figures tell a little story about the picture. Baby spots playing upon the scene lent a mellow tone to the entire effect giving it a beauty of tone that enhanced the display's effectiveness.

The next one, coming from Manager Lawrence of the Gaiety Theatre in East London, hardly needs an explanation. It is a stunt that will click almost anywhere and we must compliment him on the very fine arrangement he has made in spelling out the name of the picture by using ordinary playing cards. This stunt no doubt did much towards selling the film for him.

From two of the live-wire managers in Johannesburg, Manager Alexander of the Orpheum Theatre and Manager Chalk of the Palace, whose activities are characteristic of these photos, we are enabled to show you what methods they employ to sell their shows. On the upper right you see the unique street ballyhoo Alexander devised for "What Happened to Jones." The man, his head encased in a towel with a hot water bag atop, is seated in a turkish bath box, arranged so as to permit the escape of steam whenever a crowd gathers. The right photo shows you how Manager Chalk secured the co-operation of, as we believe, the local Boy Scouts, who aided him in exploiting a Rin-Tin-Tin picture. You all will agree with us when we remark that this is certainly fine work.

Manager Thorne of the Grand Theatre in Pretoria enlisted the aid of the local fire fighters to sell his picture, "The Fire Brigade," to the residents of the town and to what good effects may easily be seen in the photo, and were we to ask how business was during the run of the picture it wouldn't surprise us in the least to find that Thorne's receipts jumped up higher than usual. And we mustn't overlook those other two stunts he used on "Eternal Youth" and "Flesh and the Devil" either, both of which helped sell the films to his patrons.

Now see how Manager Pizarro of the Bijou Theatre in Johannesburg made the town conscious of "The Gorilla Hunt" and "The Road to Mandalay." If realism is what the movies wants it can certainly find it by asking Pizarro. Why go into details describing this gag? All you have to do is look at the picture to realize of what great value it proved to be for his house. And we don't mind saying that if Lon Chaney saw the "Mandalay" street ballyhoo we are showing on the right he sure would approve of it, as do we. (Continued on next page)

"All For One And One For All"

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

SOUTH AFRICAN ACTIVITIES

This next one shows evidences of careful showmanship. Manager Peck of the Kings Theatre in King Williamstown, decided to give the residents of that town a thrill when "The Scarlet Letter" was booked into his house. So to that end he devised the ballyhoo depicted by the photo. A woman, sitting in the stocks and being wheeled around town caused loads of excited comment and drew plenty of attention to the attraction playing at the Kings that night and resulted in a big box office draw.

Have you ever seen a ballyhoo like this one? It's a product of the ingenuity of Manager Clucas of the Rinko Theatre in Maritzburg. Used in conjunction with "Twelve Miles Out" it was a sure-fire hit for grabbing plenty of that kind of attention which ultimately reacts favorably towards the box office.

Here's the way Manager Cobden of the Empire Theatre in Boksburg utilized his servant boy's bicycle as a means of ballyhooing the attractions at the theatre. The arrangements seems to be made of canvas and is doubtless very light so that the boy can pedal the bicycle easily.

And last, but not least, we want to give you an account of the way Denis G. Callard, manager of the New Vaudette Theatre in Krugersdorp, put that house's opening across to excellent results. Callard persuaded the various contractors who participated in the building of the New Vaudette to run ads in the local newspaper and in return the paper allowed him a full page absolutely free. Having been informed by Mr. J. H. Stodel concerning advertising rates, we can appreciate fully the value of this stunt engineered so successfully by Callard. We want also to mention the well made up souvenir program, a copy of which he thoughtfully enclosed, that was issued on the opening night. The program's make-up is in keeping with the high standard adopted by the house owners and is certainly a credit to the theatre.

In closing this all too brief article, we want to thank once more our regional chairman, Mr. J. H. Stodel, for the wonderful work he is accomplishing in South Africa, for his untiring efforts in securing the photos and stories we use, and for the splendid spirit of co-operation he and the other live-wire showmen comprising the cream of the business in South Africa are displaying.

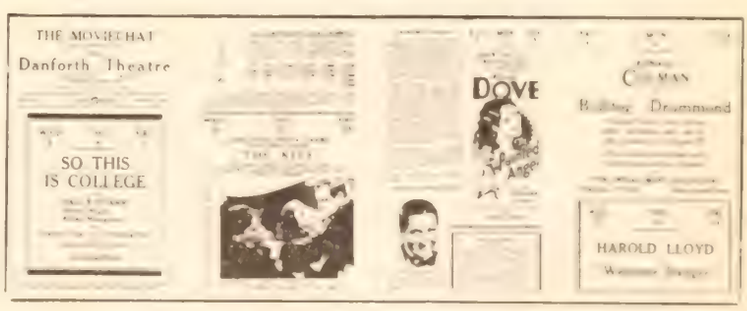
"SHORT SUBJECT ISSUE"

Leave it to MOTION PICTURE NEWS to select a topic of great importance to feature in a special section.

April 19th is the date.

And the issue for that week will cover the short subject situation as it never was covered before.

The tremendous value of the Short Subject has already been accepted by real showmen all over the country. Now you will learn more about it than ever before.



Remember, it's the issue of April 19th.

Barney Murphy Is Another Showman From Up Canada

Here's an example of a well made up house organ that we think has sufficient worth to merit being passed along to the rest of the CLUB. The program is the creation of Barney Murphy, manager of the Danforth Theatre in Toronto, Ontario, Can.

Though we were forced from lack of space, to make this cut small, you may be able to discern the local merchants lucky numbers stunt he is running in the program. This is not a contest of any sort. Murphy, by having the merchants select the numbers, displays a very clever piece of showmanship for in this manner he creates a feeling of good-will that will come in very handy when he wishes co-operation on any stunt.

And another example of showmanship we would like you to note is that little box headed "Manager's Confession," wherein Murphy gets around the sound picture angle by explaining that though the Danforth is committed only to a talking picture policy, the sound picture "The Kiss" contains such excellent entertainment value that he felt his patrons should witness it. In that way he held up the house policy and managed to make them like the sound picture. With his business on it, proving the strength of the personal message

We want to thank Murphy for passing this along to us so that we could let the rest of the CLUB witness the way another live-wire Canadian showman keeps them coming up to the box-office. We hope he will continue the interest he is displaying because we feel that he wants to keep right up in the front line with his fellow members.

William Evans Says:

"I'm still waiting impatiently every week for the NEWS to arrive so I can delve into the CLUB news. There is more of a kick in it than 14 mystery stories."

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Joe Koehler Goes On The Air And Plugs His Picture

"Yours Merrily," Joe Koehler pulled a good stunt that had three or four thousand people talking about "Sunnyside Up," playing at the Publix-Idaho Theatre, Twin Falls, Ida.

The local Dodge dealer had just received one of the new cars equipped with a radio. The local radio station was off the air and was not to come on until 4:30 in the afternoon. Here was the radio equipped new Dodge car, thousands of people on the streets and no way for the dealer to demonstrate the principal feature of his stock in trade. But wait! Joe Koehler had an idea.

He got to the ear of the car dealer, poured him a lot of suggestions among which was the idea of turning the whole matter over to him (Koehler). Koehler then hunted up the manager of the local radio station and asked him what he would take for an hour on the air. The price was $25 so Koehler gives him $15 and it was a bargain.

The station went on the air with Koehler doing the announcing and strange to relate the only records that Koehler could find were the song numbers from "Sunnyside Up," the current picture, and "Show of Shows," the coming picture.

Inasmuch as the local station is the only one that brings in messages to local people during the day, there was no chance of picking up some other station. The Dodge dealer in his car picked up the program and in five minutes he had an audience of at least three or four thousand people.

The Dodge dealer got the $15 bill and was glad to pay for it inasmuch as he felt more than repaid for the advertising derived. And Koehler felt the same way about it in that it advertised his picture to thousands of people.

Doff your hats, brother members, to Joe for the master way in which he handled this whole stunt and it shows that he is equal to most any emergency that may arise. Without reflection upon any one else, we can safely say that many others would have been swamped, and the opportunity would have slipped by, but not so with Koehler.

Let's hear some more from you, Joe. We rather like the twist you give to your showmanlike stunts.

Here's A Photo Of An Opening Night At Holden's House

We actually accused Earle Holden, of the Fairfax Theatre in Miami, Florida, of telling a fish story when he claimed that the mobs crowded the theatre for the opening of "Show of Shows," so back comes Earle with a "whale of a story" pictured by a photograph in which you will agree that the lines certainly did not lie when he showed the opening crowd for "The Vagabond King."

Earle, far be it from us to accuse you of anything whether in nautical or showman terms, but just the same such evidence is indisputable and we offer our humble apologies and will do anything within reason to square ourselves even if we have to go out to dig worms for bait for your next fishing trip.

Of course, if we wanted to get real technical, we could challenge your statement, that the crowd was so large that the human eye could not detect the S. R. O. sign in front of the box office, and ask that you show us a photograph of said S. R. O. sign, but then again that would be taking the whale and making a little minnow out of it, and we've never yet tried to steal a person's thunder.

Seriously speaking, we want to compliment Earle on the marvelous opening he gave "The Vagabond King" and we are certain that his superiors are even more delighted with the result of his showmanlike efforts than we were. Let's hear some more about it Earle, and by all means pass along our best wishes and regards to the crowd down there in Florida.

If you meet Wally Allen, by any chance, tell him we are still hoping that he gets that North Pole assignment.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Plugging Western By Special Front Helped Cartledge

Beyond all shadow of a doubt, we would brand this front display a masterpiece of showmanship, and we doubt whether any of our members or readers will question our statement in this respect.

In looking it over closely, we marvel at the simplicity of what Mr. James Cartledge, Manager of the Strand Theatre, in Knoxville, Tenn., injected into the idea and many of us will wonder why we haven't taken advantage of a similar thought months ago.

However, there has always got to be a first one, and since this is the initial presentation of a front display of this type on the ROUND TABLE CLUB pages, Jimmy Cartledge deserves all the credit we can heap upon his shoulders, and we know you are all going to agree with us.

In the event that your eyes deceive you, permit us to tell you that he fixed the front of his marquee to resemble the side of a wagon, worked out two cutout wheels and a covered wagon effect, and there you have the front of the theatre converted into an enormous covered wagon to advertise any picture that will lend itself to this type of exploitation.

For your further information, we might add that the entire display measured 45 ft. long, 45 ft. high and 8 ft. wide, which is some size wagon in any man's country.

Going a little further into the description, may we also tell you that the display was painted brightly in green and yellow, with the title painted the length of the wagon on the cover. The wheels of the wagon were in red with yellow and black trimming, and quite a few comments and congratulations were passed out regarding the theatre front, from not only the patrons, but the newspapers as well, which in our language, means free publicity for the attraction and the theatre.

Great work, Jimmy, how about shooting us some more? It is exactly what we want, and you are the man who can furnish it to us.

Let's hear from you and remember us to the rest of the gang down there in your section.

Believe It Or Not But Tom Is Newly Elected President

"If Thou Seek, Thou Shalt Surely Find." Which is a very religious way of starting off any story about Tommy McDonald of the Fox West Lake Theatre in Los Angeles, but, nevertheless, in looking through a recent issue of NOW, we find that he has been elected President of the West Lake Business Men's Association and also seems to be mixed up in the forming of an American Legion Post.

Which is exactly typical of Tommy McDonald's activities, and unquestionably the West Lake Theatre reflects the attention that he is paying to the community in which he is located.

Showmen the world over could gain a wealth of knowledge in what a theatre manager should do by following closely men of McDonald's type, and we certainly doff our hats to Tom and proudly shout—"He is a member of the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB."

You're not forgetting us altogether are you, Tommy? You know, we have always welcomed your letters and contributions and they have been given a marvelous break on the CLUB pages because we know they more than merited such attention, so come through and let's hear more about you in the very near future, and at the same time say hello to the crowd out on the coast, whom we know so well, but don't get the chance to meet ourselves.

WHO'S GOING TO CASH IN

Columbia's Prosperity Month starts rolling from April 1st. Every theatre running their attractions during the month of April ought to make a try for one or more of the prizes offered in their contest.

Let's analyze the situation a little more.

You generally go in for some sort of a lobby or marquee display. Suppose you exert some extra effort in working out this angle and see if the results are worth the prize offered for this phase of your showmanship.

You've worked all sorts of single and double truck tie-ups in the past. Now you can make those tie-ups count for space on the advertising lineage prize. It's all in the day's work and besides it affords you the opportunity of cashing in for your work.

Go over each rule of the contest. (You'll find them in the issue of March 22nd.) See where you may best qualify and then—go to it!

Fulton's Ballyhoo Drew Plenty Of Comment On Show

Nowadays a car of old vintage seems to get more attention than an up-to-date model. With this in mind, R. K. Fulton used such a car to ballyhoo "Burning Up," playing at the Broadway Theatre, Council Bluffs, Ia.

Fulton located a 1902 Ford, apparently in good running condition, and received permission to use it to ballyhoo the picture.

A man togged out in a racing outfit including overalls, helmet and goggles was at the steering wheel of the 1902 Ford and had it on the streets three days in advance of picture. Signs on the car read, "This car was burning up the roads in 1902—Hear and see Richard Arlen and Mary Brian in BURNING UP at the Broadway, Feb. 23-24."

When the car was not running up and down the streets, it was parked in front of the theatre where always a crowd of people was inspecting it.

This 28-year-old car evidently got more publicity for the picture than if it had been a racing car.

Not a bad gag at all, Fulton, and we would like to bet you cashed in plenty with it, both on the publicity as well as interest-getting angle of this stunt itself.

Let's hear some more from you, and, remember, we are always ready to welcome your contributions on the Club pages with open arms. We like things that have a real touch of showmanship about them.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

MORE NEW MEMBERS!

O. L. CODAY is another of the Inland Theatres Corp. showmen to enroll into the CLUB. Coday manages the Liberty Theatre in Kennewick, Wash., and since we think a lot of this circuit's live wires, we believe Coday too knows how to step out and put the old box office in for a boost. And when he pulls some peppy gags we'd like to pass them on to the rest of the Club.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOSEPH M. GRANNIS is the Assistant Manager of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven, Conn. Of course everybody knows that our fellow Club member, C. J. Latta, manages the house, so we can be sure that Grannis is going to learn a great deal about showmanship from a man who knows the ins and outs of the racket. Drop us a line, Joseph, and give us a little dope on yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CHAS. BROWN is the manager of the Capitol Theatre in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan, Canada. The house being located up in Pete Egan's district it's a safe bet that Brown is going to turn into a regular contributor to the Club pages. We'd like to get a little note from Brown telling us about his career in show business to date, if he can find time to write us.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN C. CALHOUN is the City Manager of the Montgomery Theatre in Spartanburg, Pa. With an important position like City Manager under his belt Calhoun must be kept pretty busy but we believe that he will find time to keep us posted on his work and also send us a photo of himself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

VERNON REAVER manages the Ritz Theatre in Birmingham, Ala. and according to George Steele who proposes him for membership, Reaver is one corking showman, and, handles the only big time vaudeville house in Alabama. With a policy like yours, Vernon, you should be able to put over some nifty stuff and we'd like to hear more about you in the near future. So if you'll write us and include your photo we'll give you a real send off on our pages.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

CLEMENT S. BARNES is the manager of the Galax Theatre in Birmingham, Ala., and is the second of the two new members proposed by George Steele. Barnes enjoys the distinction of being the youngest theatre manager in the city and handles the affairs of a first run house. Holding an important position the way he does, we have every reason to believe that Barnes possesses the "goods" and for that reason we'd like to have a little information from him regarding his rapid rise in the show business. Don't forget to include your photo, Clement.

———Wear Your Club Pin ! !———

EWART BOYD manages the Rialto Theatre in Loveland, Colorado. From what we can glean this house is the last word in photoplay entertainment and we are sure that Boyd's experience would make interesting reading for the Club pages. What do you say Ewart, let's have the lowdown on how you sell your shows out there in Colorado.

ROY P. DRACHMAN is the manager of the Rialto Theatre in Tuscon, Arizona. Drachman does not really need this introduction as he has proven himself an active member and his name has graced our pages before. It gives us pleasure to see that Roy is taking a lively interest in us and we feel sure that he is going to continue.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

PAUL SIGLER manages the Alhambra Theatre in Elwood, Indiana. Paul is no stranger to his fellow members since we recently published an account of some of his work but as most everybody in the Club knows, all must sooner or later be represented on this page so now that we have "intiated" Paul, he can continue right along, as actively as usual.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

SAM ABRAMS is the manager of the Starr Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. The Starr is a thousand seat neighborhood house and Som should be doing some good work to keep them coming. Let's have a little something telling us what you are doing to keep their interest pepped up over there in Brooklyn, Sam.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN E. BERRY manages the Colonial and Strand Theatres in Cambridge, Ohio, and has shown a wonderful interest in our activities in the past. Now that Berry has become a full fledged member of the Club we look forward to hearing from him frequently concerning his work at the two theatres, since he must have ample opportunity to display some fine showmanship.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

PAUL V. McKAY is the manager of the Avalon Theatre in Montgomery, W. Va. We don't know an awful lot about McKay but we should certainly like to hear from him as to what he has been doing up to the present time. How about it, Paul, can we expect to hear from you shortly?

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

MURRAY SCHATTEN is the Assistant Manager of the Manhattan Theatre in New York City, and with all the theatrical activity going on around the "Big Town," there's no reason why Schatten shouldn't put over some darn fine showmanship. Knowing where the house is located and the possibilities it offers for exploitation we expect some good things from this new member.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

E. N. NEU manages the Earle Theatre in Carrol, Ia. and is no stranger to the Club pages as we have run accounts of his activities not so long ago. He really does not need this introduction but since all members must appear on these pages we introduce him again.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

BOX X01, MOTION PICTURE NEWS

729 SEVENTH AVENUE, NEW YORK, N. Y.

WOULD YOU TRY TO WIN A STEEPLECHASE ON A BURRO?

If you set out on a cross country journey, you wouldn't go part way in an aeroplane and the rest on a slow freight.

But that is just about what an exhibitor does who books an excellent feature and carelessly throws in any kind of short subjects.

The "main stem" houses are booking Educational's Talking Comedies more and more consistently because they can be counted on to speed up the tempo of the best of shows.

MERMAID Talking Comedies

will add pep to any program. The current releases featuring Eddie Lambert are shedding new glory on this famous old comedy name. In "THE BIG JEWEL CASE" Lambert has kept audiences screaming in all types of houses. Now in "WESTERN KNIGHTS," with Al St. John, he gives one of the funniest performances that have yet reached the talking screen.

Atta Boy, Ed!

Discovered: a new synonym for laughter—Eddie Lambert! He packs a mean comedy wallop.

Ed is an old legit and vaude trouper, who has been knocking 'em cold with his funny Jewish chatter, but his performance in "Western Knights," Educational Mermaid comedy, tops the list as ace-high comedy, tops the a wow! The audience in the main stem New York house where this was reviewed roared continuously during the entire two reels.

Take the tip, exhibs: book "Western Knights."

LILLIAN GISH and Her Triumph!

by ARTHUR JAMES
in Exhibitors Daily Review
("ONE ROMANTIC NIGHT")

A new Lillian Gish will greet the public in "One Romantic Night" which is Molnar's "The Swan," done into a charming talking picture with such assisting talent as Rod La Rocque, Conrad Nagel, Marie Dressler and O. P. Heggie.

This United Artists picture, directed by Paul L. Stein, is romance portrayed through a rose crystal. It is the story of the princess and prince and the tutor who is permitted to love ardently and beautifully until the dawn sweeps the stars from the sky. It is a splendid story, engagingly presented and attractively acted.

Lillian Gish was never so lovely. She speaks with clarity, charm and a thorough naturalness that gives her new power as a star. In all the pictures in which we have seen her, and we believe we have seen her in all the pictures in which she has appeared, we have never seen so competent a performance.

Conrad Nagel as the tutor is splendid. Rod La Rocque is fully adequate, but aside from the star the acting honors go to Marie Dressler and O. P. Heggie, trained players who can be depended upon always for fine performances. Phillippe de Lacy and Byron Sage, who have little boy parts, are very attractive, and young Master Sage has a speaking voice which is a joy to hear.

The whole production is beautifully scened against rich backgrounds and is carried along to its romantic heights on naturally introduced music that is altogether delightful.

Lillian Gish takes her place as a big star of the talkies.

Secret Plan Reported for Merging All Amusement Interests in One Combine

Tee, Hee!

Hollywood—Alice White, "America's Girl Friend," is no longer addressed as "Alice" on the set where "Man Crazy" is being filmed at First National. By order of Director Eddie Cline, the blonde star is hereafter to be called "Miss White" by everybody, himself included. This edict has been promulgated, says Cline, for psychological reasons arising from the new type of role which Alice—pardon, Miss White—is portraying in her latest vehicle. A certain dignity attaches to the part, which marks at least a temporary change from the flapper roles in which the Girl Friend has heretofore specialized, so says the F. N. p. a.

Loving Nix for Gilbert and Dix; "He" Stuff Clicks

Hollywood — Richard Dix and John Gilbert are giving Bill Le Baron and Louis B. Mayer some things to think about.

It is an open Hollywood secret that the type of stories selected for their recent pictures haven't been telling the proper kind of story at the box-office and with heavily-weighted contracts on their hands, both RKO and M-G-M are spurring themselves into action.

As a result, Dix and Gilbert are to make a quick return to he-man outdoor roles. The problem of what to do about Gilbert's voice is the subject of many executive discussions on the Metro lot. In his next picture which is "The Way of a Sailor," Jack will concern himself with adventure on the high seas. Sound engineers will attempt to change his voice to a baritone.

Barrymore in "Hamlet," Big 1931 Warner Special

Designed to be one of the biggest of them all on the Warner list and the blue-ribbon production for the 1930-1931 season, the Warners are shaping plans to star John Barrymore in "Hamlet."

The picture will be one of the forty-two planned for next year and will be handled as a special.

Screen, Stage, Home Movies, Radio, Television, Music, in Electrics' Idea

The deal of deals is in the making.

From an always-reliable and conservative source MOTION PICTURE NEWS learns that definite efforts are being made to formulate a merger of all important producing-distributing-exhibiting concerns, stage producers with theaters, music publishing outfits, equipment distributors and other affiliations into one gigantic amusement combine.

"You will get a blank stare and emphatic denials from any executive you approach about it," MOTION PICTURE NEWS was told.

Fantastic as it seems, the plan is said to be sufficiently developed to have received many hours of study and discussion recently by ranking executives of practically all of the big film companies. Its sponsors are reported to have interested several of the largest financing houses in the world. Elimination of expensive competition in production and exhibition, and other conventional economic factors which promoters tout in developing merger plans, are claimed to be of minor importance in the consideration now being given to the reported combine

Its big objective, according to the NEWS informant, is complete control of all screen and stage entertainment in America through one gigantic holding company.

The electrics, already heavily entrenched in pictures, are said to have been the source from which came the original idea. It embraces the development of home movies, television, radio and allied interests, and their coordination along non-competitive lines with entertainment offered by theatres. Even the principals among the film companies who are said to have attended the preliminary conferences of the last ten days are reported to have been staggered by the magnitude of the plan.

Just how rapidly the consolidation of all entertainment activity into one vast unit may mature is frankly admitted to be anyone's guess. Also, in an undertaking as far-reaching, with the tremendous tax it would levy on even the biggest banks for the cash required, the problem of appraising values, the matter of the Government's attitude toward a complete monopoly, and numerous other complications, the probability of success becomes doubtful.

Available information, consisting solely of the statement that such a plan is being attempted, adds a reference to reports current some months ago that ultimately there would be attempted a giant merger of picture interests patterned on the organization plan of General Motors, and this, it is said, is what the present effort is intended to accomplish.

Sam's Double

Out in Hollywood, where they haven't anything to do with their time, actors and actresses pay plenty of attention to hobbies, and, to hear Sid Skolsky tell it, some of them have very peculiar ones. There is an actress, for example, whose hobby is collecting old Judas Maccabeus coins. She has an amazing collection and one day, talking about them, she said: "It's funny about those coins. No two of them have the same picture and yet all the pictures look like Samuel Goldwyn."

Canned by Pathe, Armstrong Back And Nicks Roll

Hollywood—When Pathe decided not to renew an option on the contract of Robert Armstrong last December, production officials figured the move to be a smart one.

But someone in the organization decided that Armstrong was too valuable to be freelancing for other companies, so a new contract with the player was signed this week. But the reconsideration of Armstrong by Pathe cost the latter company plenty of money, according to report.

It is claimed that Armstrong's agreement with Pathe last year called for a weekly salary of $1,000, with option of this year providing for a boost to $1,250. During the reorganization period last December, the player's contract was allowed to lapse, along with those of many other directors and players. But the later success of "The Racketeer" and "Oh Yeah," both of which featured Armstrong, made Pathe realize that Armstrong was a potential box-office name.

About the same time, Armstrong also decided his salary was far too low in proportion to popularity. So when overtures were made recently to the player for a new term featured and starring contract with Pathe, Armstrong quoted $1,750 a week as his salary. Pathe finally met the new figure, and the returning actor is now back on the Pathe payroll at a $500 increase over what his salary would have been if Pathe had originally exercised option on his former contract at the beginning of the year.

Vol. XLI NEW YORK CITY, APRIL 12, 1930 No. 15

THE CODE OF ETHICS ONE OF HONOR, TOO

OVER the wires of the press associations word has been flashed to the country at large that producers, of their own volition and by their own hand, now bind themselves to a code of ethics, carefully conceived and defining rigorously what shall and shall not be done in pictures.

The knocks are already in. Also some of the boosts. We lean toward the latter not because it is pleasant and non-resistant to clamber aboard the bandwagon, but because it is our opinion that the effort properly merits encouragement.

Whether or not the birth of the code came about as a complete beau geste on the part of the producing elements of the business has nothing to do with the case. The point to bear in mind is that the step has been taken, that it must be accepted as an earnest of intention and that every opportunity and every helping hand should be extended toward its proper execution.

It is to be assumed that the industry realizes the step it has taken. Wire walking, jaunts down the middle of the road, are "no go" from now on. The code very clearly outlines what the studios shall and shall not do.

It's destined to be a job, the rigid observance of these "don'ts" which members of the Producers' Association out Hollywood way now take to their bosoms as their creed.

The Merry-Go-Round Peril

Unfortunately, past trade events have demonstrated too well how hard it is to keep the marchers in line. Some disturbing influence is forever falling out of step and, while that of itself may not prove disastrous, it usually precipitates trouble by influencing others to feel the prerogative of one should be the prerogative of all.

The important slant on the ethics code seems to us to be this and it is emphasized again as a vital something for the industry to watch:

The commitment has been decided upon, made public and broadcast throughout the land. There is no turning back from this point. Women's clubs, reformers, church organizations and even legislators have the right to expect strict adherence to that commitment. If they don't get it, the merry-go-round will simply revolve more furiously and somewhere in the dizzy whirl a few heads may be banged.

Camaraderie and Business

Off for two weeks and then on again. The 2-2-2 conference in New York is over for the present. Only once in the deliberations did anything like an impasse develop. That came when the knotty problem of advance deposits entered the discussions.

But even that bugaboo holds chance of being surmounted. This is borne out by the attitude which pervades in that solemn room at the Bar Association building where a future contract form is being worked over for exhibitor consumption.

No passing chronicle of the conference would or could approximate completeness without fastening attention on the conduct of its chairman. Sidney Kent waved the mythical gavel, listening, disposing and arguing over moot points—and there were many. The vision of the man, the broad scope of his experience, the all-essential faculty of recognizing the need of approaching a problem from both ends as well as the middle, and his practicability unquestionably saved the meetings from hitting shallow water.

One of the really significant observations to be drawn from the deliberations seems to us to be this:

That differences in policy as well as opinion usually can be cleared away if these in whose hands their settlement rests abandon warped vision and approach the job with a liberal mind.

Grown-Up Harmony

Easily within the memory is the time when Allied and the Hays members were hurling vitriol at each other. Periodically, the ancient custom of washing dirty linen in public was revived and with each new instance, the spectacle of a gigantic business arguing with itself was aired in the newspapers. It did nobody good and at best served to project relations closer to the breaking point.

This week, on the other hand, a harmonious get-together demonstrated that there is a middle ground if those on the hunt would seek it out.

Merely a grown-up manner of tackling a job. But don't you agree it is sensible?

RCA Gets Disc Device Rights as Paramount Loses

Easing Paramount out of the picture, interests identified with RCA are understood ready to close a deal for control of Columbia Gramaphone bringing to RCA rights on the so-called sunlight pick-up, an electrically controlled light which replaces needles and is said to insure clearer and better sound reproduction via discs.

Motion Picture News learns that negotiations are practically set and that a representative of the British company which controls Columbia Phonograph is now en route to London to submit final papers to the directors of the controlling corporation.

Hiram S. Brown, president of Radio-Keith-Orpheum, states that if any such deal was or is being negotiated it is without his knowledge.

D. W. Finishes "Lincoln"; Make-Up Market Slumps

Hollywood—Within schedule and under budget, D. W. Griffith completed production of "Abraham Lincoln" this week. The picture was Griffith's first all talker.

Hollywood has dubbed the Griffith production "the make up" picture of all time. Practically every character used had to have correct facial make up to conform to historical data, and 30 make up artists were employed steadily on the picture for this purpose.

Walter Huston, playing the Lincoln role, spent two and a half hours every day getting his face and beard make up ready for appearance before the camera. Robert Stephanoff, head makeup artist on the picture, took charge of the Huston face, and had to put the Lincoln beard on by hand. Every tuft of hair had to be placed correctly, and then trimmed. After 31 days of this procedure, Huston has decided to lay off bearded parts for some time.

Shubert Seeks "Journey's End" for Road Showing

"Journey's End" may road show in the Shubert string. Lee Shubert is understood to be working on an offer which he will make to Tiffany for the booking.

Hiram S. Brown Slated to Become New Chief of RCA — Victor?

Herbert Bayard Swope, former editorial advisor of the New York World and a brother of Gerard Swope, president of General Electric, may head Radio-Keith-Orpheum, succeeding Hiram S. Brown, who, it is understood, will probably head R-C-A-Victor. Brown denies the change and Swope says it's news to him.

Reports of disagreements on policy within the ranks are current in usually well-informed banking circles in Wall Street, where credence is placed in rumblings that David Sarnoff, Brown and Joseph I. Schnitzer are not entirely in unison on methods of procedure.

Brown was the choice of Lehman Brothers, bankers for R-K-O, to head the company during its reorganization period. He was president of the United States Leather Co. before entering the picture business. Indications that Herbert Swope is slated for a post of greater importance with R-K-O is seen in his recent appointment to the board of directors.

Schnitzer Without Contract

Schnitzer is functioning as president of R-K-O Pictures without a contract. The inside is that he is insisting upon a percentage as well as a salary, with Sarnoff reluctant to make the concession, particularly in view of the theatres—present and future—controlled by R-K-O which automatically assures the picture unit a set amount of gross business.

Schnitzer is functioning as president of R-K-O Pictures without a contract. The inside is that he is insisting upon a percentage as well as a salary, with Sarnoff reluctant to make the concession, particularly in view of the theatre outlets—present and future—controlled by R-K-O, which automatically assures the picture unit a set amount of gross business.

Schnitzer has been spending considerable time in the company of Harry M. Warner. They are sailing for Europe on June 18, but a spokesman for Schnitzer, who is out of the city, insists the incident has no significance in view of the friendship of many years' standing between the two men.

May Revive Vaudeville

R-K-O has been talking about revival of vaudeville, but apparently hasn't advanced the idea much beyond the conversational stage. That is reported to be one angle of the corporation's activities which is bothering Sarnoff.

In production, it would not prove surprising if some inquiring eyes were shortly turned in the direction of William Le Baron. Radio started off the season with a bang, via "Rio Rita." Then came "Hit the Deck," and some others, which failed to elicit cheers from members of the Radio family.

Then there is "Grischa," which they would like to forget, but can't, in view of the six large figures which the picture cost to produce.

Coast Hi Hatters Put Skids Under Tough Tomato

Hollywood—Phi-mi-gosh! She (ahem) of this here movie capital has discovered in its midst a person without culture, one who might well be branded "a real tough tomato." The individual is a big name player, and unless her rough mannerisms are tamed somewhat in the near future, the old narrowbacks fear she will bring disgrace upon all those self-appointed production folk who find it their duty to uphold the dignity of the village. Here's the lowdown, as told by Mollie Merrick, the sob sister, who, by the way, promises to give Louella Parsons a healthy run for first honors in dishing out the dirt about studio folk:

"The antics of one red-hot village star have been the despair of her producers. A riot throughout the country, and the recipient of fan-mail galore, success has not polished off any of the rough edges she brought with her when she began her career.

"Nor has a fat salary check served to surround her with any superficial gloss. She remains the same. Uncouth and with the vocabulary of a stevedore, the laugh of a coal miner, and unique ideas as to what constitutes the social evening.

Pulls a Faux Pas

"Recently a get-together meeting was held in which the wives of various executives took themselves to task for not encouraging the lass a little more, and pledged themselves to a social campaign which would draw her into higher ways.

"They gave her a heart-to-heart talk and told her she could travel with any set she chose, so why not choose the best? Then they threw a party. The lady came, dressed like a drunken Chinaman. The evening began auspiciously and the wives, circulating through the assembly, smiled sagely at one another and flashed silent I-told-you-so's.

"They gathered together to discuss the successful opening of their campaign. And, a bit later, were interrupted by volumes of masculine laughter. Glancing surprisedly toward its source, what should they see but a group [illegible] the lady's chair the while she regaled them with some of her choicest stories.

"Social circles have resumed their norm."

An Insider's Outlook

WHAT kind of a man is Harley Clarke? To begin with, he is the head of large utility and industrial interests in the Middle West. Elsewhere you will find the names, if you are that interested.

What is more interesting and significant for this industry to know is how he functions. Clarke is a merger specialist, a fancier in combines. His whole business career points that way. He thinks, not necessarily in terms of balance sheets, but in terms of the stock certificates that spell corporate control. He prefers to, and does, take two companies, bring them together, maintain the operating personnel—or as much as the combined organizations need—and then looks around for two more, all for the purpose of blending the four into one. That's how he developed the Utilities and Power Corporation in the Middle West.

The Way He Works

He is president of General Theatre Equipment and this is how he did it:

He first obtained control of Precision Machine Co. Then merged it with Powers. That out of the way, he sponsored formation of National Theatre Supply. The next big step was General, which brought under one wing National, International, Mitchell Camera, Strong Electric, J. E. McAuley and Hall and Connolly, Inc., thus creating what is far and away the most important organization of its kind in the field.

It is General that purchased Fox's controlling voting stock. General or Clarke, or both, is underwriting the common stock to be issued by Halsey, Stuart under the refinancing plan.

What Clarke proposes to do in the film business remains to be seen. But remember the operative formula to which he subscribes. It may explain future moves that on the surface appear mysterious.

Young Man Named "Blumey"

He's 38, dapper and quiet. Of all the headline names in this business his is the one which makes the first page less frequently than the others. Yet this chap has been pulling some mighty strings behind the scenes and to him, perhaps more than any other individual, unless it is Clarke, the man who put up the money, is the settlement of the Fox entanglement due.

You should know him. The name is Blumenthal—Alfred C. the first part goes—but merely "Blumey" to those who know him and his financial wizardry. About four years ago it was that Blumey came East. Up to that time he had been in California realty. He built Loew's State in Los and the Warfield in 'Frisco. He was the man behind the startling announcement of several years ago that Fox had nabbed control of West Coast theatres.

It was a good deal for Fox, and after it was washed up Blumey shook the dust of California from his heels and came East. At Fox's request he is credited with having interested Harry Stuart, of Halsey, Stuart, in financing Fox ventures. He is the chap who did more than any other single factor to keep the dollar parade marching by the Fox grandstand in the early days of that company's expansion.

Then the Loew Deal

Then one day about eighteen months ago Blumey dropped in on Fox. "How would you like to buy the Loew company?" he inquired.

"You must be crazy," said Fox, or words in that tune.

But Blumey wasn't. He had been socializing with Nick Schenck, and out of the fraternizing came the birth of the deal that startled the industry more perhaps than any other in its checkered history.

Then came the Fox Metropolitan lineup. Blumenthal had a whole handful of fingers in that one. By the time the mechanics had been set up for it he found himself on a boat, London-bound to tie up the Gaumont British claim for Fox.

This deal kept him in London and Paris all of last summer and well into the fall and winter. When the Fox mess first began to get messy Blumey was given assurances the market had left the Fox companies unscarred. So back he went to the job of raising money in England to buy out Britain's most important picture company for an American producer.

Across the Atlantic

But disquieting reports of difficulties persisted. The transatlantic cables kept humming until the financial checkerboard plays became so involved Fox asked his financial prime minister to return home. Once back in New York Blumenthal began to dig in. He found trouble. Plenty of it. Notes falling due. Commitments to face and no money to face them with. He found Fox determined to go through with his avowed intention of surviving via the Lehman plan or not at all.

Blumenthal found himself in complete disaccord with Fox's ideas and took himself for a walk. He hadn't gone very far when Fox called him back, so the story goes. From that point on, and despite charges that he had been bought, Blumenthal determined the better plan for Fox and his companies was the Stuart plan. There he stuck.

The Conferences Begin

Midnight meetings ensued. Early morning conferences as well. The full story of the inside would fill a volume. But the upshot was that in Blumenthal's opinion at least the best way out for all concerned was for Fox to sell.

He organized his line of procedure, spoke to Stuart, saw Otto Kahn, who had been called in as mediator, and in about three weeks had whipped the deal into shape. It was Blumey who set the terms of the sale with Bill Fox. It was Blumey who worked out the details with Harley Clarke, acting as liason officer between the seller and the buyer. Clarke wanted to know if Fox would sell. Blumenthal said that was his job, not Clarke's. Fox wanted to know what kind of a deal it would be. Blumenthal replied he would see that Fox got the best possible break.

A Sixty Hour Conference

That's the story, except for the sixty-hour meeting that started last week-end and ended up at the Bankers' Club on Monday. It was nip and tuck then, with the odds of a get-together growing slimmer and slimmer. But signed the agreement finally was.

Blumenthal doesn't do any boasting about it all. "My business is to make deals," is the way he puts it. And while he won't talk, it is a fact that he feels badly over the whole proceedings. He and Fox have been friends. More than that; bosom companions. An association developed over the years has been jeopardized and it rubs.

Skouras Signs With 3 Firms For 25 Years

St. Louis—Paramount, Warner and First National pictures will be shown until 1955 in the Skouras Brothers houses here, under a 25-year contract arrangement completed by Charles P. Skouras. This is said to be the largest and longest contract ever entered into in St. Louis.

It means that the houses will be showing to the grandchildren of the present generation whatever type of entertainment the three firms are producing 25 years hence.

Await Supreme Court Decision On Arbitration

Whether the credit system will be retained and the compulsory arbitration system restored in the industry will be determined by the United States Supreme Court, probably some time this fall.

The credit case, won by distributors, has been appealed by the Dept. of Justice, while the arbitration case, won by the government, has been appealed by distributors. It is likely that both cases, which were decided in District Court by Judge Thacher, will be heard at the same sessions.

Henry W. Taft of Cadwallader, Wickersham & Taft, is expected to handle the case for distributors. He succeeds the late E. P. Grosvenor, who was chief defense counsel in both actions.

Coast Trial of Protection Case Slated for June 17

Los Angeles—Legality of extended protection is the issue at stake in the conspiracy action of the government against West Coast Theatres and a number of distributing firms, which has been set back again for trial June 17. There have been several postponements of the anti-trust action. The firms are under Federal indictment on charges growing out of alleged freeze-out of independents.

B. C. Names New Board; Changes Operators' Rule

Vancouver—Appointment of a new board to examine operators in British Columbia has been made by the government. It will consist of J. A. Thomas, provincial fire marshal W. A. Oswald, and H. L. Taylor.

The government has altered regulations governing employment of operators by allowing theatres to employ one fully qualified operator, and an assistant. This arrangement is designed to save small theatres from excessive operating expense.

Tentative Draft Going to 5-5-5 Confab Slated to Be Held in Two Weeks

[illegible] music license fee, score charges and rules of arbitration. All other provisions of the proposed [illegible] agreed to in principle this week by the subcommittee composed of two members of the Distributors, M. P. T. O. A. and [illegible] States Ass'n groups.

Consideration of the contract as tentatively drawn, and disposition of the points at issue remaining will be undertaken by the 5-5-5 group at a meeting to be called in about two weeks. Then phraseology will be discussed and if final agreement is reached the contract will go out to exhibitors with the recommendation that they approve and use the new form of agreement.

Two Contract Forms

The contract agreement is to be for a tract, a copy of which will be given each exhibitor, and a short form license agreement, which will cover individual transactions, and obviate the need for use of the master contract in each transaction.

The contract agreement is to be for a term of years not yet decided upon even tentatively. One proposal is for a three-year agreement, the contract to be revised or modified upon request of a majority of any of the groups which are a party to it. Allied's suggestion, however, is for an indefinite number of years, the contract run-

Drafting the Proposed Standard Contract for the Industry

The contract framers pause for a moment at the closing session of the 2-2-2 conference to accommodate the MOTION PICTURE NEWS photographer. Here is the group winding up the subcommittee meetings after a week of toil on the proposed agreement, for which all but a few points were agreed upon. Left to right: Frank C. Walker, Fred Wehrenberg, Gabriel L. Hess, Sidney R. Kent, Sam Dembow, Abram F. Myers and Nathan Yamins.

Break Narrowly Averted On Advance Deposits Demanded by Distributors

ning until conditions make a new one necessary.

The proposed agreement is to be submitted to various organizations for signature, and then to individual exhibitors through film salesmen.

The meetings started last week with Sidney R. Kent and Gabriel L. Hess representing distributors, Abram F. Myers and Nathan Yamins representing Allied States Ass'n, M. A. Lightman, Frank C. Walker representing M. P. T. O. A., and Col. E. A. Schiller representing affiliated theatres. Later, Fred Wehrenberg substituted for Lightman, and Sam Dembow for Schiller.

Sidney R. Kent

At spirited meetings during the week, the various clauses of the proposed form of agreement were suggested, discussed weighed and accepted or rejected. At only one point was a break threatened, and that when Abram F. Myers and Nathan Yamins, Allied States Ass'n committeemen, refused to consider insertion of an advance deposit clause in the proposed new form of agreement.

"Then you'll never have a contract, I'll warrant you that," Kent declared, pointing out that distributors are entitled to protection from unscrupulous exhibitors, due to bicycling, duping and kindred evils.

Distributors, he said, do not want advance deposits, which he termed a nuisance, but said they are essential, due to conditions.

Advance Deposits Debated

Allied feared that deposits would violate the Thacher decree, Myers pointing out that refusal of exhibitors to sign the voluntary arbitration clause probably would result in demand for deposit. He conceded the right of an individual distributor, however, to ask for an advance deposit. After an adjournment, however, distributors offered to add to the clause a reservation stating that the deposits would be an individual matter between the exhibitor, and distributors will not and do not desire to reestablish the advance deposit system in the industry. This proposal is to be passed upon at the 5-5-5 sessions.

Attacks on the music score and effort of Electrical Research Products and RCA Photophone to force distributors to insist that exhibitors pay the "music tax" marked the discussions, which were for the most part harmonious throughout.

The new short form contract will carry a voluntary arbitration agreement, which can be used or stricken out at the option of either party. Cancellation of contract concerned and any and all others between exhibitor and distributor is provided as a means of enforcement, or in cases where the party refuses to arbitrate. Upon cancellation, all amounts due the distributor on unplayed pictures must be paid by the exhibitor.

Upon the protection question, it is probable that effort will be made to set up machinery for settling of the question in each zone, as has been the case in some territories in the past.

Chain operators, it was pointed out, would not consent to an arbitration of protection based on numerical majorities, feeling such a system unfair to them in view of the claim that such a step easily could put them out of business. Myers wanted to know why arbitration could not be fair for the "big fellow" as well as the small operator. Distributors and affiliated chains are eager to settle the matter on a fair basis, said Kent, declaring he felt the matter should be submitted to the 5-5-5 conference for action.

Fred C. Wehrenberg

Score charges are slated for discussion at the 5-5-5 meetings, and although their elimination or consolidation with rental is not scheduled to be a provision of the contract, recommendations will be made after which a conference of distributors will be held to discuss the situation.

Rules of arbitration were not discussed by the 2-2-2 committee, it being deemed advisable to defer action until meeting of the full committee.

Warranty in Contract

The proposed form of contract will contain a warranty that it contains all the provisions of the license agreement made and recommended by the parties. The warranty clause was retained after the deposit discussion, during which exhibitors offered to waive the deposit clause if the warranty were removed contending that the warranty precluded deposits under any circumstances. The offer was refused.

It also is to contain regular provisions for license and time and place of exhibition, and calls for payment of rentals four days in advance of shipment, unless other arrangements are made with the distributor's home office. On percentage engagements the day by day arrangement is the same, but the time for audit of account of the engagement is extended to four months.

Failure to show a percentage picture makes the exhibitor liable to the guarantee and, or on account of, such percentage of the average daily gross of the house for the 30 days preceding the run. If a picture is pulled the exhibitor pays 65 per cent of the gross of the percentage picture the last day of its showing.

Prints in good physical condition and able to clearly reproduce the recorded sound in synchronism are provided for and are to be delivered in time for inspection and rehearsal. Showing of a picture for three consecutive days would constitute general release in a territory, except in case of a preview, tryout or pre-release run.

Pre-release Defined

Pre-release, under a tentative definition proposed by Kent, would mean the releasing of a picture to certain cities or towns in a territory where for seasonal reasons it is necessary to show the picture ahead of general release in the balance of the territory.

If exhibitors are up on playing time, it is proposed to give them the right to select available pictures out of general order of release, if other available pictures are dated within 30 days. If the dated pictures are not played as agreed, then the exhibitor will be denied the right to play out of order of release in future.

First runs would be required to play a picture within 90 days after date of availability, failing in which the picture is released to the second run. The exhibitor then must pay for the picture, but would have privilege of playing it at any time within 60 days after the last date on which the film should have been exhibited. The provision is 14 days after the 90 for playing by a second run and seven days after the 90 for a subsequent run. In each instance, the 60-day playing privilege would obtain.

Frank C. Walker

The exhibitor, it is proposed, is to have privilege to cancel ten per cent of films

5-5-5 Confab Getting Somewhere

The 2-2-2 conferences proved a great thing, "a fine step forward," Sidney R. Kent, who sponsored the 5-5-5 conferences said at conclusion of meetings Wednesday, in thanking members for their participation.

Kent has been eminently fair and he feels a great sense of obligation, was comment of Abram F. Myers, Allied president.

The conferences have shown a fine spirit of co-operation with real accomplishment ahead, if "we continue this way," declared Frank Walker, M. P. T. O. A. vice-president.

What Is Score Charge? Exhibitors Want To Know in Attack on Systems

Co-Operation Preventing Mis-Outs

Record of the industry in preventing mis-outs is remarkable, members of the 2-2-2 conference agreed in discussing deliveries. Distributors have spent as high as $750 to get a print to the theatre on time for a $150 booking, it was asserted.

During the washout in the Salt Lake territory, Paramount shipped by plane, while in the floods in the South and in New England planes and boats were utilized that the show might go on.

Conference Close-ups

THE conference was a constructive affair, all parties agreeing that it looks like "we're going somewhere." There was plenty of argument, each side jealously guarding what it felt was its rights, but a spirit of sportsmanship prevailed throughout.

Ninety per cent of Paramount's accounts have been on the books for 15 years, according to Sidney R. Kent.

Despite the enforcement features of the old arbitration system, 50,000 awards were not complied with, Gabriel L. Hess stated during the sessions.

Only about ten per cent of contract applications are rejected, according to Kent. He says that up to a few years ago, when he personally passed on all contracts, rejections only totaled seven per cent.

Although he is transcribing notes and simplifying the language of the proposed contract, Hess doesn't intend that he shall be considered the author of it, promptly disclaiming that responsibility.

Proposed clause asserting the exhibitor's right to cancel an available picture on which the distributor refuses a date was thrown out as superfluous.

Kent is opposed to excessive protection, he emphasized. Protection is the clearance necessary and fair, he said, but excessive protection is that which goes beyond necessity and is obtained through undue exercise of buying power.

Legal phases of various questions were gone into in detail during the sessions, with Hess, Myers and Yamins representing a formidable array of talent. Naturally, there was rivalry, and some wisecracks as to the respective law schools represented.

Frank Walker, big gun of the Comerford circuit, was active throughout the sessions and had plenty of constructive suggestions and argument to offer.

"THE most dependent class" is the title Myers bestowed on the Allied independents, in discussing the protection situation. Because of this standing, their demands must be fair to obtain action, he said.

It looked like it was all over but the shouting when that advance deposit snag was reached. Allied members just wouldn't budge on opposition to any clause which savored of a return to the old deposit system. They also insisted that the exaction of deposits might prove a violation of the Thacher decree, banning arbitration. Later, however, the right of distributors to ask security for fulfilment of contract was conceded.

The meetings started at the Union League Club, then switched to the Bar Ass'n Building. It was all quiet along the 44th St. front during the major part of the sessions, but they'll probably have to move to Madison Square Garden when the 5-5-5 orators get into action.

Distributors are sympathetic to exhibitors' loud squawks about the payment of music license fee plus score charges, but wonder just what they can do about it. At any rate, that proposed clause to serve only music licensed theatres promises plenty of discussion at the 5-5-5 sessions.

Sam Dembow of Publix was substituted for Col. E. A. Schiller of Loew's, when business pressure made necessary the latter's withdrawal. Fred Wehrenberg replaced M. A. Lightman for the M. P. T. O. A.

The only minute that the committee wasn't working, throughout the week of discussions, was when they obligingly called a halt to look pleasant for the Motion Picture News photographer.

Exhibitors Willing to Have Charged Passed Along But Duties to be "Nominal"

What is the score charge and who does it represent? is a question Allied States [illegible] asks to solve, according to Abram F. Myers, its president. A definition of the score charge and its relation to film rentals is expected to be a highlight of future discussions of the 5-5-5 conference.

Exhibitors are advocating elimination of the score charge or its consolidation with the rental charge, contending the score charge is properly part of the cost of manufacture. The question proved a puzzling one at the 2-2-2 sessions just concluded.

The exhibitor, it is pointed out, pays a seat tax for a license to publicly perform copyrighted music for profit. Why then, Myers asks, should he be forced to pay a score charge? The charge, Gabriel L. Hess explained, is for license to record music. The fee is paid at the source by the electrics and then allocated among sub-licensees. A clause in contract of the electrics seeks to compel exhibitors to insist that exhibitors pay the seat "tax" to the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers.

Abram F. Myers

Allied claims that segregation of the score charges is as logical as segregating star salaries. He says exhibitors are willing to pay the license charged producers for the music, but object to paying a profit on what he styles their taxes, as well as to bargaining for such taxes.

The argument arose when it developed that under the proposed 10 per cent cancellation clause, one-half of the amount of the score charge would have to be paid as well as one-half the film rental. Paying for a score not played was deemed unfair by the exhibitors. The matter was laid on the table for discussion at the 5-5-5 sessions.

Bum Business in Seattle Forces Early Policy

Seattle—As a result of a continued slump in business that has brought grosses down to new low levels, the New Orpheum will inaugurate its new "summer" policy this week, reducing prices, with four vaudeville performances every day instead of three. Doors will open at 11:30 a. m., instead of 12:30, with admissions at 25c until one p. m. From one p. m., until six the tariff will be 35c, and from six until closing, the top price will be 50c. The price cut brings this vaudeville-film house rate below the 60c rate charged by the local de luxe houses playing pictures only.

"Erpi" Jam with Warner, Fox and Tobis May Result in Transfer of Otterson

A. T. & T. Reported Displeased With President of Subsidiary

That Warner jam in which Electrical Research Products finds itself, as a result of the litigation over royalties and alleged failure to make speedy enough deliveries shortly after introduction of sound; plus the Fox tangle, just being unsnarled, and the German situation from which country the company is practically excluded, is disturbing "Erpi" plenty, it is understood.

So much so that John E. Otterson, "Erpi" president, is reported as on the spot with American Telephone & Telegraph Co. officials, with one report current that he may be returned to the telephone company ranks by the end of the year.

There is a reported $25,000,000 involved in the Warner (Vitaphone) claims. The matter has been in arbitration for some time, but the confident attitude of Harry M. Warner, who has assumed a "read the contract" attitude, is said to be causing frowns among A. T. & T. executives.

The flood of litigation and expense which followed the backwash of the Fox trusteeship also is said to have detracted from Otterson's standing in "Erpi" affairs.

Another setback is in Germany, where "Erpi" finds itself blocked, while Warners has an "in" through its hook-up with Tobis-Klangfilm, which is threatening to extend this situation to other countries of Europe.

Colleen and John Decide It's Just Too Bad; Part

Hollywood—After a long standing series of domestic differences, Colleen Moore and John McCormack have called quits and separated, with the star slated to file a divorce bill. Incompatability will be the charge. A trial separation convinced them that single tranquility was preferable to domestic warfare, and so the separation is to be made permanent. They were married in 1923 and since then Colleen has starred in a production unit headed by her husband.

$6,000,000 Net in Current Quarter Warner Estimate

Based on its earnings for March, it is estimated that Warner earnings for the fiscal quarter ending May 31 will make a new high record for any three-month period in its history. Advance bookings indicate that profits for the current quarter will be approximately $6,000,000, equal after estimating preferred dividends, to about $2.17 a share on 2,725,000 common shares.

Windy City Exhibs Hit Upon New Gag for Ads

Chamberlin Chain Collapse to Bare Plenty of Dirt?

Philadelphia—Film Row is anticipating "plenty of dirt" to be revealed in the Federal and State courts when the inside story of the collapse of the L. J. Chamberlin Circuit is told in the open. The dissolution of the $1,000,000 chain is expected to be the outcome. With two receivers delving into the affairs of the circuit, rumblings are being heard of charges of gross mismanagement, coupled with promises of "startling disclosures" when the activities of the organization are aired.

Following the appointment in the State court of Stephen Gribbon as receiver in equity, Federal Judge William H. Kirkpatrick named Horace H. Koch temporary receiver to operate the theatres for 30 days.

In the interim, and indicative of what the final outcome may be, is a deal made by Louis Berman with the circuit to lease the Victoria theatres at Mt. Carmel and Shamokin for 20 years. Film Row habitues see in the move the ultimate breaking down of the chain into individual deals for the properties.

Sound, high rentals, alleged mismanagement and reported internal dissension are mentioned among the contributing causes for the situation.

Unique Offer

Bonding of Paramount's percentage engagements to assure a fair deal to the company has been offered by a large bonding firm, according to Sidney R. Kent. No details of the proposed machinery to be set up to carry out the offer were given, he says.

Myers Attacks Music License Contract Clause as Being Oppressive

Contracts of Electrical Research Products and RCA Photophone with distributors seeking to force insertion in film contracts of a clause specifying exhibitors must be licensed by the American Society of Authors, Composers and Publishers, drew fire from exhibitors during the 2-2-2 contract meetings just concluded.

Legality of such alleged compulsion was questioned by Abram F. Myers, president of Allied States Ass'n, who declared the contracts oppressive and outrageous.

Howard Again Directing After 6 Month Idleness

Hollywood—William K. Howard shortly returns to active direction after an almost six months' sojourn in the reading department at Fox. The picture will be "The Fatal Wedding," for which George Manker Watters is doing the adaptation and dialogue. Howard's inactivity came as a result of differences of opinion with Sol Wurtzel over story treatments.

Color is lent to the story closely held here that it was Myron Selznick, acting as agent for Howard, who precipitated the director into further difficulties by urging him to stay off the lot during the Wurtzel trouble, by the fact that Selznick and his representatives are barred from the Fox lot.

Girl, 'Hired' to Plant Stink Bombs, Caught in Seattle

Seattle—Suspected of throwing "stink bombs" in a number of non-union neighborhood theatres in this city during the last few weeks, Irene Coyot was arrested at the Beacon, after B. C. Johnson, manager, said he recognized the woman from the description given by W. B. Ackles, manager of the Society theatre, whose house was "bombed" a few days previously. Accordingly, he sent an usher to watch her movements in the theatre, and she was arrested after releasing a container of fluid on the floor, according to police, who declare that she admitted her guilt, saying she had been hired by parties whom she refused to name.

Flinn, Lally Indictments Returned; Jury Held Over

Because counsel for John C. Flinn, vice-president, and Henry F. Lally, studio manager, have demanded the minutes of the Grand Jury which indicted them for manslaughter in the second degree as a result of the Pathe studio fire which cost eleven lives last December, the jury was not discharged by Judge Levine in New York. Attorney Nathan Burkan said that he would attack the indictments, and if they are found defective, the Grand Jury can be recalled. Flinn posted $5,000 bail Thursday.

Warners Seek to Wrest Freedom from Domination of Big Electrics in Field

Cornering Patent Rights in Devices to Break "Erpi" Hold

Complete independence from the big electrics, with the company becoming self-contained, is the goal of Warners in securing recording, reproducing and other theatre equipment facilities of its own.

This is the factor which led to closing of the Brunswick-Balke-Collender deal, giving Warners its own recording and record pressing facilities. It also is bringing about consummation of the Tobis-Klangfilm deal, which will give Warners a decided edge abroad, due to Tobis' strong hold on the patent situation. The Pacent hook-up sets Warners in the reproducing end, while the firm is now reported negotiating for Arcturus Photolytic Cell, owned by the Arcturus Radio Tube Co. This fundamentally new type of photoelectric cell, on which the company is said to have basic coverage, is claimed to have many advantages in the filming and showing of sound-on-film pictures.

Warners for some time has been fighting Electrical Research Products, Inc., over royalties, and desires complete independence from that company. Its case has been in the hands of arbitrators for some time, with millions involved in the Warner claims.

That Victor Contract

Under its long term contract with Radio-Victor, Warners is said to be obligated to give that company a minimum of $50,000 a year business. As the record pressing done for Warners is said to involve $500,000, Warners expect to swing this function to Brunswick, above the $50,000 minimum.

Already strongly entrenched in the music publishing field, Warners' position is strengthened by the Brunswick deal, for the Brunswick records will aid in plugging the company's songs. Use of Brunswick artists also is provided for in the deal.

Warners is set in the equipment field through affiliation with Continental Theatre Accessories.

Production Dwindles at "U"; Specials Finished

Hollywood — Universal closed production this week on both "All Quiet On the Western Front" and "King of Jazz Revue," the pair of over-a-million specials that have been in production for several months.

Final scenes for "All Quiet" were shot Sunday, while production sheets on the Paul Whiteman opus folded on Tuesday. Both pictures were rough cut during the making, so that very little final editing and cutting will have to be done to get them ready for early presentation in New York.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., goes East soon with prints of both pictures, and will be in the East for the premiere showings on Broadway. Upon his return, Universal will launch production of next year's program which will be confined to specials only.

HARRY M. WARNER

Goulding Record A Record in P. A.'s Typewriter Only

Hollywood—"A lot of so-and-so" is how confirmed Hollywooders describe the record reputed to have been set up by Edmund Goulding at Paramount in completing "Devil's Holiday" in eighteen shooting days.

The press story pointed out the director had shot Gloria's last, "The Trespasser," in the two-weeks-and-four-day schedule and then moved to the lot over which Ben Schulberg lords it to stage a repeat performance. It may be a record for Paramount, the unimpressed declare, but they point to many instances on many lots where directors do the same trick in twelve or fourteen shooting days.

At any rate, the Goulding yarn captured some space locally and elsewhere. Motion Picture News swallowed it, as well. It looks like a case of press agentry winning out.

Evelyn Knapp Signed by Warner Bros. for Features

Hollywood—Evelyn Knapp, who has appeared in Vitaphone short subjects, has been signed by Warners to appear in features.

Stepin's Steppers

Hollywood—Stepin Fetchit, colored actor, could not step fast enough when a former friend started to clear up an old grudge, and his renowned big feet got tangled in a chicken coop wire, whereupon he received a sound thrashing. His assailant was arrested, but he said "it was wuth it."

Warners in Record and Radio Field on Big Scale by Brunswick Purchase

Preparing to enter the phonograph and phonograph record and radio field on a large scale, Warners Tuesday paid $12,500,000 for control of Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. The deal involves all products and patents of the company except its billiard hall and bowling alley output. It had been in progress for months before being finally closed by H. M. Warner and R. E. Bensinger of Brunswick.

Brunswick has principal plants at Muskegon, Mich., and Dubuque, Ia., and record plants at Long Island City, Los Angeles, Toronto, Buenos Aires; 26 branches in the United States and Canada and has licensees in many foreign countries.

Chief Record Pressing Plant at Dubuque, Ia.

Dubuque, Ia.—Warners has removed the Brunswick-Balke-Collender plant here which will be its chief record pressing plant and a shipping center for discs used with the company's pictures. Between 400 and 500 men now are employed, but the number will be increased to 5,000, it is stated.

Publix, RKO Entering Warner "Record Town"

Dubuque, Ia.—With business expected to boom here as a result of extensive activity planned by Warners in the Brunswick-Balke-Collender plant, Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum are reported seeking sites for theatres.

Fox West Coast Outbids Offers for New Pantages

Hollywood—Despite offers from various other theatre circuits, the new Pantages house in Hollywood goes into the Fox West Coast chain on a 45-year lease.

Harold B. Franklin, president of Fox West Coast, closed the deal with Alexander Pantages after months of negotiations and in the face of competition from several other chains.

That Fox West Coast would eventually take over the house before opening was indicated exclusively by Motion Picture News several months ago.

Rogell Becomes Producer; Releases Through Tiffany

Hollywood—Albert Rogell, director of many pictures, including "Mamba," has become a producer, the company to be known at Rogell Productions, Ltd., with headquarters at the Metropolitan Studios. He has effected releasing arrangements with Tiffany. The report is also to be backed by a group of Eastern capitalists.

Rogell has purchased film rights to a group of four Preferred pictures made several years ago by Ben Schulberg, now production head of Paramount coast studios.

Breakdown of Wife's Health Prompted Fox to Sell "B" Stock, Friends Declare

Foes Scout Claim as Former Magnate Makes Plans To Visit Europe

Breakdown in the health of his wife, who has stood by him in the struggle for control of his companies, is attributed by those close to William Fox as the prime reason for his decision to dispose of the "B" controlling stock in Fox Films and Fox Theatres to Harley L. Clarke, Chicago industrialist. Those who have opposed Fox declare there is no foundation in fact for this statement.

Mrs. Fox has been a close advisor to her husband all through the latter's difficulties and, it is understood, carried great weight in shaping his business decisions. The strain to which both have been subjected since the stock crash is beginning to tell, it is reported.

Fox plans to take his wife to one of the water cures in Germany, sailing from New York for a quick trip the end of the month. Upon his return, he expects to assume duties as chairman of the advisory board under the terms of his settlement agreement. Fox officials now identified with Clarke have nothing to say about the personnel of this board or what it proposes to do, but indicate that it will be a long time before any such board holds a meeting. On this basis, it would appear that Fox's activities with the companies bearing his name were at an end.

Then and Now

Advisory Post Seen Blocking New Fox Firm

The five year contract reported given William Fox as chairman of the advisory board under the new set-up will block him from organizing any new company, it is understood. Such a move on the part of Fox would be far from improbable, insiders say, pointing to the following Fox has built up in the industry and with the investing public. His name, it is said, attached to another film enterprise, would command a certain measure of co-operation from exhibitors.

In addition, say those who feel that Fox, unattached, would strike out on a new venture of his own, Fox has the nucleus of an organization in Jack Leo, Joe Leo and Sol Wurtzel, from the angle of laboratory and executive, theatre and production standpoints. As one close observer puts it, Fox plus this trio, could "bring one of the weaker companies to the front in no time." Jack Leo has been relieved of his duties, but Joe Leo has been asked to stay on. No indication of Wurtzel's status has been received. He has no contract at present. Jack Leo and Wurtzel were voted $500,000 by directors on Monday.

The impression prevails that Fox's duties

Franklin Stays On West Coast; No Publix Deal

Hollywood—Now that all the fireworks have died down—or nearly so—in the Fox tussle, Harold B. Franklin is remaining with Fox West Coast. He had been slated for the axe, along with Winfield R. Sheehan, James R. Grainger, Saul Rogers and John Zanft, in event Fox was victor in the historic battle.

Fox had charged that Franklin was being groomed by the Halsey, Stuart-Electrical Research Products group for presidency of the companies. That gave rise to report that Franklin would return to Publix, if Fox made the grade in his efforts to smash the trusteeship. Franklin insists there never were any discussions with Publix.

Move to End Suits

Efforts are now being made to clear up the various court actions pending against the Fox companies and executives. There has been some indication that part of the suits would be continued, but negotiations to prevent this are under way, with interested parties holding periodical meetings in attempting to iron out difficulties.

Fox Sales Force Clicking; Banner Season in Sight

Differences among Fox officials over control of the company, while reported to have cut into the morale of the force in the field, have actually not affected sales. At the end of the thirty-fourth week of the 1929-1930 season, the number of accounts had outstripped the total for all of 1928-1929 by a considerable margin. About two-thirds of the exchanges by that time had exceeded their 1928-1929 quotas with nineteen weeks to go.

The sales crew is concentrating on Jimmy Grainger Week, which is set for June 15-21. When Grainger arrives back in New York from Hollywood he will be told 8,127 theatres have signed for the personal celebration.

Fox Film Up 25%

Gross of Fox Film for the last four months has jumped 25 per cent and net profits a trifle in excess of that percentage for the period, according to Winfield Sheehan.

Earnings in the first eight weeks of 1930 were approximately $3,000,000 before Federal taxes.

Clarke's Record as "Merger Specialist" Expected to Govern Policy in New Post

Has Had Spectacular Career in Industrial Field and in Film Business

Chicago—Although he has been active in industry affairs since he formed International Projector Co. some years ago, Harley L. Clarke, new president of the Fox enterprises, is little known, except to his associates, for the reason that he has shunned the limelight and personal publicity. To his associates and in financial and utility circles, however, he has the reputation of a man who does big things in a startling manner.

Clarke secured control of Precision Machine Co. about four years ago, then combined it with Power's Projector to form International Supply Co. Formation of National Theatres Supply and General Theatres Co. followed.

Heads $500,000,000 Firm

Clarke came into the industry via experience gained in a venture to develop educational pictures for use in schools.

In addition to his theatre interests he is president of the $500,000,000 Utilities Power & Light Corp. of Chicago, holding company for international power and light utilities. This corporation is not connected with the Insull utilities in any way.

He is also president of the Fayre & Fisher Brick Co., one of the world's largest brick manufacturing companies. In addition, Clarke is the owner of the Laclede Gas and Electric Co. of St. Louis, the owner of the Utilities, Union Trust and Continental Bank buildings, Chicago. His purchase of the latter for $20,000,000 was the largest realty transaction on record in this city at the time.

He was born in Michigan, attended Chicago public and high schools and the University of Michigan, where he played football. He was a reporter for Chicago newspapers, and later became a salesman for a machinery manufacturer. He sold to public utilities and the contacts he made paved the way to his entry into that field.

Advisory Post Seen Blocking Fox Firm

as advisory chairman will be very nominal. This is apparently borne out by the statement made by a Fox official that "you will have a long gray beard before that committee ever meets."

It is further understood that the $500,000 a year for five years agreed upon was arranged as part payment of the settlement price strung out over the stipulated period as a matter of convenience. Fox has relinquished all posts except that of director. Jack Leo, Charles S. Levin and Louis M. Weber have resigned as vice president, secretary and assistant, respectively, of the film company. Felix W. Jacobs, Joe Leo, Herbert Leitstein, William Freed and Jacob W. Loeb also are out. Aaron Fox, Jack Leo, Levin and Weber have resigned as vice-president, treasurer, secretary and assistant secretary, respectively, of Theatres.

"I Have Assumed Obligations of a Large Magnitude"

That was the message given to MOTION PICTURE NEWS by Harley L. Clarke, new president of the Fox Film and Fox Theatres. Plans for the future of the two companies, he said, are being put into definite shape. He "must proceed quickly," Clarke wired from his Chicago office, "but at the same time carefully," in carrying out the big task he has undertaken. The president of the Fox enterprises, as well as General Theatres Equipment, International Projector and National Theatre Supply Co., is to be very active in direction of the Fox firms.

"We're Back in Show Business, Out of Speculation"

Winfield R. Sheehan in characteristic fashion, accepted the outcome of the long Fox struggle, in which the policy he favored emerged victorious, in the foregoing words. "The war is over" is his message to the Fox organization and to the industry. Theatre expansion will be continued and the company will go ahead by leaps and bounds, the energetic vice-president and general manager assured MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

New President Named After Buying Fox's Holdings for $20,000,000

Harley L. Clarke, "merger specialist." That description, applied to the new president of the Fox enterprises, may tell the story of the future course to be pursued by the Fox firms, and even forecast developments which may change the industry's future.

For Harley Clarke, pugnacious and determined, is a man who believes in big scale operation and practices his belief. Mergers and consolidations have marked his spectacular career.

Clarke already is engaged in mapping out plans for the future of the Fox companies which may be expected to be tied in with other companies which Clarke heads, as well as allied firms.

Bought for $20,000,000

Clarke was elected to the presidency of the Fox Films Monday after a syndicate he heads had purchased for around $20,000,000 the 151,000 Class B shares held by William Fox, and which represent voting control of Fox Film and Fox Theatres. The purchase put an end to the long and drawn out controversy over the Fox trusteeship and proposed plans of refinancing the companies.

Climax Spectacular

The spectacular climax came late Sunday, when, after a conference lasting about 60 hours, he finally agreed to the sale of his stock to break the deadlock which was threatening to force his companies into receivership. Several times a breakup of the meeting had threatened, but through the diplomacy of A. C. Blumenthal, who has been Fox's financial advisor and buyer in big deals, a split was averted and the deal carried out. Under its terms, Fox is to remain for five years as chairman of the advisory committee and a member of the board of directors. As an underwriter with Clarke, he retains a large monetary interest in the companies, it is said.

Refinancing will be undertaken immediately to provide for an issue of $50,000,000 to $60,000,000 of 6½ per cent debentures, with warrants for common stock of Film attached and for 1,200,000 shares of common stock of Film to be underwritten by Clarke, Halsey, Stuart and the Lehman-Bancamerica-Blair-Dillon, Read group, opponents in the struggle just ended, will participate in the financing, the former to the extent of about 75 per cent.

Cabinet in Saddle

The Fox cabinet members who opposed his repudiation of the trusteeship and favored the Halsey, Stuart plan now are in the saddle. Winfield R. Sheehan is vice-president and general manager and in charge of production; Saul Rogers, vice-president and counsel; John Zanft as head of Fox Theatres, James R. Grainger as general sales manager, Clayton P. Sheehan in charge of the foreign department and Harold B. Franklin in charge of Fox West Coast.

Courtland Smith, former general manager of Movietone News, may return to the fold.

Roxy Refusal to Play Ball with Fox Foes Seen in Booking of Ten Outside Pictures

Industry Puzzled by Action; Rothafel-Fox Feud of Long Standing

With a number of Fox pictures available for release, the action of S. L. Rothafel in booking a number of outside pictures for the Roxy is eliciting considerable comment in the trade. For some time there has been evidence of bad blood between Roxy and Fox, but in the light of the controversy just ended, it had been anticipated that the Roxy would play ball with the Fox sales organization for the moral effect of first runs at this time.

Under the agreement with Fox, Roxy has the right to book 16 outside pictures a year. During the last few weeks, he has booked ten pictures from outside firms for early showings.

Without discounting the qualities of these pictures, the situation is unusual in the light of the Fox pictures available.

Changing Affiliation?

Roxy now is in Bermuda with M. H. Aylesworth, president of the National Broadcasting Co. It is reported that upon completion of his Fox contract, he will become associated with RCA in operation of a proposed theatre, larger than the Roxy, to be housed in the new RCA amusement center to be built at 57th and Madison.

Outside pictures booked by Roxy are seven Universals, headed by "Captain of the Guard," which just completed a two weeks' run, "King of Jazz" and "All Quiet on the Western Front"; Tiffany's "Mamba," which recently completed a two-a-day run, and "Journey's End," to follow its two-a-day run; and Sono Art-World Wide's "Cock O' The Walk," now current.

Offered Record Price For "Journey's" Booking

S. L. Rothafel is understood to have offered what is said to be a record rental for "Journey's End" if Tiffany would book it into the house instead of playing it as a two-a-day attraction at the Gaiety. The offer was turned down by Tiffany, which felt the picture was entitled to the benefit of a run.

Schenectady Gets RKO Million Dollar House

Albany—A million dollar theatre will be erected this spring and summer by RKO in Schenectady, N. Y., according to Charles G. McDonald, a Schenectady realtor, who put through the deal. The house will seat about 3,500 persons and will be located in the business center of the city. Negotiations have been on for some time past. Work of construction will begin early this spring.

Nothing new has developed in Albany in connection with a report current two or three weeks ago that RKO is to erect a new theatre in this city, replacing the present house, which is rather antiquated.

"Check Your Brains, Sir," Is Next!

St. Louis—Despite progress made by sound pictures, the spoken drama will survive, Otis Skinner, veteran legitimate actor, told interviewers here. Skinner will be in Hollywood May 25 to make a talker version of "Kismet." "The drama," he said "cannot be killed. Picture houses are popular because you can enter them for 50 cents; you can kill two hours, but you cannot live two hours in them. If you so desire you can check your brains in the hat room, for you won't need them at all."

Strauss Deserts Warners; Secret Pact with M-G-M

Hollywood — Oscar Strauss was brought from Europe by Warners to write an original operetta. He arrived in Hollywood amidst a loud blast of publicity, was properly dined at a press luncheon, and domiciled at a swank hotel.

The composer went to work at Warners, and soon it was discovered he was writing the "Danube Love Song." No inkling was given as to how he was progressing, except that no one could hear his musical compositions until they were all completed. Lyric writers assigned to work with Strauss found themselves sitting around waiting to find out what the music was going to be.

Finally Strauss turned in his work, said "thanks and goodbye," and moved himself down to Culver City to write original operettas for M-G-M. Everyone wondered what had happened between Strauss and Warners, and a walkout was rumored about town.

Investigation discloses that Strauss originally signed a one-picture contract with Warners, but had signed a long term agreement with M-G-M to follow when he stopped off in New York on his way to the coast. Lowdown seems to be that Warners took a gamble on Strauss for the one operetta, figuring they could sign a term contract if his first work was okay, but M-G-M was willing to grab Strauss on his past reputation without waiting to see just how he would shape up in writing for the screen.

There's an odor that smells like a lawsuit in the air between Warners and M-G-M.

Fox West Coast Planning Expansion in Washington

Seattle—While no new construction plans have been decided upon in the newly-created Washington division of Fox West Coast Theatres, within the next year this chain of houses will be materially added to where situations warrant. As a recent expansion step, operation of the Fred Mercy chain has been taken over under a partnership arrangement. Houses taken over include Liberty and Victory, Toppenish, Liberty theatres at Sunnyside, Kennewick and Pasco; and Roxy, Capitol, Liberty and Keylor Grand in Walla Walla.

Contact Man May Solve Producers' Jam with Agents

Hollywood — The producers' committee delving into possible solution of the agency situation on the coast is still undecided as to just what procedure to take to remedy matters.

The committee has listened to all manner of suggestions, some good, but most of them worthless. The idea of franchising the agents is pretty nearly in the discard for all time, as it is pointed out that any method that will materially cut down the number of agents doing business will eventually place those left in too strong a position to dictate to the producers on artists and terms.

One suggestion under consideration is the appointment of a general manager of the Call Bureau, who would act as contact for the agents and casting offices. This manager could see that the bureau operates without various studios taking advantage of it for their benefit, and he could also handle all complaints for or against the individual agents. If one agent was found to be doing anything unethical, he could be properly checked up. By the same token, if a studio casting office cut corners on an agent, the latter could lodge a complaint with the general manager, who would investigate and adjust the situation.

It was pointed out that the agent is in a peculiar position; he happens to be the middle wheel between the artist and the producer. If anything goes wrong at either end, he generally finds himself in the middle taking all of the blame for a situation for which he had no responsibility.

J. & V. Dickering for Seattle Radio Station

Seattle — Jensen and Von Herberg, operating the downtown Liberty and a string of suburbans, will acquire the franchise of a Seattle radio broadcasting station, it is understood. If the license is obtained, the broadcasting equipment will be moved to the third floor of the Liberty Building. A majority of the station time will be utilized in plugging the Jensen-Von Herberg enterprises. Jensen and Von Herberg now broadcast the nightly "Amos and Andy" programs in their Venetian and Bagdad theatres, picking up the program by ordinary receiving sets.

Pathe Units Twiddle Thumbs as Gloria Uses 11 Stages—All for One Production

Paramount gave Marlene Dietrich, German actress, a welcome-to-Hollywood luncheon at the Ritz the other day. She is first to appear in "Morocco" which Joe Von Sternberg will direct.

Lasky said the occasion was auspicious. Pointed how Paramount had welcomed Jannings to America; then "dear Pola" Negri and said he felt, that like them, Miss Dietrich's career would be as successful.

Jannings is off the Paramount list, returned to Germany because of talkers and his poor English, while Pola and the company have long since parted. Slightly left-handed, but Lasky meant well at any rate.

150 to 200 Day And Date Runs For Byrd Films

With 150 to 200 day and date runs now being lined up, Paramount is preparing an extensive campaign to exploit "With Byrd at the South Pole."

The picture premieres at the Rialto, New York, on or about June 12 and will follow in all over the country two weeks later. Willard Van Der Veer and Joseph Rucker, Paramount News staff cameramen who spent many months with Byrd at Little America, arrived in New York during the week with hundreds of thousands of feet of film which will now be assembled, cut, titled and submitted to a synchronized score. Admiral Byrd reaches New York the first week in June and it is probable he will supply the running dialogue to accompany the otherwise silent picture.

Two pictures will be culled from the footage. One will be a purely scientific film and the other the print for theatre use. The cameramen shot their footage on a prescribed schedule and, while circumstance made it necessary to change plans, hit-and-miss proceedings in the grinding were eliminated as much as possible.

Rucker and Van Der Veer will be guests of honor at a dinner to be tendered them by Paramount at the Ritz in New York next Tuesday.

Lorch Wins Comedy Scoop

Harry Lorch, Mid-Western division sales manager, has won first honors in the Pathe Comedy Scoop, states Phil Reisman, general sales manager. R. S. Ballantyne, Omaha, heads the branch manager winners who are M. E. Montgomery, Minneapolis; Lou Elman, Des Moines; Harry Graham, Indianapolis; H. Gibbs, New Haven; Ray Nolan, Kansas City; James Reilly, Buffalo; L. Garvey, Albany. The drive was on single reelers.

Swanson Lord of the Lot, But Laugh Is U. A., Not Pathe, Gets the Picture

Hollywood — Old Man Overhead is having his innings these days on the Pathe lot, where the regular studio and production staff is twiddling figurative thumbs, while 11 of the 13 stages are being used by Gloria Swanson for "What a Widow." The picture is being made under personal supervision of Joseph P. Kennedy for release through United Artists.

Glorious Gloria is said to be outdoing herself on the sets for the new picture, which are reported to have cost $300,000. She personally engaged in Paris an art director named Nelson to design and supervise their construction. He and his family, their expenses paid, were brought to Hollywood.

Art Director Has Orgy

Nelson, who had no previous experience in set designing and construction for pictures, eventually had the sets strung out on nearly every stage in the studio. And they are so strongly constructed and complete in detail that they can't be quickly torn down to make way for others, while the players are working in sets already up. The latter procedure is general in all studios and the result of years of experience, for the Swanson film. Sets, draperies, furniture—even a piano—were especially designed and constructed. Costumes and all clothes were designed and made especially for the picture.

And Pathe Merely Waits

Lack of Pathe production during making of the Swanson opus is attributed to the fact that E. B. Derr, production head, refuses to allow any picture to go into work until the story is absolutely ready for shooting. But with no stages vacant to work on, Pathe product would have to wait anyway—and inside reports declare it is being held back until enough stages are available for production.

Ann Harding's picture, "Holiday," has been abandoned and the star released from her contract as there wasn't time to finish the picture; Eddie Quillan's film, "Night Work," is said to be ready to start, but held up on account of lack of space. John Robertson is nearly ready to start "Beyond Victory." Meanwhile, overhead is plenty up.

Space Chiseling

Chicago—Marilyn Miller wanted to talk of her next picture for First National while here en route to the Coast, but reporters wanted to hear about her plans to marry Michael Farmer, "the wealthy Irishman." The result in local sheets was a better break for Michael than for First National, despite the fact that Marilyn said nothing about her forthcoming marriage than had not been said before.

Hollywoodenheads

Hollywood — A student at one of the large coast universities used to burn up every time he saw a picture that presented the scenario writer's idea of university life. He later drifted into pictures and finally secured assignment to write an original college story. After every sequence he would muse "The boys of the alma mater will spot this one." So he took particular pains to make every situation real.

Then the preview. Audience reception fine, but studio executives and "yes men" in the lobby were loudly discussing the demerits of the college atmosphere. The author's whereabouts are unknown.

Roach to Make 32 Next Season; New Star Series

Hollywood—Charlie Chase, starring comedian for Hal Roach during the past five years, continues with that producer in a series of eight domestic talking comedies for next season, despite reports to the contrary.

Roach, however, has made an adjustment on the contract of Harry Langdon, and the latter leaves the organization to free lance as a featured comedian. His first spot is in a current Warner production.

In lining up his group of talker comedies for the year 1930-31 for M-G-M release, Roach will produce four series of eight subjects each. Laurel and Hardy, Our Gang and Charlie Chase will each star in individual groups, while the fourth group will be known as the Hal Roach Star Series. The latter will include the adventures of a group of youngsters of early high school age, still carrying out the general story idea of the Our Gang series.

Roach has already selected his six leads for this series. Two, Mickey Daniels and Mary Kornman, are grown up members of the original "Our Gang" troupe. The four others are David Sharpe, Gertrude Messinger, Grady Sutton and Dorothy Grainger. The producer expects to develop new screen talent via his Star Series, and is hopeful that at least one of the sextette will blossom forth for graduation into featured spots in regular productions.

Meyer Joins Music Unit

Abe Meyer, long associated with Hugo Riesenfeld and of late in charge of music for Tiffany in Hollywood, is now identified with Famous Music Co. in New York. This is the sheet music ally of Paramount, was formerly Spier and Coslow and is jointly owned with Warners.

Hays Code to Make Pictures "Pure as Lilies" Is Growing Fear in Hollywood

Cannot Trust Hollywood?

"It is hard to foresee any remedy" for the conflicting aspects of censorship, states the New York Herald-Tribune, in discussing the pros and cons of governmental regulation of films. "Hollywood, even under the benign influence of Mr. Hays, is hardly to be trusted with a free rein in the matter of 'movie taste,' states the publication, while on the other hand the national dictatorship in this respect of a little haphazard company of ill-paid clerks, anxious to justify their jobs by abusing their authority, seems even less tolerable. Perhaps we shall have to wait for the millennium when all 'movie' producers have developed a social conscience and all provincial meddlers a broad spirit of toleration before the screen can come into its own."

Hays to Tout 200 Films to Silence Critics' Roasts

Two hundred of the best pictures made, sound and silent, detailed and described in list form, will soon be made public by the Hays association and distributed widely throughout the United States as an answer to charges that pictures have lost caste and are deteriorating in quality.

Quietly the Hays office has been whipping the line up into shape and plans to herald public announcement of the titles with as broad a newspaper splurge as city editors and news associations can be persuaded to give it.

Bare Legs Out; Pictures Better, Censor Declares

Vancouver—During 1929, the board of British Columbia censored 2,160 subjects, passing 1,800 without change, ordering eliminations in 357, and rejecting 89.

J. Walters, chairman, stated that he believes "features are getting better as to story and direction. Talkers have brought a more wholesome interest. There is less of the elaborate society drama depicting the life of the rich as one of jazz."

He thinks "there is a tendency for sound dramas to present the unfolding of character and the real problems of human life rather than mere pageantry and exotic stories with bizarre dress and undress with bare legs and suggestive positions.

"Its continuance in that direction would, I think, improve the movies greatly. The tendency to exaggeration in all classes of life and people is a very serious defect. Producers have been overdoing the terrors of poverty, the glories of riches, the extremes of class distinction."

"What's It All About?" Is Widespread Query of Film Folks

Hollywood — A number of folks at the studios want to know where they get on and off under the new code of ethics. Unless definition is made, the impression is growing that all pictures from now on will be as pure as lilies and perhaps without dramatic punch or action.

This slant on the code came to light when about twenty megaphone wielders fired questions at Fred Beetson and Colonel Joy of the Hays organization when the latter appeared before the Directors' Branch of the Academy to define what the regulations were scheduled to regulate.

Discussion centered around idea that those directly dealing with production should have more specific instructions on application of each different clause, as present status made various "don'ts" matter of individual interpretation with some going farther than others.

Swinging into various pictures which had shown bad taste, all present condemned the profanity used in recent pictures, especially "The Cock-Eyed World," which was held up as a star example of what should not be done.

An apparent desire on the part of those present to eliminate conditions of dialogue, action, and situations that might offend the audiences was seen in several resolutions which were passed during the course of the meeting. One called on other branches of the Academy to cooperate in discussions which would result in clarifying the general interpretation of the code as now constituted.

Hearst Censor Stand Puzzles Film Circles

Hollywood—What's behind William Randolph Hearst's editorial stand for Federal censorship?

Here in Hollywood, where they make 'em, the question is being asked. It is reminded that Hearst, as partner in the Hearst-Fox Corp., has a large investment at stake in sound newsreels and annually spends plenty of money to make Cosmopolitan Productions.

There are many here who cannot reconcile his position as publisher with his position as producer. The latest blast which appeared in all Hearst newspapers throughout the country and in "The Examiner" here is construed as a direct crack at the new code of ethics, appearing as it did a few days after the code was made public.

The publisher is on record as advocating Federal censorship, but his latest tirade is the first in about eight months.

Synthetic Love Taboo?

Hollywood—Talking pictures have rendered the old style of love making obsolete. It must be 99-44/100 the real thing during the filming and microphoning of fiery passions, or the effect of the audible screen falls flat, in the opinion of Herbert Brenon, veteran director.

"The days of the silent film when the sweethearts were in the so-called clutch, with one of them thinking about what she was going to have for dinner and the other about his income tax, are over. The combination of close-up photography and synchronicled dialogue in depicting the tenderest emotions demands that the players feel with their hearts and souls what they are doing in order to make it convincing to the audience."

Differences of Opinion on New Code Predicted

Hollywood—"While there will be wide differences of opinion on the question of what is vulgar and what may have a tendency to incite to evil, the producers are working for better standards, and it is up to the public to support them, the box office speaking as loudly as the voice," declared Mrs. Thomas G. Winter, studio worker of the Hays organization, in commenting on the new code of ethics adopted by the M. P. P. D. A.

"If the code is heartily carried out not everyone will be satisfied, because there are extremists," Mrs. Winter stated.

The chief complaints which come to her, she said, deal with drinking scenes, vulgarities, particularly sex vulgarities, injected into good plays, and "the new code will touch on these."

Milwaukee Clubwomen Endorse Code of Ethics

Milwaukee—The principles of motion picture standards, recently laid down by Will H. Hays, were indorsed at a meeting of the better films committee of the Milwaukee County Federation of Women's Clubs at the Y. M. C. A. Members of the committee will use these principles as a basis in reviews of motion pictures.

Church Group Going Thru Files of Hays Organization

The Hays organization has agreed to place its home office files and records at the disposal of a committee from the Federal Council of Churches, which is investigating the status of relationship between the M. P. P. D. A. and various church groups.

Six New York Papers Editorially Knock Hays Code of Ethics; Three Approve It

"Sun" Hits Luke-Warm Spot; "News," "Mirror," "Journal" Were Silent

Six of New York's 13 newspapers took a sock at the Hays code of ethics, several of the unfriendly writers hurling sensational charges against Hays and the code, branding the new platform "silly," not to be taken "too seriously," "childish," "commercial," and "inspired" by Hays' "fear of the club women and the ministers."

The Graphic, The Telegraph and The Times were the only sheets which took up the cudgels in behalf of Hays and the code. The Sun was non-committal, while The News, The Mirror and The Journal remained silent on the practicability of the ethics code, the latter leaving the Hearst opinion in the hands of The American.

Hearst Favors Censorship

One of the most sensational editorial reactions to the new code appeared in the New York American, where William Randolph Hearst went on record as favoring "national public censorship." Under a full-page streamer, the Hearst sheet stated: "the moving picture industry apparently does not object to proper censorship. The only question is what constitutes proper censorship.

"Mr. Will Hays thinks that proper censorship is to have moving pictures censored by the moving picture industry.

"Experience does not seem to sustain Mr. Hays' contention. There is always a certain element in the industry which will not hesitate to make improper pictures and that element, if unchecked by law, would speedily bring discredit on the whole industry. * * *

"Censorship of pictures by the moving picture industry would probably not be any more effective than the attempted censorship of the stage by stage producers, and the consequence of the failure would probably be that more States would establish censorship than now possess it, and that there would be more variety and more pernicious variety of censorship than exist at the present. * * *

"Mr. Hays would better support the practical and practicable idea of national censorship.

"His self-censorship will never supplant public censorship, and a trial of it might make the situation for the moving picture producers a great deal worse than it is."

"Graphic" Against Censorship

In direct contrast to the Hearst editorial, The Graphic stated that "now that the film industry has gone to its present extremely liberal limits in restricting itself, it is time that every official censorship board meddling with the movie industry be put out of existence."

The MacFadden publication believes adoption of the code was "a wise step to avoid interference of meddling boards and agencies." "We think Will Hays has a clear notion of what is needed," the paper commented.

Charges Public Will Be Cheated

The Herald-Tribune received the code in an unfriendly manner. In discussing the self-government phase of the new step, the paper stated "the amount of self-government involved may be left to the imagination of those who know their Hollywood and who are acquainted at the same time with the barrage of invective lately leveled against the films from the pulpits of the land. In his statement announcing the new order, Mr. Hays acknowledges the assistance of church leaders and others in framing the code—a work of supererogation. * * *" This publication stated further:

"There is so much qualification and ambiguity in Mr. Hays's Magna Charter of 'movie' taste that one hesitates to take it too seriously.

"But assuming that its long list of taboos is not mere pretense, what becomes of the motion picture as a great educational agency, to say nothing of its freedom as an art? Let us grant that it is not one of its functions to mirror life in all its nakedness, that its primary object is entertainment; also that the large percentage of immature minds among the millions that flock to it and the rampant commercialism of its manufacture and distribution make some degree of social control essential. Yet is complete sterilization necessary or even prudent? If it is restricted to feeding its public pap, then the poorer that public's equipment for meeting the realities of existence and the more disastrous its disillusionment when it discovers the truth. The mawkish sentimentality of the "movies"—which, by the way, finds no critic among their influential mentors—provides the poorest kind of schooling for the citizens of a democracy who must face and solve the problems of their environment. What they need is a robust fare, properly seasoned and graduated, to be sure, but rich with the vitamins of fact. And this is exactly what Mr. Hays and his fellow Bowdlers now propose, apparently, to withhold from them."

"But Where Is Art?"

The Post editorial, appearing under the above caption, saw, "in Mr. Hays's new code for American movies and talkies * * * something calculated to bring a smile or a shudder to the sophisticated. The smile would spring from a sense of the childishness of it all and the shudder from its commercialism.

"In the childish aspect there is perfect faith. There is faith to believe that complete righteousness can be obtained by definitions and prohibitions. 'The love of man and woman,' Mr. Hays dared say, is still 'proper plot material for motion picture presentation.' We are glad he saved that out of the wreck, but, of course, 'the sanctity of the home' and 'the marriage institution shall be upheld' while 'adultery shall not be explicitly treated or justified' and 'scenes of passion shall not be introduced when not essential to the plot.' (Isn't there a joker here?) All this will make for 'the better standard in life.'

"But the shudder that accompanies them springs from the knowledge that they are laid upon the art of the moving picture by the same forces that laid Prohibition upon us; and, in such provisions, so forced, art itself has no consideration and no place. Everything is thought of in Mr. Hays's code except beauty and the artistic interpretation of it. Religion, righteousness, law, morals, commercialism, patriotism, international relations are there, but there is no flicker of recognition of the Great Goddess whom the motion picture should serve.

"Aided by the timidities of commercialism, the Canon Chases and the Bishop Cannons may drive an art to define its own censorship, but they can't force it to live up to their idea of the censorship definitions."

A Tough Job Ahead

"Motion picture producers face the primary difficulty of entertaining the largest audience in the world. If they can follow their self-imposed code and continue to provide entertainment they will be doing a good job," in the opinion of The Sun.

Give the "Kid" Credit

"The outstanding editorial conniption fits of the week were thrown over Will Hays's formal declaration that from this time now and on the talkies are going to be good, grave and gooey," writes the author of "Among Us Intellectuals," a column appearing in The Telegraph, who pointed out that "most of the sheets contented themselves with being sarcastic in the hard-boiled manner with which they customarily treat kindred subjects such as prohibition, stage censorship and the other manifestations of the blue nose shoved into places where it deserves a hammer.

"The World dug beneath the surface of the matter and produced a 1930 rendition of the intellectual criticism which was leveled against the first movie in history and doubtless will be fired at the last three—dimensional, technicolored, scented talkie; namely, that the fillums give bus boys and chambermaids wrong notions of the values of this mortal life.

"What all the sheets neglected to state—and they must know it—is that Pastor Hays has saved the movies from the more rancid of the moral regulators, has been and is a buffer between the celluloids and their ancient enemies, the unco guid.

"Give the kid credit for that anyway."

Calls Code "Silly"

"If the press agents are to be believed, the country's soul is saved again and the screen will shed nothing but purity and light," The Telegram stated.

"Poor Mr. Hays; he has a hard time," the Scripps-Howard paper reported. "Moses had only to consult Jehovah. But Will is caught between his movie bosses and the blue-nose censors. His solution seems to have been to assemble a lot of generalities as a sop to the censor without making them specific enough to trouble the producers.

"Those rules about 'use of liquor' and 'scenes of passion' are obviously meaningless. As for 'obscenity' and 'indecent,' those words may

Bold Racketeering Of Better Films Bodies Alleged

Coupled with a vigorous defense of the Hays organization, Mrs. Thomas A. McGoldrick, chairman of the motion picture bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae, has issued a statement charging that she "has watched with growing indignation efforts to 'racketeer' the many organizations which are trying to promote the cause of better motion pictures through cooperation with the industry."

The "latest racket," she alleges, "is to impugn the motives of the many representative organizations that are trying to express the requirements of public welfare" to the M. P. P. D. A. She further declares:

"It is significant that some of these charges are being brought by men who have actually demanded participation in gross receipts of pictures for the alleged services they render.

"There is no group in a better strategic position to answer such 'charges' than the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae," Mrs. McGoldrick continues. "We have worked intimately with Mr. Hays for eight years. We sat in at his first public relations committee meeting after his election, and have remained with him ever since. In these years his office has helped us build up a service for better pictures—a service just now accepted by 42 newspapers and broadcasted by nine radio stations. In these years we have never received one dollar of remuneration from the motion picture industry or the Hays office, and what is more important still, we have never been offered a penny from anyone connected with motion pictures. We have never been asked to do anything, to write anything, or to say anything which we had

Hays Used Office As Smoke Screen, Clergyman Says

Toledo — That Will H. Hays "has used his office and department as a smoke screen to prevent censorship" was charged by Rev. Paul Macy, pastor of a local church, at the regular meeting of the M. P. Council of the Toledo Federation of Women's Clubs.

Continuing his indictment, the clergyman declared when Hays "accepted that responsible position he stated he would give as much care to censoring and choosing pictures for the child as would a clergyman. In this respect, he has made a miserable failure. The movies have not improved in the last eight years."

Rev. Macy also criticized "lurid" and "sensational" advertising. He expressed himself as sympathetic toward exhibitor's problems, declaring that producers rather than exhibitors or local managers are responsible for tactics of that sort.

Some More Trouble

Hollywood — "With producers discreetly silent as to the new ethics code for the making of talking pictures, Hollywood faces the same problem which a few years back confronted silent pictures," reports Mollie Merrick, local correspondent for a news syndicate, who believes barring profanity, ridicule of law and sympathy for criminals, production is limited to the love story. "And the love story has been the Waterloo of the talking screen. The new edict, willingly subscribed to by the leading lots in the movie industry, hits at the most fertile source of story material today," she says.

Code Will Not Be Taken Seriously Watts Predicts

"If the recent stern edict from the office of the mosaic Mr. Will Hays were to be taken seriously, all of us optimists, who insist on regarding the motion picture as something potentially important, might as well pack up and go home," in the opinion of Richard Watts, dramatic editor of the New York Herald Tribune, who believes "this possibly desirable result is, however, hardly likely to follow from the sternness of the Haysian moral code, for the simple reason that no one takes the edict from the dictator with proper seriousness. We all know that any rules set down for the conduct of the cinema will be adhered to just as long as the producers regard them as economically profitable, and no longer. We all realize that the pictures will go right on in their customary manner, with the same innocuous moral tone they have always displayed. Then, too, there is the curiously widespread suspicion that the whole thing is just an ambitious smoke-screen against the attacks on the cinema that are always being led by sainted reformers. * * *

"No Chance" of Code Adherence

"It might conceivably prove quite entertaining to see the films conducted under such rules of conduct for a time, but there is no chance of it. There will be just as much drinking shown on the screen as ever before, and as many gangster heroes and attempts to imitate the ribaldry of 'The Cock-Eyed World.'

"As a matter of fact, it is something of a tribute, to the films that Mr. Hays and his colleagues should find it necessary to issue this ridiculous moral code. It shows, rather definitely, that somewhere in Hollywood there is a genuine revolt against that innocuous, flabby, immature spirit that has, through the exigencies of commerce pervaded the cinema. Obviously it has always been to the economic advantage of the films to present themes that would offend nobody. The dry would be annoyed by seeing drinking on the screen, while the wet would hardly be disturbed by the mere absence of libation scenes. Therefore the natural thing for the cinema was to leave such episodes alone. It was equally natural to provide films that would annoy none of such powerful groups as the women's clubs, the patriotic societies, the children's welfare organizations, the Pennsylvania censors and the law and order enthusiasts. The fact that the cinema has dared to present enough opposition to the various desires of these well organized people to meet with the reproof of Mr. Hays is at least a tribute to a certain inherent daring on the part of poor, scorned Hollywood.

"When you consider the tremendous economic handicaps that they must face, you can hardly doubt the courage of those few valiant spirits that insist on putting just a trace of maturity into their films. When Von Stroheim made his epochal 'Greed' he

Good Old Days Ended by Hays' Nice Beatitudes?

"If there are going to be no sex talkies, there's a great chance for an oyster to star in place of Greta Garbo," in the opinion of Neal O'Hara, New York columnist, who predicts a "tough season for picture addicts who like their sex appeal laid on thick."

"Every movie producer of importance," states O'Hara, "has taken the pledge to love, honor and obey" the new code of ethics recently adopted by the Hays organization. "But wait till they start making pictures under them!

"Poor Clara Bow! When Clara comes on the lot and starts churning up her 'it' they will reach for the fire extinguishers. If Clara expects to stay in the films, she will have to play Little Eva in 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' and die inside of three reels.

Civic Leaders Deny Receipt Of Hays Money

Thirteen organizations, including the Russell Sage Foundation, the Boy Scouts of America and the D. A. R. issued a statement denying assertions made in the newspapers that they have received financial support from the Hays organization, and praising Mr. Hays and his work. The statement follows:

"In view of the intimations that have recently appeared in the public press that the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., have given financial support to representatives of various civic, religious and welfare organizations and to individuals who were associated in the former Public Relations Committee on motion pictures, it seems desirable that the facts in this matter should be definitely and authoritatively stated.

Resent Implications

"We, who in the course of our work for our respective organizations, and as individuals, have come into contact with the Motion Picture Producers and mean everything or nothing, depending on changing social customs and creeds and upon whether the individual's mind is clean or dirty.

"In explaining his code, Hays summarizes a list of subjects which must be treated, as he says, 'within the careful limits of good taste.'

"But there the usually wily Will gives the whole show away.

"Taste is a matter of education and culture and intelligence; it is the difference between the civilized and the uncivilized. That is why the play which seems most highly 'moral' to the puritan censor offends one of fine culture as vulgar, cheap and dishonest.

"We believe that the public interest and the public moral code of the day are adequately protected by the ordinary criminal statutes against indecency and the ordinary functioning of our judicial machinery with jury trial.

"We wish Hays's organization had the courage to fight the censors, instead of parroting their unclean prohibitions and then proceeding by evasion to make the whole business double dirty.

"If the American people can be trusted to govern themselves they can be trusted to do their own movie censoring—the only kind of healthy censorship.

"We would rather accept the morals and taste of the American public, as registered at the box-office and protected by the jury box, than the morals and taste of Hays or the censors as set down in this latest silly code."

Sees Hope in New Code

"Self-control is more desirable than compulsory good behavior enforced by the law, and a glance at the provisions of the new code indicates that the producers intend to be void of offense," The Times writer pointed out.

"Every one will wish Mr. Hays and his associates success in self-censorship," he says, and, continuing: "It has been tried on a less magnificent scale and worked well. Last May the Mayor of Dallas, defying many of the churches and women's clubs, told the theatre managers that he would trust them not to show pictures of a doubtful nature and that their good behavior would make Dallas one of the few censorless towns of the South. It is reported that there has been no criticism of the programs by citizens, not even by those who wanted censorship. The managers say that they have voluntarily refused bookings which they would have tried to slip past a censor. This example seems hopeful for the larger and wider code."

"Morals for Profit"

The World (morning) slam-banged the Hays's code and picture production in no uncertain style. They spared no one's feelings. "Hot" charges of "morals for profit" was the editorial keynote. Gov. Carl Milliken, Hays's secretary, replied to the charges in The World's open forum immediately after appearance of the editorial, which stated:

"Mr. Will Hays descended from Sinai * * * and presented the world with a code of morals which is to govern the motion picture industry. * * *

"This ought to sound tremendous and awe-inspiring, but somehow it is hard to take it very seriously. Why should it be hard to take the Hays code seriously? Probably because this grandiose and synthetic declaration is patently the homage which the box office pays to virtue. To put it more specifically Mr. Hays is afraid of the women's clubs and the ministers. They have the power in many communities to hurt the motion picture business. It is this fact, rather than any love of virtue for its own sake, which has inspired him to assemble in one code all the known counsels of perfection. The ideal which inspires the code is to make films which can be shown without interference or objection in each of the 22,000 theatres * * * If the ministers and the women's clubs had [illegible] yet, and were to [illegible] he brought in to see the films by [illegible] a different code, Mr. Hays, we take it, [illegible] had a different code. In short, the code [illegible] nothing but Mr. Hays's shrewdest estimate of what is the most profitable statement of policy for the motion picture industry to make at this particular time.

Sincere Application Expected

"That the code will actually be applied in any sincere and thorough way we have not the slightest belief. It expresses neither what the best nor the worst directors and writers and actors in Hollywood think, but what Mr. Hays and the magnates think it would be good business for them to give the appearance of thinking. The effort to live up to the appearance will run against the fact that many things outlawed in the Hays code are enormously profitable. The best brains of the industry will, therefore, have to consider how to merge the appearance of virtue with the attractions of sin, retaining the most profitable features of both. As a result hypocrisy at least ought henceforth to be practiced as a fine art in Hollywood.

"In any serious consideration of such a moral code as this one, the most noticeable feature is its careful omission of any of the virtues which have to do with truth. Yet the deepest evil of the movies does not arise from the crooks and the bedroom scenes and the bathing girls but from a vicious falsification of human values. One could censor out of the movies everything that Senator Smoot and Mr. John Sumner might object to without touching the immorality of the films. Such a censorship would not touch the fact that the movies reflect a view of life in which men have gotten rich so quickly and furiously that they have lost all sense of the burden of man's destiny. For what good is it to protect an adolescent boy or girl against seeing a too passionate embrace on the screen if all the rest of the picture is devoted to impressing them with the notion that they will be happy if they have a Hollywood bungalow and a high-powered motor? If the professional moralists had a little more moral insight they would realize that this, the materialism of the movies, their constant celebration of the acquisitive and competitive instincts, is far more deeply degrading, even to the sexual life of an adolescent, than ribaldry or coarseness. And if the professional moralists had read and pondered the teachings of the great moralists they would find them little concerned about the things which bother Brother Hays and deeply concerned about the things which he, as a go-getter and fixer, will never comprehend.

Cites a Lost Hope

"This real evil of the movies arises out of the fact that a motion picture is such a very expensive thing to make. Because it is so expensive it must make a wholesale appeal. Because it must make a wholesale appeal it has to be produced by magnates. Because it is produced by magnates it expresses the magnates and the code of morals by which they became magnates. Here and there a camera man, a director, a writer, an actor accidentally and incidentally does an honest and beautiful thing. But normally the monstrous wholesale profit-making machine grinds on and on, devouring the talents which it hires, and doing more to undermine taste and custom and popular integrity than schools, universities and churches can hope to restore."

Queries Hays' Authority

The Evening World thinks the new code of ethics platform adopted by the producers is needed.

"Mr. Hays was called to his present position," says The World, "at a time when a series of scandals involving men and women of the film world, together with the trend to a rather undesirable kind of picture, was creating sentiment hostile to the new industry. He was described in the beginning as a sort of moral censor. His function was to create a better feeling between the producers and the public.

"We do not know how far Mr. Hays's authority extends, but, apropos of the scandal in the Pathe Film studio fire in which eleven employees were burned to death, his authority ought to go far enough to make it possible for the dictator of the industry to force the producers to observe the laws passed for the protection of employees and public. Here is a case where eleven lives were lost because of an utterly contemptuous disregard of the law. If the organized industry, with a man at the head charged with maintaining friendly relations between the industry and the public, has no supervision over its units in this regard, it should have. Anything that indicates a disregard of law by a great industry tends to create sentiment against it."

Snoopers' Salaries

Toronto—The Ontario Board of Moving Picture Censors is costing the government $29,225 yearly. Of this sum the chairman, J. C. Boylan, gets $3,500; the vice-chairman, $2,700, and three others, $2,500 each. Two projectionists are paid $2,000 each, other expenses making up the amount. The grant for the Ontario government film studio at Trenton is $117,725.

Pre-Censorship Plan Operating In Hollywood

Hollywood—A [illegible] censorship by members of the Producers' Association [illegible] of the Hays organization [illegible] functioning with most of the kinks removed. When Will H. Hays was here on his semi-annual visit, he persuaded producers that the new method of approving pictures from the script was a considerable improvement over the former when all productions were viewed in New York in completed form and changes then made by shipping prints back to the coast.

The new system [illegible] the method for the past six months. Under it, producers submit scripts to a reading department organized for the purpose.

Jason Joy the Boss

The reading is done under direction of the Hays' organization Public Relations Department, of which Col. Jason Joy is local head. His staff comprises John D. Wilson, John P. Hutchins, Douglas G. McKinnon and James B. M. Fisher. In addition, Florence Eisenman and Betty Neely are employed as readers.

Joy's staff covers all features and comedies produced by members of the Producers' Association. Recommendations are made for revising scripts where situations and dialogue are not in good taste, or where they might possibly offend a particular nation or country. After a script is passed, there is a further follow up in viewing the completed picture.

All Pictures Covered

By this system, the Public Relations Department covers every picture, whether feature or short subject via a double check to keep objectionable material down to a minimum, besides insuring producers that difficulties will not be encountered when pictures are shown in foreign countries.

If a specific production carries a foreign locale, or deals with characters of a certain nationality, Joy's department consults an accredited representative of that country with which the story deals on the script layout. The recommendations for changes, or script approval, are then forwarded to the producer planning the production.

Columbia, Tiffany Works As a Hays Non-Member

Tiffany and Columbia were not elected members of the M. P. P. D. A. at the recent annual meeting, despite current reports to the contrary. Their applications are still being held in abeyance, although both companies have been working closely with the Hays organization for many months. They agreed with the Hays members to abide by the new code of ethics at its adoption.

Too Much Advice and Other Troubles Ease Balaban Out of Production Job

In the Springtime—

Hollywood—A film actress, at liberty for some time and reduced to the necessity of doing her own cooking, went into a meat market the other day for spring lamb, and asked the butcher to be sure to take out the springs.

First Quarter's Income Highest For Paramount

Paramount, despite the talk of hard times, is reported to have done the biggest business in its history for the first quarter of this year. While figures are not available, the earnings are expected to be in excess of the same period in 1929, when the net income was $2,565,000, after all charges were deducted, or approximately 13 per cent. greater than the similar period in 1928, up to that time the best first quarter.

Popularity of sound pictures is given the credit for this showing, and it is believed that the year will beat 1929, the most prosperous in the company's annals.

Publix Official Reports Increase for 1st Quarter

San Francisco—Motion picture theatres throughout the country report a new attendance record for the past three months, according to Ralph E. Crabill, director of the Western Division of Publix Theatres.

"The amusement business is always the first to feel the pressure of hard times," said Crabill. "The report of the greatest gross business and the greatest first quarter profits in the history of Publix Theatres is an excellent index to present conditions."

Theatre budgets for advertising are higher than any other year, Cahill said.

Wilcox Lands U. K. Film, One of Few, with M-G-M

One of the few outside pictures to be annexed by it for distribution here in the United States, "Rookery Nook," produced by British and Dominions Films of London, has been acquired by M-G-M.

Charles Wilcox closed the deal with Nicholas M. Schenck.

Col. Cooper to England

Toronto—Col. J. A. Cooper, president of the M. P. D. E. A. of Canada, will sail on May 15 for England, to confer with trade leaders, censors and others, including officers of the Performing Rights Society

Reported That Chicagoan Didn't Click as Paramount Supervisor

Too many attempts at telling A. J. Balaban how to make pictures for the theatre department are responsible for his resignation as chief of short subject production at the Paramount Long Island studio.

A. J. Balaban

Balaban went over to Astoria some months ago under a plan which called for production of Publix units in celluloid for use over the entire chain with the exception of the Paramount theatres in New York, several others in the East and a couple of the Balaban and Katz houses in Chicago. The idea was to further the all-sound policy which the circuit has been trying to develop.

There followed a lot of discussion and not much production—with the result that now, on the eve of Balaban's retirement from the studio, only one stage unit, "Listen to Lester," has been completed. This is in the editing stage.

At the Long Island studio the general opinion is that Balaban never fully grasped production essentials, and that this factor, plus efforts on the part of the Publix home office to dictate policy and types of pictures, resulted in the resignation. Paramount has nothing to say in answer to questions.

Balaban was one of the organizers of Balaban and Katz. His showmanship experience in Chicago was the factor which influenced the plan to place him in production.

The resignation becomes effective May 3. Thirteen days later Balaban sails for a long European vacation.

Chicago — Local Publix-B. & K. officials are at a loss to explain the resignation of A. J. Balaban in New York.

"He has worked hard for many years," said one. "No doubt he needs and will appreciate some well earned relaxation, now made possible."

Gratitude

Oklahoma City—The Criterion, Capitol, Ritz and Victoria are staging a "Thank You Celebration" this month in appreciation of exceptionally good winter patronage this year.

M. P. Relief Fund Demands Force Second Drive

Hollywood—Although $76,000 was raised for the benefit of the Motion Picture Relief Fund during the recent drive among the studios, the amount falls far short of the actual requirements of the industry's own charity organization for the coming year.

The fund has operated for several years, being supported by a small group of prominent leaders in the industry headed by Mary Pickford. Every worthy case brought to the attention of fund officials has been taken care of, but through the publicity developed during the recent drive for funds, the organization has been swamped with requests.

With these conditions facing executives of the organization, it is intended to contact all those prominent people in the local colony who did not contribute while the regular drive was on in March. By this method, it is expected to bring the total amount available up to at least $100,000.

Beetson Staged Drive

The regular drive, staged under direction of Fred Beeston, successfully topped the quota of $75,000 which was originally set. Beetson organized and mapped out a campaign that provided for six captains in every studio; each captain to solicit funds from workers in his particular line.

When the original quota was set, the amount of funds needed to operate during the year was set in accordance with anticipated requests for aid as based on the past year. But since the drive, the association has had triple the number of cases brought to its attention for assistance.

At the present time, the association has 15 cases under its care at the Windsor hospital in Glendale, besides 14 in other hospitals and institutions. The funds pay all charges for care and attention besides medical aid. Then there are a large number of semi-invalid cases being taken care of in private homes where the upkeep expense is less.

Relief fund officials are planning various methods of raising additional monies so that all needy cases of unfortunates in the industry can be taken care of. One project planned is the purchase of a large tract on which to construct a hospital and home. This is expected to cost about $300,000, but will help solve the pressing situation that is confronting the relief fund at this time.

R-K-O Hurls Defiance at B. and K. In Struggle for Windy City Supremacy

Wants Talker Rights

Hollywood—With Sam Goldwyn and Flo Ziegfeld established as partners in the production via films of several former Ziegfeld stage spectacles and musical comedies, Will Rogers rises to ask for the exclusive privilege of listening in on the conferences and battles of the pair.

Rogers should know his comedy—likewise Goldwyn and Ziegfeld—for he has worked for both of them during the past 15 years.

Mitzi, the Riot

Pretty much the bright light in "Honey," Nancy Carroll's "sweeter than 'Sweetie'" talker, is little Mitzi Green, nine-year-old daughter of Harry Green who is no slouch himself when it comes to comedy business. Mitzi is a born comedienne, has a voice that makes the "mike" chuckle with delight and approaches perilously close to the much-coveted distinction of being a riot all unto herself.

Paramount Tops Publix in Plan To Change Name

The Publix name is to give way to Paramount-Publix as a result of an anticipated decision of the stockholders to change the name of the company from Paramount Famous-Lasky Corp. to Paramount-Publix at a meeting to be held in New York on Tuesday.

With the name change will come the expense of making the necessary alterations on electric signs of houses comprising the big circuit. The tip-off of what was to come came to light months ago when the company began to switch the names of Publix houses in the Middle West to Paramount. Wherever Publix operates at least one house will be dubbed Paramount.

Baltimore to Be 2-Time Town After April 27

Baltimore—Firms who have indicated willingness to adopt daylight saving are expected to put it into effect April 27. Meanwhile, opponents of the proposal are seeking a city poll on the subject.

Boyd Stepping Out as Penn "Battle" Impends

Philadelphia—With Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum reported planning extentive theatre building and acquisition throughout this territory, Al Boyd, head of A. R. Boyd enterprises, is losing no time whipping his expansion program into shape. He has purchased the Embassy, Allentown, which he has been operating under lease, and has leased the Globe at Bethlehem, which will be remodeled for reopening Labor Day.

W. & V. Not Selling, But Is Expanding Instead

Reading, Pa.—Having determined against sale of the circuit to Warners, Wilmer & Vincent are planning a series of expansion moves in the Pennsylvania sector. The first will be a $1,000,000 house here on Penn St., site for which has just been secured.

Bad Blood Brews Over First Run Situation in the "Loop" District

Chicago—It looks as if the bad blood engendered between R-K-O and B. and K. over advertising is about to fester into something more deadly.

R-K-O is scouting the "Loop" for a theatre site, while B. and K., who naively enough denies plans for further expansion on the North and South Sides, is holding in reserve a plot on Wacker Drive and State Street as a site on which to build the minute somebody decides to enter the "Loop."

It's getting to look more and more like trouble. Now that B. and K. has reclaimed the Belmont from R-K-O, in accordance with provisions included in the original lease, stories of activities in the neighborhoods in retaliation are cropping up. R-K-O is said to be dickering for several North Side spots that may prove to be competition for the Belmont. Just what they are is not known.

The Lincoln, mentioned as one, is an improbability. Improvements contemplated by the bureau of streets of the city resulted in condemnation proceedings against the Lincoln, which stands in the way of a street widening plan which, when completed, will cut the house in half, thereby reducing its seating possibilities so that it would be no competition for the Belmont. The Strand and other neighborhood houses available have been closed for some time. B. and K. it is said, may further entrench itself on the South Side by building a de luxe house on the 63rd Street and Halsted spot it has owned for a number of years.

Sound Equipment Placed in Roosevelt's Mansion

Albany—Governor Roosevelt will now be able to listen to the latest in talking pictures. An up-to-date sound apparatus was installed in the executive mansion this week, with Assemblyman Charles J. Peters, of Utica, making the presentation speech. Up to now the Governor has seen but one talking picture in his life, the executive mansion having been equipped with an old type projector. On account of his physical disability, Governor Roosevelt, while fond of motion pictures, has never been able to attend the theatre.

Wood Back on M-G-M Lot

Hollywood—M-G-M has signed a new term contract with Sam Wood, who completed his former contract with "Father's Day." Following his direction of the first film with the Duncan Sisters, Wood is reported to have fallen into disfavor with the M-G-M moguls. Now the difficulties have apparently been patched up.

Nacio Sings in The Rain to the Tune of $54,000

Hollywood—No wonder Nacio Herb Brown felt that way when he wrote "Singing in the Rain." It has developed during the hearing of his wife's suit for separate maintenance that Nacio's income from turning out theme songs was so large that it made a star's salary look like pin money. In fact, Mrs. Brown could not tell exactly what hubby's earnings were, but she got $750 a month temporary alimony.

The songster's wife said that she had been spending $1,500 a month; that he was accustomed to getting checks for $5,000 and $20,000 and "other large sums," mentioning specifically two checks, for $13,000 and $28,000.

However, Brown himself fixed his 1929 income at $54,000. Out of a check for $25,700, received on March 1, he admitted that he had only $4,200 left. He said he had been unable to work for some time 'owing to this trouble." Mrs. Brown countered with the charge that he had become infatuated with Doris Eaton, film actress.

Montreal to Have Central Exchange Building May 1

Montreal—The brand [illegible] is considered as one of the finest exchange buildings in existence has been set for May 1, and preparations are being made for ceremonial dedication. The building is two floors high and occupies a city block with a frontage of 256 feet. All office suites are individual and self-contained to reduce the fire risk. Many of the local exchanges are preparing to move into the new structure which is situated in Montreal West.

Government May Turn Searchlight on Circuits as Chain Store Probe Ends

Federal Trade Commission Is Expected to Investigate Chain Theatres

Washington—Belief that the Federal Trade Commission may put its corps of investigators on the trail of chain theatres, as it is doing now with chain stores of every description, is general in well-informed circles, although no officials will admit such a procedure. However, the "inside dope" appears to be strong enough for observers to predict that the commission has laid plans to inquire into the methods used in forming the motion picture theatre combines.

Nothing will be done for the time being, as the chain store inquiry is still pending, having been undertaken by direct mandate of the Senate. The resolution ordering the probe made no mention of chain theatres, but it is believed possible that if legislation affecting chain stores is enacted, it may be followed by consideration of the circuit situation.

Theatre Problem Intricate

If the commission delves into chain theatres it will find itself up against a far more intricate problem than in the case of stores, since there are two types of chain theatres—the producer-owned or controlled, and the independent. The former consists of theatres in which producers have ownership or other interest, used as outlets for their own productions largely; the latter of houses strung together by an exhibitor who usually has started out with one or two theatres.

There is an analogous situation in the store chains. There are, for instance, the Regal, Douglas and other shoe chains operated by producers as outlets for their own products, and the "Independent" chains such as the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company. The commission, however, is not so much concerned with the former. It is the latter group that is being most closely studied, for these stores sell the same products as do the independent individuals—trade-marked commodities often, and the commission is concerned with studying the comparative prices of chain and individual stores and how the former, with its great buying power, is able to purchase at prices under those quoted the individual.

Paramount Case Cited

The Federal Trade Commission has already had one experience with chain theatres. In the still-pending Paramount case, the ownership by a producer of theatres was one of the issues, the commission charging that such ownership, in effect, acted in restraint of trade and competition. That issue, however, fell by the wayside, along with many other charges in the original complaint.

It must be emphasized that there is a great deal of difference between the commission's chain store investigation and its formal proceedings. The commission was created for the purpose of stamping out unfair trade practices, but also is a medium through which Congress makes industrial investigations. The chain-store inquiry falls in the latter class, and the responsibility of the commission extends no further than the compilation of the necessary data; what will be done with that information then is up to Congress.

Neither the chain stores nor the chain theatre is a new development. The former is probably very nearly 100 years old. The latter has been known for many years; probably the outstanding example years ago being the Keith circuit. It is only within the past few years that chains have achieved an economic importance, some of the chains consisting not of dozens but of thousands of stores. Since the World War chain stores have expanded to a point where they exercise a tremendous influence upon trade and the fear now is expressed that they may climb to the pinnacle of trusts, with the independent individual merchant practically eliminated. That is why Congress has ordered them investigated.

Al Steffes in Radio Talk Stresses Duty

Minneapolis — For years they've been pegging Al Steffes, head of the Northwest exhibitor unit, as a bolshevist, but Al has given the local gang something to think about by his strong pleas for contract enforcement. Recently, in a letter Steffes urged exhibitors of the territory to meet their agreements. This he has supplemented by a radio talk, stressing the importance of exhibitors fulfilling their obligations. He now is in New York helping to write a new contract.

Wilful Violation Of Copyright Is Indictment Need

Philadelphia—Wilful violation of the copyright law must be shown to make violation a criminal offense in bicycling and holdover cases, U. S. Attorney Charles Denby, Jr., told "The Exhibitor" in explaining the government's action in dropping prosecution of Harry Perlman, local exhibitor. The case was brought by the government at the instance of the Copyright Protection Bureau.

The exhibitor's defense was that he had authority from exchange subordinates for holding over prints longer than specified in the contract. The court indicated, he said, that this was sufficient to negative charges of wilful bicycling or holding over, which is necessary for criminal prosecution.

Stanley Company Earns $1,179,976 in Quarter

Quarterly earnings of Stanley Co. for period ending Nov. 30, 1929, reached $1,179,976, net, after all charges, including Federal taxes, but not embracing "extraordinary" profits arising from the sale of investments.

Bad Blood Held Cause of R-K-O Shakeup in N. W.

Minneapolis—Complete reorganization of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum division here has been completed by J. L. McCurdy, division manager, who recently succeeded Claud Saunders as district head. The shakeup is the biggest local upheaval in years. Bad blood extending down to the ushers, who went on strike last week, is said to have been the cause for the upheaval. The shakeup followed appointment of Nate Blumberg to assistant manager of the circuit with headquarters in Chicago.

Frank Burke, who has been with the organization five years, resigned as district exploitation representative rather than remain as manager of the President, St. Paul, to which he had been transferred. Edward Furni, for 15 years a manager in Minneapolis, St. Paul, Duluth and Winnipeg, also is out. The new district manager at the Hennepin-Orpheum here is Herbert Elisburg, in charge of the Twin Cities, Omaha and Denver.

Al Haynie, former Publix man, brought here by R-K-O several months ago, goes from management of the Seventh Street to management of the Hennepin-Orpheum. E. R. Franke, Milwaukee, is new manager of the Seventh Street. "Buddy" Priest, assistant publicity man at the Hennepin-Orpheum, has resigned.

Haynie attempted to organize the ushers along Publix lines, replacing the girls with boys. The service was in effect one week, when a walkout took place at the three Twin City houses. Ushers, many of them former Publix employes, are said to have been promised promotions as junior executives, salary increases and other concessions if they made good. After working a week, they were told of payroll cuts and walked out as a consequence. New forces were hired next day, and no old employes taken back. The strife was the first by ushers in the Twin Cities.

'29-30 Columbia Earnings May Reach $9.25 a Share

Current fiscal earnings of Columbia Pictures are expected to hit $9.25 per share, a high mark. New dividend basis will be established shortly for the stock.

Producers on Merry-Go-Round Due to Problem of Foreign Language Talkers

Local Censors Annoying

Hollywood—The big censorship problem today is not state control but local supervision over pictures in various communities throughout the nation. Colonel Jason Joy of the Hays' association is understood to have made this statement in outlining the new code to the Directors' Branch of the Academy. The job, he said, is to attempt to fashion production so that pictures are not cut to pieces when released.

under contract, by paying one-half their rental price, and five per cent of pictures on a percentage contract without payment. Whether one-half of the score charge should be paid for a picture not shown is to be paid, is one of the questions not acted upon. If the exhibitor defaults on such payments, the right of cancellation would be revoked. The exhibitor would receive credit of one-half the license fee in event the film is resold.

The contract proposals also will include retention of a majority of other clauses of the present standard contract, with changes and clarifications.

It is proposed that the short form contract contains provision for delivery of sound-on-film prints or of prints with disc recording. The voluntary arbitration agreement would be contained in this short form,

Amos 'n Andy in Talker On 1930-1931 RKO List

Amos 'n Andy, reputed to be the greatest drawing cards in ether entertainment, have been signed by RKO to star in one talker. The deal was made with the National Broadcasting Co. which is tied into the Radio family via RCA. The picture will be one of the early 1930-1931 releases.

2 Music License Suits At East St. Louis, Ill.

East St. Louis, Ill.—De Sylva, Brown & Henderson, New York music publishers, has brought a music license suit against Louis Menges of the State, and Remick Music Corp., has brought similar action against Ferd and Helen Ditzenberg, St. Clair. Infringement of copyright is charged in both instances.

"U" Re-Signs Three

Hollywood—Universal has renewed contracts for additional periods with Barbara Kent, William Wyler and Tom Reed.

Technicolor Cuts Prices, Allowing Contract Credits

Hollywood—Technicolor, which recently announced a cut in prices, explains that the saving to the producers, which it estimates will amount to $1,300,000, will be effected by allowing producers credit allowances on their existing print contracts. The major producers have been contracting for footage in Technicolor at a specific rate, but the company now is billing all companies in accordance with the contract price, but giving the following credit allowances: 1 cent per foot for prints where disc sound is used and 1.15c with sound track on film. The cut was made possible, officials stated, through increased capacity.

Grauman to Road Show "Hell's Angels" at $2

Hollywood—Negotiations pending between Sid Grauman and Howard Hughes are now set. Grauman is to take over road showing of "Hell's Angels" throughout the country and perhaps abroad.

Protest Against French Duty Increase Planned

Paris—Protest against increase in duties upon American films is planned by Harold Smith, representative here for the Hays association. The proposed increase, to be effective May 1, is via the indirect method of raising the arbitrary value of imported films.

"U" Promotes Two

Lou B. Metzger, general manager of Universal and head of the sales department, has appointed Leo M. Devaney, Detroit manager, to assistant eastern sales manager, with headquarters in New York, and G. E. Rosenwald is elevated from western division manager to assistant western sales manager, with headquarters in San Francisco.

Mack Transferred East

Hollywood—Roy Mack, director of Vitaphone Varieties musical shorts for Warners during the past year, is being transferred to the New York studios. Bryan Fox remains on the coast in charge of Vitaphone Varieties production.

Hollywood Prepares to Combat Foreign Activity in Multi-Linguals

[illegible] by the [illegible] foreign language countries, [illegible] by producers, who are greatly concerned over the prestige of American pictures abroad.

Emergency measures have taken the form of production of multi-linguals in Hollywood, with foreign language players engaged, but these moves are regarded as but a temporary stop-gap for the inroads being made because of language difficulties abroad.

Some producers are convinced that the solution is production of pictures in each foreign language country, particularly Germany, France and Spain. Steps toward this end are being carried forward.

The need for speed is seen in the activity of European producers in seeking to effect combines against American pictures. With Klangfilm Tobis' power shutting out practically all but Warner-controlled pictures in Germany, plans are under way for English, French and German combinations which will seek to cop the lead abroad from American pictures.

In some countries subtitles are being used in an effort to bridge language difficulties, while in others domestic-made talkers already are getting a good play.

In line with plans for foreign language talkers, Jesse L. Lasky sails Friday for Europe, accompanied by his assistant, Albert Kaufman. A week later, Adolph Zukor is to join them, and the party will travel together for two weeks. Lasky and Kaufman end their trip May 6 in order to be on hand for the annual Paramount sales convention May 15 at Atlantic City.

Foreign Language Problem Is Tackled by Shauer

Problem of foreign language talkers is being tackled by Melville A. Shauer, who this week became head of Paramount's foreign production activities. For the last two years Shauer has been special representative of the foreign department, with headquarters in Paris. His new post was just created by Jesse L. Lasky. Shauer now headquarters in New York.

Ruth Wilde Trust Fund

Hollywood—The seven-year-old daughter of the late Ted Wilde, who died while directing a Harold Lloyd picture last fall, is to have a trust fund of $50,000, her mother, Phyllis Andrews, told a Probate court judge in seeking to be appointed administratrix. Miss Andrews will return to the screen to help create the fund.

Theatres Dispute Right to Show "U" Production

Baltimore—A court battle over the right to exhibit Universal's "Captain of the Guard" is being waged here, with the Rivoli instituting a suit for an injunction to restrain the Auditorium from showing the picture which, under its previous title of "La Marsellaise," had been advertised in the Rivoli lobby for a number of weeks.

The picture opened at the Auditorium on April 4 and on that day the Wilson Amusement Co., operating the Rivoli, filed the suit against the James L. Kernan Co., operating the Auditorium; the Interstate Film Co., Universal Film Exchanges, Inc., and the Universal Pictures Corp., an attorney from the home office of the latter being present.

Requiring the Rivoli to post a $12,000 bond, Judge Dawkins granted the injunction against the Auditorium, but at the close of the two and a half hour hearing the Kernan Co. was given permission to show the production if it posted bonds totaling $30,000.

It was claimed by the Rivoli that "Captain of the Guard" had never been rejected by that theatre although a telegram from the distributors stated that before "Captain of the Guard" had been offered the Auditorium, the Rivoli had rejected it.

The picture opened at the Auditorium Friday night, April 4, and continued there throughout the week beginning April 7. It is understood the Auditorium has an option to run it three weeks thereafter, if it chooses to. The top price for the engagement was raised to $1.

Rosenbush and Bernstein, attorneys for the Rivoli, have sent out registered letters to all first-run theatres in Baltimore stating that if any Universal picture is run without first being rejected by the Rivoli, court action will be taken in the matter.

The trial of the suit is scheduled to come up soon.

Lloyd Signs Barbara Kent

Harold Lloyd has signed Barbara Kent as leading lady in his forthcoming all-talking picture, "Feet First," which will be distributed by Paramount. Miss Kent was borrowed from Universal. She was leading lady for the comedian in "Welcome Danger," his first talker.

R-K-O to Make "Iron Trail"

Hollywood—RKO has purchased talker production rights to "The Iron Trail" and will make picture for next season. Jane Murfin is adapting and dialoguing the story. With "The Silver Horde" this gives this company two Rex Beach yarns.

Talkers vs. Radio

Chicago—In a newspaper interview this week Superintendent of Schools William Bogan asserted that in his opinion talkers will replace radios in the public schools.

Daring Dave's Deeds

Dave Bader's back in town and the old brain is still clicking. As soon as he sat down at his desk he reached for his Ediphone and dictated the following letter to Red Kann:

"Back from the land of snow storms, and er, er, er—Therefore brought back the enclosed momento of that glorious city—Chicago. Nothing to do with any of your remarks, wise cracks, or write-ups, nor of my esteem of you. Just a gift from the Windy City."

The envelope contained four bullets.

U. S. Financing For Australian Circuit Sought

American capital will be sought for development of theatre construction in Australia and New Zealand by the Fuller variety circuit which is sending a representative to New York for the purpose. This representative, due in New York this month, will consolidate agreements for the wiring of the Fuller and Williamson circuits. The firm has renamed its Fuller at Sydney the Roxy. It has been wired as have vaudeville houses at Melbourne, Adelaide and Brisbane. All of the circuit's houses will switch to pictures.

Ufa Shows Educationals Only at Sunday Matinees

Berlin—Ufa has instituted an innovation in its theatres in Berlin with the introduction of Sunday educational matinees, at which only educational films are shown. The Ufa management assumes that the community of educational-fans is much larger than generally anticipated and that many intellectuals may be added to the number of film friends if they are occasionally offered a full program of educational shorts. Recently the Kammerlichtspiel, Ufa theatre in the center of Berlin, has been showing an exclusive program of educational shorts on Sundays with much success. The experiment has been so satisfactory that Ufa has decided to introduce these educational matinees as a regular institution.

Screen Struck Damsels Seem Stuck by Slicker

San Francisco—Dreams of a score of San Francisco girls of being glorified on the silver screen were rudely shattered with the arrest of Bobbie de Selen, alias Sellan. A detective arrested de Selen on complaint of Warners, who charge that de Selen has been representing himself as the Western manager of the motion picture producers, and having a gay and profitable time promising screen struck girls careers in Hollywood. According to the detective, he induced a score of girls to attend his studio "rehearsals" to depict "Night Life of San Francisco." He promised them, it is charged, that checks would arrive from Warners and that a big banquet would be held and the actual work of "glorifying" the beauties start.

Louella Throws Wrench; Busts Up Swell Idea

Hollywood—Several weeks ago, an official of the Producers' Association decided that studio press departments should not continue to give out "exclusive" news on casts and pictures to any of the column writers of the dailies and syndicates. A meeting of studio press agents was held, and the new law explained to them with instructions that it was effective immediately.

At the time, Louella Parsons, editor of Universal Service, was in the East. Although the edict was apparently aimed directly at her, she made no comment. Soon various studios started to squawk about premature announcements breaking in the Parsons column. In two instances tip-offs were given about stories for which dialogue rights had not yet been closed with the authors, resulting in the latter tilting prices when they discovered the studio was ready to go into production.

It was finally decided to call the whole thing off, and a committee headed by Mark Larkin, publicity counsellor of the Producers' Association, waited on Miss Parsons to explain things would operate as previously.

The boys got the shock of their lives when the Universal Service editor informed them she preferred to go along under the new ruling—it was working great for her—and she would hesitate to change back. The meeting broke up with Louella refusing point blank to "be a good girl and play ball."

Studio executives are reported to be worried over the kick-back, as the premature announcing of stories will likely cost thousands of dollars during the course of a year.

Just another good idea gone wrong.

Milton Sills Signs Fox Contract; "Sea Wolf" First

Milton Sills has been signed by Fox Films to a long term contract as the result of his work in "A Very Practical Joke." Mr. Sills' first picture under the new contract will be the lead in Jack London's story, "The Sea Wolf," which Alfred Santell will direct.

TALKIES in their rapid development have been a mixed blessing and curse, but they are bringing nearer to actuality a proper equation in the casting offices. Another well publicized Hollywood romance which has gone on the rocks is that of Mary Philbin and Paul Kohner, the young Universal executive. The inside story of this little tragedy is one of the most weepy things. Paul chalked up what is possibly a world's record of six years of unbroken platonic devotion to Mary, and during the last half of that period has been engaged. Convinced that she had a spark of mental and artistic brilliance which only needed proper development to make her the supreme product of Hollywood's melting pot, Paul has devoted almost every moment of those six years to her. He has taken her to scores of concerts, introduced her to the work of the finest authors and artists, and worked steadily on what he was convinced was the germ of great genius as an actress. He has fought tooth and nail with other studio executives to build up her career. Last year, Carl Laemmle sent Paul on a mission to Europe. Shortly after his return it came to his attention that Mary was taking rides in the roadster of an enormous he-man from the Open-Space belt.—Motion Picture Classic.

Low-down on the Sobbies

"New Yorker" describes the movie-society editor in this manner:

The social gadabout of Hollywood
Attends a dozen parties every week
Bearing her notebook, as a scribbler should,
Accepting tributes to her last critique,
And basking in the hospitality
Of filmdom's latest favorite, whose Scotch
And cigarettes are plentiful and free.
Time slips away. . . . The scribe ignores her watch.
A Latin lover stoops to kiss her hand,
A sudden thrill that finds her acquiescent.
"Gladys, I must be off. It's been too grand.
Have I the names of everybody present?
Good night." They watch her leave, erect and solemn.
And hope for mention in her Sunday column.

We'll Keep the Secret

Among other tragedies of Broadway's literary treadmill is the one reported by Walter Winchell, concerning a writer who is the personal sec'y to a movie magnate who has decided that a biography is good ballyhooey. The sec'y, an obscure chap, has been collecting data on his chief for six months, jotting down all the necessary info in his loose leaf volume. It is not in narrative form—just data.

"But here's the gag. His labors are to be turned over to some writer with a reputation, who will get the huge chunk of dough, while the actual biographer might get as much as fired."

High and Low On Music Row

MUSIC publishing executives are staging an exodus from New York. Jack Robbins, of Robbins Music Corp., has left for the Coast, where he will confer with M-G-M executives on musical exploitation and spotting in productions. Louis Bernstein, president of Shapiro-Bernstein & Co., Inc., left for Hollywood, where he is to be tendered a dinner by members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers. Frank Goodman, president of Handman, Kent & Goodman, also is trekking westward to preview forthcoming Universal productions and arrange for the exploitation of the music. Pat Flaherty, general manager of the Red Star Music Co., Inc., left for Chicago to arrange exhibitor tie-ups in connection with the music of "Song o' My Heart." Ira Schuster, of M. Witmark & Sons, headed for Boston, where he will endeavor to boost sales in Beantown. Danny Winkler, general manager of DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, took a choo-choo for the Capone stronghold, and Paul Jonas, of Handman, Kent & Goodman, came back from Baltimore, bid his boss, Frank, goodbye, and then continued on to Boston, where, no doubt, he and Ira will vie for the plug of the brass band which is featured nightly on the Boston Common.

William Rose, Inc., a subsidiary of Robbins Music Corp., has what looks to be three hits in the United Artist picture, "Be Yourself," starring Fanny Brice. The songs are "Kickin' a Hole in the Sky," "Cooking Breakfast for the One I Love" and "When a Woman Loves a Man."

Sammy Lerner, special service director for DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, has prepared a novel slide featuring "Sing a Little Theme Song" from the Warner production, "Hold Everything," which will soon open at the new Hollywood theatre. It must be pretty good, since organists at 15 metropolitan theatres have already sent requests for the slide.

Montreal Chains Agree with Indpts. On Debt Payments

Montreal—Independent exhibitors and chain owners have agreed to kick in with $60,000 to clean up the debt arising out of their combined fight against the government's ban on children at theatres.

When the battle was over, the ledger of the Quebec Theatres Managers Ass'n showed the $60,000 balance on the red side of the ledger and members disagreed on the method of reimbursement. Finally, after several hot tilts, chains agreed to pay two-thirds, with smaller owners making up the difference. The contribution by the chain organizations has been guaranteed, but is held up pending the collection of one-third from independents.

Gene Buck Seeks Repeal of 2-Cent Royalty Limit

Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Composers, has petitioned the House Committee on Patents to pass the Vestal bill for the repeal of the two-cent maximum royalties on records by the copyright laws. Buck hopes for the ultimate freedom to composers to obtain whatever price they could on their works. He is opposed by William J. Donovan, who on behalf of Radio-Victor, Columbia and Brunswick record companies, claims that such a measure would make possible monopolies by the publisher or copyright owner of a composition.

13 Songs in "Dixiana"

Hollywood—Thirteen new songs have been composed by Harry Tierney for RKO's first original film operetta, "Dixiana," which was also authored by Tierney.

Bebe Daniels will sing "Magnolia," "A Tear, a Kiss, a Smile," "I Am Your Baby Now." Everett Marshall will baritone "Goodbye Old Pals" and "The Break of Dawn," while Miss Daniels and Marshall will duet "Dixiana," "Love is Like a Song," and "Mr. and Mrs. Sipp." Luther Reed is directing.

Music Recording Tie-Up

Famous Music Corp. has arranged with the Columbia Phonograph Co. for the recording of the musical numbers in Buddy Rogers' latest Paramount picture, "Safety in Numbers." The songs, "My Future Just Passed," "The Pick-up," "You Appeal to Me," "Do You Play, Madame?" and "Pepola" were written by Richard Whiting and George Marion, Jr.

Baltimore—Oscar Apple has been elected president of Local 40 of the American Federation of Musicians.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

SINCE [illegible] for her work with Frank Morgan in "Queen High" at the Paramount Long Island studios, Charlie Ruggles has been taking it on the chin or rather on the chest as his upper lip. He had to part with one of his dearest possessions, his moustache, which was shorn, shaved, eradicated, annihilated, or what have you. O Tempora, O Mores!

Can you by any stretch of the imagination picture Frank Morgan without his'n? And not only does Frank flaunt his soup strainer before Charlie's clean-shaven face, but he also puts it to good use in his villainy towards Helen Kane and Victor Moore in "Dangerous Nan McGrew."

New talent was uncovered at the Paramount studios during last week's shooting of "Queen High." Director Fred Newmeyer, needing three extras, used George Noffka, unit manager; Mark Howe, assistant director, and Frank Mandel, the producer, for a sequence, and the boys showed some real histrionic talent.

Johnny Green, who joined the Paramount musical staff as a piano player and technical advisor, has been assigned to write the music for "Queen High," and has also been promoted to assistant to Frank E. Tours, musical director at the Long Island studios. That boy sure knows his sharps and flats.

Lew Fields, after completing his feature picture with his old crony, Joe Weber, on the Coast, was starred in "In The Good Old Summertime," which was just completed at the Eastern Vitaphone studios. Fields wrote the sketch, which centers around a beer garden back in them thar days when men were men and steins were just a nickel.

Somebody got ambitious and wrote a one-reeler entitled "The Devil's Parade," which was Vitaphoned at the Warner's Flatbush plant last week. The action is red-hot with a musical revue set in Hades. The cast includes Sidney Toler, Joan Blondell, Gerald Oliver Smith, Harry Clarke, Eddie Green, the colored comedian, and a score of chorus girls from "Fifty Million Frenchmen."

Bill Quinn, chief still man at the Warner studios, owns and operates over 650 neckties, and has never been seen wearing the same one twice. Can you tie that?

George Hale, stage producer of "Strike Up The Band" and "Heads Up," has been signed by the Vitaphone Corp. to stage a series of rhythmical Varieties at the Eastern studios. The first, called "Office Steps," has already been finished, and the second one, with the tentative title of "The Devil," is now in preparation. Satan is getting a lot of publicity over in Brooklyn these days.

Bold Racketeering Of Better Films Bodies Alleged

not already determined as organization policy to do or write or say. Our monthly list of endorsed pictures is made possible by the tireless service of volunteer workers who preview in the studios of New York and Hollywood and report every picture released by the producers in this country as well as most of those from abroad in written formal ballot.

"The Hays office has helped us by answering the thousands of technical questions that pour in to us from radio fans, schools, clubs and groups all over the world. They have received and acted upon our uncounted suggestions for the improvement of pictures. The only suggestions we have ever received from the Hays organization have come to us from Governor Milliken, who heads the public relations department. He has urged us to be more particular in our detailed criticism of pictures; to maintain our high standard of criticism, and to register our every complaint with him."

placed himself among the most gallant of pathfinders. When Monte Bell produced 'The Lady Lies,' which, at one thrust, smashed through every inhibition set up by the Hays code; when Lubitsch made those daring—for the cinema—sex farces of his; when even so minor a film as Mr. Barthelmess's 'Drag' got fairly courageous about the subject of divorce, the cry for more censorship was no doubt considerably aided, but valuable additional evidence was provided that the cinema is worth saving.

"Nevertheless it is only fair to admit that the Hays commandments were not prompted by any terror on the part of the film conservatives, any suspicion that the radicals were about to dominate the talking cinema. These occasional revolutionaries are so emphatically in the minority that their plight is still more than ordinarily pitiful. The new code, it is safe to say, was merely devised to ward off the attacks being made by reformers so frantic that they regard even Will Hays as a subversive radical. The whole matter really isn't very important save to remind us that there are some people left in Hollywood with genuine artistic courage."

Belgian History Filmed

Brussels—Preparations are being made in Belgium for the production of a national historic film to be entitled "The Pageant of Belgium." It will be a silent film with a long version for Belgium and a shorter one for foreign countries. It will deal with the history of Belgium from the time of the Romans down to the death of King Leopold, and the Belgian Government has agreed to provide 7,000 costumes of different periods.

Wellman Gets Story

Hollywood—William Wellman's initial picture for Warners will carry title of "Maybe It's Love," from an original by the song writing trio of Sidney Mitchell, Archie Gottler and George W. Mayer. Joseph Jackson is writing the adaptation and dialogue. Cast signed to date includes Joe E. Brown, James Hall, and Evelyn Knapp

"Six Syllable" Busy

Mike Simmons, general impressario of the multiple syllable for Sono Art-World Wide, this week closed a number of co-operative knick-knacks for his outfit. Included is a deal with the Macaulay Co., publishers of "Reno," in which Ruth Roland returns to pictures, to market a special edition tying in with the picture. Mobo Auto Polish will feature Reginald Denny in copy in the "American Weekly," thereby reaching 6,000,000 readers. Auto-Strop razor will do likewise with Edward Everett Horton who stellars in "Once a Gentleman." Mike says he has more, but is saving them for Yom Kippur week which is his "fast" week.

Distributors of America, Inc., resent these implications and wish to state publicly that no monetary compensation whatever has come to us or to our organizations as a result of our cooperation with the motion picture industry, nor has money been offered or sought

"The industry has asked nothing but our advice and counsel on matters of picture production, and has given nothing in return but their respectful and effective consideration of the proposals that we have made. In addition to presenting special criticisms and making suggestions for motion picture improvement, we have considered it a privilege to help stimulate support of a number of highly commendable pictures that were not attracting sufficient patronage to pay for the cost of production. We believe that lack of public support for meritorious productions has been one of the deterring influences in motion picture improvement.

Will Continue Activities

"Our only compensation has been a large amount of personal satisfaction in performing what we believe to be a public service by helping in the progressive improvement of motion picture production and in influencing the recent adoption by all leading motion picture producers of an excellent and far-reaching code of ethical practices. We expect that as long as we as individuals are interested in motion picture betterment we will continue to bring to the motion picture industry, by this and whatever other means are at hand, our criticisms of shortcomings and our encouragement of worth while productions.

"It can be definitely stated that every suggestion which we have ever transmitted to the motion picture organization or to Will H. Hays has received prompt and courteous consideration and has been carried out effectively in so far as it was reasonably possible to do so. Although there have been many difficult situations and problems coming before us, we have felt that this plan of public participation in motion picture improvement has resulted much more satisfactorily than anything else of which we have known."

lows on the top layer of the Maybasket. No seats reserved after 7 P. M.

'Charity Begins at Home'

"The sanctity of marriage will also be upheld on the screen. But Mr. Hays does not explain how he'll uphold it in Hollywood and Beverly Hills. That must be two other fellows' job.

"Scenes of passion will be eliminated when not essential. Well, Greta Garbo is going to be a big disappointment when she plays Little Red Riding Hood. There is no sex appeal in kissing a wolf, even the way Greta does it.

"We guess the good old days are all over, with Mr. Hays's beatitudes in effect. If you want to see something rousing in feminine appeal, you will have to wait for a newsreel talkie of Ella Boole delivering an anti-liquor speech."

New Duties for Dowling

Hollywood—Pat Dowling will act as general manager of the Industrial Picture Department of Metropolitan Studios. The latter will produce sound pictures for manufacturers and commercial firms for general advertising through non-theatrical showings. Deal is reported to have been made whereby ERPI will swing inquiries for commercial work to Metropolitan Studios in the future. Metropolitan is owned entirely by Al and Charles Christie, and Dowling has been with the latter producers for many years as advertising and publicity manager. He retains the latter post in addition to his new duties.

Browning Switches Again

Hollywood—Tod Browning's first production for Universal will be "Little Buddha," an original written by the director. Henry La Cossitt is writing the screen play, while Tom Reed will dialogue. Picture goes into production in June, when Universal re-opens after current end-of-season shut-down.

Rogers' Third Set

Hollywood —"See America First," an original comedy by Owen Davis, Sr., has been selected by Fox as the third starring talker for Will Rogers. Picture goes into production immediately upon completion "So This is London." Homer Croy is writing the adaptation and dialogue.

After "Penrod" as Talker

Hollywood—RKO is reported to be negotiating for the talker film rights to Booth Tarkington's "Penrod." Silent production was made by J. K. McDonald several years ago for First National.

Lubitsch Making Filmusical

Hollywood—Ernst Lubitsch's next Paramount production will be a filmusical special for next season release. Jeanette MacDonald will be one of the featured players.

• Briefly Told •

Plugging Orchestras

Covington, Ky.—L. B. Wilson, head of the chain bearing his name, also operating radio station WCKY, has arranged the broadcast of orchestral features by leading Cincinnati musical organizations, in hopes of influencing public in favor of restoration of music in theatres. Broadcasts are accompanied by strong plugs for reinstatement of orchestras.

Actresses Reunited

Hollywood—Joan Crawford, Anita Page and Dorothy Sebastian—feminine leads in "Our Dancing Daughters," will be reunited in M-G-M's second sequel to that production, "Our Blushing Brides." Harry Beaumont, director of the former opus, is also a repeat with the new picture. Robert Montgomery will be featured.

"Skippy" on the Screen

Hollywood—Film rights to a cartoon strip and a Broadway play were acquired by Paramount this week. "Skippy," Percy Crosby's juvenile cartoon, will be transferred to the featured spot in a talking production to be made by Paramount. Gelett Burgess' stage play, "The Cave Man," will serve as George Bancroft's next starring talker.

Buster's Babies

Hollywood—Buster Keaton's next talker comedy for M-G-M will probably be "War Babies," an original story with an army background. Edward Sedgewick will direct.

Change of Policy

"It's a Pleasure"

Toronto — Mary Pickford's former home in this city has been purchased by the municipality for a reported $550,000. The new central police station will be erected on the site, and the constabulary expects little trouble in filling the place.

(tele) VISION

Major Bowes, of New York's Capitol theatre, is a far-seeing entrepreneur —if that's the way to pronounce it. He's keeping his regiment of ushers and explains his plan to Leo Heatley this way: "Television is coming, and the Capitol will be ready to supply every New York home with courteous, competent ushers on call!"

Robbers Visit Theatres

Fall River, Mass.—Patrolman Raymond Lennon was knocked unconscious by two men he surprised working at the Strand safe. They fled without obtaining $600 in the safe, although they had opened the door.

Boston—George Bullock, watchman at the Columbia, was beaten into insensibility by two robbers whom he surprised at work at the office safe.

Warner Theatre Changes

Hollywood—Homer Croy, novelist, and Ernest Pascal and Russell Medcraft, playwrights, have joined the Fox writing forces.

New Colored Theatre

Leesburg, Fla.—The Lincoln, a new theatre for colored patrons exclusively, was opened here this week by L. R. Pickett. The colored people have not had a regular theatre here for nearly two years and Mr. Pickett thought the time was ripe.

Swissland Reopens

Woodsfield, W. Va.—The Swissland has reopened with talker equipment. The new name of the house was chosen in a local contest.

Bancroft and Kenyon Cast

Hollywood—George Bancroft will have Doris Kenyon as his leading woman in "The Cave Man," being directed by Victor Schertzinger for Paramount.

From Stage to Screen

Hollywood — Zelma O'Neal and Jack Haley, original members of the stage production of "Follow Thru," will have the same parts in the Paramount version. Nancy Carroll and Charles "Buddy" Rogers are teamed in it.

Mae Clark Loaned

Hollywood—Mae Clark, Fox contract player, has been loaned to RKO for a role opposite Jack Mulhall in "The Fall Guy."

Butler's "Good Intentions"

Hollywood—David Butler's next directorial assignment will be "Good Intentions," for Fox. Victor McLaglen, Fifi Dorsay and Lilyan Tashman are in it.

Czechs Tire of Talkers

Prague—The public's interest in soundfilms is slackened. Only first-class productions enjoy long runs, and even these do not prove of real box-office success. Only two American talkers proved attractive during the first four or five days of their run.

Plaza Changes Hands

Fort Dodge, Ia.—The Corn Belt Theatres, Inc., of which Stack and Pierce are the managing heads, have bought the Plaza, which has been closed for a short time.

Fire Damages Iowa House

Woodbine, Ia.—The Woodbine was partially destroyed in a fire which started from the overheated furnace back of the stage. The loss is estimated at about $7,000. The owner is not sure whether he will rebuild.

Major Operations

Hollywood — Having exhausted the conversational possibilities of her recent operation, Marie Prevost is planning to have the courts operate on her name for the purpose of chopping off Harlan. She divorced Kenneth Harlan in 1924.

From Everywhere • •

The Farm Follies

Indianapolis — Theater owners of Evansville have obtained help from an unlooked-for quarter in their opposition to daylight saving in that city. The farmers of the vicinity don't want daylight saving and present a novel reason. They complain that farm hands, given an extra hour of daylight, jump into automobiles, drive to Evansville for a night of bright lights and then the next morning are unable to plow a straight furrow and in some instances don't return at all.

Reopen at San Diego

San Diego—Under direction of Fox West Coast Theatres, H. L. Hartman has reopened the Balboa at Fourth and E Sts. This house was formerly operated by West Coast but later was leased to some outside people, who finally closed the doors about six months ago. A Warner house is to be built here, it is stated.

Wheeler and Woolsey's Next

Hollywood—Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey, Radio Pictures' comedy team, will be featured in a musical war comedy "Half Shot at Sunrise." Book was written by Cyrus Wood and James Creelman, with Harry Tierney responsible for the original music. No director has been assigned.

M-G-M Title Changed

Hollywood—M-G-M has changed release title of "The Circle" to "Strictly Unconventional." The picture is adapted from play by Somerset Maughan.

Films Again in Court

Cincinnati, O.—Motion pictures were introduced in court here as evidence for the first time. The defendant street railway company in damage suit showed film of street car in action, refuting certain claims made by plaintiff.

Get Sunday Show

Canajoharie, N. Y.—As a result of the favorable vote on Sunday movies, Jack Vasill of Amsterdam, owner of the Strand here, announces that the house will be remodeled and equipped for sound.

"Buddy" Cast for "Molenoff"

Hollywood—"Molenoff," a musical originally purchased by Paramount to star Maurice Chevalier, is being re-vamped as a starring vehicle for Buddy Rogers. Difference in abilities of Chevalier and Rogers for a musical makes major story changes necessary.

Herbert's First Assignment

Hollywood—Hugh Herbert's first directorial assignment for RKO under his new term contract will be "He Knew Women," with Lowell Sherman and Alice Joyce featured.

Hollywood—J. G. Bachmann, associate producer at Paramount studios, is preparing five different productions that he will supervise during the next four months.

Old Man Prophet

"Last year saw a number of important consolidations but, according to well authenticated reports in Wall Street, 1930 will break all records for mergers," predicts the financial editor of the "New York Daily News," who believes "super-concerns will be set up in fields of banking, commerce and manufacturing."

In Talker Manner

"I come to bury Caesar, not to praise him."
"Oh, yeah?"
"But as for me, give me liberty or give me death!"
"Says you!"
"I intend to fight it out on this line if it takes all summer!"
"Oh, yeah?"
"To be or not to be, that is the question."
"Oh, yeah? Says you!"
"Yeah. Says me." —Judge.

Firebug in Cambridge

Albany—The Cambridge in Cambridge, N. Y., was damaged to the extent of about $10,000 by an incendiary fire. The theatre is owned by Lew Fischer, of Fort Edward, N. Y., who has a chain of houses in the eastern part of New York. During the past week there have been four or five fires in this part of New York state with every evidence that they were the work of a firebug.

Pathe Borrows Cunningham

Hollywood—Jack Cunningham, contract writer with Technicolor, has been loaned to Pathe for one story assignment.

Novel Feature Planned

Hollywood—Columbia plans production of "Bits of Life," a feature which will contain sketches and blackouts entirely. Norman Houston and Joe Traub are now writing the material, with the picture slated for production in May for next year's release.

Twins Popular in Ohio

Cleveland—The two-reel picture of the Siamese Twins released in Ohio by Standard Film is proving so popular that Jess Fishman, general manager, bought three more prints for state distribution.

Hollywood—Fox continues to add to its list of contract players. Newest additions are Lucile Brown, Henry Victor, Nat Pendleton and Mitchell Harris.

Buckingham at Pathe

Hollywood—Tom Buckingham, former Fox director, is now at Pathe writing an original which Tay Garnett will direct.

Evanston, Home Of Glooms, Gets Sunday Shows

Chicago—Evanston, cradle of the W. C. T. U. and home of personalities prominent in national reform movements, actually voted for Sunday movies at a city election, a recount of the votes cast revealed. Instead of the proposition having been defeated by 50 votes, it was found to have been victorious by 56 votes. The recount is continuing and, it is expected, even a greater majority will be shown for Sunday pictures when it is over.

The first mistake discovered was in Alderman Peter N. Jans' ward. Jans, who was up for reelection, is an ardent Sunday movie proponent. Election officials reported the precinct vote as 151 for, to 133 against, whereas the recount showed the actual vote to be 200 to 76. The officials explained that they had supposed the yes vote would equal that of the pro-movie aldermanic candidate, and had subtracted his vote from the total cast in the precinct to determine the no vote. An actual check of the ballots, however, revealed that many had voted for Sunday movies who had not seen fit to vote for the aldermanic candidate supporting them.

The new vote showed a vote of 8,952 for Sunday movies, and 8,896 against.

Madison, Ind., Gets First Sunday Shows at Grand

Madison, Ind.—The Grand here has been opened for Sunday showings for the first time. Public sentiment is in favor of Sunday shows and continuous rounds of applause greeted the screen announcement that the theatre would inaugurate a Sunday policy. However, numerous requests were sent to the management by churches and club delegations asking that the theatre remain closed and some, it is understood, threaten to carry the matter into court.

The theatre recently was equipped with sound apparatus and the manager in a public statement said his showing on Sunday was merely a matter of keeping the theatre on a paying basis in view of increased overhead.

More Sunday Shows

Arlington, Mass.—The first Sunday shows in the town's history were shown Sunday afternoon and evening. Permits were granted by the selectmen who held no previous hearings on the question. No objections were raised as a result but several of the clergymen are planning to send a petition of their church members to the selectmen within a short time, protesting the Sunday opening.

Iowa Town Okays Sunday Pictures—If They Talk

Garner, Ia.—This town is to have Sunday shows if talking pictures are shown, according to Mayor W. J. Barz. The Sunday shows were favored at a recent referendum and the city council indicated that it would approve the decision if the local theatre installed talking equipment.

A Page of "Blues"

Foes Lick "Blue Sunday" Efforts In Wheeling

Washington—Sunday shows have finally emerged victorious in Wheeling, W. Va., according to the National Ass'n Opposed to Blue Laws, Inc., from its headquarters, and there is much satisfaction expressed at anti-blue law headquarters.

Mayor-Manager Beckett of Wheeling cast the deciding vote that transformed a 6-to-6 tie vote in the city council into a vote of 7 to 6 and "killed" the proposed city ordinance to ban Sunday shows. This was the second fight in the city legislative body on the question, the council having previously decided to shift responsibility to the voters themselves and call a special election.

Secretary Linn A. E. Gale of the N. A. O. B. L. is credited with a large share of the tactical work which resulted in the Wheeling victory for an open Sunday. Mr. Gale, at the request of Wheeling liberals, spent a week there in December and directed publicity, contact work and other strategy to mobilize public sentiment in favor of eliminating the blue Sabbath in the West Virginia city.

Merchants Help Showman in Sunday Show Campaign

Ellston, Ia.—G. R. Nichols won Sunday shows when he closed his theatre two weeks before the spring elections and declared that he would not reopen it unless the Sunday shows were given a favorable vote. Seventeen merchants of Ellston offered him ten dollars each if he would reopen the show but he refused. So the merchants got out and campaigned for the issue and put it across. This is the only town in the county that has a Sunday show.

Clergy Cry "Quits"

Hillsboro, O.—Donald Evans, manager of the Bell, recently arrested for violation of the blue laws, was acquitted when the jury failed to agree. Ministers who caused his arrest declare no further action will be taken on Sunday showings and the fight is believed to be terminated.

Indiana "Blues" Slip on 100-Year-Old Banana Skin

Indianapolis—A 100-year-old Sunday blue law was used in Supreme court here recently to keep a moving picture theatre operator of Crawfordsville, Ind., from paying a fine for running his show on Sunday, which is just the reverse of the original intent of the law.

Arthur Jackson had been fined in city court at Crawfordsville for operating his show on Sunday contrary to a city ordinance. He appealed to the circuit court and then venued the case to Parke county, where the city court charge was reversed. The city of Crawfordsville, compelled to do so because of the insistent cry from the blue noses, appealed the case to the Indiana state Supreme court and the action of the Parke circuit court was upheld.

The decision points out that there is a 100-year-old Sunday blue law which still is good in Indiana under which the case should have been prosecuted by the state instead of under a city ordinance which cannot supercede the statute.

Just what effect this will have in the prosecutions for these violations is not known. Virtually all cases heretofore have been fought out on the basis of some antiquated city ordinance. These cases generally came to trial in front of a justice of the peace who was vitally interested in fees resulting from a conviction and the general rule is that the defendant was convicted in the justice court and had to appeal to the higher court anyway. Convictions, however, have been rather scarce during the past few months.

50-50 Battle for Anti-Blues

Wakefield, Mass.—By the narrow margin of 25 votes, this town went on record as favoring Sunday shows. Fire bells sounded the news with 33 blows. Wakefield has 14,000 population and two theatres.

At Reading, Sunday shows were rejected by the town meeting by better than two to one.

Like Sound—Want Sundays

Grundy Center, Ia.—G. A. Igo of the Rialto has begun showing sound pictures. He now has a good two shows a week business and says that the townspeople are boosting him for a Sunday show.

Nebraska Results

Fairbury, Neb.—A Sunday movie proposal here was defeated in a special election which drew the second largest vote in the city's history. The vote was 1,487 to 915, every ward in town voting against Sunday shows.

Broken Bow, Neb.—By a narrow margin of 470 to 466, Sunday movies won in a town election here.

Gordon, Neb.—This town favored Sunday movies by a 550 to 267 vote. The Pace theatre, which is to cost $50,000, has been started.

Baby Stares of 'Baby Stars' Pass Out of Picture

Hollywood—Another Hollywood tradition goes into the discard with the definite passing of the annual Wampas ball and presentation of the 13 "Baby Stars." After much discussion, the Coast press agents decided that the yearly ball was "out" for this season, although it was not admitted that the producers had extended fatherly advice that such an event could easily be dispensed with in 1930.

The annual election of the "Baby Stars" also passes into history, for with no ball, there'll be no election of the favored candidates for future starring honors. In certain quarters, it was felt that the tradition of the "Baby Stars" should be continued with the lucky girls presented at a banquet where the cover charge would gather in enough to pay the necessary expenses. Wiser heads in the Wampas, however, decided that it would be a good time to discontinue both the ball and the "Baby Star" election at the same time.

"Off to the Races"

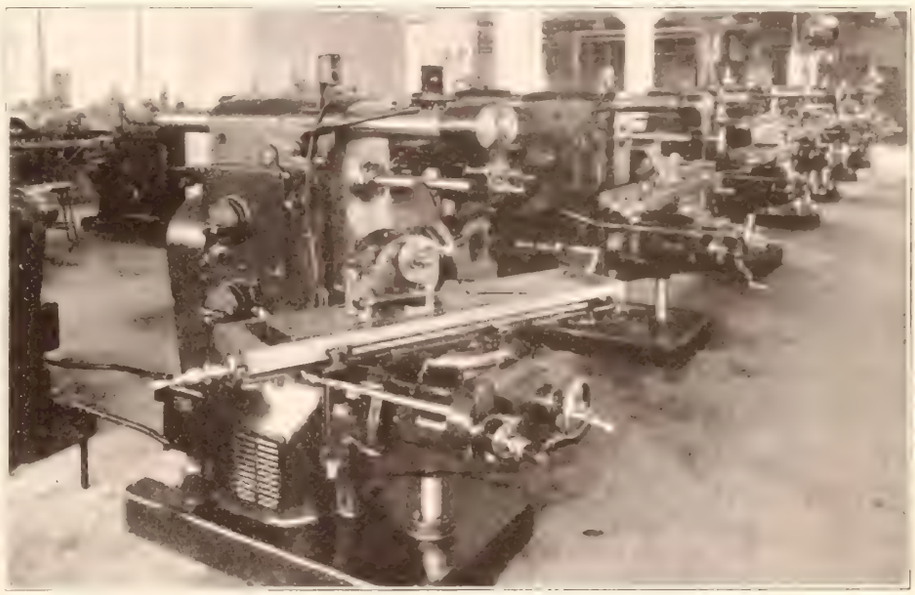
Instead of working their heads off to stage a ball, the boys figured all the Wampas members were entitled to some relaxation. So this week-end all members who can make the trip will embark on a whoopee party to Agua Caliente; with transportation and hotel expenses taken care of out of the Wampas treasury. No provision has been made to reimburse the boys for any losses sustained at the gaming tables in the border resort.

The Wampas ball and "Baby Star" election was first launched in 1922, and the combined projects reached their peak in 1924 when the organization staged the ball in San Francisco. Through cooperation extended in the latter city, the Wampas came back with a net profit of about $25,000; which went into interest-bearing bonds. The tremendous success of the 1924 affair in the northern city encouraged the Wampas to put on huge shows for the following years; but expenses were too great to allow any real margin of profit.

Racket Reaps Harvest

With the "Baby Star" election racket discontinued, there are undoubtedly many "movie mothers" in Hollywood who will be greatly disappointed. Likewise several of the free lance publicity agents who have reaped a harvest in the past. In former years, it is said, various free lance press agents sold various "movie mothers" the idea that they could launch a build-up campaign for the beautiful daughters that would swing them right into the front ranks of the "Baby Stars." Some of the campaigns were put over, while others flopped—leaving the press agents to do much explaining.

During the past three years, the election of the Wampas Baby Stars provided nothing more than a chance for certain members of the organization to demonstrate their political abilities. Selection of the 13 girls was made more on a friendship basis among sponsors than on the apparent ability of the candidates. As a result, there were plenty of "duds" in the 13 winners of the past three years.



With both the annual ball and Baby Star selections discontinued this year, it is unlikely that either will be revived by the Wampas in the future. Perhaps the boys will dig up some other idea that will bring in plenty of profit without the amount of work necessary to put on the ball.

Senator Harris Launches New Amusement Company

Harrisburg, Pa.—State Senator Frank J. Harris is one of the incorporators of the Harris Amusement Company, of Monessen, which has just obtained a Pennsylvania charter of incorporation with a capitalization of $200,000. The new corporation is organized for the purpose of "constructing, owning, leasing, controlling and operating theatres." The treasurer is George S. Harrison, 821 Eleventh Street, Oakmont, Pa. [illegible] and the other incorporators are Dennis A. Harris, owner of 100 shares, and John H. Harris, [illegible] Senator Harris is one of the heads of the big Harris chain of theatres operating in Western Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia. He was elected to the State Senate several years ago following the death of his brother, the late Senator John Harris, who also was a high executive in the Harris chain of theatres.

A charter also has been granted to the Americus Theatres Corporation, of Philadelphia, organized to "buy, sell, lease, manage, operate and hold theatres." Esther Appelman, Philadelphia, is treasurer and also one of the incorporators, holding 48 shares of stock. The other incorporators are Marie C. Brady, Philadelphia, holder of 48 shares, and Michael H. Engel, Philadelphia.

Bell & Howell sees it through

Some of the machines which are making history in the moving picture industry—general view of the toolroom, milling department, in the new Bell & Howell Engineering Development Building.

A new piece of Bell & Howell cinemachinery is never put into production until the conditions under which it might operate are carefully surveyed; not a wheel is turned until the whole function of that instrument is visualized and prepared for in advance.

From this care in design, and the precision of their manufacture come the constant dependability of Bell & Howell Standard Film Perforators, Printers, Splicers, and Studio Cameras.

Wherever movies are made, printed, or projected, the name Bell & Howell has rightfully become synonymous with known high quality.

The foresight of its engineers is but a part of the contribution of the Bell & Howell Engineering Development Laboratories to the progress of the industry. Clear thinking and rare skill in application of theory to practice are daily solving the problems of the moment in these Laboratories. Penetrating vision and mechanical ingenuity are constantly at work in anticipation of the future.

Ontario Raises Child Ban Age; Showmen Mute

Toronto—Exhibitors in the province of Ontario bumped into more trouble when the Provincial Legislature adopted drastic amendments to the Theatres and Cinematographs Act, providing for the raising of the juvenile age limit from 15 to 16 years, but the theatre interests registered no protest against the action.

The measure gives the theatre inspector full authority in the issuing of theatre and operator licenses; calls for the re-examination of projectionists when desired and always after suspension of an operator because of an accident, etc. The law, which becomes effective June 1, provides that all theatres in Ontario must be of fireproof construction 12 months hence or licenses will be cancelled. Fireproof conditions are also required.

Gone are the Days

A few reasons why "Judge" won't weep if silent movies never come back:

"Came the Dawn. . . . See Episode 18, entitled "The Hooded Terror," in this theatre next week. . . . Henry Carstairs, Wall Street banker, who was so crooked he had to sleep in a Round House. . . . It looks like they're goin' to git us, Tony, old hoss. . . . Keystone Cops and their chase sequences. . . . Thar's Gold in them thar Hills. . . . Git to the Hills, Men, the Dam is Burstin'. . . . The Clutching Hand. . . . He was so Tough, he played tiddlywinks with manhole covers. . . . With the camera through Bolivia. . . . The mighty river wends its tortuous path to the sea. . . . The peaceful old Mission House, relic of the Dons of Spain. . . . Intermission of five minutes while the reel is being changed. . . . So there, in that little cabin of dreams, love came and found her waiting. . . . Do you keep a watchdog? No, if we hear a noise, we bark ourselves. . . . Then from out of that cauldron of Hate and Greed, Four Horsemen went riding. . . . Love turned to Ashes in her Stricken Heart. . . . Thank God, the United States Marines!"

H. M. Warner Honor Guest of Philly Business Men

Philadelphia—H. M. Warner was a guest of honor at a banquet of the Market St. Business Men's Association of Philadelphia last week, speaking before a distinguished group on "The Influence of the Talking Picture on Business."

Docor Company Formed

Cincinnati—The Docor Co. has been incorporated as the managing company for the Strand, Dayton. Incorporators are Isaac Libson, head of a local chain, and Ben Heidingsfeld, an associate.

Daylight Saving Fights Looming In Empire State

Albany—There will be a stiff fight waged in many a city and village in this state during the next two or three weeks over the adoption of daylight saving. While this will be generally adopted throughout the state on the last Sunday of this month, the law permits cities and villages to adopt any local ordinance fixing the time for daylight saving, or vetoing it altogether. In Whitehall, there is a bitter fight on at the present time, which will be decided at a meeting of the taxpayers this month. There is a big faction opposing daylight saving, this consisting of many of the merchants and railroad workers, the village being a railroad town. On the other hand, daylight saving is being backed by baseball and other sports enthusiasts.

Couture in Control

Manchester, N. H.—Al Couture has taken over the theatre interests of his brother, the late Eugene Couture. These include either full ownership or control of the Paramount-Crown, Star, Park and Strand. The latter is undergoing remodeling for reopening April 21 with vaudeville and films.

VOCALITE Sound Screen

Vocalite combines a distinct clear transmission of sound with sharp, brilliant pictures. It enables better projection because of its mechanical, scientific and optical features, the result of painstaking study on the part of the laboratory staff of the Beaded Screen Co.

IT IS 100% PERFECT FOR LIGHT, SOUND, COLOR and THIRD DIMENSION

Height of Conceit

Two gentlemen of color, reports Al Bernard, via Mark Hellinger, were discussing "Green Pastures," the negro smash at the Mansfield, New York.

"Boy," said the first, "dat's de grandes' show whut ever was. All de angels is colored. And so is de cherubim. And even de Lawd is a colored man, too."

"Go on," objected the other, "de Lawd ain't colored."

"He is too," cried the first. "In dis play, he's jest as colored as you or me."

The second man sighed.

"Tch, tch," he murmured. "We is suttinly livin' in an Amos 'n Andy age, isn't we?"

Newspapers' Free Plug For "Best Picture Week"

Glendale, Calif.—"Best Picture Week" is being celebrated by the seven theatres in this Los Angeles suburb. The idea was not premeditated or planned, but when the theatres announced their lineup of films for the week, the newspapers stepped out and put on a special exploitation ballyhoo of their own in the theatre sections and news columns.

The seven pictures booked for the week by the seven theatres and the labels the dramatic editors tagged on them were: "Sarah and Son," best domestic picture ever produced; "Song of the West," best outdoor color talkie; "Rio Rita," best musical feature; "Street of Chance," best gang picture; "Show of Shows," best revue; "The Love Parade," best comic operetta; "The Great Divide," best western.

In promoting the group for the week in that manner the newspapers did not ask for any special advertising beyond regular space already alloted on each production.

Omaha World Reverts To Full Week Programs

Omaha—Full week, instead of three days of vaudeville, will be the new policy at the World after April 5, Publix officials decided here. The house has been on an all-sound program since acquired by Publix last summer. Lately it has been alternately a split and full week, depending on caliber of picture.

The band, under the direction of Frank Hodek, includes part of personnel of Paramount orchestra which were ousted when house eliminated units two weeks ago. Ted Mack, m. c., has been retained. Acts will be booked from the Chicago William Morris office.

Earles in Old Role

Hollywood—Harry Earles, the midget in the original silent production of "The Unholy Three," has been signed by M-G-M for his same spot in the talker remake, which will star Lon Chaney. Jack Conway is preparing to direct.

New Name for Colonial

Clinton, O.—The Colonial, Fred Reichert, manager, has closed for wiring. It will reopen under the name of Madrid.

Quebec Passes Law Censoring All Theatre Ads

Quebec—The Provincial Legislature has adopted the new Taschereau law providing for the censorship of theatre newspaper advertising in this province despite a united fight against it. Hon. P. R. Du Tremblay, chief among its opponents, opposed it on the ground that it interferes with the traditional freedom of the press. Under the new law a newspaper edition can be held up pending the decision of the censor. Whether the measure will be enforcable is a question that interests many allowed by it.

Fire in Theatre Fails To Stampede Audience

Indianapolis—Presence of mind of all concerned recently averted a panic at the Stratford here when fire broke out in the projection booth, burning an operator and damaging the interior. William Cole, 26 years old, was burned about the hands and arms when he tried to extinguish the fire.

As the picture flickered, a wisp of smoke was projected on the screen. The majority of those in the theatre realized what had happened. Most of them arose casually and walked out of the theatre. Others kept their seats while the fire was extinguished, when the picture was continued.

Smith and Pettijohn to Address Ind. Endorsers

Indianapolis—Courtland Smith, who developed the Movietone and the Fox Movietone News, will be the principal speaker at a luncheon to be given at the Claypool Hotel here April 23 in connection with the annual convention of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays. Mr. Smith will discuss "Motion Pictures Today and Tomorrow." Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Film Board of Trade, will speak on "Some of the Problems of Changing Silent Films to Talkies."

Cruze Directing Again

Hollywood—James Cruze will direct "Once a Gentleman," slated for release through Sono-Art. Edward Everett Horton and Lois Wilson will be featured, with balance of cast including Francis X. Bushman, Sr., King Baggot, Cyril Chadwick, Emerson Tracy, Gertrude Short, Charles Coleman, Evelyn Pierce, Drew Demarest, Dick Sullivan, William Holmes and Dorothy Mathews.

Olsen and Johnson Signed

Hollywood—Olsen and Johnson, vaudeville and musical comedy team, have been signed to a term contract by Warners to be featured in a group of filmusicals and comedies. The pair recently completed their first film appearance in "See Naples or Die" for Warners.

Pomeroy Finally Assigned

Hollywood — Roy Pomeroy has been assigned to direct "Inside the Lines" for RKO. Story is by Earl Derr Biggers, and Betty Compson is slated for the featured lead.

"Vengeance" Low In Portland with Gross of $6,780

Portland, Ore.—Extra evening performances were necessary to accommodate crowds who flocked to Fox Broadway to see "She Steps Out," plus the new stage band of Herman Kenin's and also Henri LeBel, featured organist. Boosted box office to $13,110 with rating of 160%, a high top for downtown first runs. RKO Orpheum dropped into second position on "Framed" in spite of cutting its top to 50c, with a gross of $12,000, 110%, "Young Eagles" at Paramount drew $10,500, 100%, just par; United Artists with "Be Yourself" took a slight brace over previous week with $7,850, 105%; "Under a Texas Moon" at Music Box, with return to 50c top, $8,110, 108%. "Vengeance" was the week's flop, taking only $6,780, 89%.

Weather: Light rains.
Opposition: "Young Eagles," Georges Bizet, Eddie Magill, crooner, Paramount; "Framed"; stage show headed by Ken Murray and three acts; RKO Orpheum; "Be Yourself" and "Around the World by Zeppelin," United Artists; "Under a Texas Moon," Music Box; "Vengeance," Blue Mouse.

"Applause" Just Wouldn't Click; A Flop at $3500

Kansas City—Business rallied this week for most of the houses down town, and two reported exceptional weeks. "Rogue Song" headed the list with 130% and a gross of $20,000. "Her Unborn Child," playing at the reopened Globe, did a thriving business its first week, reporting $12,000, which amounts to 125%. The Newman was well satisfied with the week with "Young Eagles," estimating it as 110% or $11,000. The Mainstreet with "Second Wife" and the Pantages with "The Lost Zeppelin" did average business. The huge flop of the week was "Applause" at the Royal, which ran only five days and then disappeared from sight.

The Ax Must Swing High on Swollen Heads

Hollywood — Helen Louise Walker, newshound of the sobbies' brigade, has discovered "more horrible-example legends connected with stars making their own pictures than with almost any other phase of the business. The sudden expansion of hat sizes accounts for many of these and the wise boys and girls pray every night that they may hang onto their senses of proportion.

"This thing happens to comedians, somehow, more often than to other people . . . perhaps because of the success of Chaplin and Lloyd, who produce their own pictures.

"Raymond Griffith and Harry Langdon both joined the ranks of horrible examples. Each of them, having attained stardom, got the notion that he should be allowed to write his own stories, invent his own gags, direct and play the leading role in his pictures. The loud plops with which these two fell from the pinnacle demonstrated to everybody that that system will not work.

"Yes! Yes! These gobble-uns are lurking all around Hollywood and even if you are ever so careful, you can't tell when one of them will grab at you from under the bed. Lately it has gotten more scary than ever, for we are finding out that there is a monster in every single microphone and nobody knows when he may be snatched and eaten right up before the startled eyes of all Hollywood."

"Such Men" Wins Close Okla. City Race with $3,500

Oklahoma City—Average business at all houses here, not a single house hitting below par, or much above it. Five of the six first runs played to 100%, with the sixth, the Liberty, rolling up $3,500 on "Such Men Are Dangerous." The figure represents 110% for the house.

Weather: Excellent spring weather.
Opposition: "Locked Door," Criterion; "Party Girl," Capitol; "Case of Sergeant Grischa," Empress; "Such Men Are Dangerous," Liberty; "Troopers Three" and Fanchon & Marco Idea show, Orpheum; "Peacock Alley," Orpheum.

"Party Girl" the Big Chi Event, Taking $23,600

Chicago—Although many of the loop houses stood up well during the week, first place honors belong unquestionably to the "Party Girl" (Tiffany) performance at the Woods, where the film hit within $500 of the house record, bringing in $23,600, holding up for a third week and possibly a fourth.

"Ingagi," Congo Pictures, played the Garrick under unusual circumstances. The film took $11,600, which is a near-top figure for this house, and surprising inasmuch as noonday Lenten services are being held. Hot lobby displays depicting gorillas on the make for nude native women lured back the evangelists's crowd of worshippers.

Weather: Fair and mild.
Opposition: Stage show and "Green Goddess," Chicago; 4 acts R-K-O vaude, Van and Schenck and "They Learned About Women," State-Lake; "Party Girl," Tiffany; "High Treason," Castle; "General Crack," Roosevelt; "Ingagi" (part time was devoted to Lenten services), Garrick.

"PARTY GIRL" (Tiffany)

WOODS—(1,175), second week, 35c-85c. Other Attractions: Pathe comedy, newsreel, Aesop's Fables. Gross: Within $500 of house record at $23,600 (last week). Holding up in third week and may be kept for the fourth.

"HIGH TREASON" (Tiffany)

CASTLE—(300), 7 days, 50c-75c. Other Attractions: Daily News Universal newsreel. Gross: Good at $3,900.

"GENERAL CRACK" (W. B.)

ROOSEVELT—(1,528), second week, 50c-85c. Other Attractions: Para. newsreel, comedy. Gross: So-so at $22,500.

"INGAGI" (Congo Pictures)

GARRICK—(1,233), second week, 75c-$1. Gross: Raves by critics and sensational lobby advertising returned $11,600. (Swell for this legit house, in which noonday Lenten services are held, with the evangelists' draw lured back later by the lobby cards depicting gorillas on the make for nude native women.)

Arliss Grosses 12 Grand, the High in 'Frisco

San Francisco—George Arliss rolled up a rating of 175% at the Embassy, where his "Disraeli" finished the week with $12,500, several leaps ahead of Columbia's "Ladies of Leisure," which ran second with $10,500, rating par at the Orpheum.

Weather: Fair.
Opposition: "Bishop Murder Case," Loew's Warfield; "Green Goddess," Embassy; "Ladies of Leisure," Orpheum.

"BISHOP MURDER CASE" (M-G-M)

LOEW'S WARFIELD—(2,700), 50c-60c-90c, 7 days. Other Attractions: Mack Sennett's all talking "He Trumped Her Ace," organist-C Sharpe Minor, Fox and Hearst talking news. Gross: $9,500. Rating: 90%.

ORPHEUM—(2,270), 35c-50c-65c, 7 days. Other Attractions: Concert, news reel, comedy. Gross: $10,500. Rating: 100%.

"Framed" Pulled After Dropping To $1,980 Low

Baltimore—Business was somewhat off for seven of the big houses here during the week, with one hitting a very low average, and others proving weak. However, four advanced considerably over par, one going as high as 150%.

The high for the week was made by the New theatre with "The Golden Calf." This did $15,000 gross at that house, despite Lent, rating 150%.

Next on the high list came the Parkway, where "Rogue Song" did $5,500 after one week at the Stanley and one at the Valencia. This rated 125%.

The low rating was made by the Auditorium with "Framed," during the four days of its second week, when it was taken off for "Captain of the Guard." It grossed $1,980, a 30% rating.

Weather: Clear, cold Monday, then clear and warm except Thursday, when rain was here.

Opposition: "Framed," Auditorium, second week; "Burning Up," and Loew's-Publix stage unit ("Southern Melodies" with Eddie Leonard), Loew's Century; "Harmony At Home," with Bert Smith Players in "Honey Girl," with acts and chorus, Hippodrome; "Case of Sergeant Grischa," Keith's, after one week at Auditorium; "Siegfried," return engagement, at the Little; "Wide Open," day and date showing at Rivoli and Metropolitan; "Golden Calf," New; "Sarah and Son," Loew's Stanley; "Bishop Murder Case," Loew's Valencia after one week at Loew's Century; "Rogue Song," Loew's Parkway, after one week at Loew's Stanley and a week at Loew's Valencia. Stage: Otto Kruger in "They Never Grow Up"; Ethel Barrymore in "Love Duel"; "Get Hot," burlesque; Boumi Fashion Revue and Frolic three nights; Baltimore Symphony for young people Thursday afternoon.

"BURNING UP" (Para.)

LOEW'S CENTURY—(3,221), 25c-60c, 6 days. Other Attractions: Metrotone and M-G-M News, "The Family Next Door" (Paramount talking comedy), other short films, Loew's Publix unit ("Southern Melodies," starring Eddie Leonard), orchestra, organ. Gross: $19,500. Rating: 93%.

Nice Felluhs

Discharged prohibition snoopers find in employment as a percentage engagement checker an outlet for their talents, the 5-5-5 contract committee was told. A lot of grafting is rife throughout the country, the checkers bootlegging extra shows of pictures, or cutting with exhibitors on the box office take. Another of their rackets is the sale of information concerning overhead and gross of theatres visited.

Fire Water

Minto, N. B. — Fire attacked the Acadia here and would have been extinguished quickly but for the fact that the government liquor store adjoined the theatre. The booze fed the flames and caused a total damage of $30,000.

Warners' "Exile" Low in Boston, On $1,875 Gross

Omaha—"Exile" (Warners) grossed only $1,875 in a four-day run at the State, which chalked up 75% for the attraction, and then followed, on its twice-weekly change basis, to "It's A Great Life" (M-G-M). The latter took $2,000, rating 80%.

High was established by "Case of Sergeant Grischa," at the Orpheum. The figure there reached $15,000, only par.

Weather: Warm.

Opposition: "Case of Sergeant Grischa," five R-K-O vaude acts, Orpheum, "It's A Great Life" (3 days), State; "Hearts In Exile" (4 days), State; "Girl Said No" (8 days), World; "Young Eagles."

"Golden Calf" is Providence Hit Grosses $13,500

Providence—The Radio-Keith-Orpheum Victory theatre enjoyed a phenomenally big week here with "The Golden Calf," grossing close to $13,500. Loew's State, playing Bill Haines in "The Girl Said No," was excellent at $23,350, and the Majestic, offering "Men Without Women," grossed close to $12,200. The Albee week was only fair with Rose's Midgets and "Hell's Heroes" on the screen.

Weather: Fair, cool.

Opposition: "Golden Calf," RKO Victory; "The Girl Said No," Loew's State; "Men Without Women," Majestic; "Hell's Heroes," RKO Albee.

"GOLDEN CALF" (Fox)

McCormack Still Draws at Boston, Taking $16,000

Boston—"Song O' My Heart" with John McCormack, now in its fourth week at the highest top in years for Boston road shows, continued to "stand 'em up" at the Majestic and looks good for several weeks yet. Artists and stars appearing in person failed to click at other theatres, so box office returns are more nearly indicative of the [illegible]

All houses held up well for the best Lenten season's business in years despite unemployment bogey. Buddy Rogers in "Young Eagles" was good for $34,000 at the Publix Metropolitan with Rubinoff directing the musical and stage numbers. Keith Memorial continues excellent business with "The Golden Calf" hitting 120 per cent. Uptown fell off a bit with the new schedule of prices, as had been expected. Both Loew's houses maintained the figures of the past two weeks.

Weather: Fair and warm.

Silence!

Our Studio Sleuth, whose effusions are to be found on another page, does not cover Hollywood and therefore has never seen one of those platinum bath room settings, the local studios not being large enough to hold one. However, returning from a tour the other day, he dashed breathlessly into the office and exclaimed:

"Ive got a good gag for you. Ever since the talkies came in the yes men have been nod men."

Bad Week in L. A.; 'RogueSong' Down To Twelve Grand

Los Angeles—Majority of local first runs here and in Hollywood finished another one of those weeks when everything takes a nosedive without any direct influencing factor. The weather was fair, except for a hot week-end. The lineup failed to draw, despite heavy plugging on what are generally accepted as good draws. "Rogue Song" could not raise the $12,000 line, closing the week at the Chinese with a 75% rating; "Happy Days" hit the week's low, taking a mere $8,750 (70%); "Young Eagles" hit ten per cent under par; "U's" remade "Phantom" grossed only $7,500, a 75% rate for the Criterion.

The week's best performance was turned in by "Hold Everything," walking away with a rating of 143% on a $20,000 gross. "Montana Moon" hit $33,300, rating 123%.

Hold Everything

(Warners—All Talker)

Fast Comedy with Music

(Reviewed by Hanor K. Greer)

JOE E. BROWN and Winnie Lightner roll through 75 minutes of fast, slapstick and knockabout comedy that provides continual laughs for any audience. In addition to the antics of Brown and Lightner, Warners have retained all the song and musical numbers of the stage show besides adding a few more. Then the picture is entirely in Technicolor, and good color values have been secured throughout.

"Hold Everything" should hit for big business in the extended runs at regular prices, besides ringing up healthy grosses in the split weeks and smaller towns.

The story, as in most musical comedies—whether stage or screen—is slight. But that does not matter. The fast tempo secured by director Del Ruth, plus the generous supply of comedy, brings "Hold Everything" into the money class.

Georges Carpentier and Sally O'Neil supply the love interest—which does not consume too much footage. Story is laid in the training camp of the light heavyweight contender, with Carpentier playing the latter role. Joe E. Brown is a good preliminary battler attached to the camp, with Lightner his cabaret-songster sweetheart.

Fight night comes along, and Brown goes on in a semi-final. His comedy boxing bout—for laughs—equals anything that has been done on stage or screen for some time. Battle ends with Brown the winner, giving the audience a chance to rest the funny bone.

As a result of "Hold Everything" it is likely that Warners will team Joe Brown and Winnie Lightner in a couple more filmusical comedies along the same lines. Both players will find themselves in the starring spotlight with the paying public after this picture goes down the line.

The rest of the cast is satisfactory, but with only brief appearances. The entire picture is rightfully Brown and Lightner, with some one wisely figuring the less seen of the balance of the cast the better.

The Technicolor results surpass anything previously done by Warners from the standpoint of tonal values and clarity.

Direction by Roy Del Ruth set a fast pace, with excellent development of comedy situations to get most out of them.

Novelty shorts and newsreels only needed here.

Guilty?

(Columbia—All Talker)

Yes, Who's Guilty?

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

ANTIQUATED blah! Sloppy sentimentalism layed on thickly in a manner which just reeks of amateurishness. Except for a few picturesque outdoor sets, this piece hasn't one saving grace. It reminds one of the old style "meller," dressed up a bit and adapted to sound.

In neighborhoods where picture addicts insist upon the pure and simple sacrificing fair yarn, this will get by, but in no others, and don't promise too much. It's chock full of production flaws, all very obvious ones at that. There's an attempt made to pull on the heart strings, but they followed the lines of least resistance so closely that it soon becomes unconvincing.

The sound is excellent and photographic qualities of the production are impressive. The dialogue falls in direct line with other phases of the picture: not so good.

John St. Polis, as Senator Polk, an old Southerner, is sentenced to Atlanta for bribery. Carolyn (Virginia Valli) suffers the embarrassment of being a convict's daughter, and while in Florida to forget, becomes enamored of Bob Lee (John Holland), son of a stern old prosecuting attorney (Robert T. Haines), who was responsible for conviction of the Senator.

Polk is paroled and after much persuasion consents to the betrothal of his daughter to Bob, but the latter's old gent refuses to sanction the marriage and threatens Polk with reimprisonment if the knot is tied. Polk commits suicide and the prosecutor's son is accused of murdering him. He is all set for the hangman's noose when Polk's note of confession is found. Of course, Bob's old man consents to the marriage, and the pair live happily ever after, or something like that.

The cast seemed as lazy as the old negroes who were placed in the background for Southern atmosphere.

Select a healthy bunch of shorts to brace up this one. Use a song cartoon, and something in light comedy.

Produced and distributed by Columbia Pictures from "The Black Sheep," by Dorothy Howell. Directed by George B. Seitz. Dialogue by Dorothy Howell. Photography by Ted Tetzlaff. Editor, Leon Barsha. Length, 6,371 feet. Running time, 71 min. Release date, March 3, 1930.

Under a Texas Moon

(Warners—All Talker)

Fair Western in New Dress

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

AS an example of the photographic beauty which can be achieved through the use of color, "Under a Texas Moon" is excellent. It is a constant succession of startling vistas of desert scenery.

The picture will prove a delight to artistic souls and will satisfy those fans who like westerns and romance of the rough sort.

However, it's the same old western plot dolled up in 1930 clothes, color and sound with a comic opera setting which is reminiscent of many of those matinee idol cowboy plays of twenty years ago.

Frank Fay is the dashing, devil-may-care, good-bad, women-crazy vaquero. All of the action centers around him. He has a pair of sloppy-looking, sweet-singing henchmen who perform the age-old roles of furnishing the music, sotto voce, for Fay's many serenades to his various inamoratas.

Fay has a habit of forgetting current business in hand to make love to any and all girls, while the two henchmen softly strum on their guitars from a hidden bush and croon "Under a Texas Moon."

Raquel Torres and Armida come in for the least [illegible] end it is the fiery Myrna Loy, who hasn't [illegible] wild vaquero's saddle.

Barry Boyd and Gertrude [illegible] parts rather well while all this romance is [illegible] lumbering role in satisfactory fashion. Tully Marshall has a couple of laugh lines, but mostly he is just a disagreeable old cattle rancher. Fred Kohler is capable in his role.

The plot hinges on the simple fact that somebody has been stealing the Texas ranchers' cattle. They hire Fay to rescue them and bring in the rustlers. He brings back the cattle and collects the fee when the ranchers demand that he produce the bandits by declaring, with a Spanish flourish, that the long sought bad man is none other than himself.

Michael Curtis directed in a satisfactory manner, considering that the picture never offered more than the bare essentials for a light, romantic comic opera. He has managed to carry it along in a fairly even manner, injecting humor to relieve dull situations.

Needs fairly strong short subjects to balance the program.

In the Next Room

(First National—All Talker)

Like Old Times

(Reviewed by Robert Hart)

WE thought this type of picture had died with the demise of other unlamented films of the "My God! what was that?" type, but here is its ghost stalking on the screen. And lots of other things stalk across it, with the exception of intelligence. There's the haunted house, the clutching hands, the mysterious hooded figure, the "knife fiend," the ghastly noises, the cabinet with the cataleptic girl inside, the jewels, two sudden and unexplained deaths—everything, in fact, except "the papers."

But clap hands for Director Edward Cline. He put over a startlingly new piece of business by revealing the villain as the one we had suspected from the start. Thus is a Hollywood, not to mention Broadway, tradition thrown to the winds. A dumb detective is inserted to create comedy, but the audience never gave him a giggle. Its laughter was bestowed upon the more serious portions of the opus.

The whole thing is a curious melange. Our deduction is that it was intended to be a straight "meller," but that after seeing a few rushes the powers-that-be quickly ordered that some comedy business be shoveled into it. The result is a picture that defies classification.

Alice Day is pretty and speaks clearly, but the voices of the others, including Jack Mulhall, were muffled and indistinct. It may have been due to defects in recording.

If you've booked it, pray for the breaks.

Good News

(M-G-M—All Talker)

It Is!

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

BASED on the musical comedy success of the same name, "Good News" has many qualities to insure its success as a filmusical with a lot of tuneful melodies and plenty of laughs.

Here is one picture that does not attempt to follow regulation procedure in presenting correct college background. Instead, the antics of college co-eds are burlesqued all over the screen. There is a semi-serious attempt to carry an on-the-level love interest, but this is overshadowed by the capable comedy put over by Gus Shy, Bessie Love, Cliff Edwards, and others.

On the reputation of the stage musical, plus the fast-moving and wholesome screen play, "Good News" will stand up for showings in the key extended runs and subsequent bookings down the line.

Gus Shy, comedian from the stage show, scores an immediate hit in the picture part, and shows he rates attention in future films. Bessie Love takes advantage of every opportunity in her comedienne spot, and Cliff Edwards closely follows with his "uke." M-G-M imported Mary Lawlor from the stage show for the girl love interest, but she will soon be trouping back to New York. Her voice has a tremble and wave that is easily picked up by the "mike," and it's just another case where a voice can get over on the stage but it fails to pass muster after going through the sound recording machines.

Stanley Smith carries the romantic lead as the football hero in a satisfactory manner, while Lola Lane surprises with the quality of her song numbers. Delmar Daves, as the tough "heavy" burlesqued, is capable.

The story isn't much—just a loose jumble built around college atmosphere to obtain the maximum amount of laughs and opportunities for musical numbers. The varsity drag is spotted in a Latin classroom, and there are a few other dance ensembles included besides. The regulation football game must be in any college picture and is spotted here for a climax.

All the song hits of the stage show have been retained in the picture with a few new ones added for good measure.

Dramatic shorts and newsreel required with this one.

Produced and released by M-G-M. From musical comedy by Schwab and Mandell, De Sylva, Brown and Henderson. Directed by Edgar McGregor and Nick Grinde. Screen play by Frances Marion. Added dialogue by Joe Farnham. Photographed by Percy Hilburn. Length, about 8,100 feet. Running time, about 80 minutes.

The Man Hunter

(Warners—All Talker)

Beautiful—But Dumb

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

WHEN we say beautiful we mean the jungle and South Sea Island exteriors used as local background for a weak offspring of "White Cargo," handled oh, so dumbly. An average programmer, aimed, we assume, to please those who do not seek the very best in film fare, that vast army of picture-goers who will accept almost anything that comes along, without squawking.

We wonder if producers realize how greatly the inclusion of flat dialogue influences the entertainment value of a talker? In no spot does this vehicle stack up as being first-rate picture material, yet it has a few sufficiently strong angles to raise it to a more impressive level, if the weak, and at times stupid, lines assigned to the characters did not interfere.

Another current Warner release, "Isle of Escape," contains many of the same sets. A hotel and rum joint used is identically the same as the indoor stuff in "The Man Hunter." Somebody on the Warner lot apparently thought a lot of the spot. Here's hoping they call it quits.

Ross Lederman directed a pretty good cast, although Rin Tin Tin responded more intelligently than his support.

Nora Lane, as Lady Jane Winton, travels to a South Sea island where her deceased father had a flourishing ivory trading post, in charge of George Castle (John Loder), who decides to play one tusk for the company and three for himself. Lady Jane discovers the doctored books, and, with the aid of Jim Clayton (Charles Delanty), an outcast, routs Castle and his henchman, Crosby (Pat Hartigan). The usual clinch ends the spell.

The photography is excellent, and again the outdoor shots are marvelous.

Strong support is needed in the lineup of shorts played with this. Use a dramatic act, and a good comedy with some music.

Produced and distributed by Warners. Directed by Ross Lederman. Adapted by James A. Starr, from the story by Lily Hayward. Dialogue by James A. Starr. Length, 4,383 feet. Running time, 73 minutes. Release date, not set.

Man from Blankley's

(Warner—All Talker)

Bewildering; Dubious B. O.

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THE why of this is almost as bewildering as the picture. Except that it may be John Barrymore's insistence that he play in a straight comedy to vary his long run of romantic roles.

"The Man from Blankley's" is an English comedy, all wool and a couple of yards wide. Too woolly for the average American fan to grasp. In the big towns, the picture may have a chance, but in all others, it looks as if it's just too bad.

Out of the maze of sequences, most of them dull and all certainly long-winded, the idea finally seeped through to this reviewer that Lord Strathpeffer, played by Barrymore, had happened into the wrong dinner party. The house in which the heavy London fog landed him, ossified, is the scene of a middle class dinner affair to round out which a man from Blankley's had been hired. Barrymore, of course, is mistaken for the hired guest and what happens after that, happens because of the error. It seems John was slated to visit some friends interested with him in scarabs, pyramids and Egyptology. Why he remained in the obviously wrong surroundings as long as he does can only be explained as a sweeping application of author's license in concocting play material.

At any rate, Barrymore meets Loretta Young there. They were near-sweethearts in the bonnie highlands of Scotland where John had almost proposed, then got himself drunker than usual and disappeared for a couple of days. However, Loretta is conveniently there and the romance begins to bud anew. In the wash up, Scotland Yard explains to the museum collection of guests that Barrymore is really of the landed gentry. Come apologies and a shot of the couple walking into the fog.

The part calls for a drunk all the way. And Barrymore plays it with realism that usually sparkles. His tendency to spread the English accent on so broadly makes it difficult to make out what he's talking about. Everybody in the cast is super-English as a matter of fact except Miss Young who remains strangely Middle West throughout.

Needs strongest kind of short subject support.

Produced and distributed by Warners. Based on play by F. Anstey. Directed by Alfred Green. Scenario by Harvey Thew and Joseph Jackson. Photographed by James Van Trees. Length, 6,156 feet. Running time, 69 mins. Release date, May 24, 1930.

Journey's End

(Tiffany—All Talker)

A Superb Picture

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

LONG talked about and heralded far and wide, "Journey's End" comes through from Tiffany as one of the most powerful war pictures ever made. A noteworthy accomplishment, a credit to the producers, the director, the cast, and the industry. "Journey's End" will be remembered.

The play first saw light in London. It wasn't long before New York heard about it, then saw it. Shortly thereafter, road companies hit the big cities and everywhere, big business was rolled up. In Gotham, critics, for once at least, united in describing the play as one of the most stirring that had played across the boards in this country in many years.

Now comes the picture, a faithful transcript of the play, treated with the same deft handling, with a fine regard for shadings in drama and characterization. Yet the question is: What will it do at the box-office?

It is our suggestion that the exhibitor see the picture if he can in order to determine for himself. You have a tragic story with a tragic ending. You have the grim, unrelenting background of war and the havoc it wrecks on man and mind. You have a womanless cast speaking English as it is spoken in London with frequent burrs and unfamiliar word inflections to consider.

Yet, you have a magnificent drama of courage

Haw!

"Rookery Nook," which, according to dispatches, is convulsing London audiences with laughter, will be distributed in this country by M-G-M as "One Embarrassing Night," thus disposing of one embarrassing title.

and restraint, a pathetic, yet effective comedy relief ably supplied by Billy Bevan and a theme which, in some manner, remote or near, has affected the scheme of humans throughout the world.

More strictly commercial, is the tremendous word-of-mouth comment which R. C. Sheriff's work has created, swelled by a score or more road companies and what we assume will be a natural and widespread desire to see this avidly discussed play at prices keyed to the popular scale. On the basis of that which the spectator carries away from the screen, "Journey's End" deserves a real success. Whether the sensibilities of the public are finely enough attuned to grasp the beauty and significance of the film, is another matter entirely.

Practically all of the story is played in a front line dugout. Five British officers are the principal characters; four of them seasoned, one, just up from the ball camp. How the war plays its devilish pranks on each one is depicted —powerfully and impressively. Stanhope, the captain, played with a dramatic force that grips, by Colin Clive, turns to liquor to bolster his courage. Osborn, the most impressive character of them all and played beautifully by Ian MacLaren, turns philosophic and finds his comfort in "Alice in Wonderland." Trotter, whether he realizes it or not, takes it upon himself to Pollyanna the group into a semblance of forgetfulness by his joviality. Billy Bevan, in the role, is splendid.

Then there is Hibbert, played by Anthony Bushell, whose terror gives way to a false courage on finding his fear shared by Stanhope. Into this war-seasoned group comes Raleigh, fresh from school and with pre-conceived notions of life at the front. His ideas are shattered one by one as the stark reality of the conflict is battered home. So well does David Manners portray the role that you actually see the mental conflicts through which he goes.

A raiding party results in Osborn's death. Hibbert attempts to fake illness, until Stanhope brings him into line at the point of a revolver. Then comes the big drive. The conflict between Stanhope, who is in love with Raleigh's sister, burns until Raleigh is mortally injured. The handful of men is being rapidly wiped out and oblivion is inevitable for all that are left. As Raleigh dies in the dugout, Stanhope is at his side. Then the German guns begin to blow the place to bits as the picture fades out.

The cast, down to the last man, does impressive work. Clive, as Stanhope gives a memorable performance. MacLaren as Osborn, is the dominant figure by virtue of his spiritual force. You won't forget his work. This applies to the other leads as well.

Dramatic highlights are too many to outline in detail here. It is perhaps sufficient to point out that "Journey's End" is as much stirring and desolate, impressive and pathetic and very much indeed a terrific indictment against war.

Let it go as is, unless you feel a straight comedy would help. "Shoulder Arm," in this case, is suggested.

Produced by Tiffany Gainsborough. Distributed by Tiffany. From play by R. C. Sherriff. Directed by James Whale. Continuity by Joseph Moncurem March. Photographed by Benjamin Kline. Length, 11,416 feet. Running time 130 minutes. Release date not set.

Several Corking Comedies Are Highlights of Week's Shorts

"Mickey's Luck"

(Darmour-RKO—2 Reels)

Kid Program Comedy

"MICKEY'S LUCK," the latest Darmour comedy featuring young Mickey McGuire, is entertaining chiefly because of a trained mule and some ingenious contraptions, including a piano and a fire wagon. Mickey and his friends do a song which is as good as child performers can manage. A little different twist to the plot to eliminate situations, in which the guilty escapes while the innocent are punished might have made this suitable for children's matinees. As it is, it is doubtful. Albert Herman directed the production, which unfortunately has lost the spontaneity which makes a gang of children interesting. Mickey is too cocky.

Strong support essential.

"Spills and Thrills"

(Pathe—Sportlight—1 Reel)

Thrills and Spills

GRANTLAND RICE can always be counted on for fine film fare. His newest "Sportlight" offers interesting and thrilling action, with an outboard water rodeo at Winter Haven, Fla., the highlight. Running time, 7 minutes.

Fine short for diversifying a bill headlining a dramatic feature.

"He Trumped Her Ace"

(Sennett-Educ'l—2 Reels)

A Corker

MACK SENNETT out-Sennett's himself with a corking comedy on bridge that will be appreciated by players and non-players alike because the comedy situations are so well handled. Marjorie Beebe and Johnny Burke click with their dialogue. The comedy highlights, of course, center around the bridge table, with the climax coming from a kibitzer who advises Johnny to play the wrong card at the physychological moment, said card being a trump over Marjorie's ace. Same kibitzer happens to be the judge at the divorce proceedings which are instituted as an outcome to the wrong play. You should laugh just figuring out this situation even before you see the picture. Book this one by all means, and don't lay down on billing it up to the skies—it's worth it and then some. Running time, 19 minutes.

This one can hold up the comedy end of any program.

"The Lightning Express"

(Universal—Sound and Effects—Serial)

Great for Serial Addicts

WELL-MADE serial, crammed with typical serial action, greatly enhanced by the jazz party atmosphere.

Louise Lorraine and Lane Chandler are featured. Henry Macrae directed. The support includes Al Ferguson and Greta Granstedt.

The story involves the B. & M. railroad, which had been pushing its way into new territory when its president, John Venable, dies. His son is left to carry on with the work, but heavy dissipation interferes. A scheming group of cowboys offers resistance to the road in extending lines to new territory, causing several hot fights. Macrae did a good job in the first three episodes reviewed to date. Running time, each approximately 19 minutes.

Domestic comedy feature would be suitable.

"Dad Knows Best"

(Educational—Lyons & Moran)

Smart Fun

CLASSY piece done by Jack White, who injected a strong lineup of high falutin' comedy material centering around Taylor Holmes and Helen Bolton. There is very little of the old slapstick used, White relying more on dialogue and natural situations as they developed to build up comedy material. Holmes tries to fix things with the hardboiled mother of his son's fiancee. A little dinner party, plenty of liquor and presto! Things are all straightened out and Holmes, a prosperous widower, talks the old lady into a double wedding. Nicely built up. Running time, 20 minutes.

Good match for a musical comedy feature.

"The People Versus—"

(Universal—Variety No. 981—1 Reel)

Jokes in a Jail

THIS is a good old gag turned into a one-reel comedy drama short. There is pathos in the opening shot of a mother greeting her son who has been arrested. Frank Campeau plays the part of the hardened habitue of the underworld who "spills" to Pat O'Malley, handling the role of the district attorney. Campeau figures O'Malley to be the attorney sent to defend him. There's a laugh at the "tag" when the district attorney discloses his identity. Running time 6 minutes.

Should be run with light feature.

"The Hash Shop"

(Universal—Sound—1 Reel)

Typical Cartoon Stuff

CONTAINING the usual lineup of music and sound synchronized gags found in the average sound cartoon. This "Oswald" number, while entertaining, does not measure up to many of its predecessors. Running time, 9 minutes.

Okay for heavy feature contrast.

"And Wife"

(Educational—Variety No. 982—1 Reel)

Fast Divorce Satire

THIS comedy, written by Betty Burbridge, will stir laughs from any sort of an audience. Bernice Elliott and Frank Davis are cast in the fast moving roles and sputter off the patter in neat fashion. The action occurs in a hotel room where the man, upon awakening from his pre-marital farewell dinner hangover finds his ex-wife in bed with him. The plot hinges around the fact that he is marrying another girl because she forced him into it. The ex-wife finds the way out and they depart happily with a nice snapper at the finish. Running time, 10 minutes.

Good comedy for any picture bill.

"Absent Minded"

(Universal—Variety No. 973—1 Reel)

Just an Old, Old Gag

NOW here is an old time sure-fire vaud hit—it never has yet failed to draw laughs—the skit about the absent-minded bird who forgets everything, including his own name. In this case he forgets his sweetie's name, how to propose, etc. He ties knots in handkerchiefs and strings on his fingers and then forgets what they mean. In the end he is cured—and that's the gag. Bobby Perkins and Wallace Ford are the bright lights. Running time, 10 minutes.

Entertainment enough for ordinary programs.

Federal Theatres Takes Over Nine Chicago Houses

The Federal Theatres Co., a holding company, has been organized to take over the Bird Theatres Corporation. The nine National playhouses of this city recently passed to the Bird corporation on the dissolution of their receivership. Officers of the Federal Theatres Co., the new operators of the National theatres, are: Frederick Pierce, Philadelphia financier, president; James Coston, Coston Booking Circuit, Chicago, vice-president and general manager; Robert O. Farrell, Chicago, attorney, vice-president; T. J. Corbett, Chicago, vice-president, and Paul King, Chicago, treasurer.

Lorch Holding Sales Meetings in Mid-West

Harry Lorch, mid-west division manager of Pathe, has scheduled a series of sales meetings throughout his district designed to plug the Pathe circus picture, "Swing High." First of the meetings was held at the Stevens Hotel here. In attendance were J. J. Clarke, Chicago manager; H. A. Silverberg, Detroit manager; T. Greenwood, Milwaukee manager; Tom North, Van Beuren special representative; Dan Roche, publicity director for mid-west division, and the following salesmen and bookers: Tom Delaney, Sig Decker, Charles Filkins, C. Lundgren, W. Drake, George Pratt, all of Chicago; A. Chapman, C. E. Runkle, F. Bonnem and F. Strubank, of Detroit; R. Baldwin, S. Chapman and L. Clark, of Milwaukee.

Beauty Winner Clicks

Willis Kent, producer of "The Primrose Path" (Tech-Art), screened his production for a large group of independent exhibitors here last week, with the result that plenty of Chicago theatres will be announcing its advent in the near future. The exhibs are said to have favored the production in a big way.

Dorothy Granger, a 17-year-old beauty contest winner, is cast in "Primrose Path" for her first time in pictures, and is said to come close to stealing the picture. On the strength of her performance, which is in a minor part, Hal Roach gave her a five-year contract, Kent relates.

"Ingagi," Congo picture, grossed $11,600 in a week at the Garrick, a near-record intake for this house which plays legit attractions chiefly. The big gross was made by cashing in on noon-day Lenten services which were conducted at the house. The management jammed the lobby with hot poster displays, showing gorillas on the make for nude native women in the jungles. The plugs proved an effective draw for the evangelist's earlier crowd.

Chicago Jonah For Sono Art, Thomas Finds

Harry Thomas, vice-president of Sono Art-World Wide, held several business conferences with local exchange men while here, en route to the Coast, last week.

The company's product, he reported while here, is doing well everywhere but in Chicago. The situation is something of an enigma to members of the Chicago exchange, who are at a loss to explain why this district should be less receptive than any other throughout the country in the matter of Sono Art-World Wide product.

Thomas's conferences here were of several days' duration.

Parnass Leaves Industry

I. R. Parnass, star salesman for the local Warner Bros.-Vitaphone exchange, resigned this week and will enter the wholesale millinery business in Dallas, Texas, his home town, in the near future. He is also interested in an oil venture in the Texas Panhandle, according to report. Parnass, at the time of his resignation, was leading all Warner Bros. salesmen throughout the country in extra play dates obtained in the current Sam E. Morris Month drive.

CHARLES E. LEWIS
Chairman and Editor

A National Association of Showmen Meeting in MOTION PICTURE NEWS
Every Week—for Mutual Benefit and Progress

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"Alibis!"

SELLING your attractions and your theatre represents the major portion of any manager's job these days. But what we would like to know is: do you send your office results or alibis?

We are prompted to ask this question because we recently visited four theatres located in small communities and, in our estimation, they were almost on a par in drawing power and class of patronage.

Yet, on a certain good picture three of the houses turned in exceptional receipts, while the fourth "flopped"—and how!

Knowing the boys as I know them, gave me the opportunity of asking them how they sold this particular attraction, and they were frank in their conversations. In one town the manager tied up with all the schools to excellent returns; he also worked out a campaign with the local merchants.

Similar stunts and tie-ups were effected by the other two successful men. But the "bird" who flopped looked like a school-boy caught throwing black-board erasers when I started to talk about what HE did.

He "was" going to tie up with every store in the town.

He "was" about to work up a special show for the kiddies.

He "thought" he would stage a contest in conjunction with the picture.

And a lot of other "baloney," which, when boiled down to facts, meant applesauce for the house.

Results: not at the box office. Except in the falling off of the receipts if you want to call anything like that results.

Now listen, boys. We stand ready, week in and week out, to back up any argument in your favor. We want to see managerial conditions improve and we do know that our constant harping on one bad condition or the other is making certain theatre executives stop, look and listen.

But if YOU are not delivering the goods and not going out after every attraction booked into your house, then you are laying down on the job and you are one of the boys, whose actions are making it tough sledding for the rest of us.

Do proper justice to your theatre. Do your damndest for the pictures you must run. Watch every dollar like a bull-dog and save the pennies wherever you possibly can. But don't lay down and expect the house to pile up profits all by its lonesome. Sometimes such things happen, but they are the exceptions rather than the rule.

If you have made the show-business your future and want to get somewhere, then "step out" like the dickens and put your shows over.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

EXPLOITATION REVIEWS!

In presenting this new, exclusive feature of the Club pages, we want to impress upon our readers the fact that we have merely tried to state our reactions to the various pictures reviewed. No comment is to be construed as criticism in any sense of the word. We try to point out the exploitation angles and possibilities without regard to the good or bad elements in the productions. If you will keep in mind that these reviews are based strictly on such conditions and that we have not attempted to make an individual study of each picture, then you will be accepting these reviews in the proper spirit. As we go along reviewing pictures, from week to week, we will try to improve and elaborate on the exploitation and advertising possibilities of the pictures. We are trying to serve YOU and we sincerely hope that we are succeeding.

"CHICK" LEWIS

"HONEY"

Paramount

Speaking from the exploitation angle, this one IS a Honey for any live-wire showman to sell. The title alone will tell you that, but to go even further, just visualize the possibilities of tie-ups in connection with that title.

First crack out of the box you HAVE names. There is (in addition to Nancy Carroll) Lillian Roth, who has scored in some recent outstanding pictures, and how she sings "Sing You Sinners" is nobody's business. Then you have Skeets Gallagher (if he means anything in your town), Zasu Pitts who cries her way right through the whole shindig. Harry Green, whose philosophy about "dames" will provide you with plenty of material for advertising purposes. Stanley Smith, who scored with Nancy in "Sweetie." And don't overlook Mitzi Green, the youngster who knocked them for a row of belly-laughs in "Marriage Playground." Maybe the kids uplift societies will make a kick about the role she plays in this one. But that don't detract one bit from the great work she does in "Honey."

Second crack out of the box: You can tie up every kind of store in your town, and we believe that even the undertaker would listen to a proposition. Candy windows, soda fountain specials, dress shops and what not are all your prospects and they will greet you with open arms at the mere suggestion of co-operation on a picture like this.

The title is a natural. The cast is a natural. The story will never make 'em sit up nights thinking about it, but it has entertainment, and we don't mean anything else but——. So what else can any showman ask when he sets out to sell a picture to his customers?

Give the songs plenty of advance play so that when the picture hits your house, they will be humming and whistling as they go out with a feeling that they have been entertained. "Sing You Sinners," "Let's Be Domestic," "In My Little Hope Chest" and all the others.

In billing this attraction don't overlook the line that; it's the successor to "Sweetie." They liked that one, so whatever you claim for this one will meet with no arguments after they have seen it.

You can tie up with your newspaper on a contest called—"What do you know about dames?" They will have to get Harry Green's viewpoint to appreciate this gag, but it offers possibilities for advertising purposes just the same. You can even tell them that Green will answer that question in the picture.

A good catch line would be—"Sing You Sinners, 'Cause Honey Is Coming." And dozens of other ideas along the same lines should come to your mind when you sit down to dope out your teaser and advance campaign. You can go all your gags on "Sweetie" one better, because you can tell them that this is better than "Sweetie."

A good stunt would be to buy up plenty of cheap, thin dish towels and imprint them "Crying Towels" and tie in Zasu Pitts and the picture. String them across your lobby or front (of it's in keeping with your house). This, and many other gags could be worked from a hundred different angles.

It's all right to chop out a lot of suggestions on the exploitations possibilities of a picture, but with "Honey" there are so many that you won't have any trouble at all in selling them and the box office should take a decided jump upwards when the pictures get into your house.

If you're a showman at all, you'll be able to create a whale of interest in this one, and even if you're not so "hot," you'll still do business.

"JOURNEY'S END"

Tiffany

The first thing to remember is that this production is a war story, but despite the claim that the public is tired of war stuff, the play is still on Broadway and has rounded out a full year.

So keeping these factors in mind you must first consider your surrounding program when you book this one into your house. From my own viewpoint, a corking slap-stick comedy should either precede or follow the showing of the picture. Where the comedy is spotted, depends on your own judgment of your audience's reaction to morbid pictures.

There is one point I would stress; namely, try to see the picture before you run it. You will then get a better idea of what you have to handle than if you depend on regular reviews or distributing office propaganda. No one knows your patronage better than YOU, therefore our advice to see the picture yourself if it is at all possible.

One of your best bets, from the exploitation and tieup angle, is the local American Legion Posts or any other patriotic organizations. Previews by invitation to include all persons of importance in the civic or religious circles of your community should be productive of some good indorsements for use in your newspaper copy. Play it up as a "SWEEPING STORY OF HUMAN EMOTIONS." When the picture plays at your theatre, surround it with a lot of showmanship. Especially towards the finish where the dugout goes dark. Darken your houselights until nothing but the exit lights are on and keep them that way until the finish of the picture.

THEN, shoot with a light record on your non-sync, or the organ. You must figure on lifting them out of the gripping feeling that the picture is bound to leave them in.

Play up the fact that the play is STILL on Broadway and packing them in at every performance. One of the road companies must have passed your way. That will give you a chance to capitalize on the impression the visit may have left on the community in general.

Let them know that the play was written by an Englishman. And since the dialect of that country predominates, you must get the idea across that the cast is practically all-English. If they expect to hear American doughboy slang, you will be starting them off under a handicap, because half the picture will be over before they can accustom themselves to the dialect.

If your community knows anything at all about the play then you have one decided advantage. Play it up strong. Tell them it is the SENSATION OF NEW YORK. THE SENSATION OF LONDON. AN INTERNATIONAL SENSATION. THE HUMAN SIDE OF THE WAR.

When you start thinking about the front and marque, any good display will fit the needs. In this respect, at least, you can go as far as you like. But a good front display on this attraction is not going to put it over. Handle it with kid gloves and make the most of whatever local situation exists in your favor and in favor of the picture.

A good street car gag would be banners on the sides of the cars reading—"Our Journey's End is to see 'Journey's End' at the Blank theatre." The same could be applied to taxicab tire covers. Arrows reading "To the Journey's End" and painted on sidewalks, fences, empty store windows, etc.

You'll have a tough time selling this one with the "old reliable" stunts. They just won't mean anything. You'll have to see this picture yourself if you really want to do it justice in your exploitation or advertising. No doubt, the Club pages will carry plenty of stuff on this picture, but it will then be too late in many theatres, to dope out a campaign.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

EXPLOITATION REVIEWS!

Just as we developed the Round Table pages, it is our intention to develop this new phase of the Club's activities. Which means: we want YOUR suggestions for improving the exploitation reviews, just as we wanted, and used, your suggestions in making the Club department what it is today. If there is some particular phase in connection with these reviews which we have overlooked, call it to our attention and it will be given every possible consideration. Are you interested in the various national tie-ups in conjunction with each release? Would a reproduction of the posters mean anything to you in the planning of your campaigns? We want to make this new feature as valuable as possible, but to do so we must depend upon the live-wire showmen to guide us along the lines of what they want and need. Let's get behind this fellows, and we'll all get the most out of it.

"THE GIRL SAID NO"

M-G-M

Do you want speed? Will a "nut" picture boost your receipts? Is your audience fond of comedy—and plenty of it? Or perhaps they like stars? Well, you have all of these things —and more in this rapid moving attraction.

For exploitation and advertising purposes you can play up Bill Haines, especially if your patrons like him. Then you have additional stars in the cast, namely: Polly Moran and Marie Dressler (don't advertise them as a team because of their work in "Chasing Rainbows"). Leila Hyams will make 'em love her. Bushman, Jr., plays the villain; put them altogether, you have a darned fine cast to start working on this attraction.

The title "The Girl Said No" possesses plenty of good selling angles and ties in naturally with many co-operative schemes. A "joke" contest is just a suggestion, but certainly offers possibilities. Use a good teaser campaign. Again the title gives you ample opportunity in this direction. Store tie-ups are good from many different lines.

The background of the picture includes, among other things, a stock broker's office, automobile stunts, night clubs, restaurants, etc. Which means you can make a special play along these particular lines. Leila's bridal costume should open the door to many window displays in the better stores.

"What would you do if your girl said no? is a good line for your advance and newspaper campaigns. A street ballyhoo of a chap walking around the town apparently crying into a handkerchief, with a sign on his back reading—"The Girl Said No." This could be used in advance and then the theatre name and play-dates added.

As this is a tough baby to walk into the middle of, play up your feature starting time. The change of pace is particularly strong, with the story hittin' on all cylinders and then a quick change to slow action necessitated by the plot. Therefore, the warning about the starting time on your screen and programs, as well as your newspaper ads.

Since there are so many good, hearty laughs you should certainly play it up from that angle even if you neglect every other bet. Tell them—"if they never laugh for months, they will on this one." Play up the stars, the story and the situations for all they are worth because the customers won't be disappointed. They will get their money's worth and that's what you want to know when you start out to sell them an idea that they ought to see this picture.

I caught the "action and talk" trailer on this one before it opened and it tells them too much about the picture. I'd sooner see it sold strictly via its title and stars than through too many scenes from the picture. A good trailer in advance of the opening would be a separate flash of each word in the title, and end it up with some appropriate catch lines that fit the star and the story.

If Haines is a b.o. draw in your house you will surely do business and they will beg for more, if he happens to be "not so hot" for your biz. then you can still interest them with the many exploitation angles this one offers. The regular review will give you enough of the "inside" of the story to provide you with "what it's all about," and the few suggestions above that we pass along should help you do the rest. "It's as broad as it's long," says the classics, and we tell you the same thing as far as this picture is concerned. If your "idea" foundry is functioning properly you'll have no trouble getting the cash customers all worked up to see this production. Take the title, the stars, the side-lights of the picture, work them out to suit your local conditions and then listen to the merry hum of the ticket machine in the box office.

"PUTTIN' ON THE RITZ"

United Artists

Sitting at a desk in New York makes it rather hard to know whether the name, Harry Richman, means anything to you fellows scattered throughout the average small towns and cities, but regardless of whether his name is b. o. to your theatre, we can convey the glad tidings to everyone who has bought: "Here is a peach for exploitation in any theatre."

It possesses good names besides Richman. It has marvelous comedy touches. It will bring a tear or two to the eye. And the songs are sure winners no matter where else you may disagree with us. The final scenes are in Technicolor and bring the story to one of its best climaxes.

For advertising and exploitation purposes you can work any number of different gags and they will surely lend themselves to the picture. You can release a few hundred balloons with miniature high hats, and tags, plugging the picture, also adding some passes to key up interest when they come down. A small baby upright, borrowed from a piano dealer, placed in the lobby in advance of the opening, together with a singer or team in tuxedos and high hats plugging the songs, is another good idea providing you have not worked this slant too recently.

For teaser advertising in your programs, trailers, and newspapers, you can start something like this: Use a box, leaving plenty of white space, set on top—"Reserved for Blank Theatre," then in very small type at bottom of box: "P. S.—We're 'Puttin' On the Ritz' for next week." Keep building up the type size on these teasers until you're ready to shoot with your first opening announcement. The same idea can be worked up to good advantage in dozens of different ways.

Richman's voice records so well that you need not hesitate to play up this fact at all. We even suggest you get some of his phonograph records of hits from the picture and play them over a loud horn on your marquee or in the lobby. Encourage your music store tie-ups to rig up similar gags in front of their show windows. One live-wire showman out west worked a good angle in this conection when he planted horns at the busiest intersection of the city and played song hits from the picture to great returns in newspaper publicity, etc. If you've run any of Jimmy Gleason's pictures in your house before this one, play him up, as he will win your audience with his fine comedy work.

"Ritzy" double trucks, and a lot of other co-operative tie-ups can be worked on this one if handled in the proper way and PROVIDING you haven't worked the co-op. advertising angle to death. The title lends itself to many other live forms of exploitation and any wide-awake showman will make good use of it without having the ideas set forth in detail.

By all means play up the songs in advance of the picture's opening. They are "Singing a Vagabond Song," "Puttin' On the Ritz," "Alice In Wonderland," "There's Danger In Your Eyes Cherie" and "With You.". Get together with your local radio station (if you have a drag there) and see that the picture play dates are plugged in conjunction with the songs. Your music dealers will hop to your aid because it means business for them. Make 'em give you outstanding window displays. Play up the "high hat" angle from every slant. Buy up as many old ones as you can lay your hands on. Hang them in your lobby, foyer and under your marquee. A good street ballyhoo would be several men dressed in "ritzy" style, frock coats, high hats, etc., and walking around the town. Use them several days as a teaser, then let them walk up to the ladies and, tipping their high hats, hand out a card with good copy.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"OUR ERROR, FRANK"

The photograph reproduced below was accidentally mixed up and through an error we credited the stunt, which appeared in the issue of Feb. 22, under the heading "Ads and Ballyhoo Are Important Factors for Stevenson" to D. F. Stevenson, manager of the Lincoln Theatre in Trenton, N. J. The ballyhoo is the property of Frank B. Hill and was used in conjunction with Frank's showing of "Sweetie." We want to thank him for bringing this to our attention, and we hasten to offer our apologies. Considering the vast amount of material received at Club headquarters a mistake of this sort rarely happens and we know that Frank will bear with us.

Adding Novelty to His Lobby Display Helped Merriman

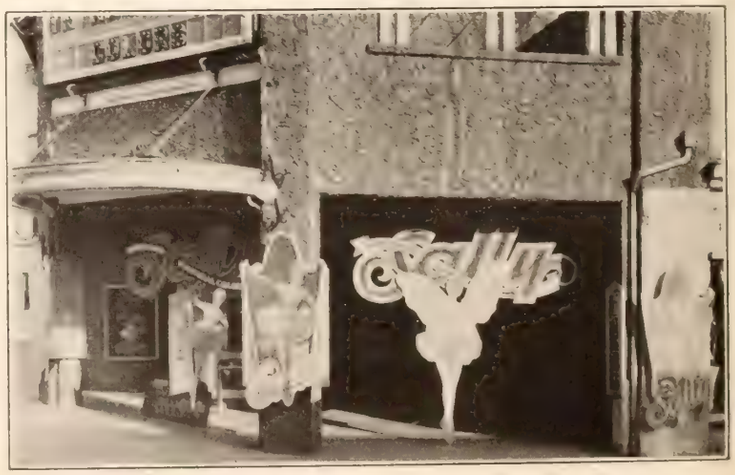
Novelty was injected in J. H. Merriman's lobby display at the Valentine Theatre in Toledo, Ohio, through the use of an advertisement that appeared recently in the MOTION PICTURE NEWS on "Dynamite" and was made up in striking colors.

The ad itself was very unusual, eight pages being used in the make-up, with each page bearing a letter of the word "Dynamite," and carrying a scene from the picture. As this ad was one of the most novel ads ever used, Merriman decided to employ it for his own use, and had a panel made up of it, and when the re-arranged and completed ad was put on display in the lobby it created an effective attention getter and helped a lot in the selling of the picture.

Through a tie-up with the "Toledo Times," Merriman pulled the old "red extra gag" which as you all know consists of imprinting the front page of a newspaper in flaming red, and since Merriman was selling "Dynamite" the front page of the paper bore copy reading: EXTRA! EXTRA! DYNAMITE FOUND IN THEATRE, and then in smaller type, underneath the "scare" head, he carried copy relative to the theatre and play date. The paper permitted the use of their regular newsboys for distribution of the extras and this stunt sure made them sit up and take notice of the picture. In addition to the extra gag, Merriman also had 300 special cards made up with the usual "Warning" copy on it together with the theatre and play date, and these were conspicuously displayed in appropriate places throughout the city.

We want to say now that no matter how old that "red extra gag" is it will generally be found capable of breezing home a box-office winner, and if you've got a picture that you want to make a big splash on and can pull this gag, your b. o. will be boosted—and don't forget—you don't have to wait for a "natural" to come along, most any picture will do—for after all it's the way you make up your copy, and since we've got a bunch of fine showmen in the CLUB it's unnecessary to say more, because when a member of the CLUB sees an opportunity he grabs it and doesn't wait for the business to come to him—he goes out and gets it.

With the type of high-pressure showmanship that Merriman is displaying out in Toledo his business must always be way above par and we want to thank him for passing this along to us and we hope that he becomes a very active contributor to the CLUB'S pages as we want to hear more of his livewire activities. How about it "J. H."? Let's hear from you.



La Bar's "Sally" Stunt Created A Lot Of Interest

One of the highlights in Mgr. F. LaBar's campaign on "Sally" playing at the Plaza Theatre, Asheville, N. C., was tying up on the song angle with a prominent music store.

The music store furnished a piano and a lady player for entertainment in the lobby at no cost to the theatre other than be permitted to advertise and sell their music.

The lobby stunt created lots of attention. And to enlarge upon the idea, Manager LaBar secured the services of a young lady to sing the hit numbers from the picture "Sally." This girl, who is attractive and has a pleasing personality, has caused a lot of favorable comment.

The music store also had a co-operative window display showing the song numbers from the picture as well as displaying advertising material on "Sally" and giving name of theatre, cast and play dates.

And as the picture with this story shows, these odd panels and cutouts were some of the finest that have come to our attention in many a month. Pay particular attention to the beauty of these pictures and art displays, especially the one under the marquee showing Marilyn Miller, holding a large reserved seat ticket in her hand.

This is great work, LaBar, and we would certainly like to hear a whole lot more about what you are doing down your way. How about it?

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"Sweetheart Week" Was Innovated By Damon For Stunt

In a recent issue we published an account of the activities of A. J. Damon, manager of the Lincoln-Dixie Theatre in Chicago Heights, Ill., and promised that we would record more of this enterprising showman's work in the near future.

As an example of the way he works in new slants for his pictures we need only to tell you about the "Sweetheart Week" he innovated in conjunction with his showings of "The Kiss" and "Sweetie." To advertise the special week, he used a street ballyhoo, which consisted of a man being concealed inside a large cut-out of a heart. The cut-out bore copy announcing the week and the theatre.

In the lobby he arranged a striking display in the form of a parlor suite, occupied by a handsome young couple whose duties were to act as host and hostess. They sat on a divan looking romantically happy, and passed out cards which told of the pictures for the coming week. Included in the setting was an orthophonic victrola which plugged the theme songs from the pictures. The stunt had them talking all during the week it was used and proved an effective medium.

We want to thank Damon for passing this one along and we hope that he will keep us posted in the future as to what else he is doing to keep them coming up to the box-office.

Underseas Display Was Valuable To Cohen's Business

Irving Cohen used a unique lobby display that derived lots of attention for "Mysterious Island" playing at the State Theatre, Omaha, Nebr.

Cohen promoted a big goldfish tank and filled it with water. And on the bottom of the tank which was made of glass, were put toy submarines, fish, mermaids, boats, etc., to make it look like the bottom of the ocean.

In front and around the tank the theatre's artist made a mask painted like rocks and with the title of picture and play dates on it as well as stills from the picture.

Green and white asher lights played on the display and with stage grass around and below it, it made a very attractive display and drew an unusual amount of attention.

Here's a good idea for some of you other fellows to cash in on if you are wide-awake, and we are sure it is a stunt that will cause the customers to look and laugh if it is handled in as clean-cut a manner as Irving handled it. You will remember that not long ago, we told you how he pulled the aeroplane stunt, and this as a follow-up sort of makes it sound like some good stuff is due from Omaha and Irving Cohen. How about it?

PINCUS' PULLS ONE!

Charlie Pincus engineered a most unusual tie-up and a novel publicity story in connection with the showing of "Happy Days" in Nebraska, so we pass it along to you.

'Telegram From Janet Gaynor'

As the accompanying cut shows, a regiment of Western Union telegraph boys set forth to deliver special telegrams to thousands of residents in the community where the Paramount is located. You will note from the cut, which appeared with a three column story in the "Omaha News," how fine a piece of free publicity they grabbed in connection with it, and we want to compliment Charlie on this excellent piece of exploitation.

Let's hear some more from you, Pincus, and be sure to pass along the details of what you are doing out there in Omaha.

Alexander Makes Good Use of Mats in Herald Make-Up

An excellent combination herald was turned out by Irving Alexander, manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Roxbury, Mass., on "Party Girl" and "The Sky Hawk."

Measuring twelve by seven inches, the herald was printed in black and white on good quality paper. By working in his mats, Alexander achieved a very forceful effect that was bound to strike the eye and assure the heralds being read. On one side "Party Girl," replete with selling copy that carried a wallop, enhanced by well selected mats, made you read it from start to finish, while a catch line on the bottom requested that you read the other side.

The reverse side carried a striking lay-out for "The Sky Hawk," that elaborated on and enumerated the various highlights of the picture. We are sorry that space will not permit our reproducing the herald, as we would like to give you another example of the effect that may be achieved from the judicious use of mats, but we feel sure that we will be hearing more of Alexander's work in the future and will be enabled to pass it on then.

How about it, Irving? Let's have some other accounts of your work. Incidentally, we haven't a photo of you in our files, so why not send us one, together with a little dope on your career in show business.

SEZ WE!

Nickelette Days Are Recalled By N. S. Wentz Of Pa.

Though the photo may seem to say otherwise, we would like you to know that one of our newest members, from Pennsylvania, N. S. Wentz, manager of the Majestic Theatre in Catasauqua, is really a veteran in the picture game.

Wentz started work about twenty-two years ago in a little nickelette boasting the magnificent admission price of five cents. At this stage of the game, Wentz served as helper in what was then supposed to be a projection booth. And says he, "It was just one long grind." His apprenticeship stood him in good stead though, for it wasn't much later that he rose to the position of manager and has been handling houses in that capacity ever since.

With such an interesting background, comprising so wide and varied an experience Mr. Wentz should be able to turn out some mighty fine examples of showmanship in his theatre. We want to welcome him into the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB and hope that he will become a very active member and contributor to our pages. Keep us posted "N. S." and let's see what you are doing to sell your shows out there in Pennsylvania.

Here's The Latest Account We Have Of Latta's Work

We've been so busy lately what with Fashion shows and everything else to inform the CLUB about that it seemed as though we'd never get around to write this article concerning the way C. J. Latta, managing director of the Roger Sherman Theatre in New Haven, Conn., is keeping his house up among the leaders of the New England Division.

As proof that his exploitation is still up to tap we are reproducing a stunt he used on "She Couldn't Say No" and "Son of the Gods." The dilapidated flivver bearing a couple of ushers dressed as bride and groom, and driven by a uniformed doorman as chauffeur, acted as the "Couldn't Say No" ballyhoo, while the same ushers served as part of the ballyhoo for the latter picture. The flivver no doubt is an institution around New Haven streets and the stunt is a tribute to Latta's showmanship, for again he proves that any picture can be used to work in with the stunt. And according to the psychology of advertising, constant repetition is often a valuable aid, so that our statement regarding the flivver as an institution is substantiated.

We want to compliment Latta on the make-up of the new publication he has created "The Roger Sherman Buzzer," which is circulated among his house staff and which has done much to promote good-will and co-operation in the ranks. His "gang" all contribute to the paper, which is printed gratis by a local printer, and it has proven a wonderful asset. Incidentally, while we are handing out compliments on good work, we mustn't overlook Latta's house organ, which is made up in a manner befitting the policy of the house, as an "ace" theatre.

Thank you "C. J.," for keeping us posted and also for being so patient with us, but as we explained, this is the time of year when the exhibitor must be more active than usual, hence we become very busy. But we want you to know that we appreciate your fine CLUB spirit and we want to hear more from you in the very near future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Trained Horse Was Used By Lawler As Fine Street Stunt

City Manager Ralph Lawler used a street ballyhoo that proved a real publicity-getter for "The Virginian" playing at the Publix-Irvin Theatre, Bloomington, Ill.

First, Harris procured a well-groomed horse with a $350.00 Mexican saddle and two young men who took turns riding the horse. The men were strikingly dressed in cowboy uniforms.

The horse was talented to the extent of doing several tricks such as crossing his legs when you told him to, getting down on his knees to let you mount him and raising his right leg to shake hands. This surely amused the children as well as the older set and always gathered a large crowd wherever he stopped. The horse carried a double-faced banner on his back advertising the picture, theatre and play dates.

The horse was procured from a nearby riding academy without any cost to the theatre. Harris sold them the idea that inasmuch as Spring was just around the corner, it would bring riding to the attention of lovers of that sport and would give them the riding fever early.

One rider was paid off in passes while the other took $6.40 for his services.

The stunt was used every day during the picture's four-day run and undoubtedly publicized the picture to a great extent as was evidenced by the better than average box-office receipts.

Murphy Says That Music Has Charms And Tells Us Why

We wonder how many showmen realize what a great help the local dance orchestras which play so important a part in the social life of every community can be to his theatre, especially when it comes to plugging the theme songs.

One showman who took advantage of this angle is E. T. Murphy, manager of the Community Theatre in Catskill, N. Y. By giving a few passes to the leader of the most popular orchestra in town he persuaded him to feature the theme songs from his coming attractions. After rendering the song or songs the leader announced the title, and told the play date, besides giving the picture a little "plug." In this way news of the attractions reached a large number of people weekly at practically no cost whatsoever.

If there's a popular band in your town (or maybe you're lucky and have two or three bands) it would pay to use this gag as it is a very effective medium for securing publicity, and you can bet that when you have a couple of those musical specials booked in which contain so many hit numbers, plugs will be plenty. We want to thank Murphy for passing this along to the rest of the CLUB as we feel it is a great angle and will doubtless meet with their favor.

Swanson Staged A Grand Parade of His Own On Show

R. M. Swanson staged a parade of automobiles to advertise "The Grand Parade," playing at the Hippodrome Theatre, Miami, Fla.

Headed by the "Publix Entertainment Special" and a police escort, the parade of a dozen new model cars and trucks came down the main thoroughfare at mid-afternoon on the opening day of the picture and caused quite a sensation.

With every car carrying banners on the feature picture and the Sharkey-Scott fight picture, it is reasonable to suppose that the stunt caused the theatre to get more money in the box office than would have happened if no ballyhoo at all had been employed.

The cars moved at a slow pace to allow the onlookers plenty of time to read the banners on the cars as well as allowing them to get a glimpse at the new models.

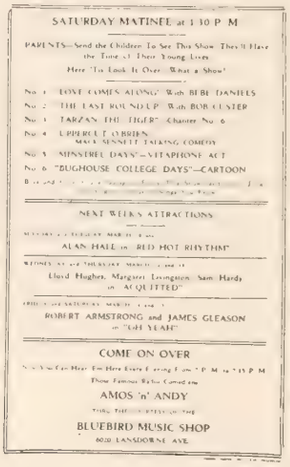
YOUR PROBLEMS AND MINE!

J's Problems:

J. is a showman of many years standing and in the course of his theatrical career has traveled far. We are relating a few problems that confronted him in various cities. Some he overcame. Others he did not.

(A) While in an Ohio town, he came across a newspaper editor who would not listen to reason. J. went to him in the friendliest of spirits on many occasions but always it was the same cry. "I won't give you any FREE advertising," he'd bellow. The editor thought that a couple of stories or a few pictures in the paper was free advertising, and no matter what angle J. tried to sell him on, the editor would not listen to reason. As a matter of fact, he wouldn't even go to a movie. So when a man is so prejudiced against things the way he was can you blame J. for giving up in disgust?

(B) In another town in Ohio, J. stationed at a theatre, found that the local Chamber of Commerce had a ruling prohibiting any member of the organization from advertising in a theatre program. Since J. had always been in the habit of having merchants pay for his house organs, he set out to do something about it.



J's Solution to B:

Taking the bull by the horns, he applied for membership in the Chamber of Commerce and was accepted. From then on the rest was easy. In a very short time he had them sold on the value of advertising in the theatre program. The advertising committee gave its consent and the first anniversary program he turned out contained twenty pages of ads sold to the largest dealers in town. On his second anniversary J. boosted the program to twenty-four pages and the sheet looked so good that he received an offer from the Chamber to get out a booklet advertising a new road which had just been opened to traffic. Before he left that town to accept a promotion in another city which offered him more play for his creative power, he could have had anything in the town he wanted. Everybody was willing and, in fact, eager to co-operate with him. They knew the value of showmanship in their business and were willing to admit that it had taken a showman to put them wise.

Try This Slant On The Back Page Of Your House Organ

In recent weeks we have recorded so many of the activities of A. D. Resnick, manager of the Hamilton Theatre in Philadelphia, Pa., that we thought we had covered almost every angle encountered by this live-wire showman, but we neglected, through some oversight, to tell you about his house organ, which is issued weekly.

In order that you may see Resnick's thoroughness in the make-up of his program, we are reproducing a sample of his work and it would pay you to study it carefully, for if you are running a house which caters to neighborhood trade, you would have to go far to find something more compact which carries so strong a message.

We would like to point out a few of the outstanding features in the make-up, one of which is the way he gets across notice that his theatre "ad" appears nightly in the local papers, by inserting a line to that effect on the top of the front page. The middle pages carry everything anyone wants to know about the theatre, even carrying the location of the lounge rooms and telephones. On the bottom is seen the program for the Overbrook Theatre, operated by the owners of the Hamilton.

The last page of the program probably accounts for one of the reasons why Resnick's Saturday Matinee business is tremendous. He devotes almost half a page to listing the attractions for the coming Saturday afternoon. And he lists them in a way that will appeal to the kiddies. A clever slant is his trick of using the top line to convey a message to the parents, telling them about the excellence of the show and asking that they look it over, while on the bottom he closes with a personal message to the kiddies. The program is printed in black ink on white coated paper of good stock.

While we are on the subject of his work we might also commend Resnick for the excellent "circus flyers" he makes up to advertise his own as well as the Overbrook Theatre, and which are very effectively made up with well chosen copy and mats.

As most of the Club members are aware, Resnick is a showman of many years standing but instead of sitting back and taking it easy on his laurels, he is still working hard, grabbing every new angle that presents itself and doing everything possible to continue the fine record he has made as a showman. We want to thank him for passing along some real showman-like ideas and we know he will continue being a very active Club member.

"Golden Calf" Gag Had Town Ankling To Harris' House

Here's a corking good gag and tie-up effected by Milt Harris of the Fox St. Louis Theatre, and if you are alive to the various possibilities that present day pictures offer, you, too, will cash in by making use of the idea along the same line that Milt did.

The tie-up was in connection with "The Golden Calf," a new Fox release featuring El Brendel, and Milt doped out this stunt to apply the title to the calves of St. Louis' fair damsels. In the first photograph you will notice how the contestants were measured to see if they fitted the winning requirements, which in this case happened to be the size of Sue Carol's calf. The second shows the group of winners in the contest who were guests of the Fox Theatre for the showing of this attraction.

Harris has been instrumental in working out some unusually fine stunts in his city and perhaps no small measure of the theatre's success goes to him for his untiring efforts and ability. You may recall his soda fountain "gag" which appeared on the Club pages only a short time ago, which was not revolutionary by any means, but it DID give the picture plenty of free advertising in most of the soda stores out in St. Louis and, after all, that's what Milt started out to accomplish.

Another feature of this particular stunt was the co-operative ad, paid for by the hosiery company, but carrying the details of the contest. Since this company enjoys a wide patronage in St. Louis, we can safely assume that the ad attracted sufficient attention to warrant the theatre's aid in putting it over.

We rather like the way Harris handles himself on these various stunts of his and hope we will soon have the opportunity of letting you all see what he looks like, via one of his own photos, and a few details of his past experience. How about it, Milt? Let the gang see who you are. Oak?

Shades of 'Bacchus' Weiss and Allen Construct A Bar!

To exploit "Roadhouse Nights" at the Tampa Theatre, Tampa, Fla., City Manager Harry Weiss and Wally Allen, Publicity man for the district, conceived the idea of fitting the inner lobby into a Roadhouse effect.

The entrance to the inner lobby is a long corridor and in this place different lettered cards were hung on the railing that separated the centre of corridor. The copy on these cards were amusing, such as, "Special Tonite—the biggest Floor Show ever seen in any ROADHOUSE," "Don't be a Fall Guy for a Beautiful Dame so dance with your escort only," "Give this little girl a great big hand—she needs it," etc.

Approaching the inner lobby, which is in the shape of a square, could be seen a regular bar with two bartenders standing behind it. And just beyond the bar were four tables and chairs at each table. The waiters were the ushers all bedecked in white coats and aprons.

Hanging just above the bar was a huge sign reading "CELO." Celo is a soft drink and each patron entering or leaving the theatre during the showing of "Roadhouse Nights" was entitled to a drink at no extra cost other than his or her admission ticket to the show.

We are rather inclined to label the above story as unusually fine showmanship. But what else can be expected when a combination like Harry Weiss and Wally Allen get together to dope something out?

Let's hear from you some more Harry and tell Wally that we don't wish him any hard luck, but we are still hoping he gets that North Pole assignment we were talking about not so long ago.

AN ADVANCE TIP!

It won't be very long before furnaces and heat will be a closed incident to the present season, but it's never too early to sound a warning that the time to look after your heating equipment is NOT when the winter season is getting under way, but after the winter season is over.

Backed by many a headache and a whole flock of worries, I pass along the suggestion that you have your equipment thoroughly inspected as soon as the "fire" goes out for the last time. Have someone who knows what it is all about instruct porter or engineer on the proper care of the boilers, etc., during the summer months to prevent corrosion and other troubles that pile up when care is not exercised.

Since winter "takes its bow" in some spots earlier than in others, this warning is not a bit too soon. If your heating plant is still in operation, jot a memo down on your diary pad so that it won't slip by without your knowing it.

Searching For A Double of "Rinty" Sold Burke's Show

Somewhat on the order of J. H. McKoy's pet parade, which we recently ran on the CLUB pages, is the clever stunt pulled by Frank Burke, publicity director for the Hennepin-Orpheum Theatre in Minneapolis, in connection with "On The Border," one of Rin-Tin-Tin's latest pictures.

Burke tied up with WCCO (the local radio station) with the station agreeing to furnish a prize of a gold-studded dog collar to the youngster owning a police dog which bore the closest resemblance to Rinty. News of the contest spread like wildfire, with every kid who owned a police dog represented, since in addition to the first prize there was a number of other prizes offered.

To insure more publicity for the theatre Burke arranged that each boy who entered a dog in the contest would receive a pass for the theatre provided he carried a banner announcing the entry of the dog and bearing information about the picture. (The banner, presumably was put on the dog in the form of a blanket.) The papers and the radio gave the contest a great break and the Orpheum came in for some useful publicity.

If you want to add a little touch of novelty to your exploiting of pictures, these "pet" gags, from all accounts, have usually resulted in building up the box office, as well as deriving a wealth of publicity. We want to thank Burke for passing this on and we hope to hear more from him in the very near future.

Josephson Knows The Value Of Plugging All Pictures

Feeling that any picture booked into his house is worth a lot of exploitation is the way that enables G. P. Josephson, managing director of the State and Capitol Theatres in Union City, N. J., to bring in capacity business almost all the time.

As part of his exploitation campaign on a recent Western thriller, Ken Maynard, "Parade of the West," Josephson, through a tie-up with a local automobile agency, successfully staged his own "Parade of the West." Using the title as a groundwork, he built a replica of an old western prairie schooner, secured several cowboys and Indians and with numerous catchy "flash" banners paraded the outfit throughout the main streets of the city.

The stunt attracted a lot of attention and proved a good bet not only for the picture but also for the local automobile agency, which in addition to furnishing a number of its new model cars for display in the parade, also allotted space in their salesrooms for cut-outs of the picture. The catch line used throughout the tie-up was, "NASH CARS EXPRESS THE EXTREME IN TRANSPORTATION . . . . FROM THE DAYS OF THE COVERED WAGON TO THE MODERN LUXURIANT NASH CARS.

Josephson also worked a couple of good stunts in conjunction with the showing of "Phantom of the Opera." He made up a card, four by six, reading, "SEE HOW THE NEW 'PHANTOM OF THE OPERA' LOOKS IN COLOR." Below this there was a square cut-out into which was inserted a frame of a color sequence in the picture. By holding it up to the light, the recipient was able to see an actual scene of the "Phantom" in color. The cards were distributed on the streets by a man, dressed in an atmospheric costume of red robes and a plumed hat and wearing a skull mask.

Through a tie-up with one of the local papers Josephson secured some effective publicity. A composite plate was made up of Lon Chaney, portraying a number of his famous characterizations. To the first dozen people guessing most correctly the names of the productions they were used in, free tickets were awarded. This stunt was productive of a good many replies and helped stimulate interest in the picture.

Josephson seems to be exhibiting a great deal of activity across the river from us and we'd like to hear more about him and his work, so that we can pass it on. What do you say, "G. P.," keep us posted.

The Activities Of Clyde Winans Are Business Getters

Through a tie-up with a leading department store, Clyde Winans, city manager of the Publix Theatres in Peoria, Ill., was enabled to secure some very valuable publicity for the Madison Theatre.

The arrangement called for the display of a table service in the foyer, the table of which was laid with a cloth patterned after the famous plaids of pioneering days and named "The Virginian." For this courtesy, the theatre received a prominent space in one of the store's windows where framed 11 x 14's were displayed. We are reproducing photos of the table display and the display in the window of the department store in order that you may see the effectiveness of Winan's tie-ups.

Besides this, 5,000 blotters in the form of a six-inch ruler were distributed in all offices in the downtown district as well as some of the suburban offices. Copy on these rulers read, "It is always a good rule to visit a Publix Theatre and the Madison in particular especially on Feb. 12-15 when THE VIRGINIAN is showing."

He also ran a contest in the Want Ad section of one of the papers on "The Virginian." The response was most gratifying inasmuch as over 800 answers were submitted.

Winan's campaign went across like nobody's business and he certainly sold the picture to the town. We are very glad to pass on the activities of this go-getting showman so that the rest of the Club can see what he is accomplishing out in Peoria. We'd like to hear more from him.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Meet Walter Leach, A New Addition To Round Table Rolls

Here's another showman, or rather should we say, another rising young showman, in the person of Walter Leach, assistant manager of the Rialto Theatre in Newark, New Jersey.

The Rialto Theatre, need we state, is managed by none other than our fellow CLUB member Charles J. (Charley) Brennan, whose work we have recorded on our pages a number of times, so an introduction is hardly necessary.

From what Charley has to say concerning his assistant's ability it looks to us as though Walter will blossom forth a showman de luxe in a very short time. By his promotion from the uniformed ranks to his present position as assistant manager, he has shown that he must have something to arrive. So we want you to know Walter, that working with a showman like Mr. Brennan, if you aren't a manager before many moons pass, why it will be a mystery to us.

Keep us posted on what you are doing to help sell the shows at the Rialto and in that manner we will know just how you are comporting yourself in your new position, and our "tab keeping" department will be right up to date.

Minday Decided A Band Was Needed To Ballyhoo Show

One showman who thought his picture was so good that he needed a band to ballyhoo it is seen in the person of Michael (Mike) Minday, lively manager of the Grand Theatre in Atlanta, Ga.

On the picture "Salute," he went out and tied-up with the students' band of the Georgia Military Academy and secured their services. The band, who, as you will note from the photo, is uniformed somewhat on the style of the West Point Cadets appearing in the picture so he came in for a break on this angle. The cadets paraded about the main streets of the town, attracting considerable comment wherever they went, and stopped in front of the theatre, where they played for a time before the theatre opening.

This stunt helped a lot towards putting the picture across in Atlanta and in addition, Minday let his house in for a lot more publicity by reason of photos of the band being published in the local newspapers, and which photos carried his theatre name. Incidentally, that is a pretty good arrangement he has worked out for plugging his next week's attraction on the marquee as well as the current one, and no doubt is a very beneficial angle. The cut-out letters on the current attraction, placed under the marquee also constitute a very effective flash.

Minday's activities are typical of a good many of our go-getting members' work down around his district and since he has now been represented on our pages we feel sure that he will continue the interest he has shown in us.

Your Cooling Plant!

It has lain idle all winter. Now is the time for you to get busy and see that it is thoroughly gone over in preparation for the hot months ahead. Don't wait until the summer rolls around before you decide to oil up the machinery. There's some pretty delicate parts in those unwieldy appearing machines that can more than likely pick up their full quota of dirt. If you are fortunate enough to have an engineer to look after it, see that he is down there a month before time and makes weekly visits after that until you are ready to put it into operation.

Better still, since you can never tell when an emergency will arise, go and become acquainted with its workings yourself. And after you've got the thing whipped into shape and ready for operation, don't forget to let your patrons know that you have a cooling plant. Inform them by your house organ, by heralds or cards in your mailing list that they are going to enjoy a cool and comfortable show at your house. If possible it would be well for you to make up a herald, something of the type used by Ed. Hiehle of the Midland Theatre in Newark, Ohio, to show them how the plant functions and also explains its benefits. Don't forget, it's the attention you pay now to the things of the future that will ultimately benefit your house and yourself.

Right?

Look These Angles Over As They May Help You As Well

Evidently determined to keep way up front on the CLUB rolls as an active member, Ed. Hiehle, manager of the Midland and Auditorium Theatres in Newark, Ohio, has been very busy selling his shows.

Ed. put over a whiz of a campaign on "Sally," which knocked them cold out in Newark. He tied-up every possible angle onto the picture and plugged it to the skies, using novel truck ballyhoos, house "mike" announcements, teaser newspaper campaigns, window displays, and almost everything else he could use, with the result that the picture clicked plenty.

The town recently observed Boy Scout Week and Ed. tied-up with the Scouts and worked them into his appropriate feature "The Great Divide," an outdoor film. All of the local and county troops were invited to be his guests at the showing of the picture. He also invited all the teachers of the county schools. In this manner he let his house in for a lot of good-will that would react sooner or later at the box-office.

Ed. is using a rather novel way to inform his patrons on special features playing the house. He made up a number of postcards bearing a colored picture of the Main lobby and stairway of the Midland Theatre. The back of the card was devoted to whatever message he wished to use on the picture. These cards no doubt helped him to secure more business, and since we feel that Ed. knows his patrons' likes and dislikes pretty well the benefit of the card is quite valuable.

While we think about it we may as well inform you that in observance of St. Patrick's Day Ed. made up his monthly program bulletin in green, which is another good example of the way he takes advantage of every angle presenting itself to him. Let's hear more from you soon Ed. because you know we're always interested in hearing what you are accomplishing.

"All For One And One For All"

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"SILENCE—"

One of the most annoying evils a house manager has to contend with is the everpresent "buzzing" or talking in undertones, indulged in by thoughtless persons who either not caring for the picture or unable to control their tongues, believe in making it uncomfortable for the patrons seated near them.

Valued business has often been lost through the incessant chatter of this type of person. A patron sitting near them will become provoked and, instead of calling an usher or speaking to the manager about the disturbance, prefers instead to remain away from the theatre. Of course there is the hardier type of patron who will turn around and admonish the annoyers, which method generally silences them effectively. Unfortunately this type of person is few and far between. So it becomes necessary for the manager to use a medium that will curb the "chatter menace" and not hurt anybody's feelings. The most effective method of doing this is by using your screen. Run a trailer!

Now anybody can run a trailer that will say "shut up." But it takes a smart manager to make up a trailer that will tell persons to "shut up" and not offend anybody. The Publix organization has about the finest example of a diplomatic trailer of any house in the country to-day. We will use their trailer as an example for the manager to work with. True, he may be able to improve upon it, and if he can we'd like to see it, because if there's anything this racket needs it's something that will keep a lot of talkers quiet. The Publix trailer runs:

SILENCE is absolutely essential to the complete enjoyment of the (theatre) performance. You will be conferring a favor upon your neighbors in the audience and ourselves by refraining from audible conversation or whispering during the performance. Thank You.

The same angle can and should be worked into your house organ as well.

His Advance Work Aids A. Sharick In Boosting Business

Since he has been handling the affairs of the Rialto Theatre in Washington, D. C., A. J. Sharick, managing director of the house, has been turning out some live-wire campaigns.

His most recent endeavor was "His First Command," for which he started off by giving a special preview to army officers stationed at Fort Myers, Va., as well as inviting the inmates of the Old Soldiers' Home. In addition he was enabled, through a tie-up with one of the local papers, to invite six hundred children, members of a club sponsored by the newspaper, to attend a special morning show.

To inform the various heads of the War and Navy Departments of his attraction, Sharick conducted a telephone campaign. By phone, all department heads were advised of the play date and picture and in this manner some effective publicity was secured. The major of the cadets in each high school was also called and informed that the picture was educational in nature, besides being entertaining and showed some shots of army manoeuvers. A special price was also arranged for all cadets appearing in uniform. Besides this a special post card, elaborating on the cavalry angle, was sent to every barracks in the vicinity.

Some striking window displays were also arranged to plug the picture and by tying up with a chain of drug stores a load of publicity was secured. The newspapers gave the campaign a big play in their columns and reproduced pictures of the lobby and theatre front. The whole shebang was booked for a sell-out from the moment it began and though we don't know the final results, it appears as though it should click.

We want to thank Sharick for passing this one along to us and we'd like to hear more of this fine work in the near future.

More Fine Showmanship Is Seen In This Novel Gag

Anybody wishing to see how a real dyed-in-the-wool showman operates should take a run over to the RKO Greenpoint Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and watch Joe Lee, manager of the house, in action.

Being a real showman, Joe pounces upon any angle that presents itself in regard to exploiting his pictures. To that extent we are showing you what he did with the picture "Dance Hall." The cut shows the front page head on a New York Tabloid newspaper. When Joe saw this he put it into use to serve his house, with the result that the next day "flash" heralds, nine by eleven and printed in yellow and black, were floating all around Greenpoint, selling the picture. And how they sold it. Greenpoint ate up Joe's stunt and the picture jacked up the b. o. considerably.

Another gag, used in conjunction with the showing of "The Racketeer," was a novelty one sheet card, made up by Joe, and on which was pasted a number of playing cards. The cards formed the border for the display, while the center was devoted to an expose of the tricks used by gamblers and "con" men, with horse race sheets and marked cards serving as examples. The entire display cost Joe the sum of forty cents and netted him many times that in additional business.

That he pulls strong with the local merchants is seen in the way he secured their aid for the co-operative page he ran in the newspapers on "Glorifying the American Girl" and in addition securing a window display from all of them. He also promoted 1,500 boxes of candy which he distributed to the kids on Saturday matinee, making a big hit with them and letting the house in for plenty of good-will.

Brooklyn boasts a lot of mighty fine showmen but unfortunately they seem to remain in hiding. We want them to know that the MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB was founded for the express purpose of passing on and exchanging ideas from all over the world and we hope that in the future, when a showman pulls a stunt that merits recognition he will allow it to be circulated through these pages to his brother managers, for what the deuce good is an idea when you use it and then forget it. Pass it on and let someone else use it, too.

PLEASE be sure to notify the Chairman of any change of address.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

And When Walter Got Through The Town Knew She Did

Here's the way an alert showman cashed in on Greta Garbo's first talking picture. And as would be expected the showman in question, since the stunt originated in Brockton, Mass., is our fellow CLUB member Walter B. Rose, who manages the Strand Theatre in that city.

The photo, more or less, talks for itself, but since another angle was attached to it we must give you an outline of how else he sold the picture besides procuring a car from a local auto agency as a free ballyhoo. You will note the unique method Rose used to sell the picture by using only the words "Garbo Talks" and "Strand Theatre—next week" as his selling copy.

For four days in advance of the picture the car was driven through the streets of the town. One of the ushers accompanied the driver and whenever or wherever the car would park, the boy commenced a "spiel" on the picture, and after a goodly sized crowd had collected he would distribute cards to them, which carried an announcement of a contest being held in conjunction with the picture.

The copy on the blanks announcing the contest informed the readers that for the closest estimate to the number of times the words "Garbo Talks" were painted upon a car in display in the window of the local auto dealers, fifty dollars would be allowed towards the purchase of a new or used car, and in addition a pair of free tickets would be given to the Strand. A good many answers were returned and from them Rose was enabled to judge the success of his stunt besides grabbing off a number of names for a mailing list, as no doubt the auto company did too. The stunt let the house in for a good deal of word of mouth advertising and created plenty of comment throughout the town.

We are glad to see that Rose is taking so active an interest in selling his shows and displaying the same brand of up-to-the-minute showmanship which made his work so outstanding in Pawtucket, R. I., and since he has been a frequent contributor to these pages we feel sure that more will be heard of his work in the near future. How about it, Walter?

Garvin Worked Up A Lot Of Interest By His Campaign

Two exploitation stunts arranged for little or no cost to the theatre supplemented the regular routine advertising of "Burning Up" when it played the Rivoli Theatre, Hastings, Neb.

Manager M. H. Garvin secured from Arch Reeve of the Paramount Hollywood studio a racing helmet and a pair of goggles autographed by Ricard Arlen, star of the Paramount Picture. The helmet and goggles were used as a prize in a boys' bicycle race held at the local Fair grounds. The newspaper publicity this stunt received and the display of the goggles and helmet in the theatre a week in advance brought out thirty-eight entries. The success of this stunt is attested by the sale of four hundred children's tickets Saturday afternoon. There is no way of determining the number of adults that accompanied the children.

He also promoted a mileage estimate contest in co-operation with the local Chevrolet agency. The agency furnished a stock model car which was placed on the sidewalk in front of the theatre. At one o'clock on the day the picture opened the car was filled with 5 gallons of gas. The rear wheels were then jacked up and the motor started. The car ran until ten minutes after the box office closed at night. Those passing the theatre were invited to estimate the number of hours the car would run on the five gallons of gas and how much mileage would be recorded on the speedometer.

Local automobile accessory dealers furnished the prizes used for the awards. The prizes consisted of a Miller Tire, a pair of McKay Chains and a grease job, all tending to put his campaign "over the top," and so we doff our hats to friend Garvin with the reminder that he ought to be keeping us better posted on his manifold activities out in Hastings. Oak, Garvin?

A Good Gag!

So many people are in the habit of entering the theatre about half an hour before show starting time, and as we have found from investigation, they are usually entertained by non-synch selections. The records, though, after being played for a couple of weeks, are generally found to produce a bad taste in the mouths of the habitual early arrivals. To offset this John R. Peters, manager of the Ritz Theatre in Indianapolis, Indiana, has hit upon a good angle.

During the half hour before the show starts in the evening, he relieves the monotony by having a pianist on the stage play any request numbers that may have been sent in during the week, or which are called out from the audience. On the requested numbers, Peters, through a "mike" in his office, announces the title of the song and the name of the person requesting it. This stunt has proven very popular and has been a means of adding a little more good will to the theatre.

We want also to announce that this will serve as an introductory article, announcing Peters' acceptance to Club membership. We want to extend him a hearty welcome into our organization and we feel sure that since he has started off so well, he will continue the interest he is showing. Let's hear some more from you, Mr. Peters, and you might include your photo and a little note about yourself in your next letter so that we can let the rest of the Club see what you look like.

Fred Perry Still Selling His Shows Up In Binghamton

A corking co-operative campaign was put across recently by Fred Perry, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Binghamton, N. Y.

Fred tied up with a local jeweler and arranged to run a full page co-operative ad in the local paper. With each piece of jewelry purchased free tickets were given to the buyer, which entitled him to witness the shows at the Capitol, Strand or Binghamton Theatres.

As the jewelry store is a well known credit establishment in town and does a tremendous business daily, the strength of the ad was seen in the volume of business done at the theatres and jewelry shop. The page was well made up, with a quarter of it devoted to the attractions at the various theatres.

Thanks, Fred, for passing this one along to us and don't forget we'd like to hear from you again in the very near future, because reports are drifting in of the fine work you're doing.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

THE IMPORTANCE OF USHERS!

HERE IS THE SYSTEM EMPLOYED BY PAUL W. KUNZE

RULES GOVERNING GENERAL DEPORTMENT OF USHERS

1. Ushers must be uniformed and ready for duty at 7:25 P. M. evenings and 1:55 P. M. matinees.

GENERAL APPEARANCE

1. It is expected that boys report with neat appearance, shoes shined, hair combed, clean white shirt with collar attached, and regulation black tie.
2. Uniforms carefully replaced on hangers after use, will hold press better. They will be pressed and cleaned regularly by the management.
3. Ushers working entire show must remain uniformed.
4. Neatness in ushers will be appreciated both by your manager and the patrons.
5. Ushers are absolutely forbidden to chew gum during any performance.

DIRECTIONS FOR USE OF FLASHLIGHTS

1. Keep light out of patrons' eyes.
2. Hold light so that patron may see the aisle and any steps. A patron tripping or falling through negligence is a serious thing.
3. A flashing light annoys the patrons.
4. Renew batteries often enough to give sufficient light.

DIRECTIONS FOR SEATING A PATRON

1. You are expected to seat every patron after lights go out. Patrons must not go down aisles alone.
2. Greet the patron with a smile and nod of recognition.
3. If you have a choice of seats, find out where the patron wishes to sit.
4. If in doubt, ask how many seats are desired.
5. Always give patron the very best seats you have.
6. Know where your vacant seats are; location of singles, doubles, threes and fours, etc. Be able to seat patrons before taking them down the aisle. This may be done by an accurate knowledge of vacant seat locations.
7. When speaking to anyone use "Sir" or "Madam," etc.
8. Be polite and smile. It adds to patrons' good impression of theatre and the shows.
9. Talk to patron in low voice.
10. Do not walk too fast down the aisle, the patron may not be able to keep up with you. Flashlight must shine ahead of patrons feet down the aisle.
11. When asking patrons seated to rise, use "Pardon, Please," "Rise, Please" and "Thank You" afterwards. This is very important.

Simplicity has always been the keynote in most things and should certainly apply to theatre management. When presenting the suggestions of a brother showman, we do so, with the honest conviction that contained in such suggestions, are many individual pointers applicable to the average theatre regardless of where it may be located or the class of patronage it caters to.

Paul W. Kunze is a showman of wide experience and the article on this page sets forth the system he uses in the general deportment of his ushers. It is not beyond the bounds of possibility that even YOU can pick some of the things which he has taken the trouble to send us, and find them good and useful in your own theatre.

We are, indeed, very grateful to Paul and we know that we can always rely upon his fine Club spirit to pass on anything that may benefit his brother members and showmen.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS FOR USHERS

1. Do not become so interested in pictures that you are not aware of a patron waiting to be seated.
2. Ushers must not talk with friends while on duty. This is extremely bad form and gives incoming patrons a most unfavorable impression of staff.
3. Ushers are forbidden to hang around foyer, lobby or mezzanine when off duty and in street clothes. Take a seat, use ushers' room or pass outside.
4. Keep a good posture always and avoid leaning against orchestra rails in foyer. An usher sitting or leaning on something suggests a lazy or tired feeling.
5. Remain at head of aisle at all times when not seating people. It is aggravating to patrons who come in and find no usher around.
6. When it is necessary to leave post for a few minutes, arrange to have someone else cover your post.
7. You are expected to help maintain order and quiet by politely warning disturbers and reporting them to officer on duty. Never argue with or attempt to eject an offender. Report to officer.
8. You are not supposed to be janitors; but a little co-operation in picking up papers and noticeable refuse on carpets, in aisles, foyer and mezzanine while ushering will go a long way toward creating a favorable atmosphere.
9. When house is filled with standees waiting, watch carefully as vacancies occur and immediately seat standees, in order as to length of time they have been waiting (to the best of your ability). Never go off duty or leave post while there are standees.
10. REMEMBER! THE PATRON IS ALWAYS RIGHT!
11. We advertise extensively and present good shows to attract people here. An usher can do a lot toward keeping them coming and satisfied.
12. The customer pays all of our salaries and is entitled to prompt and courteous service. Give information cheerfully when asked.
13. You are an important part of the organization, and expected to conduct yourself accordingly. Genuine courtesy and a smile cost you nothing, and often pays substantial rewards.
14. The theatre is a vital part of community life, and patrons must be made to feel welcomed and at home. YOU ARE IN A POSITION TO DO THIS. Your manager will extend you full co-operation and expects the same in return.

Perkins Proved He Was Wideawake By Cashing In Again

Another interesting example of a showman's alertness comes to light in the way B. J. Perkins, manager of the Strand Theatre in Newport, R. I., let his house in for plenty of publicity on "Slightly Scarlet" by a clever follow-up of a popularity contest.

Perkins had recently staged a popularity contest and the winner, a local girl, crowned "Miss Newport," received a trip to New York to visit the New York Publix theatres, the Paramount Long Island studios and laboratory, as well as other points of interest in the big city.

With the popularity contest still fresh in the minds of the people, "Miss Newport" upon her arrival back home consented to help paint a "Slightly Scarlet" sign that was suspended just above the theatre entrance.

A special platform was built—and the girl proceeded to fill in the outlined letters spelling out the title of picture.

The gag not only attracted lots of attention but a photo of it appeared in the daily newspapers in addition to a lengthy write-up in which picture, theatre and play dates were mentioned.

Well, Perkins, we think that's a pretty clever stunt you pulled and we'd like to hear more from you in the near future. So keep us posted, in order that we may let the rest of the CLUB know what another Rhode Island showman is doing to sell his attractions.

This Show Selling Is a Great Life Says George Roy

On every new picture booked into his house, regardless of title or anything else, you may be sure that George Roy, manager of the State Theatre in La Grande, Oregon, will turn out a "live" campaign, and in order to show you how he does it we will give you a few examples of his work on recent pictures.

On "It's a Great Life," he tied up with the local newspaper and ran an "If I Were" campaign, which consisted of using the name of a prominent personality in town who is quoted in the copy thusly: "If I were Chief of Police Haynes, I'd have the police department serve every citizen of La Grande with a summons to appear at the State Theatre to see the Duncan Sisters in 'It's a Great Life'—that's what I would do if I were Chief Haynes." The names of the mayor, a newspaper editor and an athletic coach were included on successive days. The gag went over strong with the town and the picture came in for a good play.

Besides the newspaper stunt, Roy also invited 15 pairs of sisters in the town to be guests of the Duncan Sisters at the picture. On the night before the show opened the sidewalks were stenciled with the name of the picture, an arrow pointing the way to the house. As the picture opened Sunday, door knob hangers were placed on stores along main street with copy reading "Closed! Gone to See the Duncan Sisters, etc."

When "Speedway" played his house, Roy tied up with a service station company and ran a co-operative full page ad in the local paper with each ad carrying a photo of the star, and some comment relative to the gasoline sold by the station, with the testimonial angle carefully avoided. Through the co-operation of the service station and a local automobile agency, a car was procured. The motor of the machine was left running and a large compo board sign along side invited passersby to guess how long it would run. Ten gallons of gas were donated daily for the nearest correct answers, as well as tickets to witness the picture. Another good gag was the choosing of five auto license numbers at random, which were featured in the theatre's daily ad, together with a note announcing that proof of ownership would entitle the licensee to free tickets.

Roy worked a clever stunt on "Devil May Care" by billing the picture as "First Showing in the Northwest," and framed a telegram, elaborating on this angle, addressed to him from Ramon Novarro. Copies of the wire were used for house to house distribution to the extent of two thousand and did much to sell the picture.

Thus you see that Roy is a pretty active showman and we are glad of the opportunity to pass along his stunts to the rest of the Club.

"THE TWO GIANTS"

This photograph will serve to introduce two real giants of the show business. The one on the left is Paul Ash, genial giant of jazz and Ace M. C. for the Publix outfit. The gentleman on the right is Eddie Hitchcock, Publicity Director for the Paramount Theatre in New York City and one of our most loyal and enthusiastic members.

The frame they are holding between them is Eddie's membership certificate in the Round Table Club.

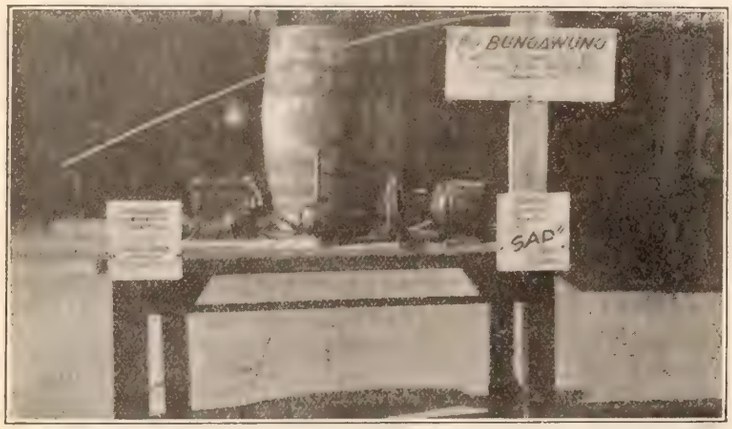
Thanks to both Paul and Eddie for this courtesy and photograph, which, by the way, we received entirely unsolicited.

Remembering The Memory Stunt Was Aid To Hans Smith

By using the memory contest gag in conjunction with his showing of "Son of the Gods," Hans Smith, manager of the National Theatre in Mexia, Tex., was enabled to secure some effective publicity.

Smith ,tied-up with his local bakery and persuaded the baker to distribute three thousand cards, wrapped in loaves of bread. The copy on the cards read "How good is your memory? Win a prize! To the first ten people who write the names of five pictures Richard Barthelmess has played in, on the reverse side of this card and return it to the National Theatre free tickets will be awarded to see "Son of the Gods."

The bakery angle was very well worked, as it helped Smith to get his message into three thousand homes, almost by personal contact. In addition we note he left space for name and address to be filled in on the card. In this manner he will probably secure a number of names for his mailing list, and as we would remark in any language, "That's showmanship."



MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Glass Used This To Make Town See Picture He Sold

A ballyhoo that certainly had them laughing was used recently by one of our pioneer CLUB members (and a darn fine showman too) in conjunction with the showing of "The Sap." The member under discussion we would like you to know is our good friend O. F. Glass, whom we had begun to wonder about, since no word was received recently at CLUB headquarters concerning him.

Glass has been very busy managing the Fox Theatre in McCook, Nebraska, and since he re-appears on the CLUB pages with a good idea, and a better excuse, we will overlook his making us worry. To prove that he is still displaying the excellent showmanship he is capable of, we are reproducing the ballyhoo we spoke about in the first paragraph. The stunt was called "The Bungawung" and is a device for removing the bungs from bungholes, easier and more smoothly than formerly.

When this contraption was placed on the street it had them laughing for hours. Its construction consisted chiefly of a barrel, electric motor, wood auger and various other do-dads arranged on the same order as the famous Rube Goldberg goofy inventions depicted in that cartoonist's column. A sign explained the inner workings of the intricate(?) mechanism, besides announcing that more goofier ones would be seen in "The Sap," coming to the Fox Theatre. Plenty of publicity was secured from this source besides loads of laughs. With both mediums reacting towards the box-office.

Glass has a novelty in the "Auction Night," which he presents as a Friday night weekly feature at his house. Gifts are promoted from the local dealers in return for publicity and are auctioned off from the stage of the theatre with local auctioneer officiating. To explain the idea of "Auction Night" to his patrons, Glass ran a trailer on the screen setting forth the stunt in detail, with his newspaper ads bearing a note to the effect also. Any big donation was displayed in the lobby for an advance "plug."

The stunt, according to Glass, clicked fine with the town and we are glad of the opportunity to present it in the event that any of the CLUB members may care to use it, and though we haven't a very complete description we are sure that if more information is desired Glass will be glad to furnish it to anyone requesting it.

Thank you "O. F.," and now that you are back in the active fold again we expect to hear a lot of mighty fine things concerning your work. So keep us posted.

Levey's 'Ace' Work Is Again Evident By This Account

Some showmen possess the invaluable medium of showmanship combined with personality, to so sell themselves in the town where their house is located as to have the town rely absolutely on their judgment of the entertainment value of a picture. Such a showman is William A. (Bill) Levey, manager of the Beacon Theatre in Port Washington, Long Island, N. Y.

When Bill gets behind a picture that he believes to have more than usual merit, the method he has of informing his patrons is through a personal letter. And when he sends out one of these letters you may be sure that business on the particular picture is going to boom. If space would permit we would reprint a copy of Bill's latest letter, but sufficient to say that it carried a short sketch of the story in which he stressed the entertainment value of the picture and closed with a personal endorsement.

Another faction with whom Bill seems to be strongly entrenched is the local newspapers who are always willing to co-operate with him to the utmost and we notice in this instance that he is running a contest in both papers, in conjunction with "The Melody Man." He offers free tickets to the first twenty-five readers who submit the correct solution to the riddle "When does music make you sick?" We could answer it and tell him that it makes "u-sic" when the m's taken away, but then we were always big-hearted like this, why deprive somebody else of a pair of ducats.

And by the way you may remember that a while ago we showed you how Bill kept his patrons up on the play dates of his Mickey Mouse cartoons by inserting a little card in the mailing list, showing Mickey and his inimitable smile, while underneath, a footnote bore the play date. He used this gag again recently and the results were excellent.

Good work, Bill. We know that you are always working hard to keep your house hitting on all six, and we expect to be able to pass on more of your activities in the very near future.

Showmanship Plays An Important Part In Osborn's Work

As additional evidence that Carl Osborne, manager of the Sigma Theatre in Lima, Ohio, was not sleeping during the silence when we did not hear from him, your Chairman has on hand a number of newspaper tear sheets, dealing with the way he boosted good-will by a "movie party."

Osborne tied-up with the local newspaper who allowed him free space on the front page for stories plugging the party. All children bringing a toy were admitted free to the theatre to witness an all-comedy show. As the toys were presented at the door, they were turned over to the drivers of the newspaper trucks who carted them away to the local Boy Scout headquarters, where, through the Scout's co-operation, the toys were re-painted and sent to the various charitable organizations for distribution to the poor children of the community.

Toy matinees, vegetable matinees, cast off clothing matinees, and many other stunts of a similar nature are one of the best bets a theatre manager can have for securing the good-will of the local organizations, and not only that, but the stunt is really helpful. It is not necessary to wait for Christmas to roll around to use any of these excellent ideas. You will find out, if you care to investigate that all year around you could be doing something to help needy people and still not be doing enough. Nearly every community in the country has its quota of needy cases and when you decide to do something to help them, you will find that every resident in your town will be right behind you.

The success of Osborne's toy matinee was shown not in the box office for that day, but in the tremendous amount of good-will he received for himself and his house, which will eventually re-act favorably towards his receipts. We are glad to see that Carl is active again. Let's hear some more from you.

We'll Say We Need a "Lost and Found" Department!

Maybe I will hear from some of my friends scattered throughout the country who have lost track of me. You might not realize it but your Club is probably the best medium of keeping in touch with acquaintances. . . .

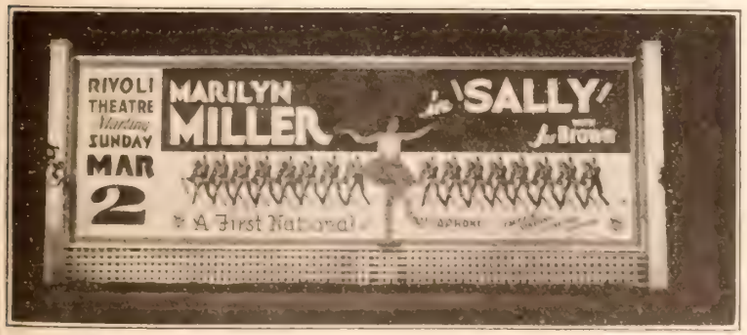
Albertson Put The Fifth Anniversary Of Theatre Across

Putting a birthday party across successfully was just another stunt included in the recent activities of Jack Albertson, managing the Indiana Theatre in East Chicago, Indiana, that let the house in for a lot of good will and publicity.

On the occasion of the theatre's fifth birthday, Jack promoted a tie-up with a local bakery whereby the baker agreed to furnish a cake to be distributed to patrons as they left the theatre. The cake weighed 190 pounds and the only thing the theatre did for it was to run a trailer giving the baker a credit line. It was prominently displayed in a window three days before the birthday party and on the day of the celebration the baker officiated at the cutting and distribution. And to give you an idea of how successful the party went over, business jumped almost double on the day.

In addition to the above Jack obtained some excellent publicity on the party from the local newspaper, which gave the stunt a big play. He also made a tie-up with the local drug store whereby he received five thousand cards from them which were distributed to the lady patrons of the theatre. The card stated that anyone purchasing a certain brand of face powder would be given a vanity case free.



If space would permit we would like to show you a sample of the fine anniversary program he turned out which was made up in a novel manner and carried information concerning the theatre's policy and the coming attractions, together with a personal endorsement from the management. The whole campaign was a sell out from the minute he started and we derived as much pleasure from hearing about it as Jack must have experienced when he saw them lining up at the box office.

Keep up the fine work, Jack, and don't forget to keep us posted on your other activities.

Perhaps This One Will Mean More Business For You

A stunt, on the same order as the one recently used by Charlie Pincus, which we described on the ROUND TABLE pages, was utilized by M. H. Garvin, manager of the Rivoli Theatre in Hastings, Nebraska, to good advantage in the advertising of his coming attraction, "Sally."

The photo shows you the effect achieved by placing a twenty-four sheet board on the stage of the theatre. The girl, portraying the Marilyn Miller role, is a real dancer. The organ solos for the week consisted of a number of songs from the picture. When the last number was played the curtains parted, revealing the novelty. A moment later the girl "came to life" and jumping off her perch executed a toe dance. At the conclusion of the dance she exited, with the curtain closing in over the billboard.

The effect upon the audience was wonderful and in addition to their appreciation by spontaneous applause they all turned out in full force to witness the picture. Here's a gag that can be used at minimum cost and if you haven't already taken advantage of it, try it now. It's not necessary to play "Sally" to use the stunt. A little ingenuity will show you how to use it on any picture you may be playing at the time. And it's a cinch that the box-office results will more than make up for the time and labor you may expend in construction.

Thank you Garvin, for passing this along to us. We are glad to note that you are taking an active interest in the CLUB and we hope you will continue, since a showman as capable as you are is sure to be productive of ideas that will enable your brother members to draw some extra jack into the old b. o.

Westerns!!

Motion Picture News has heeded the "call of the exhibitors" for Westerns and in the issue of April 26th, we will make this topic outstanding from many angles, especially the showmen's.

Perhaps YOU are one of those managers who, feeling that the Western is still in demand with your patrons, has been bombarding us with inquiries concerning where more sound and talking Westerns may be obtained. If so, you'll find the issue of April 26th crammed with material and information concerning this type of production.

If you have anything further to say about it, let's hear from you as soon as possible. We want everybody's viewpoint and it's an open discussion for all live-wire showmen.

Here's One Of The Newest Gags That Showmen Are Using

There's a lot of talk going on around Oil City, Pa., this week and it's all being occasioned by the fact that Fred Johnson introduced the patrons of the Colonel Drake Theatre to a new one.

Through a tie-up with one of the local broadcasting stations he sent the entire film of "Hit the Deck" over the ether. The stunt was primarily engineered for the express purpose of bringing a little happiness into the hospitals and sanitarium rooms around the town, as Fred is a great believer in building goodwill for his house. His first broadcast, incidentally, was "Rio Rita," and as we have stated in the first paragraph, is sure set them to talking.

There's many angles to be worked out in a gag of this sort and it would pay to study it closely. We gave you an example of the way Roy Drachman has been using it for his trailers, but this is the first instance that has come to our headquarters of the entire feature being broadcast and we want to compliment Fred on his showmanship.

In addition to this, he is quite busy working in a lot of tie-ups with the local schools. Pupils of the lower grades making the school honor roll, are presented with tickets the first of each month. This stunt has secured a lot of favorable publicity for him and enables him to receive the co-operation of the teachers whenever he wishes to work in a special angle. Occasionally he donates a reel or two for exhibition in the Junior High School and this also helps cement friendship.

Thank you, Fred, for keeping us posted on the many fine things you are accomplishing out there in Oil City. We hope to hear from you again in the very near future, because it seems to us that your letters always contain some sort of interesting angle that we can pass on to the Club.

At Your Service!

It sometimes happens that a showman located out of town will think up a gag that will benefit his theatre and help him sell his shows. The stunt might require a "New York Flavor," and thus he is handicapped.

Recently, one of our members, exploiting "Sally," decided he wanted to use the gag which consists of sending a letter to his male patrons informing them, in a very personal manner, that "Sally" was on her way from Hollywood and would meet them on the playdate. The copy reads something like this: "Dear R.—I am on my way from Hollywood and will meet you at Six State Street (theatre address) on Friday, Apr. 4 (Playdate) at 8:30 P.M. (starting time). "Signed, Sally, (Title.)"

Feeling that this stunt would sell his picture, this member forwarded the batch of letters to us requesting that we mail them in New York. This we did. And we would like to announce at this time, should any of our members wish us to perform a similar service for them, at any time, we would be glad to comply. Our only request is that one of the letters be left unsealed in order that we may know that the contents conforms with postal regulations. So if you have wanted to use a gag of this sort or contemplate using something similar in the near future which would necessitate a New York postmark, send your stuff into us and we'll mail it.

Thomas Believes That Realism Is A Valuable Asset

Seeming to us to be a firm believer in atmosphere for his pictures, J. Luther Thomas, manager of the Victoria Theatre in Harrisburg, Pa., certainly turned out some fine stuff on "Roadhouse Nights."

In his lobby he built an imitation wine cellar with rafters, posts, lanterns and kegs acting as a background. A dozen yellow lights supplied the illumination, and gave an effect that looked very real. He followed right on the heels of this gag by erecting a bar in the foyer which was appropriately fixed up and bore a lot of wise-cracks of other days, and featured a bartender in constant attendance.

Grouped around the bar was a number of tables, at which waiters served thirsty customers with a popular fountain drink. Besides the waiters Thomas used two young ladies as hostesses. We might tell you, if it isn't too big a secret, that in his lobby, he broke a bottle of moonshine over the burlap bag and the familiar odor had them sniffing for blocks away (which is another medium of making them stop, look and listen).

Anyway the stunt helped a lot towards selling the picture to the patrons, besides keeping them in good spirits(?) and thus Luther scored another with his exploitation, since it all reacted favorably to the box-office.

Fulton Used This One To Grab Some Theatre Publicity

The phrase, "It's the woman who pays," was certainly demonstrated by R. K. Fulton, manager of the Broadway Theatre in Council Bluffs, Ia., when he decided to use a tried and proven stunt recently.

The gag, which consisted of a reversal of etiquette, in the form of the girl paying for the boy friend, created a great deal of comment and hilarity around the town. A thousand cards bearing copy which read, "Girls, here's some new fun. Now you get a chance to TREAT THE BOY FRIEND. Monday, March 18th, has been named as TREAT NIGHT at the Broadway Theatre, bring your beau and this card, present them both at the box-office. Buy one adult ticket for yourself and a ten cent ticket for the boy friend," were freely distributed.

This stunt went over very well and we are passing it along in the event that any of the CLUB members might want to use it as a change from the regular run of things. Oak, Fulton, thanks for keeping us posted on your work, and we want you to know that we'd like to hear more from you again as we are always interested in finding out what the live-wire western showmen are doing to sell their shows.

Pete Egan Shows That He Is Still Active As Usual

As further proof that he is very active at the Capital Theatre in Regina, Sask., Canada, we offer a few photographs of the way Pete Egan plugs his shows.

The first photo shows a truck ballyhoo on "Rio Rita." The truck was out on the streets of Regina when the thermometer registered 40 below zero. (And we think it's cold in N. Y.) The copy on the truck, as you will note, is made up to create a very effective "flash," the lettering standing out in bold relief against the white background.

Thanks Pete for passing these interesting exhibits along to us, but they really don't serve to remind us that you're always active up there in Canada. We know our Regional Chairmen well enough to know that they are always trying to cook up something new and we're more than glad to pass on all their activities, as you know. Let's hear from you again Pete in the very near future and if you see any of our members in your district who look as though they are slowing down, inject a little pep in them and remind them that the rest of the CLUB would like to know what they are doing.

Olinto Accorsini Says:

"Enclosed find my application for membership in what is proving to be the best help on earth for the theatre manager. I have gotten several bang-up ideas from your pages in MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in fact it is the first thing I look for when the NEWS arrives in our office."

Meet Ken Benson Who Assists Jack O'Connell At Vita

The young man whose picture we are reproducing here is Ken Benson, assistant manager of the Vita Temple Theatre in Toledo, Ohio. The Vita Temple as almost all of our CLUB members know is managed by our fellow member and showman Jack O'Connell, and was one of the pioneer houses to install sound and talking pictures.

Ken is a recent addition to the CLUB rolls, and this is the first opportunity we have had of telling you a little bit about him and the way he is learning the game under Jack O'Connell's able tutelage. His work so far has been so showmanlike that we think it deserves recognition on our pages.

The cut will show you a stunt used by Jack and Ken on "The Sacred Flame," whereby they secured a midget car and used it to ballyhoo the picture, by making up copy that fit perfectly. Incidentally this is a good opportunity for us to illustrate what we mean when we say that the stunt is never wedded to the one picture. If Jack hadn't been wide-awake he could have easily passed up this opportunity, but then there was very little possibility of that, since showmen are usually awake. The other photo shows a tie-up engineered by them with the local Navy recruiting station in conjunction with "Hit the Deck," whereby the theatre supplied one sheets and snipes and used the Navy bulletin boards to advertise the picture.

In addition to these a tie-up was also effected with a local Five and Ten store. The store featured a special "Hit the Deck" sundae on their soda counter and in addition permitted the use of their spacious windows for displays. And since the store is located in the heart of the town the tie-up was very valuable from a publicity standpoint.

All of these live-wire activities are typical of the work Jack O'Connell has been turning out in his years in the show business and we feel sure that Ken is mighty lucky to be working under the wing of a man who knows the "ins and outs" of the racket as well as any showman in the country. Keep up the good work Ken and we'll guarantee that in no time you will be handling your own house and earning the title of a real live-wire showman and active member of the ROUND TABLE CLUB, and no doubt Jack agrees with us. How about it Jack?

Tie-Up At County Fair Gave Speece Lots Of Publicity

R. C. Speece effected a most opportune tie-up with a radio agency that netted reams of publicity for "The Vagabond King," playing at the Arcade Theatre, West Palm Beach, Fla.

The tie-up was opportune because the radio dealer had two booths at the Palm Beach County Fair which is an annual event that attracts many.

In addition to donating a radio, they practically turned over both booths to the theatre. Chances on the radio were given out at the booths, but in order to cast the ballot it was first necessary to purchase a ticket at the theatre.

Ballyhoo records were played in the booths—and this helped greatly, as the fair was in progress a few days in advance of opening of picture.

This tie-up was very inexpensive and effective as far as the theatre was concerned and the Philco dealer was well satisfied as he secured an unusually large mailing list from the chances.

Five cut-outs of rather huge proportion and showing heads of King and MacDonald as well as stills from the picture and copy about picture, theatre and playdates were placed in various sections of town. These cut-outs were planted on the streets after 11 o'clock at night prior to the showing of the picture and were left unmolested until picture had concluded its run. In addition to this there was a large electric sign placed on a vacant lot on the main street; copy on the sign reading, "Now Playing, Dennis King in THE VAGABOND KING—Arcade Theatre."

Although this is the first time we have published the activities of "R. C.," we are certain that the future items of the Round Table Club pages will contain many interesting items about his live-wire doings. Maybe we're wrong—or maybe we're right. The final answer will depend an Speece himself. What's it to be?

"Kite Matinees"

Through the courtesy of a large kite manufacturing concern, we are in a position to put you in touch with this type of stuff for special kiddie shows or even kite contests.

Here is an angle which will appeal to every youngster in your community, but you must go out after it strong and make it mean something.

Upon request we will gladly send you the necessary information and you can then follow it up as you see fit. This depends entirely upon your own local situations and your ability to make a "go" of such special performances. And besides they WILL boost business and attract attention to your theatre.

We are at your service all the time in these matters, but we cannot read your minds. If you want something or need help in any manner, shape or form, just shoot us a line and we'll do our best to aid you.

What Do You Say?

Collier Worked A "Hush" Stunt For Exploitation Gag

To stimulate more than passing interest in a picture, William H. Collier emphasized "Don't Disclose the Ending" in all his advertising to publicize "Dynamite," playing at the Strand Theatre, Birmingham, Ala.

Five thousand cards about the size of a calling card were effectively distributed over the city and surrounding towns to help impress upon the minds of potential theatre patrons that they shouldn't disclose the ending of the picture to their friends. Copy on these cards read:

After you have witnessed —— the most spectacular dramatic climax ever recorded on the living screen — in DYNAMITE — Please do not disclose the final ending to anyone. Let your friends enjoy it fuly, too! Thank You!—Management, Strand Theatre.

These cards were passed about among each other and soon the phrase, "Don't disclose the final ending," became a byword on everybody's tongue which all helped to popularize the picture to exellent receipts.

Nice work, Bill, but how come we have to wait so long to hear from you about your activities? Don't you think you should keep us posted a little better in the future?

Bride And Groom Stunt Sold Love Parade For Hooton

The bride and groom in a smart new roadster with tin cans tied on behind. A procession of cars following, tooting their horns and filled with cheering occupants. That's how they occasionally celebrate weddings in Waukegan, Ill. And that's how Manager B. D. Hooton advertised the coming of "The Love Parade" at the Genessee Theatre in Waukegan.

He obtained the services of a young couple and dressed them in wedding attire and raccoon coats. A tie-up with the local Chrysler agency provided the necessary smart roadster and other cars to be used in the procession. It was easy to get a group of hilarious young people who would ride in the parade and make the necessary noise. Banners were provided tieing in the local engagements of "The Love Parade" at the theatre.

The procession drew the usual amount of attention from the citizenry of Waukegan and was so successful from this standpoint that it was repeated several times during the three days prior to the coming of the picture.

"Created more attention than a circus parade," says Hooton, "and had the people straining their eyes to see what it was all about and wondering, until they read the banners, who was married and all about it."

This was a great gag, "B. D.," and let's hope that it will just be a starter of your active membership on the Club pages. No doubt you have noticed how many of your brother Circuit managers are already active in the Club, and there is no reason why you, too, should not be just as prominently featured as they.

We Expect To Hear More Of Nininger And His Work Soon

Step up and meet "face to face" one of Fort Lauderdale's, Fla., live-wire showmen, A. R. Nininger, who handles the affairs of the E. J. Sparks Theatres.

Mr. Nininger has been introduced on these pages before, but we decided that as we hadn't run a photo of him we would give him another send-off, especially since he was proposed for membership by another "ace" showman of Florida, our friend, Earle Holden.

Earle tipped us off at the time that Mr. Nininger has been in the show game for a good many years and his wide and varied experiences, could we cajole him into relating them to us, would make very interesting reading. Well, anyway, to get down to brass tacks, we expect to give you some news of his activities in the very near future, and it is for that reason we are holding off for the present on revealing what we have already gathered concerning him.

So let's go, Mr. Nininger, we know that you are doing some mighty fine things down there in Fort Lauderdale, and when Earle tells us about you, why we're more sure than ever that some novel slants on show salesmanship will be forthcoming. Don't be bashful about shipping us up a truckload of your work. We've got room enough here in Club headquarters to hold all we can get, and like an ad we read some place, "The more we get, the more we want." Oak?

Stoeffer Promoted Everything That Wasn'tNailedDown

As some of our readers will remember, we devoted a page in a recent issue of the Managers' Round Table Club to the doings of the various managers on the Fox Metropolitan Playhouse Circuit and gave a brief account of the "Promotion Month" now underway.

We are going to tell you how one of the managers on that circuit, our fellow member in the Club, Edward Stoffer, manager of the Biltmore Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., promoted a lot of gifts and plenty of good will for his house.

From the local dealers he secured, free of charge, fifty packages containing five pounds of Matzoths each, boxes of candy for the kiddies, ladies' apparel, men's furnishings, a camera, thermos kit, fountain pen, perfume sets and razors. And with an imposing array of gifts like that it looks to us as though his part in "Promotion Month" meant something to his house.

Stoffer made good use of an idea which appeared in the Club pages not so long ago by working it in with his feature showing of "The Virginian." Through a tie-up with a local sweet shop he secured a number of heralds plugging the picture and the confectioner. To insure the heralds being read he offered free tickets, to be obtained on presentation of the heralds at the sweet shop, providing that they bore the consecutive numbers of 1, 2, 3, 4. A box on the upper left hand corner carried the number with a note requesting that the circular be kept and the box watched in order that the numbers be obtained.

This gag clicked well for him, with the dealer and theatre coming in for valuable publicity. Thanks, Stoffer, for passing this along to us and we hope you will keep us posted on the final results of your "Promotion Month" activities in order that we may pass them along to the rest of the Club.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Brennan's Display Was Instrumental In Grabbing Biz.

An atmospheric front that sells is this one we are reproducing and which shows how Charlie Brennan, managing director of the Rialto Theatre in Newark, N. J., put it to good advantage as an exploitation medium also. Maybe you can use it, too.

Through a tie up with a local locksmith he secured absolutely free, five thousand keys and a lock which was placed on the dummy door plugging his feature "The Locked Door." The keys were attached to baggage tags which carried copy reading, "See if this Key will open 'The Locked Door' at the Rialto Theatre. It's good for a free admission if it does." On the back of the card the locksmith came in for a free plug by having his name and address under copy reading, "When you have Locked Doors see, etc."

The gag went over wonderfully in Newark and the lobby was crowded almost all day with persons trying their keys on the padlock. The keys were for the most part dummies, though a number did open the door. A lot of valuable publicity was secured by Brennan through using this stunt.

The value of a stunt or gag is always proven at the conclusion of the picture's play dates, and knowing Charlie's methods of working it is pretty safe to state that business jumped up during the run. Thanks for passing this fine example of showmanship along to us Charlie and don't forget we are always glad to hear what you are doing over there across the river and your work is made doubly interesting to us because of the hot competition in Newark. So let's hear from you again real soon.

Police Department "Stood" For Stunt Created By Stern

Another novel way of ballyhooing an attraction came to our attention recently when we were apprized of the stunt used by B. Stern, manager of the Capitol Theatre, in Oklahoma City, Okla., to sell "Dynamite." We think it was handled great.

In the center of the city traffic is usually very heavy and three policemen are stationed on duty there directing the cars. By tie-ing up with the police department, Stern secured permission from the Chief to construct three platforms, which measured two feet square and eight inches high. On each side of the platforms the word "Dynamite" was lettered in red on white.

When the platforms first appeared the whole town was gazing at them and it is a certainty that the picture derived a wealth of publicity. Another stunt Stern used in connection with the picture was the distribution of a number of window cards made up so that "Dynamite" read from the lower left hand corner to the upper right hand. This arrangement created a very effective "flash" for the attraction. We want to thank Stern for passing along this stunt to us in order that we might know what he is doing to sell his shows out there in Oklahoma. Let's have some more accounts of your work, Mr. Stern.

"PROSPERITY MONTH"

That's the name Columbia has given to the April drive, with some valuable prizes to be awarded in cash, for live-wire showmen. You can all make a try for some of the money, and what's more, it's worth trying for.

Last week's issue carried the rules of the contest. Look 'em over carefully and then see that your stuff comes right in to the Round Table Club headquarters to be passed on by the judges.

A nest-egg in cash plus nation-wide prestige is what the answer to this one happens to be. Are you going to sit back while the other fellow is grabbing the dough and the glory? Or are you goin' to try for some yourself?

Come on fellows. The contest is wide open. Any showman in the business can qualify.

"Chick"

Radio Station Plug Was Promoted By Drachman for Show

Another novel angle has been hit upon by Roy Drachman, manager of the Rialto Theatre in Tucson, Arizona. Roy used this creative gag on "Show of Shows."

Through a tie-up with the local radio station, a turntable was rigged up in the broadcasting room. The record (used with the trailer on "Show of Shows"), was then played over the air, preceded by a brief talk on the attraction. The value of an angle of this kind may be easily seen, not only because it hits the homes, but also reaches persons dining in restaurants and other places where the radio is in constant operation.

This very valuable advertising can be secured at practically no cost whatever by showing the radio station manager its entertainment value. Of course the gag can only be used on musicals or a picture featuring a special star. About the only way we can think of offhand to get around the non-musical angle, should you care to use this stunt, is to give a brief resume of the plot that will explain the ensuing dialogue.

We want to thank Drachman for passing this angle along to us because we feel that such a stunt will prove of value to any member desiring to use it, and if any of them

To show you the type of merchandising he uses to make patrons come back, we are showing a photo of a cut-out for "Sally," which shows the star holding a sample of the $6.60 ticket required for admittance to the original stage show. The display created a lot of interest and aided Drachman in bringing the receipts up above normal for the run of the picture.

Okay Ray, we're glad of the opportunity to show your activities on the Round Table pages and we hope to hear from you again in the very near future, because it seems to us that we have acquired another member who will be very active.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Front Of House Is Good Example Of McConnell's Pep

When it comes to putting out a setting that will sell a picture to his patrons you can trust Manager McConnell to devise the unusual.

On "The Mysterious Island" he made up a special front, concentrating his art work on an underseas angle. A large banner strung across the front at entrance to the theatre, with front and corner panels masking it in. A smaller banner was placed out under the marquee, with a large special painted board in center front of the box office. The art work depicting fights with underseas monsters, etc., packed a terrific wallop, as it was done up in very striking colors. A person passing by the display was a cinch to be sold on the picture sooner or later.

Another good stunt McConnell used was in conjunction with his showing of "Navy Blues," when he made up his front in typical "navy" style. For an atmospheric "flash" he garbed his ushers in sailor uniforms and they certainly made presentable gobs. His activities on the picture attracted a lot of comment and sold the show completely.

We'd like to hear more from him concerning his wideawake work, since we are sure that the rest of the Club will enjoy reading about it. So keep us posted, McConnell, we want to pass on your work because we happen to have a couple of mighty fine showmen in Youngstown on our rolls and to keep up with them you've got to have the goods.

Hatfield Plugging Shorts By Using Creative Displays

As long as Harry Hatfield, manager of the Pantheon Theatre in Chicago, Ill., is plugging his baseball shorts we guess we'll have to take it as conclusive evidence that spring has came.

The cut we are showing will give you an idea of the importance Hatfield attaches to his short subjects. On his recent booking of "Clancy at the Bat," he used this novel cut-out for a display in front of the theatre and it certainly attracted a lot of attention.

There is many an angle can be found in connection with a short subject and too much attention cannot be paid to these one and two reelers since it has been proven they have often boosted up and saved some pretty dull feature pictures. Hatfield seems to be displaying some nice showmanship in the timely booking of a baseball short, for March is about the time the "stove league" disbands for the winter and gets ready to pan and praise the poor, underpaid, forty thousand-a-year ball players.

Anyway, before we start into a discussion concerning ball players (which is not what we get paid for, no matter how you look at it) we just want to say that if you've a short subject of unusual merit or one of timely interest don't be afraid to do as Hatfield did. Give it a plug and it's a safe bet that your b. o. is going to record a tidy sum for its run.

Thanks, Harry, for passing this one along to us, and let's have some more accounts of your work because we know that all the showmen in Chicago have to go pretty fast to keep up with the next guy.

Mayor Set Aside Special Week And Miller Benefited

We know lots of showmen who would be glad to have the Mayor of their town or city set aside a week as "Go To The Theatre Week." And that's just what the Mayor of Cooperstown, N. Y., did for George A. Miller, manager of the Smalley's Cooperstown Theatre in that thriving upstate town.

The newspapers and theatre programs carried the Mayor's proclamation as follows: "Inasmuch as William C. Smalley has provided the village of Cooperstown with a modern playhouse and has installed the best talking picture equipment on the market, thus making it possible for his patrons to secure eminent and wholesome entertainment of the best quality, parallel to that of the large cities, I hereby proclaim the week of March 24 as 'Go To The Theatre Week.' I heartily recommend that as an appreciation everyone attend Smalley's Theatre during the week of March 24. (Signed) Ziba L. Holbrook, Mayor of Cooperstown."

In addition the local newspaper commented editorially on the Mayor's proclamation and Miller received a little more publicity from this source. You will all agree with us as to the value of this angle and we feel sure that his business was boosted up considerably during this special week. At any rate we want him to let us know what else he is doing to sell his shows up there in Cooperstown, since we are always interested in finding out about every showman's activities. So let's hear from you again, Miller, in the very near future

Stamp Club Proves Good Biz. Booster For Showman Smith

Judging from the line-up in the photographs it looks as though Lou Smith doesn't have to worry about boosting up his Saturday Matinee biz, because with the inauguration of a "Stamp Club" for that day the kiddies in the neighborhood have responded wonderfully.

As each youngster enters the theatre, he or she is given a package of foreign stamps together with a message informing them that when they leave the theatre they are to look at a blackboard, placed in a nearby store window and upon which has been written a bunch of numbers. If any kid has a number corresponding to one on the blackboard he is entitled to a stamp album.

This stunt clicked great with them, and the photograph below will give you an idea of how they pushed and shoved to see whether their numbers were written upon the board. By using this stunt business has boosted up a good deal for Lou on Saturday. It is too bad that we haven't some photos of the ballyhoos he is using out around his district, but since he promises to send them to us in the near future we feel sure that we'll have another article concerning him on the CLUB pages in a little while.

Just to prove that we haven't forgotten Lou's position or the theatre wherein he operates, we will inform you that he is the manager of the Windsor Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., and is one of the fastest stepping showmen in that portion of Greater New York. So don't forget, Lou, we look to receiving those accounts of your work and give our regards to Mr. Rachmeil and Mr. Katz.

Selling Power Is Seen In These Examples Of Display

Harry Herman, manager of the Paramount Theatre, sends us these art cut-outs prepared by Harry Crinklaw to sell the pictures booked for Cedar Rapids, Ia.

The "Devil May Care" centerpiece had a modernistic background with the head of Novarro set in relief. The background was painted in tonals of red illuminated from behind the head of Novarro with 25 watt red lamps. The lettering and border was silver flitter.

For "Song of the West" the top piece carried out the idea of the back of a covered wagon. Through the opening the driver could be seen with mountains in the distance. The mountains were made of a separate piece of beaverboard and set back to give the appearance of distance. The ribbons on the girl's hat and dress were real.

The "Anna Christie" display was a pleasing blend of colored lights and water color paints. The caption, "Garbo Talks," was studded with green and amber 10 watt lamps and the pillars framing the poster of Garbo were lighted with colored lamps working on separate flasher circuits. The cutout was 12 feet high.

Harry Herman's name is more or less of a fixture on the CLUB pages by reason of his fine showmanlike activities over a long period of years, and especially since the ROUND TABLE CLUB became such an important factor in the show world. At any rate, the point we want to bring out is that in addition to the importance of these attractive art cut-outs, he injected a touch of novelty in what he was doing, and the result speaks for itself.

Let's hear some more from you, Harry, and tell us what else is going on out there in Cedar Rapids that may be of interest and value to your brother members and managers throughout the country.

Assistant Managers as Members!

(Reprinted by request)

In order that we may dispel a wrong impression, we want all assistant theatre managers to know they are eligible for membership in the Round Table Club, PROVIDING their manager certifies as to the position they hold.

Many assistant managers have important duties in their respective theatres, such as publicity and exploitation directors, treasurers, etc. We, therefore, feel that their activities are many times just as important to the Club pages as the managers.

The reasons we make this one provision is that it is difficult for us to know whether an applicant who calls himself an assistant manager is really just that. We can check up on the managers, but the managers must help us check up on the assistants and we would rather they expressed their willingness before their assistants joined the Club.

Stan Patchett Is An Australian P. A. And Very Active

Introducing Stanley Patchett, young publicity impresario connected with the Union Theatres, Limited, of Australia. Stanley has been keeping the residents of the various cities wherein the Union houses are located, informed concerning the attractions for a good many years now. And though he is young in age we must say he is old in experience.

Through the suggestion of Larry Webb, a real Australian showman, whose acquaintance we had the pleasure of making, while he was here in New York on an inspection tour of American methods in order to study the various phases of the industry as practised in this country, Stanley joined the Club.

Knowing the quality of the work performed by the live-wire showmen who make up the amusement industry in the Antipodes, it is a certainty that Stanley has acquired a wonderful knowledge of show merchandising and our fond hope is that when this article attracts his attention, it will serve as a reminder to him to begin active membership by sending us his photograph, along with some of the various angles he uses to sell his shows, since we are of the opinion that they will contain a wide and varied number of new angles to be discussed.

We welcome Stanley into the Managers' Round Table Club and we want him to know that our pages are always open to record the work of himself and his fellow showmen in Australia. Give our regards to Mr. Webb, Stanley, and to the rest of our friends down in your country.

WHAT ARE YOU WAITING FOR?

ADDITIONAL NEW MEMBERS!

JOHN R. PETERS manages the Ritz Theatre in Indianapolis, Indiana. It was with a great deal of interest that we learned he is the youngest house manager in the state, being only twenty years old. In that case, John, your rise to the position you now occupy should make very interesting reading for the Club pages and we'd like to have you give us a resume of your career. And so that we may be able to properly present the story, send us your photo too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

SIDNEY AUERBACH is the Assistant Manager of the Broadway Theatre in Astoria, L. I., and comes to the Club nominated by Paul Binstock. Now since we know the type of go-getter Mr. Binstock is, we feel that Sidney has been given a wonderful opportunity to blossom forth a real honest-to-goodness showman. We are interested in hearing more of your work Sidney and we'd like you to keep in touch with us often.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

EDWIN T. EMERY is the manager of the Sunnyside Theatre in Woodside, L. I. Our representative showmen from Long Island have been hanging up some mighty fine records lately and we feel now that Emery is one of that crack outfit, he too, is going to let us in on the secret of business building. So keep us posted Edwin and let's know often what you are doing to pull 'em in.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JOHN E. CORT is the manager of the Boulevard Theatre in Jackson Heights, L. I., N. Y. Cort is not unknown to his brother members in the Club, for it was only a short while ago that we printed a little story telling you how much pride he takes in his house and the unique policy it features, of legitimate attractions, musical comedies and pictures. On looking through our files, John, we find we haven't a photo of you, so when you send us in your next letter we hope you will remedy the situation.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

WILLIAM THOMS manages the Kingsbridge Theatre in New York City. The Kingsbridge is a well known neighborhood house and for that reason it seems to us that Thoms must be putting out some mighty fine work to give the house so high a rating. We'd like to hear more from you soon William and when you write we hope you'll give us a little dope on your own career too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

NAT ATTENBERG manages the Chelsea Theatre in Chelsea, Mass., and as Nat believes in presenting entertainment a la Broadway, we expect to hear some fine accounts of his activities. Let's have a photo of yourself and a little note giving us the 'low-down" on you.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

K. L. ADAMS, who manages the Liberty Theatre in Sunnyside, Wash., we are proud to have you know, also is connected with Senior and Junior Mercy's circuit, so we feel that it is unnecessary to say more than that we extend Adams a hearty welcome into the CLUB. Because there's no doubt in our minds but that he will prove an active member.

GERSON WEISS is the manager of the Ritz Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y. We have often had occasion to visit the Ritz and thus we know what a beautiful little showplace it is and the opportunities it offers for some exploitation of the highest grade. We want to hear from you very often in the future Gerson and to show the rest of the Club what another Brooklyn showman looks like, shoot us in a photo of yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GILBERT ROSENTHAL manages the Duffield Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., for the Fox Met. Outfit. If our memory serves us right we can remember the Duffield as a swell proposition at one time and highly spoken of by the people of the neighborhood. We believe Gilbert is doing everything possible to uphold this opinion of the theatre and just to make sure we'd like him to shoot us in a little letter elling us what he has accomplished to date.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ROBERT HUTCHINSON manages the Lynbrook Theatre in Lynbrook, L. I. Competition on the South Shore of Long Island, according to what your Chairman has observed, is very keen and therefore a manager has got to be a real wide awake showman. In order that we may show the rest of the Club what you are accomplishing out there Robert we wish you'd drop us a little note containing the "info" revealing your doings.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

R. E. McCABE is a very busy manager. With the Carlton and the New Atlantic Theatre in Brooklyn, N. Y., to look after he no doubt has his hands full. Nevertheless "R. E." we are aware of your ability as a showman and we do not intend to let you forget about us, no matter how busy you are. So before we start to work on you in earnest we'd like to tell the Club about your career in the showgame and in order to give a detailed account we must have your photo and a letter setting forth your "life history." So we'll be scanning the mails anxiously for it.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

EARLE F. OSCAR is the manager of the Ritz Theatre in Athens, Alabama, and clocks up still another member for that peppy state. Without going into the files we believe that this state is one of our strongholds and now with Earle on the rolls it will be represented more often than ever on the pages. By the way Earle, we notice that we haven't your photo on hand and as you know in order to give you a regular introduction a letter about your career and the said photo will be necessary.

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

EXHIBITORS HERALD-WORLD SAID:

"One of those pleasant surprises that makes the town happy and proud. A distinctive kind of picture that deserves a lot of credit. Likely to be one of the commercial sensations of the season."

PETE HARRISON SAID:

"The type of picture every independent producer dreams of producing but fails! It is as good and as wholesome entertainment as one will find in the best pictures made by the big producers and will add prestige to the picture business."

EXHIBITORS DAILY REVIEW SAID:

"Reginald Denny is likely to stir the box office to the point of heavy receipts. The play is smart, distinctive, of the highest class. Watch this one for a money clicker!"

FILM DAILY SAID:

"Worthy of a Broadway showing. Denny gives an excellent performance, putting this picture in the money."

MOTION PICTURE NEWS SAID:

"At last Reginald Denny is supplied with a story! Makes extremely pleasant entertainment."

FILM SPECTATOR SAID:

"A surprisingly clever and amusing Denny vehicle. It deserves the success it will undoubtedly receive."

"THE BAD ONE"

WITH

EDMUND LOWE

TWO OF SCREENDOM'S GREATEST MONEY STARS IN A SMASH HIT THAT HAS S. R. O. WRITTEN ALL OVER IT

Picture Dolores Del Rio as a rollicking flirt, the dancing favorite of a waterfront cafe. Immune from love, she makes overtures to all the men customers to humor them into squandering away their money. Dolores Del Rio in a gay, breezy, colorful role, the most dynamic portrayal of her career.

Edmund Lowe elaborates his success in "What Price Glory?" and "The Cock-Eyed World" as a wise-cracking great lover of the Seven Seas, a two-fisted, rough-and-ready hombre, with a girl in every port. Watch him fall for Dolores. Tempestuous sweethearts, they wage the battle of hearts along the colorful waterfronts and carry it on past the mires of misunderstanding and temperament to triumphant glory.

The master achievement of director George Fitzmaurice's career.

Big time stars, a big time supporting cast, a whooping good story, romance, fun, adventure — "The Bad One" measures up to the highest box-office standards. It's slated for record highs. Fit it into your schedule now and smile the smile of a wise showman.

Short Feature, Football of Industry, Fights for Life While Chaos Reigns

New Racket

Hollywood—They've dubbed a movie actress here the "ringleader" of the industry because she's been engaged so many times.

Hughes $30,000 in Red for "Hell's Angels" Lease

More than eighteen months ago Howard Hughes, producer of "Hell's Angels," figured his picture would be ready for release within two months. Hughes instructed his Eastern representative to lease a suitable Broadway theatre for the New York presentation of his air picture. The Geo. M. Cohan Theatre was secured, with Hughes leasing the house to other productions until his own was ready to go in.

However production on "Hell's Angels" strung along, until it became the marathon picture of the coast. Hughes recently finished the dialogue on "Hell's Angels," and now has it pretty nearly cut for release. However, his eighteen months lease on the Cohan has just expired, so Hughes finds himself without a definite Broadway house for the Eastern opening. It is said that Hughes went "in the red" for at least $30,000 during the time he had the theatre under lease—but he still is in the same spot as before he leased the Cohan theatre and took the $30,000 loss.

Fox and Loew in Stiff Price Slashing Tilt

Syracuse, N. Y.—Indicative of the approach of summer and of the intense competition on the local main stem, two theatres have slashed their prices. At the Fox-Eckel the tariff on week days until 5 p. m. will be 25 cents, with a night scale of 40 cents instead of 55 cents. On Saturday the scale calls for 25 cents until 1 p. m. and then 40 cents; Sunday's scale is straight 40 cents.

Col. Harry Long, Loew's State manager, returned this week from New York City, where he attended a conference of Loew executives, with the news of price reductions.

Sunday admissions will be lowered to 40 cents for all seats until 2 o'clock, when the regular 60 cents admissions remain the same.

Readjustment of Conditions And Exhibitor Support Necessary

The short subjects situation is dangerous for exhibitors and producers.

An over-supply is making a happy buying condition for exhibitors.

Producers, suffering from the keen competition for contracts and play dates, which is holding down the average gross, are facing the economic necessity of reducing negative costs. This, it is said, means reduced quality, which, in turn, hits at the box office.

Thereby a vicious circle exists. Unless producers can continue to "hold the bag" by maintaining present average negative costs until sound shorts more conclusively prove their value to exhibitors, the gains made to date in popularizing shorts as important program adjuncts will be lost, and the full burden of quality entertainment thrown onto feature productions which frequently are unequal to the load.

Some Shorts Getting Break

Some short product, it is true, is getting a break on price and runs, but this is the exception rather than the rule. The few which are getting the break which is their due, are more than offset by the many which are being forced out to make room for product, which exhibitors are compelled to book in order to get feature line-ups. Although the contract recommends that short and feature sales be segregated exhibitors contend that in some instances they are required to book shorts to get blocks of features.

Feature lengths have been cut considerably since the advent of sound, so that the average running time now approximates from 60 to 70 minutes. In the building-up of the show, therefore, more shorts now are necessary. Where the exhibitor, generally speaking, formerly could book a feature, comedy and newsreel, he now finds that more shorts are essential. Cartoons and novelties are being used in great numbers to plug the gap.

The exhibitor finds quality shorts in great demand, and from the distributor

The Naked Truth

The truth about short subjects—the real low-down on the startling situation which confronts that field, is vividly told in a special section appearing in this issue on pages 41 to 64. Twenty-four pages of solid, electrifying material. Don't miss it.

Literal

Director: "Get some orange blossoms for the wedding scene."
Property Man: "How many quarts?"

There's a Moral Here Boys, Read It—And Reap

Hi-hats have ruined more than one gent in this business and came pretty close to being successful again in recent weeks.

There's a certain producer in New York who, down through the ages established a reputation for being a hard-boiled egg, a tough man to do business with, both for outsiders and those within the sacred portals of his organization. When sound made its appearance, his efficient staff—what was left of it—offered the chief complete plans for the change-over. He agreed that silents should be thrown out, but rejected plans offered by his crew for type of material.

The months slipped by rapidly—and so did the profits, with the result that, for the first time in the company's history the old red ink bottle was displayed prominently on the desk of the accountant.

Then came the light of day. The producer alighted from the high horse, became meek and humble, and sweetly asked the boys in the outfit for a solution. It was given oto and plenty of other things with it.

After the rude awakening, the producer agreed with his boys, gave them full swing in picking and producing quick-selling material. The result: In less than two months the outfit has nabbed a new lease on life; its product has improved one hundred per cent and real money is seen lurking around the corner.

Retakes Ordered for "All Quiet"; Zasu Pitts Out

Hollywood—All's not well with "All Quiet on the Western Front," Universal's big war picture. Although the world premiere at the Carthey Circle is only a few days off, Carl Laemmle, Jr., it is reported, has decided that important retakes are necessary and these are being shot at breakneck pace.

Zazu Pitts gets the bad luck, for, according to report, the "U" production moguls decided she looked too young to be the hero's mother. So she's out and the only woman role in it goes to Beryl Mercer.

YOU CAN'T TIMECLOCK BRAINPOWER

IT won't be long now before the lieutenants of efficiency—bankers' kind—swing into line under orders to mow down overhead.

The move to trim expenses is in the bag. And, unless the downtown moguls who stand foursquare behind the offensive, foresee the consequences before they bring them tumbling down on the business, nothing this side of the warm regions can stop it.

Now that this industry is nestling in the arms of the banking fraternity as never before, the financial wizards have been indulging in a few check-ups. What they have discovered has caused jaws to sag, eyelashes to flutter and real, not crocodile, tears to flow.

There also has been a few ejaculations of amazement, punctuated by a couple of cusses over the amounts of money handed out in the form of weekly checks and a decision to end what these selfsame bankers prefer to describe as something akin to outrageous.

A Few Fundamentals Overlooked

And, as matters stand with so many film presidents occupying their posts in name only, the bankers are in a position to determine what they propose to do and then do it. What they overlook today, however, exactly as they have in the past, are a few fundamentals about this industry or art which all conference room planning will never change.

For, whether they like it or not, the bankers will never time-clock motion picture brains. One picture looks like another when the print rests in the film can. Beyond that, the cataloguing process becomes one tough job.

Time limits may be fixed for script preparations or shooting schedules, but too many elusive factors enter into the production scheme to permit the cut-and-dried to hold sway. Everybody who knows his films knows this. Yet the bankers, after all these years, avidly stick to the belief that making pictures is like manufacturing shoes, and see no sane reason why cost sheets that apply to broom factories cannot apply equally well to film factories. In theory, the idea may be feasible. In actual practice, nothing could be further from fact.

Under the present system which lets loose annually far more pictures than the market should be required to absorb, product hits a mediocrity in quality that is deplorable. This, mind you, with little or no attempt to check expenditures at the studios. Imagine, if you can, the set-up under a bankers' system that proposes to outline a split-second program for creative ability and expect that ability to live up to it.

The attempt was made once before and not so many years ago. The company was one of the leaders in the business. Into it was brought the bankers' emissary. Efficiency men, badged in true robot fashion, were rushed into the studio. Everything was to run like clock-work or this banker would know why. He had his way for a time because the head of the company was into the banks so heavily his protests carried no weight.

But what that system did was nobody's business. If that all-wise banker had had his way for six months longer, the bottom might have been completely ripped out of that particular enterprise.

What the bankers might do to ditch the overhead bugaboo is to turn attention to distribution. Overlapping exchange systems strung out all over the country would make a first class patient for the economic operation. Just how many millions this duplication is costing is pretty nearly anybody's guess.

Incompetence Faces Strangulation

Then again, if the axe must swing, it might be headed in those many directions where inefficiency and fat berths, created by family relationships, ride rampant. The job is a big one and there is plenty of cancerous growth awaiting removal.

Incompetence can have no excuse and no excuse advanced on its behalf should be countenanced. Clean up and clean out where it is sound business to do so. That's sensible. But let alone where the lifeblood of the business is involved.

For you can't timeclock ability. It isn't in the cards.

Bankers Gunning for Big Salaries in Industry; Production Main Target

Amos 'n' Andy's "Regusting" Income

Before their debut on the NBC network, Amos 'n' Andy were pulling down about 100 smackers per week. Today they are said to be good for 100 grand yearly. And to this is to be added their take in the picture they are to make for Radio Pictures, which will be on percentage, which may net the famous blackface pair a cool million. The picture will be "Check and Double Check" and is not to interfere with the stars' nightly broadcast.

Wall St. Moguls Covet Legit, Says Magazine Writer

"Big business may take over the legit for the talkies," is the observation of Oliver Owl in "The Quill," official organ of the Theatrical Press Representatives, in commenting upon the proposed establishment by bankers of one amusement combine merging all factors of show business. That such a plan has been under discussion was stated last week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

"Cheer up, press agents! Every turn of the wheel from now on will indicate better days—maybe," Owl writes. "The marmalade on your matutinal toast is the chatter that Wall Street is going in the amusement business.

"Not simply for talkies, but for musicals, drama and the legit theatre generally. Film companies are not only backing stage productions, but they figure that the whole darn legit business belongs to the screen. And Wall Street is interested.

"That utility giant, Harley L. Clarke, who took over the Fox companies, was already back of the civic theatre movement

Saving the Show Business

"Picture house chains have the country dotted with all the stages they would ever need for the legitimate. Also, the latest electric amplifiers will carry a whisper to the last row in a 5,000-seat theatre.

"Anybody can see how they figure it—anybody but the legit managers. Put a comedy or revue in a 5,000-seat house, turn on the amplifiers, letting cash customers enjoy a Ziegfeld 'Follies' or a Cochran's 'Bitter Sweet' from London at a price any shop girl can afford—and the show business is saved. Ain't it?

"This is the only country in the world that has held to profiteer box office prices. It strangled the theatre. If the film companies eliminate that evil they will own the legit.

"Harley Clarke gave his old collitch chum, Fritz Leiber, a million to play with because he believes in the theatre. Gus McCune, TRP, is sitting in the publicity chair next the throne, so it's reasonable to believe the Chicago millions think pretty much of press agents.

"Will there be sales campaigns and two or more agents with every attraction to exploit the legit, once the utility millions are behind the productions? Tell your boy producer friend.

"Things are beginning to listen better for TPR boys and girls, but don't let up on the work to replenish the Relief Fund—not yet.

A Bum Steer

"Plans are being discussed by insiders with vision. Soon as the 'specs' are done for, the dope is that managers will organize and start saving the road. Actors' Equity may vote to give them the John Golden basic contract. Without it there might be double 10,000 unemployed actors.

"A year ago Arthur Hammerstein and William A. Brady gave the stage three years to wash up, but with all-year successes under their belts they can change their guess.

"On the road the troupes are finding auditoriums for one-night stands. Willard Coxey says Sir Harry Lauder played 30 weeks of one-nighters and only a dozen were in theatres.

"If producers and authors and actors fail to see the writing on the wall, the film companies may pull the show business out from under the present control.

"Press agents may laugh last, yet."

Colleen Wants Divorce; Hubby "Mentally Cruel"

Hollywood—The romance of Colleen Moore and John McCormick went on the rocks when the star filed suit for divorce charging her producer-husband, whom she married Aug. 18, 1923, while both were aligned with First National, with mental cruelty.

Miss Moore alleges that on returning from a hospital last December, following an appendicitis operation, McCormick, in the presence of friends, ordered her from their Bel-Air home. On another occasion, she charges, he chased invited guests from their home, using abusive language. He also remained away from his domicile for several days.

The complaint stated that a property settlement had been made. McCormick, it is said, will not contest the suit.

Menjou to Make French And Spanish Talkers

Hollywood—Adolphe Menjou has been reengaged by Paramount following his return from Europe. He will star in a talking picture to be filmed in Spanish and French. It will go into production at the Paramount Hollywood studios within two weeks.

Marshall Neilan Signed To Direct Next Pickford

Hollywood—Marshall Neilan has returned to United Artists to direct Mary Pickford's next talker, "Forever Yours," from the original story by Benjamin Glazer. Neilan directed many of Miss Pickford's most successful silent productions of ten years ago.

Elsie Ferguson Returns To Screen Via Warners

Hollywood—Another former star of the silent pictures returns to talkers in the person of Elsie Ferguson, who has signed with Warners to play a featured role in "Scarlet Pages." Marion Nixon and John Holliday will also have prominent parts.

Wholesale Slashes Planned in All Departments; Fight Expected

Bankers are plotting wholesale salary slashes in all departments of the industry.

Production payroll figures are said to be the greatest sore spot in financial minds, but the weekly checks issued to numerous executives in the head offices of distributors and chain theatre concerns are not to escape what well-informed sources say will be a general reduction throughout the business.

It has been known for months that representatives of the large banking houses now active in the business have been making comparisons between salaries paid in pictures and those to individuals holding similar titles as executives in other industries. Experienced film men contend that the financiers fail to distinguish between the type and kind of work performed in this and other businesses.

Studio Payrolls First

Bankers, according to report, contend that there is no radical difference, and cling to the conviction that picture salaries are out of all proportion and must be reduced.

Studio payrolls are known to be the first line of attack. Present contracts with writers, directors, players and composers, as well as executives, will be fulfilled, according to insiders, unless the quality of work or heavily diminished box office value of star names gives sound legal reason for cancellation. However, new contracts will be made with much greater resistance to demands from the professionals than the latter have previously experienced. There have been numerous evidences recently of some one's hand tightening the purse strings while new contracts have been in negotiation at various studios. These instances, it is pointed out, have been carefully dictated and observed as experiments. In certain cases players and directors have taken big cuts in renewing for talkers with heavy arguments about the uncertainty of their value as compared to silent film returns overriding their natural objections.

Putting On Salary Lid

Since banking interests first became active in film securities, and later, as their financial support increased, in actual management, the payrolls have been studied and debated. Now, with banker influence dominant in a number of the larger organizations, it is a daily whisper in numerous executive circles that financial representatives are overlooking no chance to tighten the lid on salary arrangements.

That the Wall Street contingent is going to prove exceedingly stubborn in approving future salary deals is a foregone conclusion, according to several individuals who are well informed about downtown plans, but these same informants who are equally versed in picture facts, anticipate a slowly growing antagonism from the professionals in the studios and executive in New York as the latter begin to feel the slashing policy.

The Insiders' Outlook

WELL, dear old Empeenews was given the pleasant hee-haw during the week. Those who think they know, but don't, read all about the secret move to combine the big factors in the amusement world into one gigantic, breath-taking combine and proceeded to smile.

Now it is easily a possibility that the smile may be wiped clean from the faces that so indulged, because, believe it or not, such a move is being discussed. There's little need to ask about it. The very few individuals who know won't talk; they're sworn to complete silence.

Empeenews was tipped off that a lot of kidding was in the offing if the yarn ran. It was suggested that impolite remarks, with references to insanity thinly veiled, might be levelled in this direction. And so the guffaws were expected. But get this:

Watch the Electrics

The combine intent would erect one of the most powerful groups in the world of international business. It has for its purpose the blending of all picture companies, radio affiliations, stage producers and music publishers into one holding company with cut-throat competition eliminated and the parcelling of its share of business to each component part on the basis of established earning power and numbers of theatres controlled.

The big electrics are lurking in the background of this idea. Yet, officially and on the record, is Walter Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, with the following, culled directly from his annual report:

> "The American Telephone and Telegraph Company, neither directly nor indirectly, through Electrical Research Products—or otherwise, owns any stock in any motion picture enterprise or any other commercial undertaking operating in these fields."

Now form your own opinion.

A Little Star Dust

When Broadway meets Hollywood, something like this occasionally happens:

This concerns a Broadway star of considerable importance who landed a handsome contract shortly after talkers struck producers dumb.

For Miss Star, the deal was pretty. She reserved the right to okay all stories, approve the dialogue and script, stamp with approval her director and cast and personally supervise the designing of her clothes.

Under these auspices, the first picture was made. Then, as so often happens, the studio found itself with an expensive star on its hands because the story department had failed to dig up a vehicle for picture number two.

So milady took a trip. When she arrived within Hollywood's portals again, the studio began paying her a weekly drawing account against the amount agreed upon for the second picture. Finally, New York underwent a change of heart, precipitated by a close-up of the b.o. returns on the first picture, and began to dope ways and means of dodging both the contract and the second picture.

The decision once made, out of the blue the cordial relations between player and studio came to an abrupt end. A campaign of registered letters, wires and messages instructing her to report to the studio, was launched. But the pampered lady of the stage laughed at them all—and stayed off the lot.

The next step, studio-wise, was to discontinue the weekly checks. The next step, star-wise, was for her lawyer to suggest that the studio glance over the contract. The hint was taken and it was discovered those payments had to be made—or else. The checks resumed where they had left off.

So it went for some time. Then one day, the star nonchalantly walked into the studio and suggested a dollar-for-dollar payment on the terms of the contract. The deal was made on the spot. The star got her due; the studio took it on the chin for a poorly-made contract and both parties hand-waved goodbyes.

Now. Against what negatives will the loss be chalked up? There's a mystery which even involved book-keeping won't reveal. You may not be able to figure that, but the star's name should be a cinch.

Merrily the Pot Boils

He's been in the business a long time. Record A-1; friends many and everybody's respect is his. While he hasn't rolled up anything like the fortune many of his fellow-executives have, it must be said in all truth that he is doing very well.

Now—today—perhaps at the very minute you read this, his retirement may again be under discussion. Two other men in the same organization who know about it are looking each other in the eye and wondering on whose shoulder the mantle will fall. The first of the two has been regarded in organization ranks as the old timer's logical successor.

Perhaps not, however, for the second is dubbed by those familiar with his operations as a chiseler whose latest and best exploit is exemplified by the manner in which he has wormed his competitor into near disrepute.

Outwardly, everything is serene. But inwardly, the mess is cooking merrily. Whether or not it boils over, remains to be seen. If and when that happens, don't appear shocked if you learn about a couple of fists flying and one, or maybe two pairs of eyes, blackened. Yessir, it's that intense.

THE INSIDERS

The Straight Man

He's supposed to be a big shot in his particular field of operation. Just how big was demonstrated recently by the following:

Discussions were under way about this and that. In the group was an important executive of another company—a fellow who politically could do considerable for the man under discussion. Every observation, every contention the real big fellow made was yessed and yessed by the imitation. So much so that it all turned very tiresome.

And, as might be expected, the gag proved as distasteful to the man at whom it was so obviously thrust as it did to the others who were listening in.

Renewal of Paramount-Warner Merger Plan Is Intimated by Adolph Zukor

Whoa!

Hollywood—The song-writing tribe who stampeded here from New York's Tin Pan Alley with the advent of talkers are now being called "themesters" and somehow it doesn't click with them. It sounds too much like another calling in life.

Langdon Mixed Up in Another Marital Battle

Los Angeles—The screen troubles which the scenario writers used to cook up for Harry Langdon pale beside the real life predicament in which he is figuring.

In a statement filed in court he alleges that he was forced to pay $15,000 cash and give promissory notes for $11,500 more to forestall a threatened $250,000 suit for the alienation of the affections of Mrs. Helen Walton O'Brien, whom he married last July. Two attachment suits had been brought against him to collect on the notes by trustees for Thomas J. O'Brien, first husband of Mrs. Langdon.

Langdon said he gave the notes to save himself from unwelcome publicity and to prevent the cancellation of his contract, declaring, "If the charges were made public I would have been greatly embarrassed and probably would have lost the contract." However, he said that O'Brien had threatened to sue him for alienation long after Mrs. O'Brien had left her husband. Langdon was divorced by his first wife on a charge of desertion.

Shanberg Stepping Out as Aftermath of Fox Break

Kansas City—M. A. Shanberg's circuit of Midland theatres, which was almost sold to Fox, only to have the deal blocked by bankers, is continuing its expansion program. Its latest projects are two Kansas houses, a $400,000 project, seating 1,550, at Hutchinson; a 1,500-seat house at Salina.

Universal Buys "Strictly Dishonorable" Boles Stars

Universal has acquired rights to "Strictly Dishonorable" from Brock Pemberton, producer, and Preston Sturges, author.

By the terms of the contract, Universal says it guarantees author and the producer their part of the profit will be at least $125,000. It is provided that if Universal desires, the producer will go to the coast for four weeks and assist in the production. John Boles will be starred in it.

It was reported that Paramount had obtained the rights to the play as a vehicle for Maurice Chevalier.

Paramount-Publix Chosen as New Name; Vote Million Share Issue

There is "nothing on the fire right now," so far as prospects of a Paramount-Warner merger is concerned, Adolph Zukor declared at the company's stockholders' meeting Tuesday in answer to a query from a stockholder.

"However," he added, "I cannot say what the future will develop."

Name of the company was changed to Paramount Publix at the meeting, which authorized issuance of 1,000,000 additional shares for expansion. The stock is not to be issued at present, but will be available in case any circuit buys are negotiated.

Paramount, said Zukor, is making pictures in German, French and Spanish and is operating a studio in France. Experiments conducted lead him to believe that the problem of foreign language talkers has been solved. The meeting was adjourned until April 24 to give officers time to take necessary steps to change the corporate name.

Publix Plans Houses in Number of Southern Spots

Publix is planning new theatres in a number of southern cities. One of these is at Roanoke, Va., where a house costing $1,000,000 is to be built. Another is a $300,000 structure at Bristol. Failure to make a deal with Goebel Brothers, which firm has four houses at Bristol is said to have led to decision to build.

In Forty States

By virtue of acquisitions last year, Paramount-Publix now has theatres in 40 states, Central America, Cuba and Jamaica, Adolph Zukor told stockholders of the company this week.

Appeal Filed

Washington—Petition for review of the Thacher decision outlawing arbitration was filed in the Supreme Court Wednesday by counsel for the Hays association, nine distributors and Films Boards of Trade.

Decision Soon On Paramount Anti-Trust Suit

Austin, Tex.—Decision is to be handed down in a few weeks in the "conspiracy" action brought by Ray Stinnett and the late Si Charninsky against Paramount, et al, charging restraint of trade under state anti-trust laws. Arguments in the case have been completed before the Supreme Court Commission of Appeals, whose opinion must be approved by the Supreme Court before being issued.

Stinnet and Charninsky alleged that unlawful acts of the defendants destroyed earning power of the Capitol at Dallas, and won a verdict of $334,000 in the District Court. Paramount, the Publix Theatre Corp. of Texas and others prevented them from securing good films for the Capitol, it was asserted. The damage verdict was reversed and the case remanded for trial by the appellate court, on the ground that the Capitol Amusement Co. should have been plaintiff in the action. The case then went to the Supreme Court on a writ of error and was referred to the commission of appeals.

Paramount Quarterly Net Estimated at $4,800,000

Paramount Famous Lasky Corp. estimates consolidated net profits for the first quarter of 1930, including earnings of subsidiary companies and after all charges and taxes, to be $4,800,000, which amounts to $1.79 per share on 2,685,313 shares outstanding at the end of the quarter.

The profit for the first quarter of 1930, as estimated, is approximately 86 per cent greater than for the corresponding quarter of 1929, the previous record first quarter.

The profit per share of $1.79 on 2,685,313 shares compares with a profit of $1.17 on 2,206,505 shares for the corresponding quarter of 1929, or an increase per share of 53 per cent.

Lefko Pathe Manager

Pittsburgh—Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe, has appointed S. Lefko, former Philadelphia salesman, as branch manager here, succeeding A. Goldsmith.

"Big Four" in Frantic Race to Corner Theatres and Dominate the Country

Comerford Entrenching

Scranton, Pa.—M. E. Comerford, one of the few remaining independent large circuit operators, is planning to strengthen his position in Pennsylvania, in the battle impending in that state. With Warners rapidly buying up or building houses, Radio-Keith-Orpheum negotiating several deals, and Publix reported about to enter the state, Comerford is mapping a $5,000,000 expansion program. Two theatres seating 3,000 each are to be built here and at Wilkes-Barre. Wilmer & Vincent also is reported planning to expand its Pennsylvania holdings.

Copper Country Invasion Planned By Butterfield

Detroit—Aggressive expansion in the northern peninsula of Michigan is planned by the Butterfield circuit, which recently completed its new house at Sault Ste. Marie. The upper peninsula has been eyed for some time by W. S. Butterfield. From time to time other circuits, including Publix and Universal, have threatened invasion of the copper country, where Delft Theatres, headed by H. S. "Doc" Gallup is the principal circuit.

Meanwhile, Butterfield will open the Michigan at Jackson April 30 and is planning to replace theatres with new houses at Lansing and Battle Creek.

Hays Hit; Mrs. Winter Praised at Coast Meet

Glendale, Cal.—Will H. Hays was attacked and the good faith of producers scored, but the Los Angeles Federation of Women's Clubs, meeting here, wound up with a resolution commending the work of Mrs. Thomas G. Winter as the representative of organized women in the Hays organization. Mrs. J. F. Burdge, who led the attack, refused to withdraw her resolution when asked, and won out in a vote on her resolution. Previous speakers had condemned alleged exploitation of the General Federation of Women's Clubs by the Hays association. Showing on the screen of girls smoking and scenes where intoxicating liquor is served were condemned at the sessions.

Loew Managers Confer At Cleveland Convention

Cleveland—Loew managers met here April 16 and 17. This was one of two semi-national business meetings at which managers and executives will convene.

Paramount-Publix, Warners, Fox and R-K-O Battle for Control

Race for theatres in all sections of the country is under way by the "Big Four" of the industry—Paramount-Publix, Warners, Fox and Radio-Keith-Orpheum—in what is designed to prove "the big push" of the fight for theatre dominance. The offensive just getting started has for its object, it is reported, the bringing under the wing of one or the other of the "Big Four" all of the important remaining independent chains of the nation.

Paramount-Publix on Wednesday started getting set by securing authorization for 1,000,000 additional shares for theatre expansion. Radio-Keith-Orpheum, which has just added 55 houses in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and West Verginia, is issuing approximately 390,000 new shares to care for its continued expansion.

Warners Hitting Heavy Pace

Warners has been going at a tremendous clip in the last few weeks, buying theatres right and left in various sections of the country, as well as planning erection of others. Fox is planning on a fresh start in the breakneck pace that firm set until financial difficulties beset the company several months ago.

Most of the desirabilities will be washed up so far as independent operation are concerned by Jan. 1 next, it is predicted by some observers. These chains will be either owned by or affiliated with a distributor or distributors, it is asserted.

R-K-O Position Strong in Ohio Through Libson Deal

Radio-Keith-Orpheum gains a strong position in three principal Ohio cities in the deal for full ownership of the Libson-Heidingsfeld chain. Houses are: The E. F. Albee, Capitol, Palace, Strand, Lyric and Family, Cincinnati; B. F. Keith-Albee Palace and Majestic, Columbus; B. F. Keith, Colonial and State, Dayton; Empress and Regent, Grand Rapids, Mich. The Libson deal had been set with Fox, but was blocked by that firm's bankers.

The purchase price of the chain, it is reported, was $10,500,000 and the transfer will be effected May 15. Libson is relinquishing all connections with the circuit, but will remain in Cincinnati to look after his other theatrical enterprises.

Pauline's Fourth

Pauline Frederick is to try it again, and will embark on her fourth matrimonial venture with Hugh Chisholm Leighton, president of the Interstate News Co., New York.

The Joke That Failed

A picture executive, addicted to practical jokes, decided to vary the usual custom of sending a bon voyage basket when a friend sailed for Europe, so he called up his florist and ordered that a dead lily, with his card attached, be sent to the steamer. Half an hour later the florist telephoned:

"I'm sorry, mister, but we haven't got any dead lilies."

"Well, can't you kill one for me as a special favor?"

"Certainly; certainly."

A little later came another message:

"Mister, how do you kill a lily?"

The executive gave it up as a bad job, but he still thinks it's a swell idea.

Australia Roasts British Pictures; 'Lack Sex Appeal'

Melbourne—That the "Americanization of Australians" is being hastened by Hollywood talkers is the unique assertion contained in the annual report of the Commonwealth Film Censorship Board, which throws up its hands at the prospect of stemming the tide. However, it admits that American talkers are better than the English, adding:

"Unfortunately the censorship can do little or nothing to curb this tendency towards Americanization. There is much truth in the criticism that the talkies are all noise and crime, but their voice production is worse than their vice production. It is remarkable that the public can tolerate such large doses of prevalent slang, especially modern American girls singing and speaking. The only remedy is to increase the number of good British films, but there is little hope of this at present."

It holds that English films are below the technical and entertainment standard of their foreign rivals. Of the films imported last year 79 per cent were American and 11 per cent British.

London—On being notified of the Australian board's report, which also criticized the tendency of British producers to inject spicy incidents of a Continental flavor, Alfred Hitchcock, a producer, declared:

"It is often a complaint against British films that there is insufficient sex appeal. Australia, strangely enough, was the only country to take exception to an inoffensive scene in 'Blackmail,' which had passed former universal exhibition."

Baxter Stays With Fox

Warner Baxter, Fox star, is in New York for a four-weeks' visit. It is Baxter's first trip East in three years. He will sign his new term contract with Fox while here.

Warners Buy 100 Theatres in 3 Weeks; Building Others in Rapid Expansion

Franklin Digging In

Hollywood—Harold B. Franklin, president of Fox West Coast Theatres, is planning to concentrate activity here, battling the impending wholesale invasion of his strongholds by the Warners. This is the reply given to a query as to whether he is to go to New York to undertake direction of all Fox theatres, if requested.

Current Activities Centered on Seaboards; Get Dipson and Harris Circuits

Warners has acquired more than 100 theatres in various sections of the country within the last three weeks, according to Harry M. Warner. In addition, plans have been prepared for the building of a number of others.

The rapid expansion of the circuit is being continued, with negotiations now under way for a number of new projects and acquisitions.

The eastern and western seaboards are witnessing the major part of the current expansion activity. In the East, Warners has acquired the Dipson circuit of 14 houses in New York, Ohio and West Virginia; the Harris chain of 17 houses in Pittsburgh and in western Pennsylvania; the Rovner & Handle circuit of seven houses in New Jersey; and the Prince and Ambridge at Ambridge, Pa.

Active in Jersey

Sites for new houses have been acquired at Newark, where a 4,500-seat theatre costing $3,000,000 will be built; at Hackensack, where a $1,000,000 structure will be built; and at Perth Amboy and at South Orange. Fox also is planning a $1,000,000 house at Hackensack. The firm also has purchased the remaining 50 per cent interest in Speir's Plaza, Philadelphia.

Theatres in the Dipson chain are:

New York—Dellinger, Family and Lafayette, Batavia; Diana and Park, Medina; Babcock, Wellsville; Majestic and Shattuck, Hornell, N. Y.; Palace and Winter Garden, Jamestown, and Havens, Olean. Others are: Capital and Olympic, Steubenville, Ohio, and Capital, Wheeling, W. Va.

In the Rovner & Handle circuit are: Lyric and Towers, Camden; Levoy, Millville; Clementon, Clementon; Grand, Vineland; Westmont, Westmont; Collings, Collingswood.

Invade Washington State

On the Coast, Warners are continuing erection of a number of California theatres, and have started invasion of Washington, through acquisition of the Roxy at Aberdeen. Constantiti & Barovic opened the house April 1.

At Seattle, Tacoma and Portland, the Warner pictures are shown in John Hamrick's houses and no purchases in these cities are expected as Hamrick is understood to have long-term contract.

Under the supervision of Herman L. Maier, director of construction for Warner Bros., work has begun on the twelve-story theatre and office building at Milwaukee. The theatre will seat 2,600.

Police Tips

Los Angeles—Tips amounting to $1,800 were distributed among police handling the crowds at Rudolph Valentino's funeral, it was revealed in the annual report of S. George Ullman, executor, who states that he expended $551,346 to pay funeral expenses and claims. The screen sheik's estate is now estimated at $331,693.

Iowa Functions Despite Absence Of Arbitration

Des Moines—Business is being transacted here without much friction despite the fact that there has been no arbitration in effect for several months, states E. J. Tilton, First National manager, who recently was re-elected president of the Des Moines Film Board. B. J. McCarthy (RKO) is vice-president, and Margaret McGrevy, secretary and treasurer.

Operation of the Film Board in the past few years has succeeded in weeding out the discredited exhibitors and the standard of business ethics is very high in this state, he says.

"Most exhibitors look upon their contract as a moral obligation and their word is as good as their bond," Tilton declares. Tilton feels there are still only a few houses which are having a struggle to maintain business against bigger competition and that the introduction of sound has eliminated practically all doubtful accounts.

Rochester Showmen Form Better Films Unit

Rochester, N. Y.—Theatre managers and officials of the Rochester Motion Picture Exhibitors' Association co-operated with civic organizations last week in forming a Rochester branch of the Better Films Council, a National Board of Review affiliation. The local organization will publish its pick of leading child and family interest films weekly, without criticism, organizers announced.

Among the theatre men affiliated with the movement are Harry Tishkoff, Empress; M. B. Howell, Lincoln; R. Ferrigno, Grand; Max A. Vogel, Webster; Alexander Dunbar, Lyndy; Elmer Loritz, Monroe; William Tishkoff, Murray; Edward C. May, Riviera; Leon Shafer, State; Mrs. Louise Haskin, director of public relations at the Eastman; Sol Shafer, Liberty; and Howard Shannon and George L. Kress, secretary and treasurer, respectively, of the exhibitors' association. George L. David, dramatic critic of the Democrat and Chronicle, also is a charter member.

Hot Stuff for Raquel

Hollywood—M-G-M has cast Raquel Torres in another tropical drama, "Never the Twain Shall Meet," by Peter B. Kyne. Lionel Barrymore will direct.

Talker Rental Decrease Demand Of Scandinavians

Oslo—Unless rentals are reduced materially, no American talkers will be shown from Fall onward, the chairman of the cinematograph board, which controls all theatres here, has decreed. Norwegian exhibitors have been squawking on rentals, and have set a maximum figure for American distributors to take or leave. Rentals of 31½ per cent on talkers and 25 per cent on silents are the charges which have been made. Talkers are not popular here.

Similar sentiment against rentals is said to prevail in Sweden and Denmark, where exhibitors have drafted a demand for reduction of rentals under threat of boycotting American pictures. At Copenhagen, it is said, Danish authorities are incensed over the 50 per cent engagement of "The Singing Fool." American distributors receive about $3,000,000 annually for rentals in Norway, Sweden, Denmark and Finland.

'All Quiet' Broadway Run Starts Apr. 29 at Central

"All Quiet on the Western Front," Universal's production of Erich Maria Remarque's war novel, will start its Broadway run at the Central on April 29. Attending the premiere will be the Laemmles, father and son, and delegates to the sales convention of the company to be held in New York. Director Lewis Milestone will also be present with all important home office sales and production officials.

Ben H. Atwell has been named special press representative of the engagement. He was formerly publicity representative for the Chicago Grand Opera Co.

Benefit Premiere

Roxy will stage a $5 midnight show for charity April 28, presenting premiere of "King of Jazz." Paul Whiteman will be present with his band as will other featured players in the picture. The first pop. priced showing is May 2.

Paramount Would Buy F-P Canadian For Less Than Fox's Rejected Offer

Zukor, Who Blocked Former Deal, Offers $21,000,000 In Stock for Control

Toronto—Paramount will acquire control of Famous Players Canadian and at less money than Fox offered to pay for it, if stockholders act favorably upon recommendation of directors that they accept Paramount's offer to exchange four shares of Paramount for each five of the Canadian company. The deal, it is said, would involve $21,727,983 on the 369,838 shares of common outstanding. At current market prices, stockholders of the Canadian firm would receive $58 a share.

J. P. Bickell, vice president of Famous Players, admitted Thursday that the Paramount offer had been made. Directors were in session throughout the afternoon. The offer is for all outstanding stock of the Canadian company.

Paramount's offer follows by a few months a similar offer made by Fox, through Gaumont British. This offer was brought back from England by N. L. Nathanson, but he was blocked in efforts to present it to stockholders by Adolph Zukor and I. W. Killam, the other two voting trustees. The trustees hold about one-half the common under the voting trust formed when Paramount relinquished control about one year ago.

In refusing the offer made through Nathanson, Killam and Zukor were quoted as saying that control of the company should remain in Canadian hands.

Nathanson Sued; Charged With Withholding Stock

Toronto—Claiming that 4,500 shares of United Amusements, Ltd., having a market value of $157,000, are being held by N. L. Nathanson, former managing director of the company, Famous Players Canadian Corporation entered an action for a declaration that the stock is not his personal property. The corporation asks for an injunction and damages.

United Amusements, a subsidiary of Famous Players, operates 20 houses in the Province of Quebec. The corporation also recently sued Nathanson over the possession of a valuable theatre site in Montreal.

$5,000,000 Less

Paramount's offer to exchange four shares for five of Famous Players Canadian is about $17 a share less than that made by Gaumont British (Fox), through N. L. Nathanson. If accepted by the stockholders, it will mean a difference of more than $5,000,000 to all stockholders, as contrasted with the amount they would have received had the Gaumont British offer been accepted.

Pathe Sales Force Grosses 18 Million

Pathe's sales force, headed by Phil Reisman, rolled up a gross of $18,166,877 during the year ended Dec. 28, 1929, it is shown by the company's annual report. Net is $502,000, after depreciation and interest and after charging $999,000 to surplus and the special reserve set up in 1928. This amount represents the excess cost of pictures completed and in work April 21, 1928, the date on which the present management took charge.

standpoint, this should be a happy state of affairs, provided their good product got a break. However, this is being prevented by the tying in of shorts on feature contracts, closing the door to playing time for good product from companies, which may not have a feature program of sufficient strength to induce exhibitors to book the shorts as a condition to receiving the features.

From the distributor standpoint, this would be a fine state of affairs, provided it resulted in an increase in rentals. However, the contrary is the case.

Part of the trouble in this regard may be traced to the mad scramble to get into the short feature field made a few years ago by a number of producers. Where a few years ago, the short feature field was one of specialization, with a few companies putting out a majority of shorts, the situation today is completely reversed with practically every major company except First National and Fox now making shorts on a big scale.

Extravagance a Bugaboo

The decline of specialization has led to extravagant production costs and the undermining of quality in many instances. Because of their inexperience, these producers did not gauge overhead to sales possibilities, counting instead upon affiliations or tying in their short program with features in order to get by.

The situation became so acute that at the Trade Practice Conference in October, 1927, exhibitors were successful in having producers agree to segregating sale of features and shorts so far as making one contingent upon the other was concerned.

This concession made the situation alarming for producers for presentations were shoving shorts into the background, and a first run for a short in de luxe houses proved something of a rarity.

When sound came in with a rush, shorts staged a phenomenal comeback. Exhibitors, saddled with the heavy presentation nut, grasped at sound shorts and found in them a measure of relief.

Sound shorts, projected into a sudden popularity, commanded big rentals. These were essential because of the added cost of sound shorts, as well as the limited distribution at their command. However, with the speedy development of sound short production which followed, it wasn't long before the situation began paralleling that which preceded the advent of sound.

A Two-Way Proposition

The situation today is a two-way proposition, so far as responsibility is concerned. Some producers are following the lines of least resistance, wasting money on production of shorts, which they do not know how to make. These producers are hurting the short features of merit, made by the more capable producers, through lowering the general standard, and palming off their product on the public through affiliations or their ability to tie them to a strong feature program.

These inferior shorts have cut into playing time of more meritorious product, cheating it of a fair return on the producer's investment, to a degree which threatens the future quality of all short features.

The exhibitor, on the other hand, has been to blame for his failure to effectively resell shorts to the public, when short features were revived by sound. He, too, followed the lines of least resistance, in many instances, using the "also a comedy" or other tag line, if he bothered to mention the short at all in his billing. A notable exception is Publix, which went to great and effective lengths to sell the full show, when adopting all-sound-film programs at many of its theatres.

Shows Not Built Properly

Then, too, there has been the problem of building shows. Confronted with a situation calling for care, discretion and showmanship in rounding out programs, many exhibitors were unequipped for the task, and booked shorts on a hit-or-miss basis. Fitting of shorts to features was disregarded in many instances, with a result that the public became surfeited with type shows.

As an example, the revue craze in features was not counterbalanced by avoidance of duplication of similar material in shorts, and an exhibitor at times found himself with a show composed of the same material throughout. Similar examples might be cited covering other types of pictures.

The result has been, that the exhibitor, unable to put on his show properly, has been unable to sell it properly to the public. As the box office failed, therefore, to reflect

400 Features Planned for New Season By 12 Major Firms; Lists Stabilized

Edison Prefers 'Em Silent

Fort Myers, Fla.—Thomas A. Edison, "father of the motion picture," in an interview expressed a preference for silents on account of his deafness.

Regarding wide film, he said, "I tried that 30 years ago, but it was no good as the film kept tearing up and some of my friends thought the process too expensive. I wanted 40 pictures a second and producers wanted 15. I don't see how they stand the expense of colored films."

Shorts, Football Of the Industry Fight for Life

the value of the short, the rental price suffered.

Even though he wasn't paying enough for good shorts, the exhibitor considered his aggregate rentals, which were higher because of the increased number of subjects purchased. In looking for a place to prune, the short-sighted ones began pruning on shorts, grouping the good with the bad in considering the problem.

In this pruning, invariably the shorts of producers which are not tied in with features, or which are not affiliated with the particular exhibitor, are selected for the axe, regardless of quality. Often these, tactics are like killing the "goose that laid the golden egg," for exhibitors are endangering the savings on presentations made possible through rejuvenation of quality shorts.

Readjustment Essential

The new season will go a long way toward establishing the future of the short feature. What is needed is a readjustment all along the line. Encouragement must be given to those producers who have been making forward strides in the face of discouraging odds, so that they will continue the advance. This encouragement must come in the form of fair rentals for quality product regardless of source. And when quality product is secured, it must be properly sold and, then properly presented to the public.

Canadian Reform Element Fails to Enact Pet Laws

Toronto—Despite a heavy crop of preliminary yips and assorted squawks from the idle-rich reform element in Ontario, the provincial government has closed its sessions for the year without doing anything drastic concerning films as the meddlers anticipated might be accomplished.

Intended to guide parents in the selection of programs suited for juvenile consumption, the recently enforced order, based on the British law, to designate selected films as "Passed U" (fit universally for adults and children) is not working out in practice. The slogan is almost completely absent from advertisements. Somewhere between 10 and 20 per cent of features only are reported as making the grade and the public is paying no attention to the supposedly valuable initial.

The following changes, however, become law on June 1:

Age limit for unaccompanied children is raised from 15 to 16 years.

One year from date, all Ontario theatres must be of fireproof construction. Structural conditions of exchanges will also be under supervision.

Government may pass upon the sale and rental of all films and the inspector of theatres is given authority in the issuing of licenses both to exhibitors and distributors.

Paramount Tops All with 60-65; Expect Few Revisions This Year

Twelve major companies will release approximately 400 features during the 1930-31 season, under plans completed or now being whipped into shape. The majority of the 12 already have set the number of pictures they will release during the new year, with but a few schedules yet to be determined upon.

The approach of the new season finds the companies in a readjusted position, with their schedules giving indication of stability for the first time since the mad rush to sound was started. This season, schedules were subject to many revisions, but indications now are that the lists will stand pretty much as scheduled.

Schedules definitely set are: Fox, 52; Warners, 42; First National, 35; Universal, 20; RKO, 36; Pathe, 20; United Artists, 18; Columbia, 20; Sono Art-World Wide, 20.

Paramount is understood planning between 60 and 65 pictures; M-G-M about 50; and Tiffany from 24 to 30.

Ziegfeld Production Firm Regarded Publicity Yarn

Hollywood—Florenz Ziegfeld's entry of his own producing company is regarded here as a publicity yarn, for it is understood the producer has no film plans beyond production of "Whoopee" in association with Samuel Goldwyn. Ziegfeld-Goldwyn Corp. will make "Whoopee" under a one-picture arrangement.

Barsky Promoted

Hollywood—Engaged by Columbia as studio business manager three weeks ago, Bud Barsky has been promoted to the post of associate producer for that company. Barsky will handle a portion of Columbia's new product for the coming year. Sam Briskin, assistant to Harry Cohn, also functions as associate producer.

Plan 8 Yearly Meetings

Eight regular meetings are to be held annually by the New York section of the Society of M. P. Engineers, it was stated at Wednesday's session. Six of the meetings are to take place between the spring and fall meetings of the national organization, one following the spring meeting and one preceding the fall meeting.

Lightman to Oklahoma Meet

Oklahoma City — M. A. Lightman is slated to be principal speaker at the annual meeting here May 13 and 14 of the Oklahoma exhibitor unit.

Wurtzel Not Joining 'U'

Hollywood—There is no truth to report that Sol Wurtzel is to join Universal, it is stated here.

Television Broadcasts Planned by N. Y. Station

Washington—Application for license to operate a television station in connection with a radio station in New York, now licensed, has been filed by Radio Pictures, Inc., which asks the Federal Radio Commission for an assignment.

RKO Denies Relationship With New Television Firm

Officials of RKO, which distributes Radio Pictures, told Motion Picture News that the new television company now seeking application at Washington for broadcasts has no connection with RKO or any of its affiliated units.

Canadian Picture Bureau Moves to New Quarters

Toronto—Head offices of the Canadian Government's motion picture bureau are being moved to the National Researcher Building, Ottawa, where a Northern Electric (Western) film and disc system is being installed. The bureau makes educational and scenic reels, but releases a large amount of stuff through commercial channels. F. C. Badgley is director.

Mardi Gras Month to Be Staged by H. D. Goldberg

Utica, N. Y.—In the first drive he has launched since assuming charge of the New York State Division of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Harry D. Goldberg has set aside May as Mardi Gras Month.

New Selling Season Opens with Bang June 1; Rivals Jockey for Early Jump

The Woman Picks

Colfax, Ind.—Practically all theatres advertise directly to the woman, or should do so. It is the wife or girl friend who decides what show will be attended. At least this is the opinion of Harry L. Davidson, manager of the Colfax, in a talk at a meeting of the Lions Club. "Developments during the next two years," he predicted, "will be along the line of the wide film, the third dimension and Technicolor."

U. S. Probes G. E., Westinghouse Deal For RCA Control

Washington—Probe of the deal between RCA, General Electric and Westinghouse, under the terms of which RCA takes over the radio business of the other two firms, and exchanges $543,000,000 in stock in return for patents and preferred stock owned by those firms, is under way by the Dept. of Justice. The deal was attacked as forming "a new radio trust" by Senator Dill. It gives General Electric and Westinghouse 68 per cent of the voting stock of RCA.

Brains of Hammond Bomb Plot Believed Caught

Marion, Ind.—Effort to have Harry Danford, under arrest here, identified as the "brains" of the plot which resulted in bombing of the State, Hammond, Ind., will be made by Marion police. Harry L. Ames, former union business agent, and Marwood Williams are doing time for the explosion under three year sentences. Danford, arrested here in connection with bomb plots which caused the death of five, has been identified as Joe Proda, Chicago racketeer.

First National Sues for $9,440 on Contract Breach

Milwaukee—Suit for $9,440 was filed by First National against W. G. Maxcy, operator of the Grand Opera House, Oshkosh, charging breach of contract. It is alleged that he signed an agreement to run 49 pictures and that he showed only eight.

Films Make Stock Fold

Providence—The Albee stock company, for 30 years among the leading organizations of its kind in the country, has folded up, due to the policy of R-K-O to continue pictures and vaudeville this summer.

Mona Maris Selected

Hollywood—Mona Maris will be Victor McLaglen's leading woman in "Dust and Sun," to be made by Fox.

Sales Conventions in May Start Campaigns; "U" and United Artists First

With some firms already out selling next year's product, the selling season will be in full swing this year by June 1, as contrasted with a general hold-off in 1929 until June 15.

Last year, by agreement, implied if not actual, the companies withheld action upon new season's product until June 15, to give every firm opportunity to start from scratch. This year, however, the situation is changed greatly with several firms already having the jump through early sale of product.

United Artists last week started on the Coast the first of a series of regional meetings.

Universal Set for May 1

Universal begins its selling campaign on next season's product on May 1 with the close of the annual sales convention at the Savoy-Plaza, New York, starting on April 25 and continuing five days. It will be the company's first international get-together, for delegates will be present from Australia, South America, Germany and England.

The Universal convention will be followed by the Paramount meeting May 15 at Atlantic City; RKO's convention at Los Angeles, tentatively set for May 17; Pathe's Atlantic City meeting May 21, which is the first of three planned by that company; Fox's Los Angeles convention, May 26, and Warners' and First National's meetings May 27 at Atlantic City.

M-G-M, Tiffany, Columbia and Sono Art-World Wide have not yet set dates for their annual gatherings.

W. & V. Circuit Building $1,000,000 Reading House

Reading, Pa.—A new theatre to cost approximately $1,000,000 and to have a seating capacity of about 4,000 is to be erected at once in this city by the Wilmer & Vincent Circuit, according to formal announcement issued by the company. A site with a frontage of 123 feet on Penn Street has been acquired. Work of razing the properties will begin at once and construction of the new theatre is expected to be completed by next Thanksgiving Day.

Warners' Memorial

New Hollywood theatre to be opened Tuesday at 51st St. and Broadway by the Warners is a memorial to Sam Warner. The house has been under construction for more than a year. Its opening will give Warners five Broadway theatres, the others being the Warner, Strand, Winter Garden and Beacon. The Warner brothers credit Sam Warner with foreseeing the potentialities of sound pictures. He died upon the eve of seeing his dream realized.

Big-Hearted

Believe it or not, Sam Goldwyn is in the "talkies."

In a recent Metrotone newsreel he appears with Eddie Cantor in a little skit in which Eddie touts some lyrics he's written. Sam is so impressed that he tells Eddie he's worth $5,000 a week more than he's getting. Now all that Eddie, who is starring in the Ziegfeld-Goldwyn production of "Whoopee," has to do is to collect it.

Christie Confers With Hammons On Merger Deal

Merging of Educational and Christie is being discussed at conferences in New York between Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational, and Charles Christie. No definite arrangements have as yet been determined upon, but one report is that if the deal is consummated Halsey, Stuart & Co., the Fox bankers, will finance the proposition. This report Thursday was characterized as "premature" by Charles Christie.

Christie formerly released its product through Educational, but three years ago made a releasing alliance with Paramount which is expiring this season.

Name Cast for Norma's "Flame of the Flesh"

Hollywood—Complete cast has already been signed for Norma Talmadge's next talker for United Artists, "Flame of the Flesh." The players include Conrad Nagel, William Farnum, Ullrich Haupt, Hobart Bosworth, E. Alyn Warren, Allison Skipworth, Edgar Norton, Edwin Maxwell, Tom Ricketts, Peter Cawthorne, Blanch Friderici, Bertram Marburgh, Cissy Fitzgerald and Maude Truex.

Gillmore To Be Renamed As President of Equity

Frank Gillmore is slated for re-election to presidency of Actors' Equity Ass'n. at the annual election slated May 5. He was nominated for the post by the nomination committee, which dropped Ethel Barrymore from its slate, as reprisal for her action in opposing Equity's strike campaign at the film studios. She had been vice-president of the association since the theatre strike of 1919.

Warners Sales Drive On

Warners report that 26,511 play dates have been obtained for May—Sam E. Morris Month. Minneapolis is leading the field.

Mudslinging Out as Fox Executives Buckle Down to Work Under New Boss

To Condemn Disc Talker If Censorable

Portland—In the event that deletions are required in films with talking sequences on discs, the pictures will be condemned by the censor board, which deems such deletions impractical. Deletions will be ordered in the case of sound-on-film sequences considered objectionable.

Code of Ethics for talkers adopted by the Hays association is a "decided step forward" and virtually will eliminate objectionable matter from pictures, the board decided at a recent meeting.

Mayer, Thalberg Remain Despite Any Fox Merger

Hollywood—Regardless of the final utcome in readjustment of Fox, Louis B. Mayer and Irving Thalberg will remain. There is no chance that the pair are leaving the organization or that they will form their own company, even if M-G-M is combined with Fox.

Louis B. Mayer

Announcement of the new directors of the Fox companies, particularly the film unit was received with keen interest at the udio yesterday.

At various times it has een reported that the everal trips East made y Mayer were in conection with the future atus of Thalberg and imself. In this conection, it is stated that ontrary to general beef, contracts of the air have not been reewed.

Irving Thalberg

Lindler Leaves Tiffany

Al Selig, advertising and publicity direcr of Tiffany, now is handling the exoitation department in addition to his her duties. Walter Lindler, who has been ndling the exploitation work, has severed s connection with the company.

Loew's Plans Astoria House

Loew's is planning a 3,500-seat house at storia, L. I., to be completed about hanksgiving Day. It will be located at teinway Ave., between 28th St. and 38th ve., and be the largest Long Island house ith the exception of Loew's Valencia at maica.

Harley Clarke Yearned For a Stage Career

One of the stories told here concerning Harley Clarke, William Fox's successor as head of the Fox enterprises, purports to reveal at least one ambition of the capitalist's that was never realized. Clarke, according to the story, cherished a youthful ambition to go on the stage, and earnestly tried out for parts in undergraduate dramatics at Ann Arbor, while a student there. Despite the fact that little success attended his efforts, the ambition persisted long after he left school, while his love of the theatre never departed. It is the presence of this sentiment, some say, that influenced Mr. Clarke to encourage and back the Chicago Civic Theatre, which brought Fritz Lieber here during the winter for a gratifying season of Shakespearean repertoire.

As a guarantor of this venture, Mr. Clarke aligns himself with such champions of culture as Samuel Insull, head of the Chicago Civic Opera Company, and Louis Eckstein, guarantor of the Ravinia Opera Company, whose crusades in the name of art are paid off annually with a personal check in six figures.

Another Straight Vaude House Adding Pictures

Chicago—Another two-a-day vaudeville house is discontinuing its policy in favor of combination shows, with R-K-O's New Palace to switch to sound films and vaudeville within two weeks.

Fox to Bid Again?

Fox may renew efforts to secure control of Famous Players Canadian, as a result of the Paramount offer for the Canadian company, MOTION PICTURE NEWS has been informed. A. C. Blumenthal, it is understood, may be sent to Toronto to acquaint directors with the details of the Fox offer, which would mean $5,000,000 more to stockholders than the Paramount offer.

Schedule of 52 Pictures and Theatre Expansion Getting Officials' Attention

Declining to be drawn into any "backyard arguments," Fox executives this week set about to make up for time lost by the company in the financial muddle which nearly forced it into receivership, and resulted in retirement from its affairs of William Fox.

With Harley L. Clarke in the president's chair, and Winfield R. Sheehan as operating head, the firm is completing plans for its production schedule of 52 pictures, the continuation of theatre expansion, opening of its new laboratory in New York, especially equipped for Grandeur and Fox color, and the outline of sales plans for the year. The company's personnel will not be disturbed.

New directors of Fox Film include Harley L. Clarke; Matthew C. Brush, president of the American International Corp.; Oscar L. Gubelman, described as a capitalist; Charles W. Higley, president of the Hanover Fire Insurance Co.; Charles B. Stuart of Halsey, Stuart; Winfield Sheehan, Saul Rogers and William Fox.

Directors of Fox Theatres are: Harley L. Clarke, Samuel W. Fordyce, listed as an attorney of St. Louis; Arthur F. Lafrentz, president of the American Surety Co.; Robert C. Winmill, of Gude, Winmill and Co., a New York brokerage firm; Walter R. Herrick of Herrick, Berg and Co., likewise a stock exchange member; Winfield Sheehan, Saul Rogers, Charles B. Stuart and William Fox. The boards bring many names into the business hitherto unknown. While eight directors of Fox Film have been named, amendments to the by-laws provide for twelve, the remaining four to be named next week.

Fox Theatres is selling its 660,900 shares of Loew stock to Fox Film for $27,000,000 in cash and 1,600,000 shares of Film "A". The "A" stock is being sold to General Theatres Equipment Corp., which holds voting control of the Fox companies, for $48,000,000 thus giving Fox Theatres a total of $75,000,000 to pay off debts. In the meantime, Fox Film has issued one year six per cent obligations totaling $55,000,000 which will take care of that corporation's indebtedness. That makes a grand total of $130,000,000 of which $100,000,000 will go toward clearance of obligations, and the remainder for operation.

Early in the week stockholders had received a letter from William Fox upbraiding Halsey, Stuart, Electrical Products and Sheehan. The letter will go unanswered.

Courtlandt Smith, general manager of Movietone activities, deposed by William Fox, has returned to the company, but no duties have been assigned him as yet. He was one of the "cabinet" members who signed the round robin calling upon Fox to carry out the original trusteeship agreement.

Puzzler Seen in Pathe Option to Buy 49% of Du Pont-Pathe—Did Own 49%

Kennedy Announcement Creates Speculation Over 49% Pathe Previously Had

Close observers of filmdom's financial affairs are puzzled about the DuPont-Pathe situation.

The word "purchase" in a press notice issued by Doremus & Co., publicity house, stating that "J. P. Kennedy, chairman of the Board of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces that the company has the option to purchase 49% of the stock of DuPont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Company for a consideration of $500,000" is the puzzler.

The press notice is said to be so worded that it implies that the option is of recent origin. In reality, the option is reported to have existed for some time, in the form of various options for units of the 49% which now are believed to have been consolidated into one option.

Always Held Interest

When the DuPont-Pathe organization was perfected Pathe Exchange, Inc., obtained 49% of the stock, presumed at that time to be a tie-in to insure Pathe's use of DuPont raw stock. Later, when Pathe sought financing through an issue of debentures, it was expressly provided that security for the debentures should be limited to new negatives, then in production, or to be produced. Pathe's laboratory, real estate and its 49% of the DuPont-Pathe company were specifically excluded as collateral for the debentures.

Later, when Pathe needed additional funds for their current requirements it is claimed that raw stock purchased from DuPont-Pathe was paid for by the transfer by Pathe to DuPont-Pathe of portions of its 49% of the DuPont-Pathe stock, but with an agreement between the two organizations that Pathe Exchange, Inc., would have the right, within a year in each instance, to repurchase the stock at $100 a share.

These various individual options, on units of the 49%, are said to have been consolidated recently into one option for the entire amount, and this option is believed to expire in June of this year.

Was "Re" Left Out?

Hence, observers who read the Doremus notice are speculating as to whether the phrase "option to purchase" in the press notice refers to the consolidated option whereby Pathe can redeem the 49% of DuPont-Pathe stock previously transferred to the film concern as security or payment for raw stock, or to still another 49% which would give Pathe Exchange, Inc., control of DuPont-Pathe. The latter interpretation is regarded as very unlikely, and so the puzzlers are inclined to believe that there was a typographical error in writing the word "purchase" instead of "repurchase," since the press yarn makes no mention of the 49% obtained by Pathe when the film concern was first organized.

Silents On Wane in 1930-1931

Hollywood—Despite strong protest by theatre owners operating unwired houses, producers almost without exception are reported making no provision for wholesale production of silent pictures—features or shorts—on 1930-31 charts. This was revealed through a secret checkup made at all studios during the week by MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Lack of silent product, which may be expected to pinch in early winter, is seen here as further weakening the position of small unwired houses operated by exhibitors who are held to be rapidly losing their fight to remain in business as silent showmen.

"Journey's End" Rides Roughshod Over Lent, Rain

"Journey's End," Tiffany's picturization of the stage play, is kicking over the traces and knocking a few bugaboos of show business for a loop in its spectacular run at the Gaiety, New York. Inclement weather and Holy Week failed to interfere with the picture's draw, and standout business was the result all week. Holy Thursday and a drizzling rain failed to prevent S.R.O.

In its first five days at the 800-seat Gaiety, the picture grabbed $17,500 and this week, while other Broadway houses were taking it on the chin, was running ahead of the record. Allowing for Good Friday, it was estimated the picture would cop $21,000 on the week.

United Artists Confab

San Francisco—Details of United Artists' line-up of eighteen features for next season were outlined at a regional sales convention here, attended by Al Lichtman, John W. Considine, Jr., Bruce Gallup, other major executives and district representatives from eleven western states. Another speaker was Emil Jensen of Inspiration Pictures.

Enforcement of Ethics Code on Coast is Mapped

Hollywood—Believing the Code of Ethics for talkers represents a great forward step in the industry's efforts to keep the screen free of objectionable matter, the Academy of M. P. Arts and Sciences is taking steps to help make the code effective. Meetings of various branches of the Academy affected by the code are to be held to map ways and means to support the code.

Another Shakeup In Northwest by R-K-O is Feared

Minneapolis—Another shakeup in the Radio-Keith-Orpheum forces is reported in prospect here following a visit to the Twin Cities of Joseph Plunkett, general manager of the chain, his assistant, Nate Blumberg, and Jack Hess. The trio left here for the Coast. The company is closing the Seventh St., here, and the President, St. Paul, where two weeks' closing notices already have been posted.

Harvard Prof. Fails To Win Censor Law Change

Boston—Efforts to effect changes in the state censorship laws, made by Prof. Zechariah Chafee, Jr., of the Harvard law school, have been turned down by the committee on cities of the Massachusetts legislature.

Prof. Chafee proposed that a license should not be taken away from a theatre until after a public hearing and reasons stated for banning a production by the city censorship officials. It further provided that suspension of a license would last only for the duration of the particular performance for which action was taken.

Fire Destroys Indiana Theatres; Loss $50,000

Bluffton, Ind.—The Grand Theatre building here was destroyed with a loss estimated at $50,000. The fire apparently started in the balcony and spread rapidly before discovery. Only the four walls remain standing. George Mason, a watchman, escaped injury when he was notified by a small boy who saw smoke issuing from a door. The building was owned by Mike Hanley of Fort Wayne and was leased by Charles Mallers, who also operates theatres at Fort Wayne, Portland, Ind., and Lima, O. Included in the loss was a new $10,000 talking picture machine equipment on which no insurance yet had been taken out.

Warners and General Talking, Both Foes of W. E. May Be Allies in Fight

Santell Divorced

Los Angeles—Al Santell, director, has been divorced by Mrs. Ruth Santell, who charged cruelty and incompatibility and asserted that she and her husband have separated and been reconciled 23 times. They were married five years ago. The court approved a settlement whereby the director will pay her $12,500 and alimony of $500 a month.

All Type Houses In Minneapolis' Merry "Battle"

Minneapolis—Something of a real "battle" is being waged here between first runs and between first runs and subsequent runs. The going has been plenty rocky and Radio-Keith-Orpheum's Seventh St. is folding. The Pantages, which has been playing musical stock, has gone back to combination shows with pictures billed over the vaudeville.

Publix Saturday is reopening the New Palace, erstwhile downtown vaudeville and stock house running a 13-hour grind at 20 cents top. Gateway exhibitors nearby and the suburbans are plenty peeved over this step and threaten retaliation.

Bancroft Film Postponed Till Star Regains Voice

Hollywood—Due to illness which has caused George Bancroft to lose his voice, production of "The Cave Man," has been suspended by Paramount until the middle of May. If Bancroft is unable to work at that time, another player will be substituted in the starring role. The cast of the picture has been carried for two weeks on one-half salary, in the hope the star would regain his voice, but the supporting players now have been dismissed pending the new starting date.

Urban Leaving for Coast

Joseph Urban, designer, architect and artist, leaves New York within two weeks for Hollywood to take up work at the Fox studios. His duties will be in connection with introduction of Fox nature color, a new process developed by the Eastman Kodak laboratories. Urban was host early this week at a reception at his New York studio.

Franklin Honored

Ottawa—J. M. Franklin, manager of Keith's, has been elected a director of the Rotary Club. He holds many offices in local organizations.

Move Seen Step in Warners' Efforts To Make Firm Self-Contained

Continuing their efforts to become a self-contained company from every angle, Warners are negotiating for an interest in General Talking Pictures, which manufactures and distributes De Forest Phonofilm equipment.

This step follows acquisition of a "substantial" interest in the Kuchenmeister-Tobis-Klangfilm group in Europe, which gives Warners an interest in patents and licenses under patents of the group throughout the world, with the exception of the United States, Canada and Newfoundland.

General Talking has pending a test suit on its patents, which it charges Western Electric is infringing. This case is slated for trial at Wilmington, Del., May 19. As Warners have a case pending against Western Electric, the proposed alliance of the two is regarded as particularly significant.

The General hookup is regarded as the last step necessary in the move to make the company self-contained, as it will make available sound-on-film recording and reproducing equipment.

No Significance in Tobis-Warner Deal Seen by W.E.

There is nothing in acquisition by Warners of the right to use Tobis patents, nor in any of the developments of the litigation between German interests and Western Electric in Europe, "to cause Western Electric to modify its policy of developing its business here and abroad," the company states.

No significance is attached by Western Electric to the Warner-Tobis deal. Thorough investigation of the patent interests involved had been made and Western Electric had no interest in purchase of the patents, because it felt its apparatus does not infringe the Tobis patents, says W. E.

Although Tobis has suits pending in seven European countries, Western Electric is operating in all these countries save Germany. Even there, Tobis has not won any action, it is stated.

German Dye Trust to Quit Film Making Activities

Berlin—Uncertain condition of the German industry has led the I. G. Farben, German chemical and dye trust, to abandon picture production. Its subsidiary, the Terra Film Co., which distributes United Artists films here, will be liquidated, it is stated. Terra's last film was the talker, "Love in the Ring," featuring Max Schmeling, Germany's heavyweight hope.

Datig Gets Sick Leave

Hollywood—Fred Datig, casting director at Paramount for the last four years, has been given an unlimited leave of absence on account of ill health.

"Bool" Forgets

Dallas, Tex.—Bull Montana, who "forsook" acting for wrestling, was disqualified in a match here for a lapse of memory. After getting a strangle-hold on his opponent's neck, Bull thought it was a prize fight and started swinging fists. When they pried them apart Bull's face needed considerable surgical make-up.

42 Features on Warner Schedule For New Season

Forty-two features and the largest line-up of short subjects in the history of the company—involving $20,000,000—will make up the Warner schedule for the coming year, according to J. L. Warner. Of this sum, $17,500,000 will be spent on feature pictures and $2,500,000 on shorts.

The Warner stars under contract for next year's productions are: John Barrymore, George Arliss, Al Jolson, Winnie Lightner, Joe E. Brown, Frank Fay, Alice Gentle, Marian Nixon, H. B. Warner, Vivienne Segal, Grant Withers, Elsie Ferguson, Lila Lee, Lotti Loder, Noah Beery, Conrad Nagel, Walter Pidgeon, Edna Murphy and Tully Marshall. Recent recruits from the Broadway stage who have been signed to Warner contracts include Irene Delroy, Jack Whiting, Claudia Dell and Olsen and Johnson.

Other stars signed to appear in pictures on the program, are Constance Bennett, Joan Bennett, Eric von Stroheim, Sue Carol, Louise Fazenda, Marion Byron, Perry Askam, Chester Morris, Lowell Sherman, Belle Bennett, William Courtenay, Hobert Bosworth, Barbara Kent, Beryl Mercer, Lois Moran, Charles King, Ernest Torrence, June Collyer, James Hall, Evelyn Knapp, John Halliday and Dorothy Burgess.

De Forest at N.W. Meet

Minneapolis—Dr. Lee DeForest, inventor of Phonofilm, will be one of the principal speakers at the annual convention here Tuesday and Wednesday of the Northwest exhibitor unit. President W. A. Steffes is slated to outline the recent hook-up with Sentry Safety Control made by Allied States Ass'n.

Lewis Ayres Cast

Hollywood—Lewis Ayres, who appeared in "All Quiet on the Western Front," has been chosen by Universal to play the lead in "Saint Johnson," an outdoor production.

First Talker Cut Voted by Virginia Censor Board

Richmond, Va.—Three scenes of "The Golden Calf" (Fox) have been ordered expurged by the Virginia censors. The notation as to the three eliminations is worded as follows:

"Reel VI—In series of scenes illustrating verses sung by Newt, where couple is seated on sofa, eliminate from time where man reaches to turn off light to the end of the tableau. This includes showing couple lying on sofa in indecent posture."

The deletions are the first made since the projection room of the State Division of Motion Picture Censorship was equipped with sound devices last month.

"The Golden Calf" was one of 67 films comprising 153 reels examined by the Virginia censors within two weeks ending April 5, according to the bi-weekly bulletin. The Fox picture is an audible one. The seal of approval was placed upon 66 films without notations as to any objectionable features.

Australian Merger to Aid British Talkers

London—Merging of Union Theatres and Hoyt's Theatres, dominant Australian chains, will not prejudice future of British films in the Antipodes, Stuart F. Doyle, operating head of the combined chain, has advised Arthur Bent, managing director of British Instructional Pictures. He sees a big opportunty for British talkers in Australia, stating his company is setting the stage for them.

Omaha Meeting Wednesday

Omaha—Semi-annual convention of the Nebraska and western Iowa is slated for April 23 and 24. The annual golf tournament, sponsored by the Omaha Film Board of Trade, will be held at Lakewood club April 22 in conjunction with the meeting.

Gets Bercovici Story

Hollywood — Universal has purchased screen rights to Conrad Bercovici's "Gypsy Love Song," and figure it as a starring production for John Boles. Wells Root is writing the adaptation.

Foiled!

Somerville, Mass.—Because the city line passes through Locatelli's Ball Square Theatre, patrons buy their tickets in this town and are ushered to their seats in the adjoining city of Medford to see the pictures. Owing to this unique situation the patrons of the theatre had a laugh on the mayor of Somerville recently. He banned a certain picture, but because the screen is located in Medford the residents of this town were not robbed of their entertainment.

See?

The threatened application of television to all telephones, thus enabling the user to see the face of the person talking, is already creating a state of panic among those who prefer to be seen and not heard over the 'phone. Already an advertisement has appeared offering "The new television mask," which, it would seem, leaves a chance for an alibi to those who want to be "out" when they're really in. It seems that the television 'phone also shows "the scene" surrounding the speaker and how can a man tell his wife that he is "busy at the office" when, in reality, he is sitting in at a poker game or what have you?

M-G-M Executives Run Studio by Remote Control

Hollywood—Through construction of a newly devised system, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer executives can now listen in on any rehearsals of current pictures being made on any sound stage in the studio; without the necessity of visiting the particular set. The apparatus is set up in a room adjoining the producing executives offices. Connections similar to telephone trunk lines are wired to the microphone system of every sound stage. If any producer desires to listen to any rehearsal on a specific picture, he "tunes in" without having to travel to the particular stage. Through a microphone in the "listening room" a producer is able to talk through the stage loud speaker, giving the director suggestions on the particular dialogue or scene which he has just heard.

By installation of the new apparatus, it is expected that much valuable time of M-G-M's producing executives will be saved through elimination of visiting sets when particularly important scenes are being rehearsed or shot. Construction of the remote control was under direction of Douglas Shearer, sound engineer of M-G-M Studios.

Major Fined for Operating Home Projector in Office

Baltimore—Charged with operating a motion picture projector without a license, Major William D. Tipton, commander of the Maryland National Guard Air Service, was fined $5 and costs by a magistrate. The complaint was made by William H. Miller, member of the State Board of Examiners of Motion Picture Operators. A home motion picture outfit had been used at a private showing given at the offices of the Curtiss-Wright Company.

Brecher Gets Playhouse

Leo Brecher, who operates the Plaza on East 58th St., and the Olympia on Broadway and 107th St., as well as several others in New York, has acquired the Little Carnegie Playhouse at 146 West 57th St. He will continue its "art" policy.

Film Advertising Panned by Agency In Page Spread

Chicago—Motion pictures are included in a vicious attack on "quackery in advertising" in a full page advertisement inserted in the Chicago "Tribune" by the Glen Buck Co., an advertising agency of this city.

The ad is captioned, "American advertising must mend its ethics or lose public confidence," and the reference to film advertising follows:

"Raw moving pictures furiously flaunted as 'absolutely the greatest and grandest moral triumph of the age'—"

Why the agency spent its money to vent its spleen in this manner is a matter for conjecture. Among other articles attacked are cigarettes, soaps, foods, toothpastes, cosmetics, automobiles. The ad is not only loaded for bear, but with a flock of adjectives that scorch and burn.

Two Amusement Cos. Organized in Virginia

Richmond, Va.—Floyd Theatres, Inc., of Floyd, Va., has just been chartered with authorized maximum capital stock of $25,000. J. E. Proffit is president and the directors are B. G. Howard, Jr., Katherine P. Morgan, M. G. Conduff, Kyle M. Weeks and J. E. Proffit.

Franklin, Va.—Franklin Theatres, Inc., of Franklin, has been chartered with authorized maximum capital stock of $25,000 to engage in the theatrical and moving picture business. The incorporators are H. C. Everhart, Suffolk, president; D. G. Grubbs, Virginia Beach, secretary; H. C. Everhart, treasurer, and Al Young, Franklin, vice-president.

Screen Service Expands

National Screen Service has established an exchange in Seattle owing to its increasing trailer business. Other branches are in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles and London. It now has 7,000 clients, the company reports.

Fire Destroys Theatre

Middleton, N. S.—The Armour was practically destroyed by fire recently, a fireman being crushed when a wall toppled. The loss is estimated at $75,000.

Crying for Talkers

Castile, N. Y.—This little village fired a shot likely to be heard around the film world when its Community Club and American Legion Post recognized talking films as the natural right of any community and launched a movement to bring them here.

The two organizations called a public mass meeting to seek some way to entice an exhibitor to open here with audio films in order "to give Castile the same recreational advantages as bigger places."

Big Electrics Priming for Fight to Capture Bulk of Non-Theatrical Sales

N. V. A. Week

The M. P. T. O. A. is participating in the National Vaudeville Week drive for $1,000,000 for the N. V. A.'s sanitorium at Saranac Lake, N. Y. Screen performers are now eligible to become guests of the institution. The week starts April 27 and M. P. T. O. A. members will hold benefit performances that evening.

Columbia Making 20 Features, 104 Shorts for '30-31

Twenty features and 104 shorts will comprise the 1930-31 output of Columbia Pictures. The aggregate production cost will exceed $10,000,000, the company claims.

On the list of new pictures are "The Criminal Code," the play by Martin Flavin; Joe Cook in "Rain or Shine," by James Gleason, Milton Ager and Jack Yellen, to be directed by Frank Capra; "Madonna of the Streets," by W. B. Maxwell and starring Evelyn Brent; "Bless You, Sister" by R. R. Riskin and John Meehan; "Sure Fire" by Ralph K. Murphy; "Lover Come Back" by Helen Topping Miller. Bert Lytell, star of the stage version, will be starred in "Brothers." Another picture on the list is "Ballyhoo" by Kate Horton.

Directors who will make the new product are:

Frank Capra, Patterson McNutt, Edward Sloman, Ira Hards, A. H. Van Buren, Karl Brown, James Flood, Bert Glennon, E. Mason Hopper, Louis King, Al Ray and Matt Moore. The last named is to make his directorial debut on one of the company's films. Players who will star and be featured include Jack Holt, Ralph Graves, Evelyn Brent, Barbara Stanwyck, Dorothy Revier, Joe Cook, William Collier, Jr., Margaret Livingston, Johnnie Walker, Sally O'Neil, Molly O'Day, Sam Hardy, Aileen Pringle, Ian Keith, Joan Peers, George Sidney, Charlie Murray, Lowell Sherman, Marie Prevost and Matt Moore.

Joe Brandt Abroad on Color, Wide Film Deals

Consideration of a color and wide-film process, foreign quotas and production abroad of foreign versions is the purpose of a trip to Europe of Joe Brandt, Columbia president. He now is in London, where he is to take up an option on screen rights to "The Lion and the Lamb," E. Phillips Oppenheim novel. Columbia is considering the production of foreign language films in Germany, France and Spain.

Second RCA Photophone Operator Class Opening

With 900 projectionists enrolled, the second period in the course of instruction in operation of reproducing equipment gets under way Monday in the classroom of the installation and service department of RCA Photophone, New York. The company is developing plans to make the courses available to every projectionist in the country. Two hundred and fifty projectionists attended the initial course.

Headaches Seen for Theatre Owners When Non-Theat. Field Wires

Non-theatrical accounts, more than 99 per cent of which are without sound equipment of any type, offer a fertile spot for cultivation by the big electrics, who are known to be keeping an eagle eye peeled for the beginning of what is expected will result in a stiff tilt for supremacy in merchandising equipment in that field. It is held to be the next logical market for sound equipment.

Non-theatricals have been overlooked by the equipment manufacturers in their rush to nab theatrical accounts, and now that the cream in the latter field has been skimmed, RCA, Western Electric and General Talking Pictures are expected to make strong bids for installations in churches, Y. M. C. A.'s, clubs and lodges. Just how many headaches they will cause exhibitors by tapping regular patronage is something many showmen are worried over.

The wholesale raid on non-theatricals is delayed because of the dearth of suitable product.

In order to rush development, the big electrics are expected to produce non-theatrical stuff of their own—short subjects at least—until the day when the theatrical branch of the industry has sufficient sound product on hand adaptable to non-theatricals.

RCA and Western Electric are understood to be revamping the machines—and prices—originally intended for the non-theatrical field. The originals are reported to be far too heavy and expensive, costing several thousands of dollars to purchase, and necessitating at least two men to set up and handle.

Consolidated Reports 17% Increase for Quarter

Consolidated Film Industries, Inc., of New York and Hollywood, report for the first quarter of 1930 shows net earnings, after Federal taxes and depreciation, of $667,158.32, compared with $576,853.14 in the first quarter of 1929—a gain of 17 per cent.

Talkers Aid Stage

Chapel Hill, N. C.—Talkers are an aid to the legitimate stage, in the opinion of Prof. Frederick H. Koch, director of the Carolina Play-Makers, University of North Carolina, dramatic group.

"The spoken drama has nothing to fear from the talkies, because they actually supplement and stimulate each other," he said. "The great movie-going public, since the advent of the talkies, has become interested as never before in the voice of the player and is, consequently, eager to see the living actor himself on the stage."

And Still at It

Hollywood—How old will Charles Chaplin be by the time "City Lights" is finished? is a question going the rounds. The comedian, who started the film a couple of years ago, passed his ? ? ? birthday Wednesday working on the picture. Chaplin is steadfast in his intention to stick to silent films.

New $2,950 W. E. Reproducer to Be Ready in August

Deliveries are to start Aug. 1 on the new Type 3-A Western Electric reproducer for houses up to 1,000 seats. The prices start from $2,950 for the sound-on-film equipment, plus the usual accessory charges. The service charge on this equipment will be $25 a week for the first 26 weeks, $20 for the second 26 weeks and $15 per week for the remaining nine years of the contract.

"The Oregon Trail" to Be Fox Biggest Next Season

Hollywood—Fox intends to make "The Oregon Trail" the big production of next year's program. According to reports, the picture is budgeted to cost $1,300,000, and will be shot both on Grandeur and regulation film. Raoul Walsh, who will direct, will spend six months in actual production, and has already lined up locations in Utah, New Mexico, Wyoming, Nevada and California.

Permanent camps for staff, cast and extras will be constructed in advance at each location for purpose of housing the large number of people that will be used in each spot.

Essem Makes Installation Of New Lab Invention

Initial installation of the new combined system for chemical drying and processing films in one operation has been made at Craft Film, Flushing, by Essem Laboratory, headed by Tom Moore. He claims mechanical changes in film-drying cabinets now in use can be made with a processing unit installed, thereby reducing the two operations to one. This offers a solution, states Moore, for removal of troubles common to laboratory work during humid weather.

Moore plans further tests before offering the new invention for general commercial use.

Get $1,700 from Theatre

Seattle—Fox West Coast's local Coliseum was robbed of $1,700 after Dave Himelhoch, manager, had been held a captive for practically three hours.

Some Inside Dope On Pictures and Picture People

They Say That—

Paragraph Pickups from the Columns of Contemporaries

IN THESE days and times, when the luminaries of the legitimate theatre are flocking wholesale to Hollywood and hiring personal press agents to keep the world informed of their progress both in and out of the studios, it is amusing to recall that not so very long ago it was regarded in the theatrical world as something of a disgrace, social, moral and professional, when an actor of repute deserted the stage for the pictures, even if the defection were temporary.—*N. Some of these gentlemen who call themselves "technical directors" hand one something of a giggle. Chameleon-like, they change the details of their paste to suit whatever job may be going. When a Russian military picture is to be made, hundreds of ex-generals of the Czar's personal guard besiege the studio gates, willing to give the director the benefit of their knowledge. When the forthcoming production is a story of India, the same people suddenly remember that they used to be Rajahs, or something else Hindu.

There is one appealing man of middle-age whom I met three years ago, when he was technical director of an Austrian picture. At that time he told me a long and pathetic story about how he had been one of the faithful retainers of the Emperor Franz Josef's palace, and how sad it was for him to see one of the Emperor's grand-nephews, the Archduke Leopold, playing a film "bit" for ten dollars a day, as he then was. The cinema's experiments with satire have not always been among its happiest efforts, but with the arrival of sound it is beginning to resume, even though it is still in a feeble and half-hearted way, some of the pioneering begun in the silent era.

The screen is, in a minor way, acquiring a sense of humor, and it is beginning to spoof itself to the extent that it is now good-naturedly "kidding" some of the stereotyped canons of its own early effusions.

But even now, though this certainly must be considered a great stride forward, it seldom is able to make up its mind whether it really wants to be satirical or whether it wants to be romance, romantic melodrama or something else again. 'Tis a Fact

Get a load of this, from Mark Hellinger's column in the N. Y. Daily Mirror:

"Jack P——. A motion picture executive on the coast. Thick glasses, big lips and a heavy frown, he is like so many others who have risen to prominence in that strange business called the motion picture industry.

"He would have been a good doctor. Or a good lawyer. Or a fine cloak and suit merchant. He is, in other words, the type of man who would have been a success in practically any line of endeavor. For he has a great sense of money values and plenty of bluff to back it up.

"Now that he is a picture magnate, however, you can tell him nothing. He knows little about anything—but like most men who have accumulated wealth, he will use big words and discuss anything with a great deal of wind.

"He was seated in his office one afternoon when the scenario editor stepped in. The script man talked with a great deal of enthusiasm about a play that he held in his hands.

"'This is a great piece of work,' said the scenario editor. 'Reminds me a great deal of O. Henry.'

"Jack P—— shook his head.

"'If that's the case,' he asserted, 'we can't use it. I had that O'Henry fellow on this lot and shipped him back East. He can't write for pictures.'"

3 Days of "Lady To Love" Nets a Low of $3,150

Ottawa—Varied results were obtained by exhibitors here during the week when chief competition was the lure of the outdoors and religious missions in observance of Passion week. Two distinct flops were "Hit the Deck," which fell badly at the Regent in spite of a theatre front gaily decorated with marine flags, and "Lady to Love," which played last half at Keith's. On the other hand, "Chasing Rainbows" at the Centre was a big hit while "General Crack" at the Avalon and "Slightly Scarlet" at the Imperial were not far behind.

Weather: Fine and mild.

Opposition: "Chasing Rainbows," Centre; "General Crack," Avalon; "Slightly Scarlet," Imperial; "Such Men Are Dangerous," five RKO acts, B. F. Keiths; "Hit the Deck, Regent; "Their Own Desire," Avalon: "Lady to Love," B. F. Keith's.

Legal Tilt Drops "Capt. of Guards" To $2,640 (40%)

Baltimore—Attendance at the big houses fell off considerably during the week, with Loew's Parkway, a continued run theatre uptown being the only one to reach normal average.

The worst fall of the week hit the Auditorium where "Captain of the Guards," was shown after much publicity, due to the injunction suit filed against the company operating the playhouse, was spilled in the newspapers. The gross for the eight-day period was figured at $2,640, a rating of 40%.

Leases Two Theatres

Central City, Neb.—George Latenser of Omaha has leased the Donelson and Empress theatres here from the Brown Theatre Co. and will wire both houses. They have been dark for the past month.

Para., Columbia Films in Tie for Top Boston Spot

Boston—Grosses for the Lenten season have this year broken all former high records, with every theatre in town showing unusual mid-season business.

M-G-M's "Hallelujah" was here for the week as a road show at Symphony Hall, but like every other film shown at that stand, failed to make any real impression. No fault of the picture but movie fans will not go to Symphony Hall for their entertainment. Three sets of day-and-date showings were under way and all did good business with "Clancy in Wall Street" at Scollay and Fenway, Publix houses; "Under A Texas Moon" at Uptown and Olympia, and "Mamba" playing simultaneously at the Modern, Beacon and Egyptian, Netoco houses.

"Ladies of Leisure" at Keith Memorial and "Benson Murder Case," at the Met, packed 'em in better than any other film playing Boston while both Loew theatres were well above average. "Song O' My Heart," in its fourth week, still is playing to SRO crowds.

Weather: Fair and mild.

Scott Sings

Hollywood.—Opera singers may break into pictures, but now Fred Scott, Pathe contract player and singer, reverses conditions by going into opera. Scott will appear in "Salome," singing opposite Jeritza in three performances for the Los Angeles Grand Opera Association.

Eleven Stars!!

Hollywood—The mythical All-American football eleven for 1929 may be assembled by Warner Brothers to appear in "Maybe It's Love," a college picture soon to go into production. Whether or not Warners will be able to secure the services of the eleven All-Americans, the company has secured a great publicity break in the newspapers of the country. Sports writers particularly went for the yarn strong.

"Young Eagles" Flies Low with $1500 in 3 Days

Oklahoma City—Theatre owners consoled themselves in this town with the thought that Lent is near over, which usually results in a spurt at the old b.o.—and how they need it! The poorest showing for the week was made by Paramount's "Young Eagles," taking in only $1500 on a three-day run, chalking up—or down—a rating of 75%. The others all hit around par, "Honey" clicking ten points over the quota on a $5,000 take at the Criterion.

Arliss Doubles House Par with $17,500 Intake

Des Moines—Local reputation of George Arliss and the "Frivolities Revue," in which 100 amateurs were cast, held up a high rating on "Green Goddess." Although it was the decision that this was not the star's best picture, the box office registered by far the biggest business of the week, with the Paramount grossing 200%, or $17,250. "Hell's Harbor," at the Des Moines next door, took a back seat with 90%. "Such Men Are Dangerous" received much favorable comment and Warner Baxter proved an undoubted attraction, pulling the best

A Difference

"And to think," observed the interviewer to the star, "your sudden rise to the top has not made any difference."

"Oh, yes, it has," yessed the star, "I now am eccentric, where formerly I was impolite, refreshingly sarcastic and rude."

"Ingagi" Ballyhoo Gives Orpheum $27,500 Lead

Los Angeles—Fine outdoor weather and the near-end period of Lent may have had a lot to do with rotten performances at Hollywood and L. A. box office windows—and, again they may not have influenced a slump, but the fact remains a majority of the runs were kicked around plenty.

An unhealthy low at Grauman's Chinese pulled Tibbett's "Rogue Song" from that house at the end of the 13th week. The operetta collared only $12,500—rating a measly 78%. "Happy Days" was even worse at the Carthay Circle, where the Fox film was taken out when the intake dropped to $13,500 (76%) at the end of its seventh week. Other runs were nearly as bad.

"Ingagi" created a sensation with its $27,500 draw at the Orpheum, where heavy ballyhooing and novelty of the attraction drew the rubbernecks.

Usher Proves Hero

Woburn, Mass.—Fifteen persons were slightly burned or cut in a fire which swept the Strand, causing a loss of $50,000. Jerome Lynch, 17-year-old usher, proved the hero of the occasion. Discovering the curtain afire, he informed the 300 members of the audience, mostly children, that there was no danger, urged them to walk out quietly and aided Manager George Patten in helping them out.

A Week of Flops In K.C.—and How; $4,000 for "King"

Kansas City—It was a near toss-up as to which show did the best (or worst) business in K. C. during the past week. All houses were unanimous in reporting a poor week. The Midland with "Lady to Love," (M-G-M), and the Mainstreet with "Framed," (RKO), tied with $11,000 apiece, or about 75% of the normal take-in. The Royal reported 75% on "Vagabond King," playing at pop. prices for the first time here. Pantages took in $9,000 on Fox's "Men Without Women," and the Newman did about $7,000 on "Light of Western Stars," (Para.). Globe, in the second week of "Her Unborn Child," dropped to $7,000.

Exit for "Dick" When 'Gods' Drops In Red—$17,500

Chicago—Local climate [illegible] a healthy aid to b. o. receipts by sending passable April temperatures [illegible] dropping it back to a seasonal 50. The two-day sizzler likewise played havoc with acoustics in the Loop houses where sound echoed and re-echoed among the empty non-absorbent balcony seats. "Party Girl" (Tif.), ending a three week's run at the Woods with $14,300, was off more than $7,000 on its record for the week preceding, but might have been kept for a fourth week regardless, had not crowded bookings interfered. "Ladies of Leisure" (Col.), second consecutive "pink" to be housed by the Woods replaced it, and opened strong. "The Cuckoos" (R.K.O.) is set to go in when this sags. "Son of the Gods" (F.N.) was a disappointment at McVickers, putting a red $17,500 on the books for its second week, and was replaced a week ahead of schedule by "Hot for Paris" (Fox).

Weather: Fair and seasonal, very hot, then cloudy and seasonal.

Berlin—According to a statement published by the Film Kurier, there are 409 German cinemas, either wired or being wired for the reproduction of sound-films.

Jolson Profits

Hollywood.—"The Penny Arcade," Broadway play, which was purchased for the screen by Al Jolson, has been sold by the latter to Warner Brothers. Jolson first figured the vehicle great for himself to star in, but changed his mind and took a profit instead.

Ask the Coast Gang About It

Jack Pearl relates the yarn, via "N. Y. News," about two actors who met on Broadway. They were both out of work and complaining about the hard times.

"Say," asked one of the actors, "can you lend me a few dollars until this talking picture craze blows over?"

"What do you mean, blows over? Talking pictures are here to stay and things are pretty tough with me too. I was just going to ask you to lend me a few dollars when you beat me to it."

"Well, I guess there's nothing else left for me to do. I think I'll go to the poorhouse," said the first actor.

"You're too late," replied the other actor. "I tried that place last week. They're only taking names there now."

Engineers' Drive Nets $8,100

Fifteen companies have contributed a total of $8,100 thus far in the Society of Motion Picture Engineers' drive for sustaining members, according to J. I. Crabtree, president.

The companies are Eastman Kodak Company; RCA Photophone, Inc; Bell Telephone Laboratories, Inc.; Electrical Research Products, Inc.; General Theatres Equipment Company; Bell and Howell Company; Consolidated Film Industries; Du-Pont-Pathe Film Manufacturing Corporation; Technicolor Motion Picture Corporation; Agfa Ansco Corporation; Audio-Cinema, Inc.; Case Research Laboratories; Mole-Richardson, Inc.; National Carbon Company and Bausch & Lomb Optical Company.

Woodlaw Fights Union

Portland, Ore.—Taking of testimony in the injunction suit brought by the Woodlaw against the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Union, local No. 159, has been completed, and arguments of attorneys will be held next week.

The owner of the theatre, Col. Woodlaw, seeks a restraining order enjoining the union from picketing the Circle and Capitol, and otherwise holding them out to the public as unfair to organized labor.

"Red River" for Greta

Hollywood—M-G-M is preparing "Red River" as Greta Garbo's next talker following her current picture, "Romance." Fred Niblo is to direct upon finishing "Easy Going." "Red River" is an original by Fred De Gresac and was formerly known as "Red Dust."

Mechanic Prefers Brendel

Baltimore—Morris A. Mechanic, proprietor of the New, selected El Brendel as the star player to advertise in promoting "The Golden Calf," even though Jack Mulhall, Sue Carol and Marjorie White are in the cast. This was commented upon by Donald Kirkley, movie critic for the "Morning Sun," in which Kirkley complimented the New management for "its foresight in selecting Brendel as the big feature of the picture." Despite Lent, business for the week was phenomenal.

Rumania Bans Musicians

Washington—Following general unemployment of musicians in Rumania, which is claimed to have been caused by the advent of sound-film, the Minister of Labor has prohibited the activities of foreign musicians in the country, with the exception of those who come to work in Rumania, as members of an orchestra, of entirely foreign origin, according to advices received by the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce.

"Floradora Girl" New Title

"The Florodora Girl" has been selected as the final title of Marion Davies' newest Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, formerly known as "The Gay Nineties." This was directed by Harry Beaumont from an original story by Gene Markey and presents Miss Davies as a member of the famous "Florodora Sextette." The cast includes Lawrence Gray, Walter Catlett, Louis John Bartels, and Ilka Chase.

Discord

Hollywood — A large company contracted with a composer to write an original filmusical; deal being made whereby the composer was to receive a flat sum of $5,000.

Upon arriving in Hollywood, the composer soon discovered that the particular producing firm and others were paying other "name" composers of operettas $50,000 per picture, while he had agreed to ten per cent of that for his work. Composer is now said to be attempting a substantial ante on original price agreed to.

De Forest Territory Set

General Talking Pictures Corp. has created a new division, which includes Kansas, Missouri, and Illinois, south of Springfield. This territory will be in charge of Barney Rosenthal and Nat Steinberg, with headquarters in St. Louis. A staff of engineers will be maintained to make installations, service machines and take charge of spare parts for De Forest equipment.

"Vive la Talkers"

Paris—The talkers are aiding the stage, according to Mercure de France, which states:

"With talkies, the theatre will lose its popular, industrial and commercial value. Theatre promoters and the like will seek other fields in which to express their genius.

"The elite alone will stand by the theatre and to this end they will work with poets and playwrights who belong to the true profession. The theatre will finally be rid of that legion of nondescripts who today call themselves playwrights. The advantage thus reaped to the theatre proper by the introduction of talkies is nothing short of being tremendous."

• The Truth About Shorts •

FAIR PLAY WILL SOLVE THIS PROBLEM

WHAT does the future hold in store for the short subject field?

Nobody seems to know, yet the opinion becomes increasingly widespread that unless action of an emphatic nature is taken, the short feature will slip into the mire of obscurity.

Circuit heads and showmen at large are crying for good shorts. There aren't enough to make the rounds. Such is their contention. The producer argues that when his product clicks, no incentive to continue exists because the theatre won't pay a rental proportionate to the negative cost.

Affiliated theatres book short features supplied by their distributor ally often regardless of merit and keep time closed to product which should get a break on the basis of quality.

Today shorts are getting more playdates than ever before in their history. Yet so crowded is the market and so widely split is the total rental gross that profits are nowhere in sight.

Where and how is it destined to end?

One distributor whose average bookings formerly totalled 4,000 a picture finds himself cut down to 2,500. He blames his situation on the fact that producers, controlling theatres, are making and selling their own shorts. Yet this complaining distributor outstrips his theatre-owning competitors in grade of product.

The exhibitor, in the main, is not kicking in with enough money for short stuff, yet he is spending considerably more on total film rental than in the silent days.

A messy situation and a troublesome one to solve.

In real prices for quality pictures does the answer seem to be found. The producer of short subjects has the right to expect the exhibitor to pay a fair rental for good pictures. That is, if the exhibitor wants short subjects which, of course, he must have.

On such a basis, the meritorious short feature will get the break which it properly rates; the producer will be encouraged to improve his output because a profit will be assured him; the exhibitor, a run for his money and the public, the benefit of the entire set-up.

KANN

Exhibitors Muff Drawing Power of Shorts, M. P. NEWS Survey Reveals

Publix-B. & K. Place Importance On Them, but Can't Get Enough Good Ones

Chicago—The important chains in the Windy City are strong for shorts, but complain that the market is shy on sufficient quality to meet their needs.

The short subject is not only standard, but is an important part of all Publix-B. & K. programs locally, regardless of whether or not the house program includes a stage show.

Shorts are booked for this circuit on their name or novelty merits; all houses getting a chance at the best of the product booked. Surest to be popular, in the opinion of L. H. Dally of Publix-B. & K. are good comedies with a name draw. These are advertised in small boxes in the circuit's group newspaper advertising; with composition cut-outs for the fronts of the larger houses and lobby cards in the smaller ones, and with occasional trailers in all houses. No distinct advertising appropriation is made for shorts.

Shorts Tied to Feature

The feature picture inevitably decides how the shorts will be programmed, with no other system than common-sense showmanship as the arbiter. In the big houses where the stage show shares feature honors, musicals and novelty shorts play a less prominent part than they do in the showless smaller houses. Good comedies are always sought by the circuit and find a key place in any program regardless of the type of feature, though obviously they are more important programmers when the feature is a "heavy," and at such times follow the feature closely.

For the most part little preference is shown the short subject series over the individual subject short. In the larger houses the series are shown infrequently, a good individual name draw of any type being preferred. In the neighborhoods, the series, particularly the comedies, are more popular with the audiences, and consequently are regularly booked.

Publix-B. & K. is of the opinion that the short subject product, from the standpoint of merit, at least, is inadequate, and that more good ones are in demand than are available. Humor is preferred.

For Shorts, But Shy on Ads

The Essaness theatres here not only regard the short subject as essential to the complete program, but find it indispensible to a weak feature. When such a feature is on hand, declares R. L. Campbell, advertising manager, the strongest short subjects available are booked, advertised and plugged even in excess of the feature at times.

The circuit's advertising of shorts is limited to lobby cards and trailers. Limited newspaper advertising space does not permit inclusion of the shorts, but the circuit freely admits that if it were advisable to use larger newspaper space than it does, the shorts would then be included in this advertising as well.

Surfeiting Feared

Sensational advance in popularity of sound cartoons during the current season is bringing with it the danger of surfeiting the market with cartoon subjects, in the opinion of some observers.

Few shorts have enjoyed the vogue of the cartoon, which has advanced by leaps and bounds during the season now drawing to a close. As might be expected, plans of short producers for 1930-31 show that there will be what may prove an overabundance of cartoon subjects next year.

Shorts Killed in Cleveland; Double Features Cause

Cleveland—While most of the first-run downtown theatres of Cleveland give their short subjects a place in their advertising, it is stated by local short subject distributors that less than 50 per cent of the exhibitors of this city ever use any short subject posters or advertise their short subjects in any way.

The Loew theatres always include in their newspaper advertising the names of the short subjects in their first-run houses with their stars. The Stillman often carries the short subject stars in its marquee. And special lobby displays are used for short subjects in both the Allen and State.

RKO's Palace lists its complete program at the entrance of the lobby, giving the name of each short subject.

Most subsequent run exhibitors, however, book short subjects just as fillers without regard to type. Distributors of short subjects here state that the only differentiation made by the average exhibitors is to ask for a musical short if the feature is all-dialogue, or to ask for an all-dialogue short if the feature is musical.

Cartoons Favored

Unless cartoons have been unfavorably reviewed, any cartoon will satisfy if it has the desired footage.

W. Ward Marsh, photoplay editor of "The Plain Dealer," and Ed Jacobs, photoplay editor of "The News," give the first-run shorts weekly reviews.

Lack of interest in specific shorts by the majority of local theatre owners is attributed largely to the fact that a large proportion of them play double feature programs. These double feature programs consist of either a talking feature and a silent feature, or of two talking features. The practice was inaugurated to absorb the silent pictures which had been purchased before the rage for sound pictures, and it has been continued to bolster consistently poor business in the neighborhood sections. Double feature programs use only such short subjects as have the length required to complete a two hour show.

Denver First Runs Keep Type of Shorts a Secret From the Public

Denver—First run exhibitors here generally do not emphasize the short feature part of their programs in their general advertising. Although considerable expenditure is made for program advertising and particularly for newspaper advertising, the public usually is uninformed as to the nature of the shorts accompanying the feature, other than mere mention by name in one corner of the advertising space.

The Denver, first run Publix house, always mentions its short subjects by title and occasionally the stars in the short subject, particularly comedies. The Aladdin and America always mention the short part of the program by title and emphasize the comedies by naming the particular star or stars in the comedies. This also applies to the Rialto. The Tabor, although usually having a comedy on the program, makes no mention of the comedy either by title or any other reference, although its advertisement usually mentions a particular kind of newsreel which will be exhibited.

Comedies Preferred

A survey of the programs in the leading houses unquestionably discloses a preference for comedy shorts. Harry E. Huffman, managing director of the Aladdin and America, was quick to realize the appreciation of the public for snappy short features of a novelty nature and, therefore, one or more of this kind of short subject are usually found on his programs.

So far as Denver exhibitors are concerned the feature, weak or strong, seems to be the most important part of the program, especially from an advertising point of view. One attending the theatre where a weak feature is being shown will usually find, however, that the program is made up of fairly strong short features and a well balanced program. Short features seem to get most of their publicity from comments by local motion picture newspaper critics who never fail to particularly mention a good comedy, song novelty or newsreel.

Boosted by Suburbans

The smaller suburban exhibitors seem to more fully appreciate the importance of letting the public know they are about to exhibit a specially good comedy or other short feature. Although these smaller exhibitors cannot afford the extensive newspaper advertising which is practiced by the large first run houses, they are great believers in circularizing their respective neighborhoods with a flood of handbills. On these handbills one will very often see the short subject given the same importance as the feature picture. Among the reasons for this may be the desire of the suburban exhibitor to attract the entire family to his theatre, knowing the comedy and short will interest the children of his neighborhood.

Shorts Get 50-50 Break in Milwaukee: Lure in 20% of Des Moines Business

Given Prominent Program Spots And Advertised Heavily By Some

Milwaukee—Local exhibitors, for the most part, have come to look upon the short feature as an ideal means of rounding out their feature program. Some believe in advertising their shorts heavily while others just mention them in their advertising. However, practically all feel that there is a real need for them in the program today.

The official of one theatre organization operating a number of houses in Milwaukee stated that shorts were booked by them according to the feature picture being offered. A heavy feature was offset by a rip-roaring comedy in order to balance the program. He stated that the cartoon or novelty short was preferred to the news or sport short, because of the improvement in this type of picture offered during the past year.

Another exhibitor stated that he watched his short feature closely and thus was able to put across a weak feature picture, which with a poor short or none at all may become a box-office flop.

A Break for the Newsreel

Fox Midwesco houses have made it a practice during the past number of months to advertise both their comedies and newsreel shorts daily, in addition to the feature picture. If the feature offering is particularly good and long enough they will dispense with the comedy, but advertise their newsreel. Each day the newsreel advertising copy is changed, calling attention to some particular scene or event being offered for the week. Even Fox neighborhood ads carry short subject copy.

L. K. Brin very seldom advertises his short features in connection with the regular feature. The short feature entertainment may be mentioned once during the week's advertising and that is on the first ad run in connection with the opening of a new picture.

Others Are Lax

RKO likewise does not stress its short features very strongly although houses on the circuit features, newsreels regularly and either a comedy, cartoon or novelty in addition. However, whatever play is given the short in the newspaper advertising of the various exhibitors, nevertheless, it is regarded by all as a rather important part of the program.

Unlike some exhibitors, the manager of a neighborhood house in Milwaukee, explained that he filled his program with as many shorts as possible. He felt that by doing this he was giving his patrons their money's worth as well as furnishing them with a diversified program of entertainment.

The general feeling seems to be that with the advent of sound, the shorts have been improved considerably and as such have made a stronger bid for a prominent place on the regular program.

Short Subjects Get 75-25 Break In San Francisco

San Francisco—It's a 75-25 break for the short feature in and around San Francisco, with shorts on the long end of the deal. That is to say, that 75 per cent of exhibitors in the vicinity are sold on the pulling and pleasing power of shorts, while the remaining 25 per cent incline to the old belief that the short is a mere filler.

Important exhibitors of this zone spot in their shorts to make well-rounded bills and advertise them to the public. Such a course is found effective at the box office. Most of the time, showmen here find the average patron is particularly interested in one or more subjects of the short feature program. It may be the news or may be the comedy, or both, but the showing of a brand name short or newsreel does attract business. Audiences here have become educated to short features, and demand them as part of their regular entertainment.

Wagnon Stresses Short

Meritorious short features are stressed in advertising of the Wagnon theatres, states A. C. Hicks, publicity manager, who feels it is "foolish" not to play up good shorts. As an instance, he cites the Universal Newspaper Newsreel, which always is played up, and about which many calls are received by the circuit.

People enjoy shorts, but demand the best, states D. Danziger, manager of the Coliseum. C. J. Chapman of the executive division of Fox West Coast Theatres, believes it valuable to sell the whole show, but questions advisability of always playing up shorts, unless they are exceptional, or contain some outstanding or particularly timely angle.

Iowa Theatre Men Praise Their Quality and Drawing Power

Des Moines—While the length of the program is a deciding feature in the position of comedies and shorts on the programs shown at the Paramount and the Des Moines, the larger houses here are giving more and more importance to the shorter numbers on the bill. The comedies are always listed in the advertising and are occasionally given large type and the same is true for novelties and cartoons. Emmett Lockard, assistant manager of the Des-Moines, which has been playing up the shorts on the bill more largely than before, estimates that the comedies are responsible for 20 per cent of the week's business.

At the Paramount, where they ran three comedies for the first show in place of the "Frivolities Revue," which had but one afternoon appearance, Ray Stiles, assistant manager, found that the comedy bill added materially to this first show and that business at that hour was increased by 40 per cent. Although used as fillers and cut in case the feature is a long one, the comedies are an important part of the bill, he says. Comedies are given the preference in shorts while two-thirds of the people in the audience are particular fans for the newsreels.

At the Strand, the comedies are considered of greater importance than at the larger houses and often sell the bill. The manager, L. A. Carter, never books a week without comedies and says that song cartoons go over big at this house. He has been told repeatedly by patrons of the theatre that they would feel they had missed a good part of the show if they did not catch the newsreel.

Shorts Held Essential

"Short subjects are a part of the show," says Rube Wagel, assistant manager for Educational. The exchange has sold a comedy to one of the larger Des Moines houses for every week and sometimes at both houses for the past year. The comedies have the big lead over novelties, he says, and there is not a house in Iowa which does not bill comedies. Acts are being cut. Since the introduction of sound the newsreels have gone over big while Educational with silent news has had practically no billing for it. Cartoons, he ranks next to comedies in preference by the public and novelties as third choice.

Harry Simpson, owner of the Garden at Sigourney, ran all comedy programs at his theatre during October and November for the Friday and Saturday shows. While the program worked out successfully as a new introduction it did not warrant continuing it as a regular policy.

Al Yarowsky, assistant manager for Universal, considers shorts as filler and directly dependent upon the length of the feature. Theatregoers expect them on the bill unless the feature contains such variety or runs to such a length that the shorts are not needed, he said. Business on newsreels has increased by 400 per cent since sound.

SUBJECTS

Used Merely as Fillers In First Run Theatres In Seattle; Publicity Sparse

Laurel-Hardy, Mickey Mouse and Paramount Novelties Get Only Play

Seattle—With very few exceptions, first run houses in this city during recent months have paid very little attention to their weekly programs of short subjects, using them principally as fillers and seldom advertising or exploiting them in any way, other than an occasional line in large newspaper ads.

There are three strong exceptions to this general tendency—Laurel and Hardy comedies, Mickey Mouse cartoons; and Paramount's all musical novelties. These three brands of shorts are usually good for more than casual mention in newspaper ads, and are featured on the theatres' 24-sheet, marquee lights, lobby display, etc. Only in the case of exceptionally weak feature attractions do any of the local houses attempt to bolster up programs with strong shorts—perhaps once a month or so. Little attention is paid to the brand of shorts shown, except that local managers do try to book in a comedy offering with a heavy dramatic feature.

What First Runs Do

The following resume of the leading first run houses will be self-explanatory:

The Seattle Paramount (Publix) seats 3,150 and at present is the high gross-getter for the city. Manager William A. Hartung uses his shorts just like his orchestra and organ concerts. The shorts rate one line in newspaper ads, often not even being mentioned by name, but merely as "All-Talking Comedy." Newsreel, musical features and shorts all get the same "break." There are a few exceptions, such as the Bouncing Ball cartoons, which are played up; shorts by such entertainers as Eddie Cantor, Buster West, Louise Fazenda, etc.

Five Reels of Shorts

Publix's Metropolitan, operating without an orchestra or organist, uses about five reels of short subjects with every feature. Here the shorts are listed by name in each of the newspaper ads, but do not rate any extra publicity of any kind. The house usually tries to select one comedy, a musical short of some type, and a novelty. Robert Armstrong is manager.

Fox West Coast, at the Fox, seldom mention the short subjects in any way, except when they play a Mickey Mouse cartoon or a Laurel and Hardy comedy. Then this short gets mere "mention" in the ads, less than that accorded to Owen Sweeten and the Fox Orchestra. A lobby card and marquee sign is often given to Laurel and Hardy. Manager Lou Golden always gives a line in every ad to Fox Movietone News.

At Fox's Fifth Avenue Theatre, Fanchon-Marco stage revues are featured with the picture. Very few shorts are used by Manager Jim Clemmer, with the exception of a fashion reel and Fox Movietone news. The former is never listed in publicity—the latter always is mentioned. Whenever a noticeably bad feature plays the house, a short subject (usually Laurel and Hardy) is booked in and exploited. This happens only every two or three months.

Shorts Not Advertised

John Hamrick's two houses, the Music Box and Blue Mouse, usually use about four reels of shorts on every program. Formerly, these were listed as units on a complete bill, but for many months have received no newspaper advertising. An exception is the booking of a short subject such as Martinelli, or Ann Pennington's recent 2-reel color short. Such shorts as this get a brief line in the ads.

Local newspaper reviewers, with the exception of Harry Mills on the "Star," seldom mention a short by name when reviewing the complete show, but say something to the effect that: "A comedy and newsreel round out the program."

Publix's two houses draw from Paramount, Educational and United Artists shorts; Fox has Fox, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, Educational, Pathe; and Hamrick has Warner Brothers, Universal, Pathe and Columbia.

Tie Up With National Music Week

Opportunity for exhibitors to capitalize on musical shorts is offered during National Music Week, to be observed May 4 to 10. A number of companies have shorts particularly suitable for showing during the week, when a number of hook-ups will be available. One company which is stressing music week particularly is Pathe, which is centering attention on its Pathe-Americana songs and the Song Sketch series of the Pathe Audio Review.

Doom of Stage Shows Clinched By Short Films?

Los Angeles—Is the cutting down of presentations in theatres in various sections of the country due to sound pictures a permanent or transitory development?

Film men insist that the all-the-show-on-the-screen policy is one which has come to stay, but Michael Marco, head of Fanchon & Marco insists that the inroad made is only temporary. And he cites the addition of 15 weeks to the circuit's booking time in 1929 to back up his contention.

Sound offered a relief from labor troubles in many houses, he declares, and succeeded in eliminating the old type of vaudeville. While Fanchon & Marco were adding 15 weeks last year, 29 weeks were being added by other circuits, and what decrease there was in time for major circuits was a temporary decline due to the readjustments he says are being made in union troubles. Because it is bringing first grade vaudeville talent into films, sound will help rather than hurt vaudeville, Marco believes.

Libson Circuit In Cincy Plays Them Up in Ads

Cincinnati—Canvass of the situation as to handling short features here reveals that they are handled with the same meticulous attention and care as the feature, in the booking and advertising, as well as with a view of maintaining proper program balance.

William A. Clark, director of advertising and publicity for the Libson interests in Cincinnati, who books all the short features for the Libson-Heidingsfeld chain of houses says:

"We pay particular attention to the short feature, usually booking a clean, wholesome comedy or novelty, never as merely a program filler, but always with regard to the main feature in order to give the program proper balance.

"We are exceptionally careful in selection of our shorts, booking only the best of their respective kinds. In fact, I believe that I give this end of the booking as much serious thought and consideration as is done by others in booking the features. Such practice is reflected in the satisfaction which our patrons derive from our shows, and any extra time we spend in careful booking of our shorts is rewarded by patron interest and satisfaction, which, after all, are the best forms of advertising. Of course, we use newsreels in addition to comedies and novelties, but, in any event, our shorts are thoroughly advertised, the newspaper space alloted them being in proportion to the space occupied by the feature.

Gives Shorts a Play

"What I mean by that is, we do not condense announcements of short subjects into a small newspaper space at bottom of our feature advertisement, but play it up proportionately. Our patrons at the various houses have come to look for the shorts almost as much as the feature as an integral part of their film fare, and they are just as fussy, too. This is proved by the fact that the shorts are commented on both favorably and unfavorably, as the case may be, equally as much as is the feature. This is done by the public and reviewers alike. It, therefore, pays to handle the booking and presentation of the shorts properly, and not slight them."

"1812" The famous overture by the Russian composer Tschaikowsky. Known and played all over the world. United Artists brings it to the screen accompanied by a marvelous visual interpretation of the meaning of the composition—the invasion of Russia by Napoleon.

"WIZARD'S APPRENTICE"

Goethe's most celebrated poem is the theme for a thrilling musical drama depicting the attempts of a sorcerer's apprentice to imitate the magic arts of his absent master. Brooms, chairs, tables come to life in the weird settings designed by Wm. Cameron Menzies. Told to the fascinating music of the noted French composer Dukas.

"IRISH FANTASY" Victor Herbert at his best. In this composition he depicted the eviction of the Irish patriots from their homes, their fight for freedom and their victory. Donald Novis, the Irish tenor who sang in "Bulldog Drummond" is the principal singer. A great Big little Featurette.

"GLORIOUS VAMPS" This musical gem brings all the real vamps of history before you: Eve, Salome, Cleopatra, Delilah, Lucretia Borgia, Madame Pompadour, Carmen and to top it off the modern jazz girl.

THE APPETIZER OF YOUR PROGRAM

Given high praise by leading exhibitors wherever they have been shown, this series of smart featurettes was produced with one idea in mind—to give the public something different. Every short tells a complete story to an accompaniment of the world's greatest music played by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld's famed seventy-piece orchestra. Songs, dialogue and dramatic sound effects are also included.

Comment on the first featurette — Exhibitor's Daily Review: "A gem in every sense."

Short Features Mean Nothing in the Life of Kansas City, Houston Showmen

Majority of First Runs in K.C. Run Stage Shows, Cartoons And Newsreels

Kansas City—Three of the five first run houses here use stage shows to support their pictures with only newsreels and cartoons added as a rule. However, the strictly picture houses, the Newman and the Royal, are paying more and more attention to short subjects as a vital part of their programs. Both theatres advertise shorts by titles in the newspapers in their Sunday and Thursdays ads, and both do special lobby advertising of the short subjects as well as of the features.

The principle used in the selection of shorts, according to E. S. C. Coppock, manager of the Royal, is the grouping of units with enough contrast to insure a balanced program. Most shorts are selected to add contrasting elements to the feature. In cases where a short is selected in line with the feature idea, it is generally used as a prologue.

Favor Use of Color

Color recently has been recognized as an element of relief. If the feature is all black and white, then a note of color in the shorts gives variety. Conversely, with a colored feature, black and white shorts are preferable. With a sad or serious feature, comedy relief by means of a cartoon immediately following the main picture, is a favorite method of obtaining balance, Coppock declares.

The number of shorts used depends, of course, upon the length of time left in the program after the feature's time is taken into account. Three shorts in addition to the newsreel is the number thought by many exhibitors to be ideal, but in the case of a long feature when there is time for only one short subject, it is generally conceded that a talking cartoon should be chosen, as the most universally popular short.

Some Illustrations

An analysis of the Royal's program for this week will illustrate. The feature picture was "Only the Brave," with Gary Cooper and Mary Brian, a serious picture with little scenery or comedy relief. Coppock booked along with this, to fill in the lacking elements, the Paramount talking scenic, "Wanderlust." The Paramount talking and singing act, "I Came First," was added to give the musical element, and a Pathe short, "Sixteen Sweeties," which is in reality a miniature musical comedy, was selected for the same purpose and because it is a "girl picture." The serious feature followed these, and immediately afterward an Oswald Cartoon, "Bowery Bimbos," is running for hilarious comedy reaction.

A similar policy of making short subjects balance with the features is followed in the suburban theatres in Kansas City, especially the de luxe houses. At the Palaza Theatre, located in the most exclusive residential district, the short subjects are given prominence in electric lights on the marquee.

Cutting Silents

While distributors are averse to discussing the situation, it is probable that the coming year will see gradual elimination of silent newsreels, by companies to make sound newsreels.

M-G-M's silent reel winds up on May 15, to be followed later by the Paramount and Fox silent newsreels.

These companies, it is said, feel that the production of silent reels, due to the speed with which silent houses are being eliminated, will not be profitable as the new year gets under way. Kinograms now is the only newsreel making a silent reel only. This firm has maintained its faith in the value of silent newsreels, figuring the mobility of the silent news forces compensates for the lack of sound. That company also feels that about 50 per cent of the theatres of the United States are unwired, and these offer an attractive outlet, together with bookings to be had in sound houses.

Short Features Ignored in Pitt's Leading Theatres

Pittsburgh—Leading theatres here are ignoring short subjects almost entirely. From contact with picture fans, many maintain that the theatres are making a big mistake by passing up the advertising and showing of good "shorts," and there is every reason to believe that sooner or later the local theatre moguls will realize their mistake.

Loew's Penn, presentation house, usually has a two reel comedy in the operating room which they use at the lunch and supper shows. These are never mentioned in the advertising. On rare occasions when they have a Charlie Chase or an "Our Gang," they make a mere mention in the advertising and carry the "short" through all shows, slicing a little time off each item, overture, organlogue, etc., to make room.

Not Advertised

The Stanley (presentation house) rarely plays a short subject, except on occasional weeks at the supper shows. These are never mentioned in the advertising.

Warner's Enright (presentation house) usually always shows about 200 feet of Pathe Review and quite often a Rice Sportlight. But these are never mentioned in the advertising.

All of the houses use a few hundred feet of newsreel.

Loew's Aldine and RKO's Sheridan Square are two straight picture houses which play well-rounded bills of features and shorts. The popularity of these houses, and the fan reaction towards the varied selection of shorts used therein, is proof that there are a great number of fans who prefer the short background to the stage presentations now in vogue.

Throw 'Em In as Fillers and Say Nothing, Is Creed Of Houston Exhibs

Houston, Tex.—Short reels are used merely as fillers in the two Houston theatres that play vaudeville, Loew's State and the Majestic. The shorts at these houses are never advertised, and when the program runs too long, one or two of the shorts are sacrificed.

"Our policy is vaudeville and feature pictures at popular prices," said Manager W. V. Taylor of Loew's State. "We give them the shorts and say nothing about it."

The theatre plays M-G-M features, Loew's vaudeville, Hal Roach comedies, and selected song novelties and "Silly Symphonies." The two reel comedy is not advertised, but is the last of the short reels to be sacrificed. This theatre plays the Laurel and Hardy comedies, admittedly above the average, according to Taylor, but does not advertise them.

The Majestic has a set program of four acts of vaudeville, feature picture, Movietone News and Aesop's Fables every other week as they are released. On week days the Majestic shows a serial, just now a Tarzan story. If the program demands a cut, the Fable, or its alternate, Sportlight, is sacrificed. The show is booked from the Dallas home office. Eddie Bremer is manager of the Majestic.

On the other hand, the Metropolitan and the Kirby, both Publix houses, advertise their short reels consistently, and stress the variety each week. Both theatres run a newsreel, a color scenic, a Vitaphone short act, and a two-reel comedy.

Booked on Feature

Short reels for the Metropolitan and the Kirby, both all-sound theatres, are booked by E. E. Collins, city manager of Publix theatres in Houston. He selects them with reference to his feature, bolstering the feature with a strong short reel program when needed, and always striving for the variety of a stage vaudeville program. The short reels are dressed up with colored light frames when the subject admits it, and in some instances "sound business" is used back stage, such as gun shots and drums and falling boxes, when the manager thinks the films need the added sound touches.

A soft rose light is thrown on the screen curtains at the close of each film and short reel, and the curtains dropped. As the rose light is irised out slowly and the letters "The Kirby, a Publix house presents," appear, the curtains are drawn. This perceptible pause between films serves to emphasize the short features, in the opinion of Mr. Collins.

The Horwitz subsequent run shows, Texan, Iris and Ritz, have a newsreel, a Vitaphone act or cartoon song, and a two-reel comedy.

These are not advertised, according to Will Horwitz, manager, unless the comedy is such that it overshadows the weak feature. Horwitz books the shorts himself, and endeavors to balance his program.

Previewed and Carefully Selected In Theatres In Atlanta And Baltimore

"Also a Comedy" Raises Cain When Used in Circuit Advertising

Atlanta—An advertising line that would be anathema today is "also a comedy."

The use of just that phrase some eight months ago nearly raised the roof off a big chain theatre office in New York. Word went forth in no uncertain terms that no comedy worthy of a place on the program of any theatre in that chain was "also a comedy." The least it should be to deserve a place on the program or a mention in the advertising was that it stand out proudly as some sort of comedy, entitled this or that, and featuring or starring so-and-so. The furore created by that careless line accomplished one fine result. It made a worthwhile sound comedy a definite entity.

The sound short subjects that lead in public favor in this immediate locality are lively two-reel comedies, song novelties and cartoons.

Short subjects now are receiving more emphasis in program construction and merchandising than they have enjoyed since the coming of the multiple-reel feature. The advent of sound and the elimination of stage shows in many de luxe theatres is responsible for this healthy situation. Chain theatres took the lead in bringing sound short subjects to the forefront and the independents have followed suit.

Important exhibitors in Atlanta and in all other leading cities and towns in this section are spending more time in the selection of their short subjects than in the choosing of features. By virtue of their film service contracts the matter of feature booking is not very flexible, most playing arrangement demanding dating of pictures either in order of their release or of their availability.

However, in the short subjects field there is considerable opportunity for selection and on this problem the more alert and successful theatre managers are concentrating serious attention.

3 Factors Considered

Three prime considerations govern the selection of short subjects—sound, color and comedy. While many of the larger sound theatres still retain their non-sync equipment, there is relatively small demand for silent shorts in the major theatres, with the single exception of the silent newsreel which still has draft. Color is playing an increasingly important part, and comedy is absolutely essential in the majority of sound shorts.

The Paramount, Atlanta's ace straight sound picture house, has long made a policy of advertising its short subjects. Not only are the shorts played up in newspaper advertisements and in the lobby, but in the marquee billing. Two-thirds of the screening time on each week's schedule is devoted to reviewing short subjects for future booking. Manager Robert E. Hicks frequently looks at from 12 to 20 shorts to select a possible two for balancing a given feature. It is his theory that a particular short subject might click 100 per cent in a properly constructed program and fall flat in a different set-up. By the same token, the feature picture loses much of its value if not intelligibly surrounded with appropriate shorts of definite entertainment value.

The same principle applies to the combination picture-and-vaudeville theatres, although in these houses there is less latitude for expression. Almost without exception the shorts chosen for such combination programs are selected for comedy value, the exception to that rule being when the feature picture itself abounds in comedy. So strongly has the idea of short subject advertising taken possession of theatre managers that even when the Sunday and daily newspaper ads must cover the feature picture and each separate vaudeville act they also include in proper proportion the titles, stars and often a descriptive line on the shorts.

The Fox Theatre, Atlanta's only picture-and-stage-unit house, started its career on Christmas Day with an excellent program that gave sound shorts an important place. The particular short which Manager R. T. Newton chose for the inaugural program was the Mickey Mouse cartoon, "Steamboat Willie." It made a tremendous hit and the Fox promptly signed for all the cartoons of that series.

Neighborhoods Boosting Shorts

This tendency to play up short subjects is by no means exclusive to the more important first run theatres. The Class B and C houses are following the same policy, and the neighborhood theatres, all of which depend upon juvenile patronage for matinee business, lay increasing stress on short subjects. The juveniles demand to be entertained and their idea of entertainment is comedy and more comedy.

The straight sound picture theatre stands to gain most or lose most through its short subject selection. Having neither vaudeville nor stage shows to bolster its program, the straight sound picture house must construct its program for 100 per cent entertainment value in pictures and sound accompaniment. And it is upon the building of these programs for variety and balance and the successful merchandising of the entire program to the public that theatre managers and major theatre executives are concentrating their efforts.

McNamee Clicking

Minneapolis—Record business being done by Universal's Newspaper Newsreel is reflected in the unprecedented number of houses in this territory using the newsreel. One hundred fifty Northwest theatres now are declared playing the newsreel, featuring Graham McNamee's newscasting. The situation here is being duplicated proportionately in other sections, it is stated.

Get as Much Attention as Full-Length Films in Baltimore

Baltimore—[illegible] plenty of attention to short features, using great care in the balancing of programs, and giving the short product a break in newspaper advertising.

While Howard Price Kingsmore, Loew's city manager in Baltimore, and Junior McGeehan, publicity and advertising representative of the Loew Baltimore houses, generally use about two-thirds of the space in their newspaper Sunday and Monday ads for the feature picture, the rest is given to advertising the Loew-Publix stage unit, each week and then if space permits the talking comedy, newsreel and music are mentioned.

In the newspaper space for Loew's Stanley, the added attractions are usually mentioned including a comedy, a song reel and the newsreel. Comedies featuring Laurel and Hardy appear to be the favorites with the Stanley audiences and with the Valencia or Parkway patrons afterwards. In the Valencia and Parkway ads, when space permits the added attractions are noted.

Previews All Short Features

Frank Price, Jr., manager of the Rivoli takes special pains to book his surrounding program just as he does with his features. He screens all acts and comedies if possible before running them and makes an endeavor to have his surrounding bill balance.

If the feature is a dramatic subject Price endeavors to place a comedy particulary with music and singing with it. Due to the length of "Under a Texas Moon," recently shown at that house, he had on the program, Giovanni Martinelli, tenor, singing the prison song from "Faust," Wallace Ford in "Absent Minded," an Aesop fable "Foolish Follies," and a Pathe Sound News.

Morris A. Mechanic, proprietor of the New theatre, has taken up the idea recently of placing the added attractions in his advertisements in the Sunday and Monday newspaper sections. Recently with "The Golden Calf," the short subject "Hunt the Tiger," was used with "Snapshots of Hollywood," "A Close Shave," and a Fox Movietone news. Audiences did not care so much for "Hunt the Tiger," it seemed over their heads. During the second week the added subjects were "Snapshots of Hollywood," Fox Movietone News and Robert Benchley in "Stewed, Fried and Boiled."

While the Metropolitan, managed by C. S. Langue, ran "Under a Texas Moon" simultaneously with the Rivoli, all the space in the newspaper advertisements was taken for the feature with only a line reading "Also Vitaphone Varieties" for the added subjects. This is not always the case with the Metropolitan, however, as sometimes the short features are advertised, particularly if they have a name like Ann Penington.

Used in Albany to Put Weak Features Over; Get Absent Treatment in L. A.

Big Los Angeles Circuit Houses Shy at Giving Ad Credit

Los Angeles—Try and find out what the supporting program is with the majority of features in the seven downtown first runs of Los Angeles—and take any particular week as an example. There are very few that give any advertising credit to short comedies, cartoons and novelties, and even the newsreel is forgotten except where circuit policy makes mention imperative.

All seven Los Angeles first runs are circuit-operated. Publix has the Paramount and United Artists; Fox West Coast controls Fox Criterion and Loew's State; the RKO and Orpheum are RKO houses, while Warners have their Downtown.

Too little attention is given to the short features on the various programs. United Artists and Paramount do give six point lines of various supporting subjects in their daily advertising with the United Artists also going in for sniping 24 sheet boards, marquee lights and lobby frames quite often.

Fox Criterion always sells Fox Movietone News in advertising, but other short subjects on the same program are generally ignored. The same applies to Loew's State, where the Fanchon-Marco stage units receive advertising and exploitation plugs consistently. The RKO theatre features a vaudeville show with any shorts ignored, while the Orpheum seldom gives talker comedies a tumble in advertising. Warner Downtown confines its advertising strictly to the feature attractions, regardless of the merit of any short features of definite drawing power they might be on the same bill.

The attitude of the first runs is reflected in subsequent runs. Little is done to build up comedies or other types of short subjects. They are merely booked and spotted in. Even a one sheet stand in the lobby is unusual. It's an event when a short is advertised in the marquee lights.

Insofar as West Coast Theatres are concerned, the only short features that get a play are the Laurel and Hardy comedies and the Mickey Mouse cartoons and, of course, Fox Movietone News.

Oklahoma City Theatres Get No Newspaper Plugs

Oklahoma City—Short features are not faring so well in Oklahoma City so far as plugging in newspaper advertising is concerned. The shorts have an added or "also run" line in the copy of the Publix houses, which include the Criterion, Capitol, Victoria and Ritz.

However, shorts are mere fillers in the local viewpoint and comedies seem to be preferred to cartoon subjects. The Folly mentions its comedies and newsreels in newspaper copy.

The Cause?

Existence of a price-exchanging agreement which would have placed some of the producer-circuits on the spot so far as payment for short feature product is concerned, led to invasion of the short product field by distributors which previously had concentrated on features, according to report. This led directly to overcrowding of the short product field, it is stated. The agreement is said to have been in writing and to have fallen into the hands of one of the big companies.

Comedy Shorts Are Preferred In Providence

Providence—Cognizant of the Public's ever-increasing demand for better and funnier shorts, Providence exhibitors are striving to outdo each other in booking the best to be had. Advertising from the three big downtown houses, Majestic, Loew's State and Victory, carries plenty of space devoted to short features exclusively. Many times the items are boxed and spotted in the corners. Charley Chase, Langdon, Laurel and Hardy, and "nut" comedies have proved big favorites, while the animated cartoons featuring barnyard actors are included on practically every program.

Managers here are of the opinion that comedy shorts are much more in demand than so-called educational, scenic and films of serious treatment.

Comedies and Cartoons Used

Most of the houses with their features bill at least one comedy, an animated cartoon and one or more newsreels. Loew's State as a rule runs a big feature with four short subjects and an organlogue. The RKO Victory is given to the policy of playing the feature to the skies and relying on shorts for comedy. This house, too, employs many musical shorts. The Majestic, for the past several weeks, has been booking double-features with the most likely box-office draw played up big. "The Green Goddess" and "She Couldn't Say No" recently played the same week. In addition, the theatre screens two or more shorts and a newsreel.

In Providence moviegoers demand good shorts and plenty of them. Failure to include a favorite in an ad may throw patronage to another house and care is given by all publicists here to bill the lesser features with as much care as the big cinema shot.

Short Features Cop Marquee Lights in Albany and Get Billing

Albany—Showmanship is aiding the short feature to exercise box office draw at local theatres. Exhibitors here realize that good shorts often compensate when the feature is not up to standard, and are taking advantage of that fact, plus adding to good features with well balanced shorts.

Comedies and cartoons are the preference of local theatre-goers, although all types of good short features find a welcome. The short is getting a break in newspaper advertising of all first runs, and in some instances are copping lights in the marquee.

Short features often serve to pull a weak feature over, states Charles H. Buckley, who operates three houses here. While he generally prefers comedies, these must have more than a single laugh to get over. A weak comedy often hurts a program nearly as much as a matter-of-fact feature, Buckley emphasizes. Cartoons, he says, are becoming better and are proving ideal additions to a program.

Says Shorts Are Improving

Charles Smakwitz is using real care in the booking and selling of shorts at the Warner houses under his direction. The short feature is given billing not only in the newspaper copy, but in lobby displays as well. He cites many occasions when the shorts were fully as entertaining as the feature.

"I always take the utmost trouble in booking my short features," said Smakwitz, "feeling that they are a very important part of the general program of entertainment. I believe that, of late, producers are giving more thought to shorts and that they are improving."

Shows Dominate Ads in St. Louis; Shorts Suffer

St. Louis—Only casual treatment is given to shorts in advertising of the first and subsequent runs here, despite the fact that the Ambassador is featuring two 30-minute newsreel shows daily. These shows are from 10:30 to 11:00 A. M., and from 5:20 to 5:50 P. M. These shows are not advertised very extensively.

In the first run houses newsreels are preferred to fill in the gap between the feature picture and the stage show or other spots in the program, but in the secondary houses, such as the Granada, the Shenandoah-Hipointe, Union and Lindell and other houses in the St. Louis Amusement Company group good comedies are handled regularly along with newsreels and cartoons. Purely novelty reels haven't much of a play except in the smaller neighborhood houses.

On the whole the secondary houses play their feature pictures in advertising, even to the trailers, while in the bigger houses the stage feature gets the play.

A COMEDY LANDSLIDE

Always a big jump ahead of the field, Educational Pictures are constantly meeting exhibitors' Short Feature requirements before they are expressed.

THE FILM DAILY'S exhibitor questionnaire on Short Features is an enlightening analysis of the effect of sound in this field. It is no accident, of course, that the showmen's preferences so thoroughly describe Educational's talking picture program of the last year.

For example, THE FILM DAILY asked exhibitors: "What type of short feature in sound do you consider most popular and most important to your program?"

"Comedies" received more than three times as many votes as the next most popular type.

And out of 72 sound pictures so far released by Educational 62 are two-reel talking comedies.

When exhibitors write like this, you know they have something to write about:

"Folks, it takes a plumber to do plumbing, a baker to bake and Educational to make comedies. I have run every Educational comedy made in silent and it looks as though I am going to run every Educational in sound. When they make better comedies than the Educationals I want to run them. We were compelled to hold this comedy (Lupino Lane's 'Fire Proof') over the third night as so many of our patrons wanted to see it the second time and I know they got more kick out of it seeing it twice. Recording on disc is excellent. If you are not running Educational all-talking comedies, your patrons are being slighted. Film, fine."

Omaha Theatres Give Ad Space To All Shorts

Omaha—Short subjects are an essential part of the program in local houses playing pictures only, but are bounced all around the projection room in the combination vaudeville and picture theatres, a survey of advertisements and managers' attitudes reveals.

Lionel Wasson, Paramount manager, is making the most of shorts by diligent handling of their possibilities. The house recently dropped Publix units and went all-sound.

"First, I consider the feature and build around it," Wasson says. "If it has lots of comedy, the rest of the program must be contrasted by use of a novelty or musical short, for instance. If the picture is weak, the short must have a strong name to maintain the balance. All ad copy includes names of shorts."

At the State, split week house, a comedy and song novelty are included on every program unless the feature is all comedy, Roy F. Felker, manager stated. "Never sacrifice a program due to the length of the feature," he said.

Inaugurating a new policy of vaudeville and pictures, the World will probably subordinate shorts to the rest of the program, according to Manager Richard Emig. At present they are included in advertising and used in every performance, he stated.

The Orpheum uses short subjects as fillers only due to the length of programs. A comedy or cartoon is sandwiched into the show once during the afternoon and again during the dinner hour, states Ralph W. Thayer, manager. Running time of shorts takes precedence over title or type, but they are not mentioned in ads.

Shorts Showing B. O. Strength in Portland, Ore.

Portland—Short features are making a splendid showing here, demonstrating real strength at the box office. As a consequence, they are getting a real break on advertising.

The Paramount plays up shorts heavily to bolster attendance, giving special stress to name subjects. The vaudeville following of various headliners is emphasized in the advertising of shorts in which such stars are to appear.

Comedies are the preference, but the song novelties and cartoons are popular. The Fox Broadway is scoring heavily with the Mickey Mouse sound cartoons, which will be continued, due to their strong and universal appeal. A kids' Mickey Mouse Club is helping to boom business for these subjects. The Laurel and Hardy comedies also attract business. Well-balanced programs are the aim at each Broadway show.

The RKO Orpheum has four acts of vaudeville and a feature picture only. At John Hamrick's Music Box, Vitaphone acts, comedy preferred, are quite popular. Oswald cartoons also are used at this house, which is the home of Warner features. The bulk of the advertising at the United Artists is on features. Comedies and Fox Movietone News are played up.

Universal's Talking News Boosted by Posters in N.Y.

More than 1,000 posters printed in two and three sheet size are being used in a campaign on "The Universal Newspaper Newsreel" by "The New York Evening World," which sponsors the reel in Greater New York.

Six hundred posters are placed on the paper's 300 news wagons. These posters are eight feet long and three feet deep. The auto transports pick up the papers at its office in Park Row opposite the City Hall and carry them to every part of the city, to news stands, railway terminals and ferries.

Hundreds of these sheets are also posted on "The Evening World."

The World ties up its posters with the advertising in its columns in which it names the theatres running the newsreel with thir locations.

These advertisements run full pages and other sizes in its daily columns in its motion picture section and the Sunday rotogravure.

This campaign is being duplicated in other cities throughout the country, for Universal is now allied with 58 dailies in the United States and Canada.

Improved Shorts May Oust Vaude. in Mid-West

Chicago—Improved short features now available may result in ousting Publix and other vaudeville acts from Publix-Great States houses in the near future, it is reported here as a result of the change in policy at the Great States' Rockford at Rockford, Ill., which is supplanting the stage show with shorts.

The new policy went into effect last week and is to continue throughout the summer. If the all talkie without stage show proves itself during that time, the policy will be made permanent at the Rockford and may be introduced into other Great States' houses now using vaude acts. The Rockford has been a picture and vaude house for several years.

"This policy change would not have been possible several years ago," a Publix-Great States' official here commented. "The improved short product now available makes the experiment advisable."

Manager of Blue Mouse Gets 'Kick' Plugging Shorts

Tacoma—Local theatres always, in recent years, have been partial to shorts. This may have been because of an early start given through "The Tacoma News Tribune" dramatic columns, after the first good ones appeared as program balancers.

"The News Tribune" pointed out, early, the value of the short from various angles, the local exhibitors fell in line and there has been about as much attention to the shorts here as to the program picture.

The Fox organization has two houses in Tacoma, the Rialto being a bit more pretentious in size and clientele than the Colonial. So Managing Director Doug Kimberley plays his bookings of shorts against each other. If he has a heavy program picture at the Rialto and plays a comedy short against it, he robs his Colonial program so that he will have a symphony or something of that nature in the shorts, together with a cartoon or something lighter to offset.

Ned Edris, manager of the Blue Mouse, gets more "kick" out of calling attention to some particular one of his usual three or four shorts, than he does in the feature, as a regular thing.

At the RKO Pantages, where W. L. Fenney is manager, there is not much time for shorts due to the usually long vaudeville show with his picture.

Both Fox and Hamrick managers usually give some space to advertising shorts, and always do so on days where big space in the newspapers is used.

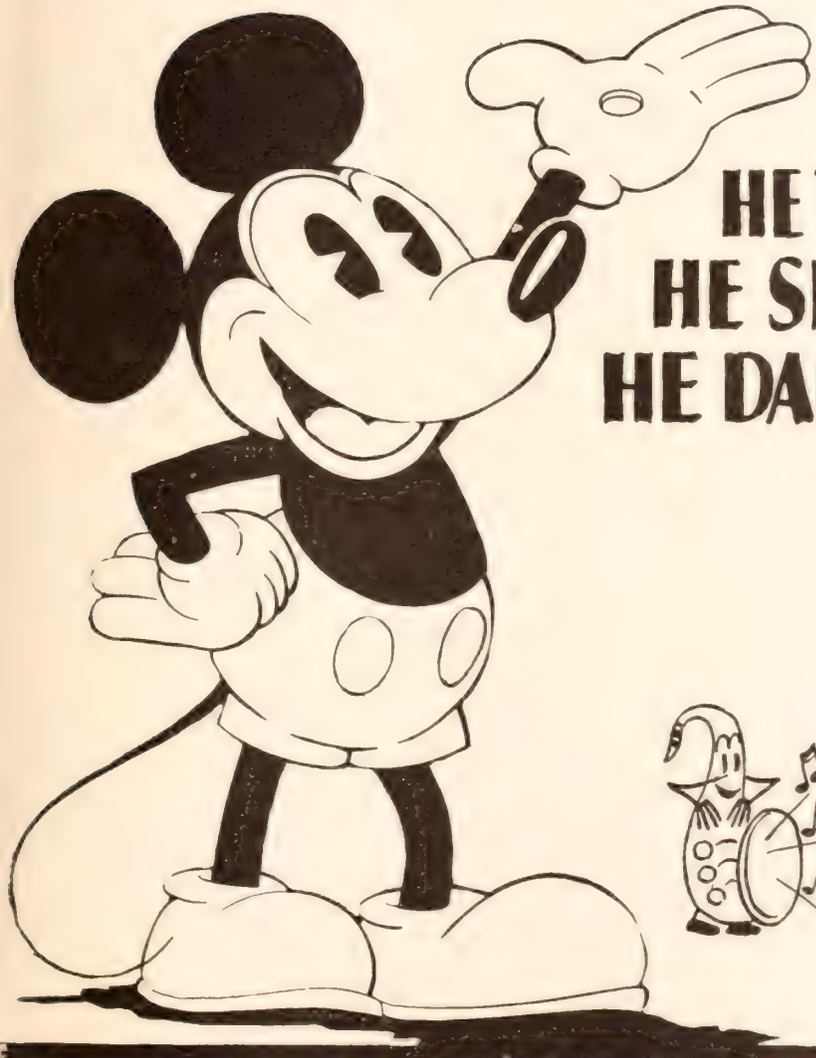
Newsreels Lead Shorts in Boston for Popularity

Boston—It is the newsreel which leads short subjects in popularity at Boston's ten first run theatres. The newsreel is given many times the amount of space alloted to other shorts.

Three out of the ten first runs are plugging their shorts, the State, Orpheum and Fenway. The other seven use shorts regularly, however.

At these latter theatres, the comedy or cartoon is eliminated when the feature is long. The Metropolitan does practically no advertising of its short subjects in the newspapers, but pays special attention to selection of shorts in order to achieve well-balanced programs.

Although shorts are used in the houses running vaudeville, little attention is paid to them. The two Keith houses here use shorts principally as fillers.



Shorts are featured at the State, which always provides a newsreel comedy and cartoon, says Assistant Manager J. M. Jones, with other shorts occasionally used.

No attempt is made to strengthen weak features by the use of shorts at any of the first runs, nor have shorts ever received more than one small line of mention in newspaper advertising.

At the present time, advertising space carried in all but the Sunday papers is so small as to practically preclude mention of anything but the feature titles and the stage show or vaudeville headliner.

Short Feature Field in Precarious Position, Coast Producers Believe

In 7,000 Houses

Educational Talking Comedies are being used in 7,000 of the 10,000 wired theatres of the United States, the company declares. The firm has eight series of talking comedies, which are: the Mack Sennett, Jack White, Lloyd Hamilton, Lupino Lane, Coronet, Mermaid, Tuxedo and the Terry-Toons.

E. W. Hammons recently returned to New York from the Coast where he laid the groundwork for the company's 1930-31 schedule.

Newsreel Strides One of Season's Big Highlights

Phenomenal development of the sound newsreel has been a highlight of the current short subject season, with the steady improvements noted, indicating that this entertainment and news disseminating medium will attain new levels in 1930-31.

The advent of sound has proved a great impetus to newsreel growth, increasing the scope of activity of both sound and silent newsreels.

Since Lindbergh's trans-Atlantic flight, the newsreel has maintained its position as a box office attraction in theatres large and small. Future development, so far as individual companies is concerned, is to take different lines, some firms abandoning production of silent newsreels and concentrating on the sound newsreels, while others will retain their silent newsreel which will be extended in scope and further improved upon.

Among advances in newsreels during the last year have been the completion of the filming of the Byrd South Pole expedition by Paramount News; the bringing of world notables to the screen by Fox Movietone News; the round-the-world pictures of the Graf Zeppelin by M-G-M News; the introduction of color by Pathe Sound News; establishment and maintenance of the Embassy Newsreel theatre, New York, with Hearst Metrotone News, and the development of the Talking Reporter idea by Universal's Newsreel, issued in conjunction with key city newspapers.

Pathe's introduction of color in its newsreel several weeks ago, this week was followed with another color sequence. Indications are that color is to be made a regular feature of the newsreel.

Weinshenker Handling Shorts

Chicago—William Weinshenker, formerly manager of the Columbia exchange at Milwaukee, has been named short subject manager for Columbia here.

Comedy Makers Say Breaks Must Come If They Are To Keep Up Quality

Hollywood—The short subject market is in a rather precarious position today. Never as profitable a field as the production of features, comedy producers nevertheless are driving ahead patiently waiting for the breaks which are rightfully due them. Whether or not they will get those breaks depends entirely on a change of attitude by the operators of large theatre circuits.

Established producers of long standing have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars during the past eighteen months in the transition of production of silent comedies to talkers. They have overcome many obstacles. The entire structure of comedy making was changed overnight. Today some believe comedy producers have made more progress in their field with talking comedies than feature producers have progressed in the same period.

Negative Costs Jump

It is costing more money today to produce comedies than at any time previously. Regardless of this fact, comedy producers and distributors have found the circuit operators taking an attitude that "a short subject is a short subject no matter how good or bad, and after all it is only a filler." Where circuits book features on percentage, they nevertheless pay a flat price for short subjects and that flat price is low in proportion to the actual production cost of the pictures. No matter how outstanding a comedy may be the circuit refuses to pay any more for an outstanding comedy than for one of ordinary rating.

With this condition existing, the comedy producer says he cannot see his way clear to spending large sums of money on special pictures. As a result, he finds it absolutely necessary to keep within a certain budget which will allow him to break even in view of the present stand of the circuit operators on prices. One large circuit executive recently admitted that good short subjects are 40 per cent. of the drawing power on a program.

Lack Incentive, Studios Say

Comedy producers on the coast claim the circuits pay nothing like 40 per cent. of their film rental for the short subjects on any bill. It is also claimed that the smaller theatres and independent exhibitors have been very fair in their support of short comedies during the past year. The small exhibitor apportions his film price so that about 25 per cent of rentals are split up for the comedy, news reel and other short reels. In comparison to this, the large circuits seldom spend more than 5 per cent. of their total film rental for the short reels on the surrounding program, it is charged in studio circles.

One comedy producer of prominence states that the exhibitor—particularly the the large theatre circuits—must become short subjects conscious.

He claims that short subjects would increase at least 100 per cent. in quality if the producer had an incentive to put more money and laughs into those pictures through increased rentals from the first run houses.

The first steps to adjust conditions must come from the theatre circuits, he adds. Various comedy producers during the past year have made so called "short features" with players of drawing power and with costs double of the average comedy. Regardless of the large amount expended, the distributor found the chain booking this type of picture at no greater price than regular rentals for any type of comedy. As a consequence the producers have found it impossible under present conditions to get their money back on special comedies.

Back Musicians

Since its formation a few months ago, the Music Defense League, formed to protect against "the elimination of real music from the theatre," has passed the 2,000,000 mark, according to the American Federation of Musicians. The growth of sound pictures and consequent elimination from theatres of musicians led to organization of the defense league. A national newspaper advertising campaign against substitution of "robot music" in theatres has been waged for several months.

Shorts Stand on Own if Contract Clause Adopted

Short features will stand on their own, so far as sales to exhibitors are concerned, under a provision in the proposed form of contract now being negotiated by distributors with Allied States Ass'n and the M. P. T. O. A. The contract will carry a recommendation calling for the licensing of shorts without requiring licensing of features and vice versa.

The exception will be a requirement for booking of both shorts and features in complete service and long term franchise contract.

Segregation of shorts and features, so far as compulsion is concerned, was made a provision of the standard contract drafted at Chicago. It since has been embodied in the contract.

There have been various reports that distributors were insisting upon the booking of shorts, as a condition to the booking of features, but these have been denied persistently. Distributors say that as a matter of good business better terms sometimes can be offered to exhibitors who book both features and shorts, but that they have not sought to compel such bookings.

Vaudeville Out? Trend is Toward Straight Comedy

Hollywood—While matters are rather indefinite, the trend will be toward straight comedies, and away from vaudeville turns, in the short features to be produced for 1930-31 release.

Educational's program for the new season now is being whipped into shape. Jack White has gone East for conferences on the subject with Earle W. Hammons, company president.

Mack Sennett will contribute his regular quota of 30 two-reelers to the Educational program. In addition, he will make from three to five specials similar to the Hagen and Diegel golf comedy. The Sennett comedies will be limited in their slapstick, as Sennett intends to strive for sophisticated comedy during the coming year. Several of the Sennett comedies will be partly or wholly in color using Sennett's new color process.

Christie Marking Time

While no indication of the course of Christie has been given, other than the exclusive Motion Picture News report that a deal with Educational is likely, it is believed that Charles Christie will return from New York with a contract with Educational.

No plans for production have been made, as yet, following completion of Christie's Paramount contract, and until a deal is set there is not likely to be.

32 for Roach

Hal Roach will produce four series of eight each. This includes Our Gang, Charles Chase, Laurel and Hardy and the Roach star series.

Larry Darmour will produce a total of 36 for next season. He will continue with his various series such as: Mickey McGuire, Witwer and Darmour star series. He produced a total of 26 for the 1929-30 program.

Included in the new product for next season there will be Nat Ross' series of eight two reel talking comedies co-starring Chas. Murray and George Sydney for Universal release It is Ross' intention to present Murray and Sydney in two reelers similar to their former features where they were teamed.

Zion Meyers and Jules White are producing and directing a series of eight "all-barkie" comedies for M-G-M release. These boys made two originally for M-G-M, at least one of which has already been shown in New York. The idea is to have trained dogs act throughout each picture and then add human voices on the sound track.

All on the Screen

Exhibitors are returning to the policy of giving the public the entire show on the screen and are discarding divertissements in favor of quality short features, according to Phil Reisman, general sales manager of Pathe.

Phil Reisman

The company's short feature sales are running six months ahead of a year ago, states Reisman, who adds this emphasizes the revived demand for short product. The force already has closed 3,500 accounts on the 1930-31 lineup of two-reel comedies, single reels and newsreel, he says. Usually, he declares, it is October before such a total of contracts would be in on shorts.

Pathe recently completed a Pathe Scoop drive on current season's product, when record bookings were chalked up.

Columbia Adds Two Series to Shorts Program

Two new subjects will be added to Columbia's series of approximately 104 single-reel novelties scheduled for release during 1930-31. The schedule includes "Curiosities" and "Bits of Life," in addition to the Disney Silly Symphonies, Disney "Mickey Mouse" cartoons, "Krazy Kat" cartoons and "Talking Screen Snapshots." Each of the six series is either all-talking or synchronized. With the moving of the Krazy Kat studios to Hollywood, all the shorts will be produced on the coast.

The "Screen Snapshots" are entering their 11th year and continue to be released at the rate of one each two weeks. A master of ceremonies, drawn from stage and screen players, makes a personally conducted tour through filmland in each release.

"Mickey Mouse" cartoons produced at the Disney studios in Hollywood will have special exploitation in conjunction with the running of a comic strip of the same name in newspapers of the country and through organization of Mickey House clubs, which form a link between newspaper and theatre.

13 "Silly Symphonies" on List

"The Disney Silly Symphonies," which made their debut this year, will have their action accompanied by musical offerings. There are 13 "Silly Symphonies" scheduled.

"The Krazy Kat" cartoons will be made in Hollywood by the Winkler studios. Ben Harrison and Mannie Gould are at work lining up adventures for the educated feline and his associates.

Thirteen "Curiosities" are scheduled. Each will be elaborated upon through a talk, explaining the various sequences.

"Bits of Life" will be shown in 13 releases. This feature consists of a series of black outs enacted by stage, screen and radio players.

Ad-Vance Trailer Service Sets in 116 Subjects

One hundred sixteen subjects already comprise the 1930-31 output scheduled by Ad-Vance Trailer Service Corp. The firm, in addition, will continue to make and distribute silent and sound trailers. More subjects may be added to the schedule.

The short subject program will consist of three series: 52 Screen Synchro-Song Films, released at the rate of one a week; 52 Screen Masters of Ceremonies, released at the rate of one a week, and 12 Masters of Ceremony Carnival, released at the rate of one a month. In the Masters of Ceremony series, each artist will be featured in a series of four subjects. In the Masters of Ceremony Carnival, four artists will be featured in each subject.

Davis Working on Third

Hollywood—Having just finished "America or Bust" Frank Davis is at work on his third two-reel talking comedy for Pathe. It is called "A Royal Flush" and the cast includes Ethel Davis, Norma Leslie, Vincent Barnett, Von Brinken, Hugh Allan and Bessie Hill.

Test of Drawing Power of Shorts In K. C. Impends

Kansas City—Short features will have opportunity to demonstrate their drawing power this summer, when the Pantages will be operated on a straight picture policy, shorts being substituted for vaudeville. A similar move was successful over the Pantages circuit last year. Top has been cut to 25 cents from 50 cents, under the new policy.

Fifty cents has been top at the Pantages for several years. The price for the balcony up to a few months ago has been 30 cents. Recently balcony admissions were reduced to 25 cents with the result that the balcony was filled at all hours while the lower floor has been suffering.

Louis Sharninsky, manager, believes that a straight 25 cent policy will build up patronage. Vaudeville may be reinstated next fall.

Baltimore Exhibs Giving Short Features a Break

The general rule in Baltimore seems to be to judge the length of the feature and then if possible add a talking comedy and a newsreel and then fill in with a cartoon, a song film, an audio or silent review, a scenic or sportlight.

In some instances in Baltimore two features have been offered on a bill with a newsreel.

If the Little theatre, managed by H. G. Weinberg, has a particularly strong supporting subject such as the Einstein Theory of Relativity, or the Ufa astronomical film "Heavenly Bodies," mention is usually made in the advertisements. Careful attention is paid to the surrounding program.

The rule for "The Baltimore Sunday Sun" section is to short paragraphs concerning the added short films on the programs of first run houses, if the information is available in advance.

Newman Making Series of "Humanettes" for Radio

Hollywood—Frank Newman, former Kansas City and Coast exhibitor, is producing the series of 12 "Humanettes" which RKO will distribute on its 1930-31 program. Bert Levy, for a score of years in vaudevalle, is creator of the subjects, the nature of which RKO is keeping secret pending the first release. The initial subject has been completed and the second now is in work.

Vaude Time Is Cut

Seattle—New routing of the Radio-Keith-Orpheum vaudeville shows, with a split-week between Spokane and Tacoma, is the latest change to be made here by James Carrier, RKO division manager with local headquarters. The shows formerly played the Orpheum Theatre in each of these cities for seven days, but mediocre business because of small population and depressed commercial conditions have made it necessary to play only three days in each city, at least during the summer.

54 Shorts in 6 Series on Radio Line-up, 1930-31

Radio Pictures will release 54 subjects on its 1930-31 program of short features, according to Jerry Safron, general sales manager of short features.

Production will be divided between the East and West Coasts. In New York, Louis Brock will use the RCA Gramercy Studios for the production of 12 two-reel comedies. One series of six to be known as "The Headliners" series, will present W. C. Fields, "Follies" and "Vanities" comedian. Other stars are to be secured for the series. Mark Sandrich and Montie Brice have been signed as directors.

Larry Darmour Prod. will furnish 18 shorts from its Hollywood Studios, including six Mickey McGuire two reel comedies and a series of 12 two reel comedies featuring star names.

Twenty-four single reel novelties round out Radio's short product. Twelve one reel "Humanettes" and 12 animated cartoons are included in these groups.

Following is the detailed summary of Radio Pictures' short product lineup for the coming season:

Larry Darmour Prod.: Six Mickey McGuire two reel comedies; 12 two reel comedies with motion picture starring talent.

Louis Brock Prod.: Six two reel "Headliners" comedies; six two reel star comedies.

Single reel novelties: 12 "Humanettes"; 12 animated cartoons.

Vita. Varieties For Next Season To Number 400

Vitaphone Corp. will spend $2,500,000 on the production of Vitaphone Varieties during the season of 1930-31. The company says the exact number of short reel productions to be made has not been definitely determined, but it will approximate the 400 made during the 1929-30 season. They will be made at both East and West Coast studios, averaging seven or eight subjects a wek. Bryan Foy is director-in-chief of short-reel productions on the Coast and Murray Roth in the East.

Murray Roth

With two stages available at the Brooklyn studios, production in the East will be speeded up. For that purpose Roy Mack, who has been directing Vitaphone Varieties in Hollywood, has been brought to New York and assigned to Roth's production unit. The eastern writing staff has been augmented also and now includes Stanley Rauh, Homer Mason, Neville Fleeson, Walton Butterfield and Burnet Hershey.

26 Musicals in Color

A feature of the future productions is the series of 26 musical Vitaphone Varieties in Technicolor, a number of which have already been made under the direction of Roy Mack, Jack Haskell and Larry Ceballos. Among these will be "Girls We Remember," with the College Quartette, the Le Marcos, the Aherns, Mazie Mayfair and a chorus of 50 girls and boys, with Lotti Loder, "the girl from Vienna," in "Lonely Gigolo," with a large cast. Twelve of the one-reel Technicolor musical productions will feature the Vitaphone Kiddies, who have already been seen in "A Holiday in Storyland," "Bubbles" and other natural color short reel pictures.

Bryan Foy

The series of Potters comedies, from J. P. McEvoy's newspaper syndicated stories, will be continued until 12 have been produced. Coming numbers in this series, directed by Bryan Foy, are "The Potts in "Pa Gets a Vacation," "Big Money" and "Out for Game," Lucien Littlefield is featured.

Robert L. Ripley, whose cartoons of queer news events and oddities of all kinds, "Believe It or Not," are syndicated in 250 daily newspapers throughout the country, will make a series of Vitaphone Varieties novelties under the same title.

A contract has been signed with Lew Fields, for a series having a musical setting. The first will be "In the Good Old Summer Time."

A series told in rhyme and in dance will be made with George Hale staging dances.

Shorts Used as Fillers By Hamilton Chain

Hamilton, O.—John A. Hilwig, president of the Jewel Photoplay Co., operating houses in Hamilton, has this to say on short features:

"We do not pay a lot of attention to the shorts, but merely use them as program fillers, except in such cases where our feature happens to be weak, then we book in a much better short to balance the program. We have been using mostly comedies in addition to news reels, although we occasionally run in a novelty or two.

"However, my observation is that the novelty shorts are improving rapidly, in fact, much more so than the comedies, therefore, we may use more novelties in the future. We advertise the shorts, yes, but this advertising is what you might call incidental. In other words, our feature gets the major portion of the newspaper white space, and the short considerably less in proportion."

Colorart Compiling One Reel Travelogue Series

Hollywood—Colorart Synchrotone is compiling shots from its library of Technicolor subjects filed in various parts of the world, and plans to synchronize them with music and a descriptive talk, and release them as single reelers. The company plans to release 24 shorts for the new season, in addition to three features. The subjects were filmed in some 200 countries, the company claims. There are more than 100,000 feet of film in the library, it is stated.

Fox Completes Second

Hollywood—Wallace Fox has just completed his second comedy for Pathe, "Carnival Revue." The cast included T. Roy Barnes, Ruth Hiatt, Ray Hughes, Frank Sabini and Eddie Clark. Fox's first was "Hearts and Hoofs," western comedy. "Bill" Woolfenden is supervising Pathe

Pathe Schedules 578 Subjects on Year's Program

Hollywood—Pathe will release 578 short subjects, totaling 630 reels, in 1930-31. Comedy, news, cartoon, sport, travel, song, [illegible] complete line-up.

E. B. Derr

Two-reel comedies total 52 in the following eight brands: Checker, music and novelty; Manhattan, sophisticated farce; Melody, in which music will be featured; Campus, on college life; Follies, short revues; Rodeo, which will be western in idea and background; Rainbow, musical; and Whoopee musical comedies.

Newsreels — 256 — as follows: Pathe Sound News, 104 issues; Pathe Disc News, 52 issues; Pathe News, 104 issues.

Novelty reels with dialogue, special music and color—156—as follows: Pathe Audio Review, 52 issues and Pathe Disc Review, 52 issues. Silent novelty reel, Review, 52.

Animated cartoon comedies—52—as follows: Aesop's Sound Fables, 26 issues; Aesop's Silent Fables, 26 issues. Produced by the Van Beuren Corp.

Personal adventure pictures — 26 — released in the Vagabond Adventure series featuring Tom Terris. Produced by the Van Beuren Corp.

Sport reels—26—of the Grantland Rice Sportlights, produced by Jack Eaton for the Van Beuren Corp.

Here's Proof That Shorts Are Getting Better; Build Up Your Show With Them

"Gym Jams"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 965—1 Reel)

Real Headline Act

LEW MAYER is a real kingpin when it comes to juggling. He supplements this with a running line of chatter, which makes his almost-incredulous juggling ability, even more difficult. In this, he twirls Indian clubs in amazing manner, and then juggles several balls with a nonchalance and humorous twist that will make audiences gasp. Mayer's name should have draw, and this is worth extra billing. Running time, ten minutes.

Will give good balance to musical bill.

"His Bachelor Daddy"

(Universal-Talker—2 Reels)

Sunny Jim, Snapped Up

THE often-used—and much abused—domesticated comedy plot which has branded practically all of Sunny Jim's predecessors, has been changed for this. The switch is a welcome relief, and offers entertainment, light, but of a fair calibre with a particular appeal to the youngsters. Grownups with a fondness for kiddies will like it, too.

Sunny's uncle, a crabby old bachelor, hates babies. Young Jim is shipped to the uncle's home when his father leaves for Europe, causing headaches—and heartaches to the old gent. A pretended illness scares the uncle and breaks down further sales resistance. Running time, 20 minutes.

Strong feature, drama or comedy-drama, will go well.

"Eventually, But Not Now"

(RKO—2 Reels)

Plenty of Laughs

THIS carries loads of laughs and rates as a fine comedy, although it goes to extremes, so that the ending is silly. It's about a reformer, who tries to jail a traveling show company for alleged indecency. It opens on a train, where the company is practicing, to the chagrin of the "blue-nose." There are some fine comedy bits in the sequence where the ventriloquist scares the porter and reformer by making it appear that several dogs are talking. The reformer's audience walks out on him, so he gets the show troupe pinched. To prove its innocence, the company, dressed in sedate costumes, puts on a goody-goody show in court. The jurors want to know about jazz, and the gang puts it on, and how. Judge, jury and reformer succumb to the urge, and shake it up plenty. Running time, about 25 minutes.

Will provide comedy and musical balance for any bill.

Double Dose

Hollywood—Overhead in a studio:
"That star sure has got lots of IT, hasn't she?"
"Yes; and she's so stuck up now that she spells it with two I's."

"Audio Review No. 16"

(Pathe—Sound—1½ Reels)

Hits the Half-Way Mark

JUST in between. The jungle performance by marionettes is pleasing and scenic shots of Rome are okay, but the "Audio's Quartette" rendering "Sweet Alice Ben Bolt" in an old American setting flops miserably. Does not stack up with the average Audio. Running time, 12 minutes.

Divertissement for light-comedy feature.

"Sixteen Sweeties"

(Pathe—Musical—2 Reels)

Snappy Revue Number

HARRY DELMAR is the producer-director of this musical revue, which rates a place on any bill where material of this type clicks. Nothing sensational in the piece, Delmar satisfying with a steady round of snappy songs and dances, interspersed with comedy chatter from Bob Carney and others. Eddie Elkins officiated with the baton. Pleasing. Running time, 22 minutes.

Just the stuff for a feature built along dramatic lines.

"The Conquest of the Cascades"

(Gen. Elec. Co.—Synchronized)

Chaser Stuff

ROXY showed this, but the audience fidgeted. It's a combined scenic and animated diagram, showing the manner in which the Great Northern R. R. tunnell in Washington was constructed. Patrons who get a kick out of man's triumph over nature will like this. It has some fine scenery to recommended it.

"Alias the Bandit"

(Universal-Silent—2 Reels)

Stereotyped Western

THEY must be wild over westerns to go for this, the usual Bobbie Nelson shoot 'em up stuff. The kid is clever in a saddle and hits better than average as a western performer. We bet patrons at houses where this stuff is screened know every corner and tree in the backwoods used as the setting, because the locale never changes in any of the Nelson subjects. The kids will like it. Running time, 18 minutes.

Weak; needs strong feature support.

"Idle Chatter"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 954—1 Reel)

Funny Stuff

LOU HOLTZ gets off a few good stories and a recitation which embodied tag lines of many familiar poems, songs and gags. It's a good subject, which can be depended upon for laughs. He appears in a stage monologue turn, and there are a couple of shots showing the audience reaction to his lingo. It's a well done subject. Running time nine minutes.

Good for musical bill or with heavy dramatic feature.

"Step Right Up"

(Universal-Silent—2 Reels)

Fair Comedy Stuff

DON'T take this too seriously. Just average clowning, featuring Sid Saylor, the country "boob" and his unconscious antics on a circut lot where the wise-guy performers ride him, and all because he has a big crush on the pretty stunt rider of the show. Sid, of course, gets the girl. Running time, 19 minutes.

There are some laughs in this, so stay away from straight comedy feature.

"They Go Boom"

(Roach—M-G-M—2 Reels)

Funny Stuff

LAUREL AND HARDY, that clever, comical duo in a light array of pure, unadulterated slapstick. They put it over with a bang. The gags are chiefly of an ancient vintage, but the team draws many hearty laughs! The yarn opens with a shot in their apartment, where Laurel does everything possible to doctor a serious cold and sneezing epidemic suffered by his teammate, Hardy. Of course, Laurel's intentions are good, but 20 minutes of clumsiness soon litter the room with wasted medicine, water, pillow-feathers and the like.

although audience reaction in the house where this was caught was extremely favorable. Running time, 20 minutes.

A feature drama and a short reel with music and songs are just the thing for this.

"Station S-T-A-R, No. 9"

(Tiffany Talker—1 Reel)

Entertaining

THESE broadcasts from the studios are entertaining subjects containing a wealth of human interest material and some snappy gags and songs. Wesley Barry highlights this one, outlining his trials and tribulations in proving that he really has grown up. Bert Wheeler is the master of ceremonies, and adds some funny stuff. Running time, six minutes.

For any kind of bill.

"Websterian Nights"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 998—1 Reel)

A Laugh-Getter

BEN RYAN and Harriet Lee are a couple of hardboiled mugs who stray into the library. Here they try to dope out a book to read, and wind up with the dictionary. Their twisted slants on words result in some funny gags and they get off a funny line which is amusing and which will get laughs. Running time, nine minutes.

Will round out musical show or where funny single reeler needed.

"Beethoven"

(FitzPatrick-Synchronized—1 Reel)

SOME highlights in the life of Beethoven and renditions of his famous works. A very interesting biographical and human interest study of the deaf composer, who lived in hopes that he some day would have his hearing restored that he might hear renditions of some of his works. Running time, eight minutes.

Very good for balancing comedy bill.

'Ben Bernie"

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 958— Half Reel)

Good Band Act

THIS is a stage band act with a colorful setting. Ben Bernie injects a few good gags, and the band does its stuff in fine fashion. There is a silhouette interpretation of one of the numbers which helps, plus a fair song number. Running time, six minutes.

Spot in on bill needing music unit.

"The Head Man"

(Vitaphone Varieties, No. 990—1 Reel)

Has Few Laughs

HUGH O'CONNELL and Kitty Kelly in a henpecked husband skit. It opens with the couple honeymooning, and then shows a year later contrast, when the husband is continually on the spot. He tunes in on a radio program in which the announcer is telling about the tactics used by husbands in the Stone Age. Hubby falls asleep, and dreams he is lord of his own home through caveman methods. When he awakes, he attempts to put the theory into practice, but wifey crowns him. Running time, 10 minutes.

Where fair comedy can be counterbalanced by good musical program.

"Footnotes"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 985—1 Reel)

Fair Musical Filler

A STAGE setting with a mammoth musical scale for a background is the best thing about this. Animated notes, a half dozen dancing girls, do a number that's different. The Page Sisters sing "Hello, Baby," with Helen Kane trills, and Oscar Grogan warbles a couple of numbers seated in the middle of musical insignia. Plugs for 5 minutes.

Fair filler on any kind of a bill.

Need a Trunk

Hollywood—Vanity cases have gone out of style, it is whispered, because no actress can find one large enough to contain her vanity

"Honolulu"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3808—1 Reel)

Ordinary Society Slush

IF YOUR program needs a short filler about a Gigolo who has a "way with the women," a wife of a stolid millionaire who is crazy about the lad, a hard-boiled cabaret dancer, then this is it. Moves fast enough, has a few laughs and ends with a tag as the solemn husband of the butterfly wife departs for Honolulu with the cabaret girl while the Gigolo looks on in astonishment. Noel Madison, Vera Marsh and Jess Kennedy do the work. Running time, 9 minutes.

Will do on program where the feature is exceptionally strong and doesn't need support.

"Western Whoopee"

(Pathe-Sound—1 Reel)

Don't Miss This One!

THE market is fairly flooded with good cartoon material—but you ain't seen nothing yet until you pipe this new opus just turned out of the animated studios of Van Beuren, their best to-date and one of the funniest cartoon subjects we have ever seen—bar none. Clever pen-and-ink animation is greatly enhanced by proficient musical synchronization. The gags are big laugh provokers from the flash of the main title until the end. A splendid job; book it! Running time, 7 minutes.

Splendid comedy entertainment to effectively offset heavy feature stuff of almost any type.

"Window Cleaners"

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 3008—1 Reel)

LOU BRICE and Neely Edwards put across a one-reel semi-thrilling song and patter act in this one. The action is laid on the window sills of an apartment spotted high above Times Square. The two boys render a cracked-tenor duet on what they see inside the windows which they wash. The scenes inside show two husbands making love to two wives but the domestic duets are mixed. The finale shows both couples at dinner. It keeps the audience happy. Runs 7 minutes.

Good as a buffer against a heavy feature picture.

"Fish, Fowl and Fun"

(Pathe-Talker—1 Reel)

Clean Sport Stuff

A GRANTLAND RICE "Sportlight," particularly appropriate for this season, when rifles are being oiled and primed, and the rust being cleared off fishing rods. Fine sports material with a backwoods setting for a lazy Florida hunting-fishing party. The amateurish portrayals by the campers slows the reel up in a few spots, although this same factor, on the other hand, lends an additional natural touch. The scenic spots picked are picturesque. Running time, 10 minutes.

Okay with a good feature Western, and a light musical short.

"Audio Review, No. 17"

(Pathe-Talker—1 Reel)

Solid Entertainment

INTERESTING entertainment, with a good steady pace throughout. The subject embraces four units: "Rough English Art," clever acrobatic dancing by a London quartet; "Two Story Pianos," in which a snappy pair of ivory ticklers pound out favorite tunes on two double-keyboard French pianos; "Jewels," J. P. Morgan's startling collection of rare and beautiful gems; and concluding with "Men of Dartmouth," the college song rendered by the Dartmouth glee club, well done. Running time, 17 minutes.

A pleasing mystery which might go well with either musical comedy feature material, or straight light comedy.

"Chills and Fever"

(Pathe-Talker—2 Reels)

Not Bad, and Not Good

A REHASH of everything that's ever been seen in a two-reel mystery-musical comedy, with only a bevy of pretty girls and unique costuming of the chorus the saving graces. Arch Heath directed. It's not all Archie's fault, because he just did not have the gag and story material which is needed to make a short of this type stand out from any other. Rate it as fair. Running time, 20 minutes.

"Firebugs"

(Talkertoon-Paramount—1 Reel)

Good Laugh Cartoon

SOME of the absurdities of this cartoon subject are good for plenty of laughs. It's one of the series produced by Max Fleischer. There is some funny business when the fire department is called to answer an alarm, and its efforts to induce the piano-playing fiend to escape, the burning building. Running time, six minutes.

Where light short is needed, this is O. K.

Pathe Primed to Shoot Colors in Sound Newsreel

Pathe Sound News is now equipped to picture, develop and deliver scenes in color at the same speed as with black and white films through the Pathe Coloratura process, states Terry Ramsaye.

Terry Ramsaye

This process is made possible by special developments in both negative and positive raw stock, made by the Dupont-Pathe laboratories working in cooperation with Pathe. All special filtering devices and complexities of prisms in the optical system have been eliminated, fitting the new Coloratura cameras for the hit-and-run methods and hasty operation necessary to the picturing of news.

The Coloratura process has been under the supervision of Stuart W. Webb and Terry Ramsaye. Pathe has a battery of Coloratura cameras in process of construction, according to Ramsaye, with certain modifications suggested by the experience of the units now in the field. The Coloratura process works in synchronism with the standard RCA Photophone recorders.

Coast Newsreel House

Hollywood—First newsreel theatre on the Coast is to be established under plans of Fox West Coast at the President, legit house, which is seeking the house for the purpose. The house now is playing stock.

Pathe Schedules 578 On 1930-31 Program

Press humor—26 issues of Talking Topics of the Day—offering humor selected from the press of the world.

Concentrating on Coast

All of the 52 comedies on the Pathe 1930-31 schedule will be made on the Coast under supervision of E. B. Deer, executive vice-president in charge of production.

Two large stages are being devoted exclusively to the protection of comedies and $250,000 is being spent for a complete comedy village which will provide permanent exterior and interior sets. New sound projection rooms and executive offices are being rushed to completion for the comedy production.

Riesenfeld Chooses Title

Hollywood—"The Wizard's Apprentice" is the final title of the fourth United Artists' series of featurettes produced by Dr. Hugo Riesenfeld and William Cameron Menzies.

"U" Cutting Down On Short Output For New Season

Universal, which is cutting down on feature production this year, will have proportionately fewer short features as contrasted with other years. The exact number to be released has not yet been determined upon.

So far, the only series definitely set is the George Sidney-Charles Murray series.

K.C. Showmen Passing Up Possibilities in Shorts

When the short does not warrant marquee billing, it is given space on the lobby cards.

According to "Breck" Fagin, manager of the Plaza, often an effort is made to secure the same program as was used when playing first run; that is, booking the same shorts that were used with the feature when the feature played down town, if the program was balanced properly.

A group of suburban houses here, known as "The Friendly Theatres," all operated by the Midland Circuit of Theatres, as a rule give the titles of the short subjects in the newspaper advertising.

Many theatres merely mention "Comedy" or "Newsreel" in the billing.

In summary, short subjects are increasing their popularity in Kansas City.

Real Aid for Selling Short to Public

At Left — The Pitch and Putt Rug, offered by Educational to de luxe houses for the staging of putting matches in the lobby, or for entertaining patrons while waiting for seats.

At Right—Another pastime, golf croquet, which theatres are finding an aid in putting over this comedy.

A high spot in exploitation of a short feature is being reached by theatres on "Match Play" in co-operation with Gordon S. White, head of Educational's advertising and publicity departments. A wide variety of special exploitation helps are available.

High and Low On Music Row

IF some of the songwriters feel that they must have California atmosphere to produce great songs, all they'll have to do is go to 799 Seventh Ave., take the elevator to the third floor, turn to the right, then to the left and enter the new Robbins professional department, patterned after the modern Californian villa. This is the culmination of an idea which Jack Robbins fostered for two years. "Should I reveal exactly how I feel?" Certainly. That it is the coziest, nookiest and most modern music house in the country.

Elmore White, formerly professional manager for DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., has resigned to become general manager for Davis, Coots & Engel, Inc. Elmore, who is one of the most popular men in songland, has already started off with a bang with a new song by Benny Davis and Freddy Coots entitled "Sharing." Other songs on the Davis, Coots & Engel catalogue which look good are "The Kiss That Made a Fool of Me," "Flappers on Parade," "Y'Oughta Know," "Blue Eyes" and "Why" from the musical comedy "Sons o' Guns."

Bob Mellin, Chicago Remick manager, is using a clever stunt in bringing a new Remick song before the public. Every day the office force must wear fresh daisies, while every one who visits the office is given a daisy. Well, if you can't guess the title of the song it's "Telling It to the Daisies," written by Joe Young and Harry Warren. Sprinkled among this firm's theme songs are a few popular tunes which show great promise. They are "Reminiscing," written by Edgar Leslie and Harry Warren, "There You Are," by Mort Dixon and Rube Bloom, and "Absence Makes the Heart Grow Fonder," by Sam Lewis, Joe Young and Harry Warren.

The Boulton Expedition, sent by the American Museum of Natural History, has returned with phonograph records of African Bantu melodies. Latest reports do not contain any information as to whether or not movie magnates are attempting to sign the writers on the dotted lines.

Charles Bayha, formerly with Shapiro-Bernstein, has accepted an offer from Pat Flaherty to become band and orchestra manager for the Red Star Music Co. Charlie has made quite a reputation for himself as the "man who can get more plugs in one night than anyone else in the business."

* * *

E. B. Marks Music Co. have just published a ballad called "Somewhere in Life's Green Pastures," which is another "Vagabond" type of song that seems to click these days. The number was written by Harrison G. Smith and Benjamin H. Garrison.

Harms will publish the songs synchronized in the Radio picture, "The Cuckoos," featuring Bert Wheeler, Bob Woolsey and Dorothy Lee. The entire score, written by Bert Kalmar and Harry Ruby, include: "I Love You So Much," "Wherever You Are," "All Alone Monday," "Dancing the Devil Away" and "Oh, How We Love Our Alma Mater." Harms has been granted permission to release "What Is This Thing Called Love?" from "Wake Up and Dream."

Despite offers to shake the dust of Broadway for Holywood, Billy Jerome, who wrote hits when you and I were young, intends to stay in the East. "There is only one Broadway and it's here," he says.

PINCUS.

M-G-M Constructs Music Building At W. C. Studios

Hollywood—What is claimed to be the largest music department set up provided by producers has been completed on the M-G-M lot. The new building, which contains over 7,000 square feet, will house the arrangers, orchestra conductors, librarians and permanent singing and dancing choruses of the company. Also included in the new building are 31 offices, 3 vocal rehearsal halls, 2 individual audition rooms, a lounging room, a projection room especially designed for the perfect reproduction of music and a music library.

The song writing staff, which includes Arthur Freed, Herbert Stothart, Clifford Grey, Roy Turk, Fred Ahlert, Dorothy Fields, Jimmy McHugh, Fred Fisher, Howard Johnson, Reggie Montgomery, Andy Rice, J. Russell Robinson, George Waggoner and George Ward, will continue to work in the five bungalows on the M-G-M lot. They want privacy!

Gus Edwards Launches Stage and Screen School

Hollywood—Gus Edwards' Stage and Screen Institute, which the discoverer of proteges has had under consideration for over a year, will be launched immediately upon his return to Hollywood from a tour over the R-K-O Circuit. Edwards' plans call for establishing a school in Hollywood for the purpose of developing stage and screen talent in youngsters who give promise of future ability.

Band Competition

Indianapolis—For the first time in months, this city has the choice this week of two theatres where stage bands are offered. They are the Indiana, as usual, and the Circle, under the same management, which will present a special attraction during the week with Paul Spor in charge of the Charlie Davis band. The United States Indian Reservation band is playing at the Indiana.

Huff Again at Organ

Indianapolis—Lester Huff, Indianapolis organist who has been absent from local theatres since November, has been added to the personnel of the Circle theatre. The Circle organ has been silent virtually since the advent of talking pictures. He will present patrons with weekly organ solos. Huff left the city last November for New York, where he appeared at the Paradise theatre.

Lavin Named Manager

Pat Flaherty, general manager and vice-president of Red Star Music Co., states that Jack Lavin, who for the past six years was associated with Villa-Moret, is now Chicago manager of the Red Star Music Co., with headquarters in the Woods Theatre Building. Martha Young Lavin, formerly with J. W. Jenkins, has been appointed assistant to Jack Lavin.

Before the "Mike" In N. Y. Studios

JOE FRISCO, [illegible] the Benefit," scored [illegible] niest ever made, has recently completed another rib-tickler, "The Song Plugger," at the Eastern Vitaphone studios. In the cast are Wynn Talbert's Orchestra, Leo Donnelly, Harry Brooks, Arthur Leonard, Milt Francis, Josephine Williams, Margery McKay, Sid Garry and Val Sherry.

No, Oscar, it wasn't the balmy spring weather that brought the frisky squirrels out to bask in the sunshine out Flatbush way. Well, since you coax me, I'll tell. 'Twas Jim McWilliams, the nut vaudevillian, who strayed away from the keeper long enough to make a Vitaphone short entitled "Grand Uproar," a burlesque on grand opera and political speeches.

Ray Foster, camera man at the Warner Brooklyn plant, claims that the daily mileage he travels to and from work, totaled for a year, would take him to China and back. You'd better figure it out again, Ray, because we find that you travel a total of 9,000 miles. That means that you'd be left stranded in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, on your way back. Why don't you head for the Bronx and you'll be sure to get back home?

Lee Morse, radio and recording artist of the "blues" type of songs, has finished a musical sketch, "The Song Racket," under Murray Roth's direction. Murray, you know, is an old-time songwriter himself.

Ben Listengart, who is known about town as Abe Meyer's Good Man Friday, leaves this week for a trip to California. Ben scored "Hunting Tigers in India," "Across the World With Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson" and "Simba." You won't find any wild animals there, Ben.

In last week's column we erroneously stated that Johnny Green wrote the scores for "Queen High," which is now in production at the Paramount Long Island studios. Johnny really orchestrated the musical scores, which were written by Ralph Rainger, Arthur Schwartz, Henry Souvain and E. Y. Harburg. Sorry.

During intervals in the shooting of "Queen High," Ginger Rogers, who has the feminine lead, perched herself on the studio piano and gave an impromptu bit of entertainment a la Helen Morgan.

Lulu McConnell, in a short entitled "Neighborly Neighbors," gives a fine impression on how the game of bridge should NOT be played. Ray Cozine directed this one, which had the staff bursting with silent laughter. This is not a gag, but the folks had to muffle their laughter because of the microphones.

Under Mort Blumenstock's direction, "Mother Goose Parade," a one-reel short, was completed last week at the Paramount Long Island studios. The cast included about a score of talented children who could sing, dance, [illegible] Ethel Waters and felt perfectly at home under the mike. Three of the kiddies showed so much promise that they were selected to play in "Skippy," which is scheduled to be filmed soon.

[illegible] next picture, came over to give the studio the once-over and get acquainted.

THE STUDIO SLEUTH

Indiana Showmen Fighting Against Daylight Saving

South Bend, Ind.—Opposing the adoption of daylight saving time here this year, the managements of fourteen local theatres have addressed letters to members of the city council, urging them to refrain from adoption of the fast time schedule.

The city council has no formal proposal before it with reference to daylight saving time. Last year it adopted a resolution for daylight time after local banks, manufacturing companies and business institutions had made known their intention of adopting a fast time schedule whether it was enforced by ordinance or not. Some of the councilmen, it is understood, would prefer to delay a decision on this question. One proposal has been to place the question on the ballots at the spring primary.

Goshen Decides At Public Hearing

Goshen, Ind.—Whether this town will have daylight saving depends largely on what other cities in this section do. Last summer Goshen adopted daylight saving time for the first time in a number of years. Last fall a referendum was carried by a small majority for daylight saving. The question on which the voters expressed their opinion, however, was that the city should adopt daylight saving time in the event daylight saving carried in neighboring cities. A similar referendum was defeated in Elkhart by a fair majority. A public hearing on the question will be held April 21 in the council chambers.

Goldberg Heads Popular Amusement Co. in Omaha

Omaha—Three former officers of the World Realty Co., who sold their chain of local and outstate theatres to Publix several months ago, have organized the Popular Amusement Company of Omaha, Inc., with a capitalization of $25,000.

The officers of the new company are Harry L. Goldberg, Jules W. Rachman and I. B. Zimman. Goldberg recently severed connections with Publix after serving as division manager here for six months.

Planning to build up a downtown chain of second-run houses, the new company is wiring the Moon and Muse theatres to open soon at 15 cents. Other neighborhood houses will also be acquired, it was stated.

Directing War Spy Story

Hollywood—Roy J. Pomeroy will direct Earl Derr Biggers' war spy story, "Inside the Lines," as his first picture for RKO. Betty Compson and Ralph Forbes will play the leads.

To Film Serb Retreat

Belgrade—The Adria Film Company has begun production of a sound film featuring the retreat of the Serbian troops in 1915. The military authorities have put troops at the company's disposal.

"What's in a Name?"

Here's the why many important picture and legit stellar lights found it advisable to change their names before hitting the trail for stardom, as recited by Sid Skolsky:

Michael Arlen had to start life as Kouyoumdjian. Luis Antonio Damaso de Alonzo is now known as Gilbert Roland. Joan Crawford left home to make good as Billie Cassin, and when she played in Ziegfeld's "Follies" she called herself Lucille LeSueur. Evelyn Brent was Billy Riggs, which isn't bad when you learn that Guadalupe Villa Lobos is now Lupe Velez.

Claire Windsor is ritzy for Ola Kronk. Eddie Dowling's full name is Eddie Dowling Goucher. Francine Larrimore was born as Francine LaRemee. Claudette Colbert was originally known as Miss Chauchoion. Dennis King's real tag is Dennis Pratt. Gertrude Lawrence is from the family called Klasen. Ina Claire is the daughter of Joseph Fagan. Olga Petrova was born with the simple name of Muriel Harding.

Anita Page is really Miss Pomares. Lillian Bonny became popular as Billie Dove and Mary Brian is Louise Byrdie Dantzler. Colleen Moore first hit Hollywood as Katherine Morrison. Richard Carlton Brimmer found Richard Dix more to his liking and Marie Koenig changed her name to Mae Murray. Ramon Novarro was Ramon Sammaneigos and Pola Negri was Apolloni Achlupez. Gwen Lee was Gwen LePinski. Mack Sennett even changed his. He started out as Walter Terry.

Marcus Buys 4 In Indiana; Seen As Chain Nucleus

Indianapolis—The purchase of four theatres here—the Alamo, Cozy, Regent and Gaiety—has brought to light the formation of a new chain of houses. They were taken over by M. Marcus, of Fort Wayne, who for the past ten years has been operator of the Quimby chain in Fort Wayne. In closing the deal with the former owner, Jean Marks, Mr. Marcus announced that he is planning to make the four houses the nucleus of a large chain in this city. The purchase price was not made public.

British Theatregoers Pay $30,000,000 in Taxes

London—It is reported that theatres in Great Britain and Ireland contributed roughly 6,000,000 pounds (about $30,000,000) last year to the treasury in entertainments tax. The sum paid to the treasury on this account from picture houses for the four months of last year, April to July, inclusive, was 1,926,682 pounds, which was equivalent, roughly, to 6,000,000 pounds a year. The fact that the picture public paid this vast sum was one more proof of the immense hold the cinema has on the British public, it was claimed.

Bowman Rejoins Columbia

Al Bowman will manage Columbia's branch office at Detroit, succeeding Jack Young. Bowman was with the company two years ago.

Columbia has named J. A. Kraker successor to W. E. Weinshenker, who resigned as manager in Milwaukee a week ago.

Ministers Win Ohio Fight On Sunday Movies

Portsmouth, O.—Court of Appeals has affirmed the Common Pleas Court in a mandamus action brought by ministers to compel the police chief to arrest movie managers. Two managers have been arrested weekly under the state laws for more than a year, and fined $50 and costs each under city ordinance. The police chief contends the fines should go into the city's coffers and not to the state, but ministers thought otherwise. This, it is believed, will end the long drawn out Sunday fight.

Dickinson Wins "Blue" Fight in Two More Towns

Kansas City—Sunday openings have been won in two towns where theatres belonging to Glen W. Dickinson Enterprises are operating. Sponsored by the Dickinson organization, a vote was taken in Hiawatha, Kans., last week, with the result that Sunday shows won by a 161 majority.

In Trenton, Mo., the Dickinson theatre, with the aid of an independent theatre owner, influenced the council to remove the ordinance.

An attempt to open theatres in Independence, Kans., last Sunday was stopped by the law.

Dickinson operates in 20 towns in Kansas and Missouri. In the last eight months, five of those towns have permitted Sunday openings.

Victories in Iowa

Des Moines—Sunday movies won some victories in the recent elections in Iowa towns. At Bloomfield the Sunday movie proposition received a 208 majority with 1,088 votes cast. Gowrie, Iowa, voting on the question, defeated the Sunday show, 485 voters casting a decision of 282 for and 199 against. Sigourney held a hot election and turned out a vote of 633 for the Sunday show and 400 against. At Garner, although the election was not legally binding upon it, the city council decided to abide by the voters' wishes by enacting an ordinance permitting the Sunday shows as soon as the sound equipment is installed at the theatre. The Sunday shows won by a large margin.

A Nebraska Landslide

David City, Neb.—Sunday movies were approved by a 3 to 1 vote of the town, with 1,080 of the 1,200 registered voters casting ballots.

Lose in Hiawatha

Hiawatha, Kan.—Sunday shows lost here by a vote of 846 to 485.

Rejected by Voters

Auburn, Neb.—The question of Sunday movies was voted down by a count of 662 to 572.

Win by Close Margin

Ashland, Neb.—Sunday shows won here in a town election by a margin of 39 votes.

Censor Repeal Bill Killed by N. Y. Legislature

Albany—Efforts to kill censorship in this state have flopped again. There was so little interest exhibited in the Post bill, calling for the repeal of censorship, that it died in committee.

The same held true of the Swartz and Nathanson bills relative to the licensing of projectionists. There was considerable opposition from projectionists throughout the state to the Swartz bill, so the introducer decided that it would be better not to attempt to bring it to a vote during the closing hours of the session.

There was no bill passed during the session which would relieve exhibitors throughout the state of the provisions of daylight saving, which becomes effective quite generally throughout New York state the last Sunday of this month.

There was less than a half dozen bills introduced of interest to the industry, and of these one single bill managed to pass both houses, and has gone to the Governor for final approval. This sole measure provides that motion picture machine operators shall be given twenty-four consecutive hours of rest in each calendar week.

Lobby Entertainment

South Bend, Ind.—Harry L. Davidson, manager of the Colfax, tried out a stunt this week which proved popular. Lester & Hoat, entertainers from Chicago, were presented at the theatre, but instead of playing on the stage, played in the lobby, presenting late song hits.

Booth Kills Woman

A Negress was killed when the projection booth in the Renaissance, New York, fell upon her as she was entering the theatre. Twenty-two others were injured in a stampede to get out of the house. The alertness of the two projectionists in turning off the electric current prevented a possible fire, city officials said.

Five Weeks for German Film

"Because I Loved You," the first all-German talker, broke the run record at the 55th St. Playhouse, New York, with a five-week play.

He-Man Stuff

Chicago—An office manager at one of the local exchanges is wearing a wound stripe as a result of an argument with an indie over the latter's refusal to give up an unpaid for picture to a pick-up man. The exhib defied the conventions by running the picture in spite of instructions to the contrary from the exchange man, and then, when called to task, defended his action by invading the exchange and socking the office manager. Aftermath is the exhib will have plenty of difficulty in booking pictures without a deposit or its equivalent in the future, local bookers declare.

Television Broadcast In Successful N. J. Test

Jersey City, N. J.—Television broadcasting has been effected on a large scale here. In a demonstration arranged by the local chamber of commerce, Mayor Frank Hague and other notables were pictured and their voices reproduced by two radio stations. Sound and vision were received simultaneously and transmitted to the separate stations, which put them on the air, the Jenkins radiovisor being used for receiving. Dr. Lee De Forest predicted for television an equal perfection with radio.

Goetz Sells Rights

Charles S. Goetz, president of States Cinema Production Corp., has sold territorial rights of his "The Woman Who Was Forgotten," to Michael J. Levinson of Philadelphia, distributing in Eastern Pennsylvania, Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Southern New Jersey and Virginia.

Falk Transferred

Milwaukee—The state division of Fox's Wisconsin theatres has been augmented by the appointment Louis A. Falk, formerly manager of the circuit's Oshkosh theatres, to this department. He will be assisted in this work by Stanley Segelbaum. Homer Gill remains as head of the division, with offices in this city.

Kids Present; Chicago Judge Bans Party Girl

Chicago—Because children were present when he attended a showing of Tiffany's "The Party Girl," Judge Lindsay of the Superior Court has dissolved an injunction which he had issued restraining the police from molesting exhibitors of the picture. Performances of the film in three local theatres were ordered cancelled.

In placing the judicial ban on the picture, the court said:

"I went to the theatre last night to judge its merits and I found a number of children witnessing the show. I have seen worse films from a moral standpoint, but minors were not admitted to them."

Victor Subsidiary and New Screen Unit on Charter List

Filing of incorporation papers at Dover, Del., by the Victor Animatograph Corp., non-theatrical motion picture subsidiary of the Victor Co., and at Albany, N. Y. by the new Natural Vision Projection Screen Corp., highlight the current batch of corporate activities in Eastern states.

Other Delaware charters filed include those of Midland Theatres, Inc., Dewayne Studios, Inc., photographers, and Colortone Pictures of America, Inc., organized to make color pictures.

In New Jersey, Fox formed Fox Theatres, Inc., to operate at Riverside.

New York, as usual, witnessed the greatest activity, authorities at Albany granting charters to the following, which are listed with attorneys' names:

Lobbyphone Co., sound devices, by Berger & Block, 217 Broadway, N. Y.; Maya Artcrafts, E. Haas, 16 Court St., Brooklyn; Raymond Productions, M. Winkler, 1440 Broadway, N. Y.; Breinlinger Amusement & Realty Corp., E. Flatow St., Bronx; Laurelton Amusement Co., M. M. Alpert, 2 Lafayette St., N. Y.; Independent Operating Corp., Schechter & Lotsch, 12 E. 41st St., N. Y.; Fox-Schless Neon Light & Sign Corp., M. H. Shapiro, 220 Broadway, N. Y.; Municipal Talkies M. Pictures, M. M. Cowen, 16 Court St., Brooklyn; Walter Tupper Jones Corp., S. Klaus, 120 Broadway, N. Y.; Flynn & Lee, Attorney's Albany Service, 299 Broadway, N. Y.; Ho-Bear Amusement Co., A. I. Horn, 302 Broadway, N. Y.

Fox Studios Rush Work on Next Year's Productions

Hollywood—A production schedule calling for the completion by Sept 15 of half of the 52 features on the Fox $22,000,000 program for next season was announced by James R. Grainger, general sales manager. Some of them have gone into production, the first, "Common Clay," nearing completion under the direction of Victor Fleming.

Lionel's Luck

Ottawa—On two successive days the automobile of Lionel Mortimer, orchestra conductor at B. F. Keith's, was stolen during performances, being recovered both times in suburbs. Mortimer is in the market for a car that can be taken into the theatre.

Marathons in Theatres Banned in Indianapolis

Indianapolis—Theatre managers will not be permitted to stage marathon dances to augment business and interest, according to a city ordinance just passed. The ordinance becomes effective May 1 and will not interfere with a marathon now in its last stages and being held by an American Legion post. The ordinance interprets an endurance dance as one lasting more than twelve hours and provides a penalty of not less than $25, nor more than $200 fine, and imprisonment not to exceed 180 days.

Double Tax on Music Confronts Canadian Exhibs

Toronto—Canadian exhibitors will be subject to a double music tax when the Rinfret amendments to the Canadian copyright act are adopted by the House of Commons.

Under the revised law, both the Authors and Composers Association of the United States and the British Performing Rights Society will be able to levy an annual tax for royalties. The former will impose a 10-cent seat tax while the Performing Rights Society makes its assessment on the basis of receipts.

Examples are given of the manner in which the exhibitors will be hit by the dual taxation. A theatre having 2,500 seats would have to pay approximately $1,000 per year all told, $250 going to the copyright wielders in the States.

Where the Money Goes

Washington.—William Klein, battling for defeat of the Vestal bill, now under consideration by the House Committee on Patents, recited the following royalty payments made to authors, to show that producers receive financial consideration only after authors have been paid huge sums for their contribution to a stage play:

"Desert Song," $573,000; "The Student Prince," $410,000; "Blossom Time," $595,000; "Good News," $402,000; "Potash and Perlmutter," $378,285; "The Trial of Mary Dugan," $312,650; "Broadway," $300,000; "The Bat," $300,000; "The Green Hat," $236,411; "Friendly Enemies," $232,331; and "New Moon," 262,000. He named about 20 other plays for which the royalties ranged from $35,000 to $181,000.

New Bill Would Destroy Legit Field, Charged

Washington—Complete destruction of the spoken drama and of the entire legit industry if the House even "attempts to pass" the Vestal bill (H.R. 6990) for revision of the copyright law, was predicted by William Klein, of New York, counsel for Shubert Theatrical Enterprises, in a fiery plea before the House Committee on Patents, which now is considering the measure.

The bill, Klein said, would take from the stage producers "their birthright"—the motion picture and talking picture rights in plays—which, he claimed, have superseded the stock company rights, previously profitable to the producers but now practically worthless. The divisibility provisions, he contended, would have this effect.

Automatic Copyrights Provided

The bill provides for "automatic copyrights," the rights vesting in the author when the work is completed, without registration or other action by the author, and provides that the copyright shall be divisible so that the author may sell separately the film magazine serial, stage, radio and other rights.

Klein stated that if Congress is interested in preserving the drama, now is the time to consider the problem. He said the composers, through the Dramatists' Guild, have obtained a monopoly.

"The authors have fared well," Klein said, "and with all the monopoly power they have, I don't blame them for coming to you and saying, 'Let's put another thumbscrew on the industry.'"

Al Woods, dramatic producer, told of large losses in producing unsuccessful plays, and said that he has to produce five plays to attain one success.

Lee Shubert, also a dramatic producer, testified that 70 per cent of the plays he produces are financial failures.

Ladies Love Brutes

(Paramount—All Talker)

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

"LADIES LOVE BRUTES" from Zoe Akins' "Pardon My Glove," just misses being an excellent picture. The story deals with the old theme of the difference between the proletariat and the aristocrat, but is weak in proving this difference. It cannot hope to rate better than ordinary program average, being perhaps the weakest picture Bancroft has made since he became a star. Name bets may put it over at the B. O. for a good average.

Sincere and human portrayals by Bancroft, as a wealthy but uncultured Italian contractor, and Mary Astor and Frederic March, as the aristocratic couple whose marriage has drifted on the rocks, lift this picture out of the mediocre class.

David Durand and Freddie Frederics supply added interest as the sons of Bancroft and the inharmonious married pair. Neither is allowed to overact. Many human and appealing touches are evident in "Ladies Love Brutes" which was directed by Rowland V. Lee.

Comedy and music would go well with this. It needs lifting.

Produced and distributed by Paramount from "Pardon My Glove" by Zoe Akins. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Adaptation and dialogue by Waldemar Young and Herman Mankiewicz. Edited by Eva Warren. Photographed by Harry Fischbeck. Length, 7,171 feet. Running time, about 70 minutes. Release date, April 19, 1930.

This Mad World

(M-G-M—All Talker)

Drawn Out and Heavy

(Reviewed by Sherwin Kane)

THIS adaptation of the French war play, "Terre Inhumaine," proves to be an ordinary dramatization of one of those war interludes in which the agents of the intelligence service triumph even though the enemy's firing squad is satisfied at the end. Sharing in this are all the nobler but, alas, less intriguing virtues, such as, self-sacrifice, mother love, duty consciousness and unreasoning patriotism. Having been authored by a Frenchman it is distinctly national in tone; the successful exploits of the servants of that nation being achieved with a simplicity little short of remarkable.

The picture has its entertaining moments, as what story of love and wartime intrigue has not? Unfortunately, these moments are too far separated to contribute a great deal as a whole, but even though it may not be necessary for you to install an additional ticket machine during its run it is safe to say your customers will not demand their money back later.

Basil Rathbone is the ingenious French spy who, impelled by a secret mission and a desire to visit his mother, lands behind the German line in Lorraine and makes his way to the maternal inn. Here he is recognized by the wife of a German general who is on hand to keep a rendezvous with her husband. She is circumvented in attempting to cause his arrest, and here we are asked to believe that love flowers in time to stay the trigger finger of the spy.

No century plant is this love, we learn by intimation in the following morning's scene. Overnight it has come to full bloom, and not even the boasting of the spy about "a little job" he had pulled off in Belgium which, incidentally, cost the life of his new sweetheart's nephew, could wither it. For, even though in her anguish at his confession, she seeks to cause his arrest, she is moved to commit suicide at the thought of having betrayed her lover.

Hearing the suicidal shot, the Germans enter the house to investigate. The spy's mother disclaims knowledge of his identity in order that she may be free to culminate his mission, and the son is led out by the firing squad.

Kay Johnson is the wife of the German general. Louise Dresser is the mother. These two, with Rathbone, carry out about eighty-five per cent of the action alone. You would think that this paucity of principals would help to speed the picture on its way and carry it to a swift and uninterrupted ending. But it doesn't. The picture suffers from lack of action, a result of the director's efforts to adhere closely to the original stage play. In consequence, scenes which are intended to build suspense, not satisfied with achieving it, go on interminably and result in being merely irritating. Some judicious cutting could have moved it to a smoother and more absorbing climax.

Human-ness and musical shorts are needed emphatically.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. From the French stage play, "Terre Inhumaine," by Francois de Curel. Directed by William de Mille. Adaptation by Clara Beranger. Dialogue by Clara Beranger and Arthur Caesar. Photographed by Peverell Marley and Hal Rosson. Length, about 6,100 feet. Running time, 68 minutes. Release date, April 19, 1930.

The Big Fight

(Sono Art-World Wide—All Talker)

Program Entertainment

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

ANTICIPATING the present popularity of candidates for the heavyweight championship, James Cruze produced a film version of "The Big Fight," the stage play in which Jack Dempsey appeared on Broadway about two years ago. The play did not last long. The picture can only hope to go over as regulation program fare in Class B houses in split weeks. It is not strong enough for more than program attention.

Taken directly from the play, the picture, nevertheless, has some original song numbers written by Lynn Cowan and Paul Titsworth. The story concerns the love of a heavyweight ring champion for an innocent manicurist. Various intrigues in which a gang leader connives with the champ's manager to throw the fight, at the same time holding the manicurist's brother as a hostage to force her to help in the plot, form the entire thread of the story.

The girl goes through with the deal until the last moment, and then lets her champion climb into the ring without doping him as ordered by the crooks. The audience is left in suspense during the fight as to whether or not the champion has been doped. Even after the challenger is put away for a long count, the real victor is in doubt for several hundred feet of film.

Sports followers at the coast preview assumed the story was based upon the split of Jack Dempsey and his former manager Jack Kearns, when the ex-champion married Estelle Taylor. If exhibitors think this angle will help the box office intake it could be used.

[illegible] writers in that angle.

Lola Lane plays the part of the girl and [illegible] plays the gang leader while James Eagle is satisfactory as the cowardly brother of the girl. Guinn Williams, as the champ, is well cast for the part. The balance of the cast is average. Walter Lang, who handled the direction provides nothing outstanding.

Just Fair

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

BEBE DANIELS and Ben Lyon carry the weight of this on their shoulders and are pretty much the whole show. The story is flimsy, far-fetched, hardly worth the talents of these stellar performers. Because of their standing, it may prove disappointing to their fans, although it will get by as ordinary film fare.

In it, Miss Daniels poses as a French maid in order to rob wealthy women. She surprises and captures another crook, and when he takes the rap to keep her from being caught, they become partners. She marries him on his promise to go straight, but when he is double-crossed by a business partner, he prepares to go back to safe-cracking. His first job conveniently is the place where Bebe formerly was maid. But she is lying in wait, and shoots him in the right hand when he tries to open the safe. The detective had been tipped off by Bebe, so declines to arrest Ben, who has learned his lesson and lost his Jimmy Valentine touch.

Rather an obvious and far-fetched plot, but with some suspense and a few comedy moments. Its tendency toward preachment makes the film seem longer than it really is.

Some cartoons will help.

Produced and distributed by Radio Pictures. Based on "The Chatterbox," by Bayard Veiler. Adaptation and dialogue by Wallace Hunt. Directed by George Archainbaud. Photographed by Roy Hunt. Length, 6,202 feet. Running time, 65 minutes. Release date, April 20, 1930.

Entertaining

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

DEFT directorial touches have transformed an unusually implausible story into a production that should please generally. While it is nothing to write home about, the fast tempo of the picture and the suspense hold the attention without flagging.

Joseph Schildkraut imparts to the role of a glorified gigolo a finesse that makes it an outstanding performance. Myrna Loy clicks satisfactorily as the feminine lead, but her part is a comparatively small one. The vehicle likewise provides little opportunity for the supporting cast, Schildkraut dominating it throughout.

To Director R. William Neill, however, should go the credit for any success the picture achieves. He has eliminated any semblance of padding and unnecessary posing, and his unique camera angles enhance the picture's appeal. Under his touch the tale is unfolded in a refreshingly sophisticated manner.

The characters are all Spanish, but the setting is apparently in an American city, the story revolving about a violinist in a cabaret who preys upon married women. He rescues from drowning a girl attempting suicide and then, acting upon a suggestion implanted by hearing of a similar instance, marries her with the understanding that he will support her for a year, she to commit suicide at the end of that period to enable him to collect her insurance. He kills a man to protect her name—and there's the regulation happy ending.

While the theme is preposterous, the story can be swallowed without a struggle, thanks to the treatment given it.

City Girl

(Fox—Part Talker)

Out-of-Date Meller

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

SOMEONE must have sold F. W. Murnau the idea that picture fans are unsophisticated, and they surely will have to be to root for this one. It's a goofy story, told in manner that savors of pictures of years ago. And some of the lines are a riot. Charles Farrell and Mary Duncan don't rate this kind of stuff.

The story's about a farmer boy from Minnesota, who goes to Chicago to sell his dad's uncut wheat. There he is caught in a falling market and doesn't do so well, but captures the heart of a waitress and brings her home as his bride. His stern pop figures the girl is a gold digger and refuses to treat her civilly. There is an impending hail storm and the threshing crew refuses to work at night to save the crop. The girl implores the foreman to "give the old boy a break," and the foreman returns to attack her when the crew is in the field. Pop shows up and upbraids the girl, but the husband beats up the foreman and makes him confess, and the rest is a cinch. The story and treatment are about as out of date as the old farmer's thresher, and that's plenty. They'll razz this plenty when and if it hits the wheat sections of Minnesota.

The picture starts out as a silent, but switches to dialogue after the boy brings his bride to the old farm.

This needs plenty of comedy and musical help.

Produced and distributed by Fox. From Elliott Lester's play, "The Mud Turtle." Directed by F. W. Murnau and staged by A. H. Van Buren and A. F. Erickson. Scenario by Berthold Viertel and Marion Orth. Edited and titled by Katherine Hilliker and H. H. Caldwell. Length 6,171 feet. Running time, about 70 minutes. Release date, Feb. 16.

Murder Will Out

A Fine Programmer

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

SPLENDID entertainment values with a mighty strong box-office appeal, obtained by intelligent direction in the hands of that veteran, Clarence Badger, and fine performances by a well-placed cast topped off by Jack Mulhall, Lila Lee and Noah Beery. Malcolm MacGregor, Tully Marshall, Alec B. Francis, Hedda Hopper and Claud McAllister offer convincing support.

The yarn involves a trick trio of blackmailers, posing as blood-thirsty Chinese tongmen who attempt to extort a fortune from members of Senator Baldwin's household, and the fiancee of the Senator's daughter. It was adapted from Murray Leinster's story "The Purple Hieroglyph" without a thrill being lost apparently in its transformation to the screen. Unlike many current program attractions, Badger evaded far-fetched angles to tell the story. He unreels hair-raising episodes in a most logical manner, with well-timed comedy relief injected in heavy spots.

It's not a sensational number by any means, but Badger builds up suspense which is gripping. Situations used in leading up to three "murders" provide thrilling entertainment. The average audience will like it tremendously. It gives sixty minutes of good, solid entertainment. Tout it as a strong programmer, but don't oversell.

There's a burial service in a dark cemetery at midnight. It's unusual in its handling and adds color to the mystery. Another good situation places Mulhall in a speed boat at midnight in New York bay, where he has been instructed to turn over a half million in cash to the tongmen. Mulhall attempts to best the trio and loses. He's all set to be taken for a "ride" when the lightning-like appearance of a U. S. submarine saves the day. The gang is captured and when their masks are torn away Mulhall and his intended father-in-law, the Senator, are shocked to learn that the Chinamen are none other than close family "friends."

Photography is excellent and medals are in order for perfect diction.

Use a snappy cartoon and a musical revue short to round out a perfectly balanced, and highly entertaining bill.

Produced and distributed by First National. From the story "The Purple Hieroglyph," by Murray Leinster. Directed by Clarence Badger. Adapted by J. Grubb Alexander. Photography by John Seitz. Dialogue by J. Grubb Alexander. Length, 6,200 feet. Running time, approximately, 1 hr., nine minutes. Released, April 6.

Bride No. 68

("Braut Nr. 68")

(Amer-Anglo—Part Talker)

Has Merit for Special Audiences

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

TOUTED as "the first German-made dramatic sound and talking picture"—with emphasis on the drama—this Tobis picture should go extremely well with German-American audiences, and with arty groups.

The locale is not German, nor are the characters German, story confining itself to the uncultured, uncouth prospectors of a small undeveloped town in the Australian wasteland, a spot where the scales tip heavily in favor of gold, and submerge the finer elementals of life.

It is not eligible for distribution in regular channels because of the all-German dialogue and German titles. Art house patrons not understanding German may favor it because of the heavy dramatic treatment, which marks German, or Russian-made product.

Reproduction of voices is not of the best, particularly in spots where dialogue of women was recorded. Photography is blotchy, but not to the extent where possible entertainment value is impaired.

Four hundred women are shipped from Great Britain to Australia where the government has arranged for marital matches in an effort to develop the country. They are married when the ship docks, all except Dick Ashton (Conrad Veidt), who, by a manipulation of numbers by the ship's officer, loses "Bride No. 68," Evelyne Bernheim (Elga Brink). The latter is paired with Steve Parker, a gold miner of Coolgardie, (Clifford McLaglen), a tough egg who is really more interested in the discovery of nuggets than in womanly charms. Evelyne soon falls in love with an American resident physician (Mathias Wieman), while Ashton becomes mentally deranged because of his loss. "Doc" eliminates himself via the trigger method, leaving Evelyne to her rough-bearded spouse.

The desert spot is beautiful and a terrific sand and wind storm adds color.

This was used effectively in a bill with a Laurel and Hardy comedy, offering much-needed relief.

Produced by Tobis Film, Berlin, and released in the U. S. (via states right market) by AmerAnglo. Directed by Carmine Gallone from Peter Bolt's story, "Die Braut Nr 68". Scenario by Ladislaus Vajda. Music score by Wolfgang Zeller. Photography by Otto Kanturek and Bruno Timm. Length, undetermined for release. Ran about 1 hour and 40 minutes. Released, April 6.

Hide-Out

(Universal—All Talker)

Has Popular Appeal

(Reviewed by J. P. Cunningham)

MORE college stuff with a racketeering background, but don in a style which registers immediately with a pop appeal to the great crowd of moviegoers who like light comedy-drama hokum, with the college-hero angle laid on thickly. The underworld is brought into play as an incidental phase of the piece, life on the campus highlighting most of the action.

It moves at a fairly fast clip, with lots of local college color to pep things up.

Jimmy Dorgan (James Murray) leads a double life. At Crane "U" he is known and greatly admired as Morley Wallace, "the greatest living stroke on this heah earth." Behind the scenes, he is a racketeer and rum runner, an outgrowth of his father's training. The coppers make a quiet pinch and Jimmy drops from college life, to be seen next on a train en route to the "pen". Before arriving at Atlanta, Jimmy fells the Federal agent and makes a getaway, only to show up at college at the beginning of the new term, a decision hastily arrived at when it becomes imperative to hide-out.

His college chums, the dean, and various educational authorities, not knowing of his shady behavings, hold Morley up as a model for American youth—and here's where a bull creeps into the making. They just harped on this goody-goody hero stuff until Murray—and everyone else connected with the picture were "green-in-the-face." Entirely too much of it.

Benson Murder Case

(Paramount—All Talker)

Good, But Not Like Book

(Reviewed by Charles E. Hynes)

PHILO VANCE, played by the suave William Powell, has been building up a strong following, and this one clicks from the start. Its story is not as strong, nor as complex as its predecessor, "The Greene Murder Case," but it's a fine piece of entertainment, regardless. The cast is fine, and the story well handled, and there are some fine comedy bits. Powell's work, as usual, stands out, but he is given fine support in this.

There is one slant which may hurt. The story is not the yarn as written by Van Dine. Paramount saw fit to retain the title and some of the elements, but changed the story threads so much that those who read the book and are attracted by the title in the belief the picture is a celluloid copy, will either register a strong squawk or walk out complaining. Therefore, the exhibitor had better be scrupulously careful in the promises he makes for this.

The murder in this instance follows the stock market crash, the victim being a cold-blooded broker who had sold out all his clients. One of these is an adventuress he loves, one a philanderer who has swindled his paramour, and forged the broker's name, to buy gifts for the adventuress, and the third a master racketeer. All are brought together at the broker's country home, where the murder takes place, with the district attorney and Philo Vance in the house. Clues point to various of the four suspects, but Vance solves the murder.

Mystics, comedies and novelties will go well with this.

The Divorcee

(M-G-M—All Talker)

This Is In; Shearer Splendid

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

ANOTHER bet from Norma Shearer. Get behind it for plenty of plugging and the results will warrant the effort.

With "The Divorcee," you can promise much without straining the truth. To begin with, the picture has sex, is sophisticated, often racy, smart, charmingly enacted, beautifully mounted and very well directed. The Shearer fans will throw a rave over it. Those who may not be so hot for Norma are very apt to change their minds.

The picture is adapted from a story by Ursula Parrott. The story was "Ex-Wife," found objectionable by the Hays association, turned back to the author to remove whatever was obnoxious and then let loose for Bob Leonard to direct.

He did a first-class job, kept the tempo moving in the spirit of the yarn, made his people act like human beings and, in a line, came through with a grand piece of box-office merchandise.

The story deals with the marriage of Miss Shearer and Chester Morris. On their third wedding anniversary, she learns of an affair he has been having with another woman. This is on the night of his departure for Chicago. Disillusioned and shocked, the girl turns to the husband's best friend for comfort, gets it, also a rendezvous at his apartment and a conscience that won't down. After the affair, man and wife split, still loving each other. Before the marriage, they had determined to be liberal in their attitude and so the girl persuaded herself to square the account by matching husband's infidelity with an adventure of her own. But Morris refuses to understand; they secure a divorce and travel their separate ways.

The girl determines to play the game for what it's worth and, while you are never actually shown affairs with other men, the idea gets over very definitely that she had plenty of lovers. Then comes an accidental meeting with a boy who loved her before her marriage, a vacation on his boat and a decision to accompany him to Japan as his wife. But the wife in the case makes a plea for her husband, wins out and Norma goes to Paris determined to find her ex-husband. She does and so comes the happy ending.

Miss Shearer gives a splendid performance. Her work is constantly improving and here she does herself proud. Chester Morris is pleasing, but not distinguished as the husband, and Conrad Nagel, as the other principal, is satisfactory. Robert Montgomery, as the husband's best friend, does creditable work in a part that didn't call for much footage. Zelda Sears adds a pleasant note of comedy relief.

Cartoons and comedies O. K. Feature needs no support, but shorts make show that much stronger.

Produced and distributed by M-G-M. From story by Ursula Parrott. Directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Treatment by Nick Grinde and Zelda Sears. Continuity and dialogue by John Meehan. Edited by Hugh Wynn. Photographed by Norbert Brodin. Length, 7,533 feet. Release date, April 26.

Ladies of Leisure

(Columbia—All Talker)

Good Box Office

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

STARTS like a wow, slows up in the middle and winds up with a melodramatic ending that doesn't match up with that which went ahead of it. Yet, "Ladies of Leisure" comes through as good box-office, chiefly because of Frank Capra's clever and intelligent direction.

The yarn concerns a "party girl" who meets an artist, falls for him despite herself, wins his love only to be dissuaded from the match by the boy's family, her attempted return to the old life, the realization of her mistake and her inevitable clinch at the close.

Barbara Stanwyck, as the feminine lead, does a creditable piece of work under Capra's intelligent handling. Ralph Graves comes through with another natural performance that does him credit. The movement flows along with no straining for effects. Even in the middle reels where the tempo slows down, the fault is in the length of the picture, not because of any variance in the work of the director or the cast. Many of the scenes between Stanwyck and Graves have great charm.

The picture would hold together far better if some of the footage were trimmed. No values would be lost by this process; rather would the sum total effect be enhanced.

A decidedly false note, however, comes in the attempted suicide episode. The girl, having promised the boy's mother to give him up, accepts an invitation to travel to Havana in company of Lowell Sherman. She realizes her mistake and jumps overboard to be rescued for the final fade-out. Effectively done, but jars by comparison with the remainder of the picture.

The dialogue by Jo Swerling is clever and snappy. The lines given Sherman are good for a number of laughs with any audience. Marie Prevost does a pleasing comedy part; George Fawcett is effective, as usual, and Nance O'Neill does a nice mother role.

A lot of the action takes place in the artist's roof bungalow, and for these scenes Columbia turned to the same sets used in "Murder on the Roof." Changed a bit, but not enough.

Comedies will go well with this.

Produced and distributed by Columbia. Adapted from play by Milton Herbert Gropper. Directed by Frank Capra. Adaptation and dialogue by Jo Swerling. Edited by Maurice Wright. Photographed by Joe Walker. Length, 9,277 feet. Running time, 103 minutes. Release date, April 5.

All Ham!

(Reviewed by Robert Hage)

HERE'S another reason why British pictures do not click in this country. It is astonishingly amateurish in every department, and so woefully boresome that the spectator takes a lot of punishment. If it's not the worst picture of the year, it's the runner-up!

Uno Henning, as a barber, is a type actually repellant as a hero. Nora Baring, playing the role of a manicurist, is so utterly unfitted for acting that her emotional struggles evoke laughter. The others in the cast would get the hook on amateur night anywhere.

The picture is so interminably padded with extraneous incidents that it becomes nerve-racking; the lighting is reminiscent of the days of the one-reel features; the direction pathetically puerile; the story and scenario a mess of junk; the sub-titles crude, and the synchronized score monotonous in the extreme. One sequence, showing the interior of a picture house, during the running of a talker, gave close-ups of a motley mob the while the words from the screen, laughably melodramatic, were heard. The talker itself was not shown.

If you've booked it give them the best shorts available, although there's not much use.

Clarke Concern Deposits Million In Chicago Bank

When the new Chicago Bank of Commerce opened its doors here Saturday, first in the line of depositors waiting to open accounts was Ira E. Guthrie of the finance department of the Utilities Power and Light Corp., the largest of the many interests directed by Harley L. Clarke, successor to William Fox. Mr. Guthrie deposited a check for $1,000,000 to the credit of what was described merely as "a large corporation in which Mr. Clarke is interested."

Bank officials termed the identity of the account "confidential," and Mr. Guthrie, likewise, refused to divulge the information requested, nor would he reveal whether or not the deposit was in the name of one of Mr. Clarke's theatrical enterprises.

"Take-a-Chance Week" at Oriental Has Big Draw

The Oriental (Publix-B. & K.) dusted off an old one and staged a "Take a Chance" Week, April 11-18. All newspaper and theatre advertising was built around a question mark, with no program information being given. Patrons were assured, however, that it was the management, not the customers, who were gambling on the entertainment. The stunt, last used in the Loop when the Chicago tried it two years ago, was drawing well in the opening days. The program was the standard Oriental one—stage show and a feature; M. G. M.'s "Free and Easy," starring Buster Keaton, providing the screen attraction.

Improvement Plan May Halt New Film Building

Confronted with the plans of its tenants to vacate to the proposed new Film Exchange building at 13th street and Wabash avenue on a wholesale scale in the fall, the film building at 800-808 Wabash is now tempting them to stick by beginning improvements on a large scale. A new stucco front is going up and general rehabilitation of the interior is planned by the owner. The old building houses United Artists, Tiffany, National Screen Service, Security Pictures, Progress Pictures, and others, most of whom were on the verge of signing leases farther south and were caught with pens poised when the improvements on the old homestead began. It is just possible that, if enough of these firms stay put, the new Film Exchange building will not materialize, inasmuch as the rental agent's plans of the proposed building show plenty of space available even now. It would at least halt the plans for a second film building proposed for the 1300 block.

Warner Bros. Employes Planning Social Club

With occupancy of the new Warner Bros. building at 13th street and Wabash avenue scheduled for May 15, plans are afoot here for the formation of a Warner Club, similar to that in existence in New York. The new building will bring all Warner subsidiaries in this city together under one roof, thereby facilitating a club organization. Clubroom space in the building may be reserved in the event the social idea goes over, representatives of the company state.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

A Comeback!

REMEMBER our little editorial chat in the issue of April 5th?

Well, believe it or not, a most indignant "boss" (the expression is his, not ours) has upped and accused us of inciting disloyalty, riots and lots of other things; all too numerous to mention.

We should really have told you about this in last week's issue, but we decided it might be interesting to find out a little about said "boss" and so, little members of the Round Table Club, gather around "grandpa" and listen to a cute little bedtime story.

This particular "boss" was a salesman in the lace business, until the lace business went flooey (as far as he was concerned anyway). He then tried selling insurance, but once again he was "not so hot." Then there appears to be a lapse of a year or so, unaccounted for, until his wife's relations (in the theatre racket for no good reason) decided they had better give him a job or else they would have to support him and his family anyway.

So, out of a clear sky, there blossomed forth a "supervisor" of three theatres which later grew to about twelve through mergers, consolidations, foreclosures and a cup of coffee.

And how that boy could "supervise" is nobody's business. He "souped" by day and he "souped" by night, until every manager under his superb supervision (?) either found other jobs or were ready to go "nuts."

When business is good at the theatres you will find him struttin' his stuff around the film exchanges and blowing his horn so hard that you'd almost believe that a cyclone hit the town. But when it is bad—WOW! You'll hear him calling everybody on the circuit all kinds of names that even we, in our innocent existence, would hardly repeat, more less print.

So he may well get peeved at our comment from time to time. We actually tell the truth, and to some people the truth really hurts.

We are grateful to Dick Kirschbaum for his most appropriate cartoon illustrating this little chat. If, by any chance, it should prompt someone else to step into the ring, we will gladly set forth their views, providing they can point out both suggestions and criticisms, rather than just "kicking" because they find a "shoe" that fits.

We've had too many one-sided arguments that the boss is always right and the house manager wrong. We'd like to get more than one side of any story. It makes for better harmony between the boys on the firing line and the men responsible for what is going on in the various houses under their supervision.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

WHAT ONE CLUB ACCOMPLISHED

A glowing tribute to "Disraeli" sent out by the Federation of Women's Clubs in Oakland, Cal., to 25,000 members in pamphlet form declaring this picture classic with George Arliss to be the foremost achievement in screen production, has proved to be a record example of volunteer exploitation.

The picture was scheduled to open at the Chimes Theatre in Oakland during the week of March 9 and the pamphlets were mailed two weeks in advance. The management of the theatre knew nothing of the project until it received a copy of the pamphlet bearing this imprint: "We ask that all those receiving this letter place a cross on the back of their tickets, thus indicating the proper appreciation of our endeavor to provide the best pictures for the best patrons."

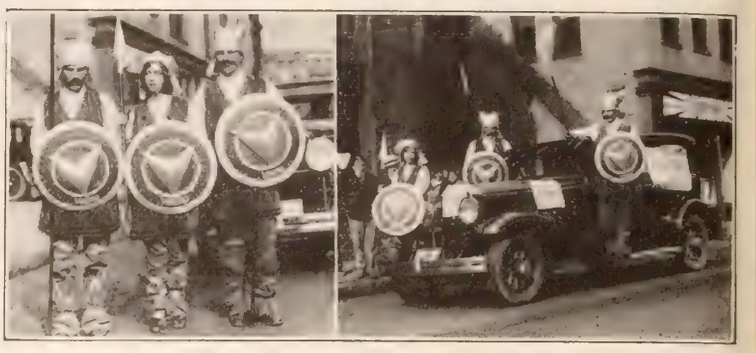
The management of the Chimes Theatre reports that for the first four days of the showing every other ticket received bore this cross.

Leonard M. Salvo Has Another Slant On Organ Novelty

In an article, just a little while ago, we devoted space to a stunt used by John R. Peters, whereby the patrons entering his house a half hour before starting time were entertained by a program of request numbers played by a stage pianist.

At this time we have another and somewhat similar stunt, the idea of Leonard M. Salvo, organist at the Gateway Theatre in Kenosha, Wis., which house is under the managership of Robert S. Guiterman. Salvo calls his idea the "Mail Box Musicales." The musicales take their name from a mailbox which was placed in the lobby. A sign informed patrons that any organ numbers they wished rendered in the half hour recital before starting time, would be played provided they affixed the name of the number on a piece of paper and dropped it in the letter box. Pencil and pad were placed alongside the box for convenience.

The recital program contains everything from classics to jazz and to date has made a big hit with patrons of the house. When it becomes necessary, due to length, to open the first show with the feature, this angle is exceptionally good as a fair sized audience is already seated in the house. We want to thank these showmen for passing this along to us so that we in turn can let the rest of the Club in on a new development.



Atmospheric Gag Sold Picture For J. H. Skiffington

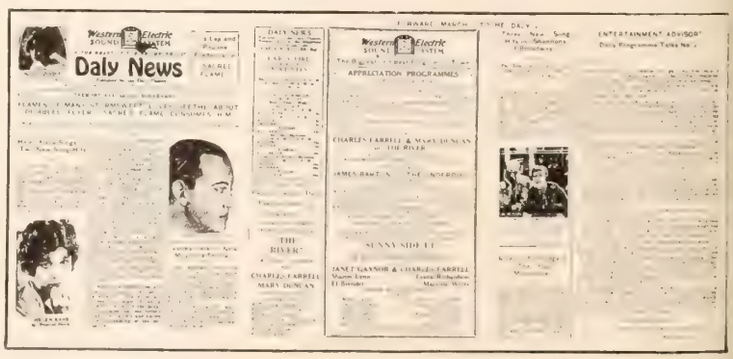
Here's the way a progressive showman cashed in on "The Viking" through a tie-up with his local automobile representative of the car bearing the same name as the picture.

The showman under discussion is J. H. Skiffington, manager of the Fox Theatre in Springfield, Mass., who, with the aid of Chas. M. Hurley, the assistant manager of the house, turned out a knockout campaign on the picture.

By his tie-up with the Oldsmobile people, makers of "The Viking," he secured the free use of one of the company's cars and drivers. He then hired two men and a girl, dressed in the atmospheric costume of the picture, to ride about town on the running board of the car. The photos will give you on idea of the effective "flash" that the stunt created and the interest that must have resulted from it. The costumes and spears were furnished by the automobile company.

The car was driven through the main streets and the crowded sections of the city, stopping frequently at various department stores, soda fountains, etc. The "Vikings" dined at one of the largest hotels during lunch hour and since each one had a placard on back of the costume bearing the title and playdate of the picture some valuable publicity was secured by direct contact.

The whole campaign on "The Viking" went over smashingly and the ballyhoo gag did much to help along the receipts and when a gag does that there's no use talking, it's got the goods. We'd like to hear more about the way Skiffington and Hurley are exploiting their attractions in Springfield, for from what we know of that city competition in show business is plenty tough and a guy has got to be on the alert every minute.



Joseph W. Kligler Employs A Number Of Showman Ideas

With competition in the show game around New York waxing hot, it is small wonder that almost every possible angle must be covered by the local showmen in order to keep business up to par. And so for this reason we are going to tell you a little about the way Joseph W. Kligler, manager of the Daly Theatre in the Bronx, N. Y., sells his attractions.

The photo will give you an idea of the weekly truck ballyhoo he uses on every new attraction. This truck cruises around all the streets adjacent to the theatre and is a very valuable medium for securing attention. Knowing that Kligler is aware of the patrons' likes and dislikes, it is not surprising to find, often, an added novelty to the ballyhoo.

Another fine angle he uses is his house organ. This is made up in black and white on good stock paper and carries the program for the entire week, besides plugging the coming pictures. To make it more readable he had added a little personal talk column through which he informs the patrons of any special treats in store for them. Though his column has only been appearing recently it has proven a big favorite with the readers and shows the value of an intimate talk. The circuit has adopted an Appreciation Month and it is about this month that Kligler talks upon in his chat box, or as the official title is "Entertainment Advisor."

Okay Joe, it is certainly a pleasure to know that you can't be stopped by any competition, even though you are located right in the heart of the "neighborhood" houses. Thanks for keeping us posted on what you are doing up there.

EXPLOITATION REVIEWS!

"UNDER A TEXAS MOON"

Warner Bros.

Real showmen should have little or no trouble at all selling this one to their patrons, because it contains so many outstanding points from the exploitation angle. It is in technicolor entirely and some of the shots are the most beautiful ever caught since colored pictures took on their present importance.

Don't care a rap if your patrons know Frank Fay or if his name is a deep, dark secret to them. They WILL like him after they see this picture, and his characterization offers many valuable slants for publicity and exploitation. But to get back to what we started out to tell you: You have plenty of Spanish or Mexican atmosphere and should build much of your exploitation background around this phase of the picture. Along these lines we suggest a singing team (if possible) in your lobby with guitars and dressed in Mexican costumes, or perhaps you can arrange a car or float with two such singers for street ballyhoo purposes. Have them sing the theme song of the picture (same as the title) and plug this song as much as you can via every way possible. A suggestion for your advance plug on this picture would be a Mexican setting in a good spot in your lobby or foyer, still carrying out the guitar singing team.

The "Jumping Bean" gag in the picture should offer peppy showmen more than just an idea. Make an attempt to get a dozen of them. Use them in a good window where plenty of the customers can watch them jump. It ties in with the picture and always provides lots of laughs and interest to the curious public. Another good slant would be to use this line for house, program, throwaway or newspaper publicity: "No! I Kees You. Yes." It gets many laughs in the picture and they can have their interest keyed up by using it properly.

From the "sweetheart" angle, Frank (in the picture, Don Carlos) has so many that your teaser campaign could capitalize on it plenty. The female members of the cast include Raquel Torres, Armida and Myrna Loy, and of these three attractive girls Don Carlos steals the one who hates him the most (Myrna Loy).

Hat stores with a display featuring Sombreros can be used. Gown shops might be sold on the idea of a Spanish and American bridal display with appropriate copy to put the stunt across. For street advertising purposes, or even handing stuff out to patrons leaving the theatre, you could make use of two good ideas:

One, the distribution of small pay envelopes containing some sort of a small bean and have it carry good selling copy in connection with the picture. Another small envelope idea is the use of Christmas tree "snow tinsel." Have this gag labeled "Star Dust" and tell 'em they will find the answer to lucky star dust in the picture "Under a Texas Moon."

Dress your lobby and front with cactus plants through cooperation with your local florists. Another front dressing idea, either above or below the marquee, would be the use of bright colored bunting and canopies simulating a Mexican Hacienda. Carry this idea out as far as possible. It will lend the proper atmosphere besides boosting interest in the picture itself. Work in some cut-outs of Fay and the others in the cast.

Capitalize on the present popularity of the theme song hit. DON'T tell them that Fay sings, because he only sings a bar or two at the finish of the picture. Sell HIM as "Broadway's Famous Celebrity Who Scores a Decided Hit." You can promise them that he will surprise the whole town with his work in "Under a Texas Moon."

Teaser copy can be pounded out along the lines of: "What would YOU do Under a Texas Moon?"—Be careful, girls, Under a Texas Moon"—"See The One Man Revolution at His Best." These are just rough suggestions; you can probably build plenty of stuff around them. Tell the girls that they will adore Frank Fay in this picture. As far as the girls are concerned, they will most likely make him one of their favorites after they see this picture of his.

Just try using your thinking cap on this one, boys. You have a fine title, a cast with names and possibilities and a story that lends itself to exploitation. So using this review as a means of getting slants and the regular News review for more details about the story itself, you can certainly work up some live interest that should react most favorably at your box office.

"THE DIVORCEE"

M-G-M

Perhaps the greatest selling point in this ultra-modern sophisticated picture is the now famous story about Ex-Wives. Of course, we would temper this advice by saying that wherever Norma Shearer has a following, you can play it up as greater than any of her previous talking productions. Whether it is or not is a question open for discussion, but YOU know your patrons and should therefore exercise extreme care and judgment in getting your campaign ready to shoot.

If Chester Morris is well liked in your community, you can play him up as being in an entirely different role than heretofore. He is no thug, gunman or gangster, and the only villainy he performs here is the wrecking of his home.

Getting back to the Shearer angles: you might try to get over the thought that she rises to greater heights than ever before in a role in which she excells. And whether you are selling Shearer or the picture, one thing you must not forget; here is a production with a mighty delicate story. You can, by clever advertising and teaser campaigns, put the theatre in the reverse attitude of the picture. By which we mean: play up the angle of the evils of divorce. Keep all your copy dignified, anything else would be rotten showmanship anywhere.

As for tie-ups; there are plenty of opportunities in this direction. Besides, jewelry stores, interior decorators, automobiles, etc. And with so many different cooperative angles you should experience little difficulty in making up some mighty fine double trucks or even small sections in cooperation with your local newspapers.

Don't consider ballyhoos of any kind. They are out of the question with a picture like "The Divorcee," but a cleverly worded personal letter through the mails should help create tremendous interest in a picture of this type, especially if you can key up the women's interest, as the men will follow the women all the time (no gag). A suggestion for a teaser campaign through the mails or house to house distribution would be a series of post cards or sealed envelopes containing lines such as: "What would you do if YOU were an ex-wife?" "Is an ex-wife happy?" "Suppose YOUR home was wrecked, YOUR happiness gone to smash—what would YOU do?" These and other similar lines could all be worked up to a high pitch in making 'em want to know what it's all about. The same lines could apply to a good newspaper teaser campaign. In this respect the picture has a wealth of ideas.

As good copy for your opening announcement or follow-up advertising, you could play up the moral that marriage is taken too lightly. Ask them: "What would you do if confronted with Norma Shearer's problem?" A series of trailers along the lines outlined above would also tend to make them want to see this picture. Neat cards in the ladies' lounge rooms, promenades, etc., might also be employed.

Don't be afraid to play up the appeal that the picture has, especially for the women. The men will flock to see it just as keenly as the ladies. Thank goodness men are born that way. (Why bring that up?)

The "class" houses won't have to do much worrying on a picture like this, but the other boys must watch their step on the manner in which they try to create the interest of their patronage. Another thought for most any kind of a house would be to stress the idea that "here is Norma Shearer in one of the most emotional roles of her career and her brilliant acting in this frank story of an ex-wife—and the divorce evil—will amaze you."

For lobby and front displays, head cutouts of Shearer over or under the marquee and if you can make up a series of life-size cutouts of her in different, impressive gowns, then you will be making a corking front and tying right in with part of the picture, because she plays the part of a designer. Which opens up the thought that you might get your better dress houses to fix up outstanding window displays on this attraction. But be sure to get your various catch lines across, even in window displays. It's a marvelous selling slant and should be emphasized right through your campaign.

It might not be amiss to caution you that the theme and plot of this story makes it advisable to discourage attendance of children. You can gauge this bit of advice according to your patronage as well as their reaction to advertising, or advice, along such lines. The latter expression may also be applied to anything we have to say about the various pictures reviewed. YOU are the best judge, or should be, of what is most advisable for your theatre. What appeals to us may

YOUR PROBLEMS AND MINE!

B's Problem:

B. is another old-time showman. Today he holds a responsible position as General Manager for a fast growing circuit in the middle west. How did he attain his present position? Just by overcoming problems like the one we are relating now.

The local newspaper editor held a great deal of animosity towards the theatre. He was a hard-boiled duck. You know the kind. The man who yells out that his sheet is not going to give the theatre any "free advertising." B. couldn't get near him. The editor wouldn't soften at passes either.

B' Solution:

Disgusted, B. turned his attention to the reporters on the daily paper. He started to create stories. Being an old time showman the stories he engineered were "hot" ones. Nearly all of them hit the pages of the paper. When he started to receive some publicity from this angle B. went out after the local civic events and tied them in with his house. He got along so well with the committees that they started to ride the editor, endeavoring to show him that he had taken a wrong stand.

Finally, the editor capitulated. He had to when he began to realize the wonderful asset that the theatre was to the town. Stories began to appear more frequently and in a little while all was smooth sailing for B., the house was coming in for the publicity it deserved and the cash register began jingling more merrily.

In closing we'd like to add a little line of B.'s origin, "If you want the Chamber of Commerce to work with you," he declares, "join them and make yourself a great credit to them. The rest will be easy." And, as Sam the Showman would remark, "Them's words of wisdom, B.—them's words of wisdom."

W. A. Roberts Used A Personal Letter On Parking Angle

Remember not so long ago we told you about the great work W. A. Roberts was doing out in Plymouth, Penn.? Well, here's another example of his unusual ability as a showman.

As you know, Roberts is connected with the Shawnee and Rialto Theatres in Plymouth for the Shawnee Amusement Co., and in his years in show business has used many novel angles. We are going to tell you now how he informed his patrons of the free parking space he added as a special feature to the Shawnee's service.

A personal letter was sent out to every one in town, with a pass enclosed, which told the name of the picture playing on the date the pass was stamped for. In his second paragraph Roberts got in his announcement on the new parking innovation and followed it up by giving a resume of the house policy. All in all, it was a well worded letter and did much to let the Shawnee in for goodwill. The stunt itself is worthy of any showman's efforts and we are glad of the opportunity to pass it along in the event that any of our members may be contemplating something along similar lines.

The picture we are reproducing shows you the corking cut-out he used to plug his coming attraction. You will also note the truck standing in front of the theatre that serves as a street ballyhoo for the various pictures. All these stunts are typical of his showmanship, and though they form but a small part of wide and varied activities, we are glad to show them to you.

Thank you, Roberts, for keeping us posted on your work and we look forward to receiving the detailed accounts of the "Free Vacation" stunt you are engineering down there because it is sure to contain some points of interest for the rest of the Club.

Max Melincoff Has Shifted, Is Now At New London, Conn.

You'll have to pardon us for a moment till we take a bow for another member of the CLUB. Max Melincoff, one of our live-wires, has been promoted to the Garde Theatre in New London, Conn.

Max has formerly been handling the affairs of the Palace Theatre in Torrington, Conn., and as the regular followers of our pages know, he has turned out some great work. It was only recently that we showed you a lay-out of his newspaper ads and told how he sold the town completely on the shows. Having been in the business a number of years now, it seems to us it is only natural that we receive some fine ideas from him and with the record he made in Providence, R. I., still standing up there we have further proof.

We want to wish Max lots of luck at the Garde, and since we recollect the many happy and busy days we spent there.

Robertson Turns Out Some Selling Window Displays

We are always well pleased to receive news concerning the activities of our Canadian members and whenever we are in receipt of said news, it must be passed on, because there are generally one or two angles of value. This window display was arranged by J. M. Robertson, manager of the Dominion Theatre in Victoria, B. C., and we must say that it is a typical example of the fine work turned out by our Canadian members. Through a tie-up with a radio store, the display was effective and as you will note from the photo, a number of stills grouped about the radio, together with a banner in the background, form an artistic layout.

There is no doubt in our mind but that this work attracted more than passing interest, because the "flash" created by the banner alone would make them look. Evidence of considerable care is seen in the art work used by Robertson and this too helped a lot towards making the display sell. All in all, the entire work seems to be well able to bring anyone looking at it, to the theatre. Thanks, Robertson, for passing this along to us in order that we might know just what you and the rest of that live-wire group of Canadian members are accomplishing up there, and we guess it is needless to tell you that we want to hear more from you in the very near future.

Here's What Sam Cohen Is Doing At Portland, Oregon

A short while back we ran a story on the CLUB pages announcing Sam Cohen's appointment to the position of Publicity and Exploitation man for the RKO Orpheum Theatre in Portland, Oregon, and told you that in a little while we expected to pass on a couple of his activities.

Well Sam has been pretty busy working hard to bust records up there and has been unable to find time at the present to give us more detailed information on his campaigns, but for the sake of showing you that he is accomplishing much we are reproducing a photo of the crowds attending the showing of "The Racketeer," and as you will note they are lined up on both sides of the box-office. Which proves pretty conclusively that Sam is certainly selling his shows.

Okay Sam, we are going to let this one get by but we warn you if you don't let us hear some more reports of your work we are liable to say lots to you if we can ever run out around your district. We know that you are capable of producing the goods since your work at the Elsinore proved that to us.

Dick Kirschbaum is sorely in need of suggestions for the "Lobby Laffs" series and knowing how popular these cartoons are with our readers, we are broadcasting this request right off the Club pages.

C. Sherred Ran A Fashion Show That Boosted Business

Displaying the real CLUB spirit, Carl B. Sherred gives us a wealth of information concerning himself and his work, as his initial contribution upon joining our organization.

Sherred is the manager of the Mishler Theatre in Altoona, Pa., and if recollection serves us right we can remember him as connected in an executive capacity with a stock company, when we were handling a string of houses up around New England.

Competition being strong around Altoona, he had his hands full pulling the customers in towards the box-office, so as a starter he promoted a Kiwanis Week benefit show that clicked for a lot of extra dough and let the house in for subsequent good-will. With spring rolling around he staged a fashion show in the theatre by tying up with one of the largest department stores in town.

The department store was having a fashion revue at the time and Sherred decided to work it into his house. With the aid of a local dancing teacher he staged the whole thing at the Mishler, with a number of additional dealers providing wearing apparel to be displayed. The success of this stunt is easily seen when it is known that over six thousand admissions were recorded on the opening day. Many window displays were secured throughout the town and, in addition, through a tie-up with the theme song publishers he got in some plugs for his coming attractions.

As another means of securing publicity for his future pictures, a professional singer is featured on the air every evening. The singer plugs all of the theme songs and in between the announcer gives the play dates. Another one of Sherred's activities was a tie-up with a local baker who agreed to distribute a half price ticket, wrapped in every loaf of bread sold.

Oaky, Carl, we're glad to see that you are taking so active an interest and we hope it will be continued in the future.

More Tie-Ups Are Engineered By The Very Active Vogel

Many stories have been published on these pages concerning the activities of Vogel Gettier, manager of the Capitol Theatre in Grand Island, Nebraska. The stories for the most part have dealt with his newspaper advertising and art work, so this time we want to tell you about the way he puts over campaigns.

Booking in "Honey," he set to work to make the town conscious of the attraction. For his first move, of course, he ran a sound trailer one week in advance. He then tied-up the local bakery and they agreed to insert a coupon with each loaf of their whole wheat Honey bread. The coupon informed the reader that if the number it bore corresponded with the number pasted on a bulletin board in the theatre lobby, the holder would be entitled to free tickets. In addition to doing this the bakery paid for the cost of printing and also ran a notice in the newspaper ad.

Through a tie-up with a local bee farm, and their local grocery distributor, he secured five hundred jars of honey, and pasting effective copy on the jars gave them away at the theatre, with the grocery carrying the announcement in their daily ad. A number of other tie-ups enabled him to have a couple of popular dance orchestras give the tunes a two weeks' plug. Special windshield stickers, as part of a teaser campaign, were made up and distributed to car owners.

A good many other valuable tie-ups were made by Vogel, but since we are rather cramped for space we can only give you what we think may suit your needs, and have endeavored to pick out the highlights. He promoted a "Honey" hour on the radio and featured a trio of singers, who rendered the various melodies. Covering the soda fountain angle, he persuaded the dealers to concoct a special sundae and to display stills and art work at the fountain.

The campaign went over very well and we have every reason to believe that Vogel was well pleased with the b. o. when he checked up after the run of the picture.

Smackwitz Again Appears On These Pages With Stunts

A very successful campaign was recently engineered by Charles Smackwitz, manager of the Strand Theatre in Albany, N. Y., which had the town "Chasing Rainbows" conscious for the run of that picture, and we don't mean maybe.

As a starter for his campaign, Smackwitz tied in with a radio manufacturer and promoted space in a full page ad the dealer was running, by permitting the use of a still showing the two stars of the picture leaning against a radio set. Since the ad also carried the names of six local distributors of the product, window space was also secured.

In one of the evening papers a double truck layout was arranged which carried ads of a number of local merchants as well as the theatre. An art banner three inches wide ran across the two pages. The banner had a rainbow in it and a pot of gold on each side and worked in with the title. The merchants' ads also carried catchlines and some of them featured scene mats from the picture. In another paper, permission was secured to imprint the front page in green ink, with copy reading, "'Chasing Rainbows' at the Strand." Three thousand imprinted copies were distributed throughout the streets of the city by newsboys.

Atop of one of the largest office buildings in the busy, downtown section a balloon was put up. Suspended from the balloon was a large banner forty feet long and thirty-eight inches wide. The banner was sprayed with white and the copy was sewed on in red letters. A tie-up with a dealer in ladies' apparel, enabled Smackwitz to create a novel stunt. He featured a display of wax mannequins, each wearing a different colored dress, and the whole arrangement made a rainbow-like effect that tied in with the picture.

The entire campaign was masterfully planned and executed and Smackwitz sure sold them on the film. We are very glad to present his activities, and we hope that this article will be followed by many more.

Crabill Sold The Town On This One By Special Angles

Another showman comes to us from out of the West. This time we want to tell you some thing about the activities of F. M. Crabill, manager of the Heilig Theatre in Eugene, Ore

Though we haven't the complete "dope" on hand concerning the campaign he engineered recently on "Marianne," we feel that the photos will serve to give you a line on his showmanship. The first one we are reproducing shows a tie-up he made with a local band and secured their co-operation to plug his picture. The band paraded about the streets of Eugene, playing tunes from the picture and then wound up the procession in front of the theatre, where they played awhile for the edification of patrons entering the theatre. This angle helped wise the town up to the fact that the film was opening that night at the theatre and renewed interest in the attraction.

The other picture shows a corking street ballyhoo that sure gathered plenty of attention. He secured a baby tank and painted it up with copy on the picture. With the aid of the local Boy Scouts and their band (drums and flutes) he engineered another parade through the streets, this time in broad daylight, and at about the hour when the office workers and others were having lunch. The stunt created a great deal of favorable comment, which reacted at the b. o. during the run of the picture.

We notice also that Crabill pulls pretty strongly with his local newspaper, as he has succeeded in landing a "Word Contest" in the local paper. This gag is put over by taking the title of the picture, "Marianne," and seeing how many words can be derived from it. For the largest list of names submitted the contestant received free tickets to witness the show.

Okay, Crabill, we are certainly glad to hear from another of the West's representative showmen and we want you to know that the Club pages are always open for ideas of the sort you are using out there in Eugene.

New lighting scheme for lobby and interior.
Greens and flowers for lounge rooms, etc.

Clean up boiler room and check up on heating plant.

These are but a few suggestions. You should know your own conditions well enough to add about a dozen other items to

Harold Garfinkle Again Displaying His Showmanship

It was with interest that we learned that Harold Garfinkel, newly appointed manager of the State Theatre in Ozone Park, L. I., N. Y., is continuing the fine work which characterized his show salesmanship when he managed a house for the Century Circuit not so long ago.

To plug his "Kiddie Karnival" he made up a miniature herald, measuring 5½ by 3½, printed in black on good green stock paper. The herald resembled a booklet and the front and back pages bore a catchline, "It's A Gift." The copy inside read: "Monster Kiddie Karnival—Starting Saturday April 12th and Every Saturday Thereafter—Every Child Attending the Matinee Will Receive a Lucky Number Coupon. Those Children Holding the Numbers Will Receive a Toy." (The rest of the herald carried the time and also listed the items being given away.)

This stunt made a great hit with the kiddies around Ozone Park and as a result Harold's kiddie business was boosted considerably and we don't doubt but that as time rolls on, it will gain more and more. Since, after all, it's just a matter of reaching out for it. Good work, Harold, we're sure that you are going to make a name for yourself out at the State and we hope to record more of your showmanlike work in the future.

Marc Wolf's House Came In For A Bit Of Glorification

When Marc C. Wolf, city manager of the Gary, Ind., Palace Theatre, played "Glorifying the American Girl," he arranged a fashion show for the lobby that "not only drew attention to the coming engagement of the picture, but actually brought in additional business on its own merit."

Co-operating with one of the largest women's outfitting firms in Gary, together with florists, jewelers and dealers in cosmetics, Wolf staged a style show in the lobby of the theatre three days in advance of the play dates of "Glorifying the American Girl." Eight models, including Miss Indiana of 1929, were used on a "board walk" and the girls wore specially imported gowns, wraps, sports costumes, evening and afternoon apparel which the store secured from New York stylists for the event.

Needless to say, patrons did not mind waiting in line for entrance to the theatre during this period of time. In fact, according to Wolf, they were so much interested in the display that they almost forgot they came to the theatre to witness a performance on the screen.

Although this is a variation on the "Fashion Show" idea, it nevertheless demonstrates the fine showman ability of Marc. How complete details of how this event was planned and executed would make mighty interesting reading on the Club pages. What about it Mr. Wolf?

H. C. Henderson Of Alliance Put Over A Great Campaign

Out in Alliance, Ohio, the townspeople are just recovering from the whirlwind campaign put on by H. C. Henderson, director of publicity for Schine's Morrison and Strand, when "Happy Days" played the Morrison Theatre. To give you an idea of the way Henderson set about to make the residents conscious of the picture, we are reproducing a couple of photos showing the parade he engineered and also one of the many displays he secured in the windows of the town's leading dealers.

Through a tie-up with a local ice cream manufacturer, the company permitted him to place banners and cards on all the trucks. In addition to this they featured a special ice cream made up to tie in with the picture, with all the confectionery stores and soda fountains in town showing banners announcing the special.

Twenty-two window displays were used. Three thousand special throwaways made up with plenty of copy that packed a wallop, were distributed all over the town. A tie-up with a large laundry company enabled Henderson to place announcements concerning the show in every package delivered. The better restaurants distributed imprinted paper napkins. And to top all of this off, he effected a very valuable tie-up with the street car corporation by which he was enabled to string banners on the street cars.

While we are recounting the way these Schine houses sell their shows, we want to tell you a bit about the house organ, "The Spotlight," which is one of the cleverest examples of a local program we have seen in some time. It was started not so long ago as a four-page booklet and today Henderson has so sold the local merchants on its value that it has jumped to sixteen pages of reading matter, and according to Henderson, "is not thrown on the floor."

Besides carrying the program, as you will note from the cut, nearly every merchant in town is represented on the pages. In this manner it is secured at no cost to the theatre and both the house and the merchants benefit. The pages are interspersed with plenty of advance stories on the coming attractions and interest is livened in a "Jumble Contest" which is run every week.

The whole lay-out is a tribute to the showmanship of Mr. R. S. Wallace, general manager of the Schine houses, and Henderson. If you will refer back to the cut showing the band you can get a look at Mr. Wallace, who is seated at the wheel of the car which led the procession, and you also can see "H. C." standing alongside. We want to thank these two live-wire showmen for keeping us posted on what they are doing to sell their attractions in Ohio and we hope they will continue the active interest that they are showing.

Allen, Weiss And Short Crowned The "Vagabond King"

With the world premiere of "Vagabond King" being held in Florida, it was to be expected that a great campaign would be put on. Recently we showed you how Walter Morris, then managing the Paramount Theatre in West Palm Beach, Fla., where the premiere was held, planned and executed a successful campaign. Since then the other big cities have been playing the picture and managers have been vieing with each other to rival Morris's work. So in order that you may see how this friendly rivalry is carried on we'll record the work of Wally Allen, Harry Weiss and Paul Short, as they sold Tampa, Fla., on the production.

So vast and complete a campaign was engineered by the trio that it is practically impossible for us to reprint it in its entirety. What we are going to do though is to describe the various highlights of their work in order that our members, should any of them play the picture, may take advantage of these box-office building ideas.

Special stories and pictures appeared in all of the daily newspapers, with increased newspaper space being allotted to the production. The news ads were of the sort that worked up to a climax. As a publicity stunt the Detroit Tigers baseball team, then training in Florida, was invited to attend the premiere. Sound trailers were run in all the Publix houses announcing the "Vagabond King" at the Victory. In addition all of the theatres carried cut-outs of the picture. Twenty-five tire covers plugged it two weeks in advance. A window contest was sponsored by the Chamber of Commerce, with prizes offered for the most attractively displayed product of the Chamber's members, in conjunction with the film.

Signs were placed, two weeks in advance, on all electric light poles. Copy on the signs read "The Vagabond King Is Coming," and on play date, a new showing was substituted. A number of pads reading "Things To Do To-Day," which bore space for memoranda as well as plugging the picture were distributed throughout the city. One hundred souvenir books were sold on the streets the day of opening. Proofs of the ad run in the American Weekly magazine were pasted on windows.

Through a tie-up with a local manufacturer of a popular drink a plan was effected whereby five thousand cards, bearing copy which read, "For The Best Thirst Quencher Drink Celo,—For The Best In Entertainment See The Vagabond King," were printed and distributed by the drink company. The manufacturers of Chesterfield Cigarettes did the same thing, with their copy reading, "They Satisfy, Chesterfields And The Vagabond King." A telephone girl called as many people as possible, in a week, and advised them of the premiere. The Chamber of Commerce sent letters to all members urging that they attend the showing.

The whole campaign was one of the most complete ever engineered in the City of Tampa, and, as we stated before, were we to record the rest of the activities, which covered news stories, displays, contests, pictures, etc., we would have a couple of pages of reading matter. Keep up the good work boys and continue telling us about it.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Kiddie Business Always Above Par For Frank Boucher

Ideas continue to come to light on how to boost kiddie business on the Saturday Matinee and the latest one we are in receipt of is Frank Boucher's method of organizing a matinee club, at the Maryland Theatre in Hagerstown, Maryland, which house he manages for the Warner Outfit.

For the sake of clarity we are setting up in type a sample of one of the heralds he used to start the matinee club and if you read it carefully you will derive a wealth of good points on how to properly organize and exploit a kiddie club.

INTRODUCING

WARNER BROS

MARYLAND THEATRE KIDDIES' MATINEE CLUB

WHO CAN BELONG TO IT?

Any boy or girl, under 16 years of age, who attends the Saturday matinee at your theatre and who secures a membership button at the matinee on Saturday, March 8th

HOW DO YOU JOIN IT?

Come to the matinee on Saturday, March 8th. Every boy and girl under 16 years of age, who attends the matinee on that day, will be given a membership button. Each of these buttons bears a different number. Wear this button every Saturday thereafter when you attend the matinee

WHAT DO YOU GET OUT OF IT?

Every Saturday at the matinee beginning Saturday, March 8th, ten numbers, selected from the numbers on the membership buttons, will be posted in front of the theatre. Children who have the buttons bearing the same numbers will be admitted free at that performance by showing their buttons to the doorman. During the performance other numbers will be selected on the stage and various valuable gifts will be awarded to the children in the audience who have similarly numbered buttons. Other prize offers and surprise novelties, as well as special performances to which club members will be admitted at a reduced price, will be announced from time to time.

ALSO SPECIAL SCREEN ATTRACTIONS EACH WEEK

Each Saturday—AT THE MATINEE ONLY—We Will Show the Serial

"THE FIRE DETECTIVE"

STARTING MARCH 8th

REMEMBER!

GET YOUR MEMBERSHIP BUTTON AT THE MATINEE ON SATURDAY, MARCH 8th

IF YOU CAN'T

ATTEND THE MATINEE ON MARCH 8th [illegible] GET A MEMBERSHIP BUTTON BY ASKING AT THE MANAGER'S OFFICE ANY TIME BEFORE SATURDAY, MARCH 15th. ONLY A LIMITED NUMBER OF BUTTONS WILL BE DISTRIBUTED, HOWEVER SO GET YOURS AS EARLY AS YOU CAN

SPECIAL SERIAL—PRIZES—NOVELTIES EACH WEEK

Frank seems to be having his hands full down in his district promoting new stunts every week and his latest is a tie-up with the local merchants whereby he has instituted a gift night in the theatre every Wednesday evening, with the leading dealers in town contributing their products. The contest is arranged to run over a period of about two months and it's a safe bet that Frank's house is going to come in for a lot of extra business as well as plenty of publicity and good will.

To give you an idea of how strong he pulls with the local papers we would like to state that in the issue we have on hand we note he succeeded in running a serial story on "Marianne," which finished as the picture "broke," and in addition pulled a red hot stunt by announcing in the newspaper by special "ad" and on the dramatic page that according to a list of the ten best films of the past year, compiled by a trade daily, eight had been shown at the Maryland, one had been refused because of local conditions and the other one was on the way. Which is just another example of real showmanship, but when we get those kind of examples, we want to pass them on.

Thanks, Frank, for your interest in seeing that we're posted on what's doing down around your way, and we expect to hear more from you in the near future. Especially do we want to know how your gift nights go over.

Front Page Stories Landed By Steele In Local Papers

In our little article not so long ago when we related the activities of George Steele, manager of the Trianon Theatre in Birmingham, Ala., we told you how he sold his shows by the means of very novel displays and lobby stunts.

Word hadn't come into Club headquarters in time to permit us giving an account of a recent bit of newspaper publicity Steele received when his house hit the front pages of a daily paper for six days in a row in connection with a local censorship run-in, but we are glad to announce that everything came out fine and the house as a result is now doing wonderful business.

And now, George, you'll have no excuse not to sit yourself down and give us a lot of accounts concerning the many fine things you are doing to keep up the excellent record you have hung up for your house and yourself, so we look forward to hearing from you very soon and we feel that your letter will contain something of value that we can pass along to the rest of the Club. Oke?

"MATCH PLAY"

Sennett-Educational Comedy

There are, no doubt, many angles to short-subject exploitation which we ought to publish from time to time, but unfortunately, we have not reached the point where we can devote the time necessary to handle this particular phase.

But we will make an exception in the case of "Match Play" because it is one of those honest-to-goodness comedies, with plenty of opportunity to go out and tie up with sporting goods stores, country golf clubs, men's wear shops and many other slants along those lines.

In addition, you can arrange lobby displays, newspaper tie-ups and, in fact, do almost as much as you can with a crack exploitation feature.

We caught this short subject after it was officially reviewed by the News and felt that it was worthy of comment. So much so, that we have already received some fine exploitation material from showmen who played the picture. They all seemed to take advantage of the possibilities and you should, too, if you are going to play it in your house.

"Chick."

Earl Arnold Has A Double And We Prove It By This

Something we never do is reveal a man's past but since he dares us we are showing you two sides of Earl Arnold's life—the right and the left.

Earl is the manager of the Lincoln Theatre in Arlington, New Jersey, and we have recorded his activities on these pages before. His most recent stunt, as you know, was a corker. He hired a cameraman to go about town and "shoot" the kids and cleaned up plenty on the showing of the pictures, with the house coming in for lots of good will.

Being one of the most original guys in the racket, you can never tell from one moment to another just what stunt Earl will pull next. (The only competitor he has in the way of creative ingenuity is Dick Kirschbaum, the "Lobby Laffs" Rembrandt, born with a golden spoon in his mouth and wise enough to swallow it.) Earl was born with one in his mouth too, but he didn't swallow it. What he did was the basis for the plea: "Don't bite the hand that's feeding you." Before he was two years old he was practicing what to say to tough traffic cops. By the time he left school (it was in 1620 B. R., by request), he was all set to take up his duties as a purveyor of amusement to a bored public.

Listen Earl, we could go on for hours handing out compliments like this but what's the use. The rest of the Club knows that we are only kidding and that you are a real live wire showman and in the time you have been at the Lincoln you have proven your worth, so we'll ease up on you. Right?

Frank J. Holland Enrolls In The Round Table Club

Here's another showman frank enough to admit that the Club pages have furnished him with a lot of good ideas. In fact, he tells us that the one we are showing in the photo originally appeared in our section of the News, and if he knew the name of the originator, would credit him with the stunt.

The showman under discussion is Frank J. Holland, one of the newest members to be added to our roll. Holland is the manager of the Murray Theatre in Richmond, Ind., and from what we have seen of our Indiana showmen's work we can look for something out of the ordinary.

The stunt Holland used is the street ballyhoo of the "Headless Man," which, as most showmen know, consists of having a man concealed under a robe walk along the streets, carrying in his arm a fake head, with a sign pinned onto him reading, "I laughed my Head Off at the (Blank) Show." This gag has always succeeded as a means of securing more than passing attention and has always been productive of a great deal of laughs. And we think it served Holland's purpose.

Thank you, Frank, we're glad to welcome a showman of your mettle into the Round Table Club and we feel sure that your association with the finest bunch of go-getters in the show business will prove very beneficial. Since we know that you have had a wide and varied career in this racket, it seems to us that an account of your operations to date would make some nice reading for the Club pages, so when you sit down to tell us about your show salesmanship why not give us a little "dope" on yourself and don't forget to include your photograph.

For A Novelty In A House You Can't Beat A Golf Course

With theatre managers pulling stunts to-day that would do credit to the showmanship of a Barnum, it doesn't surprise us much to learn that most houses are now featuring miniature golf courses. But in the interest of the industry it becomes necessary for us to let you in on whatever "info" we have on these new gags. So let's talk about the golf angle Ted Crowther, manager of the Stanley Theatre in West Palm Beach, Fla., is using to boost up good will and publicity.

These miniature golf courses, generally placed in one of the large lounge rooms, which the de luxe houses feature, have certainly become the rage. Hard-rubber hills, sand, "fake" trees and bunkers, in fact everything to be found on a real golf course, including all the hazards encountered and subsequent thrills at going through them are to be found in these golf courses. So is it any wonder that they have caught on?

Tie-ups with the local sporting goods dealers enables a showman to secure the necessary clubs and balls that go with the game and often we have heard of contests being held in conjunction with the dealer, who donates silver cups as prizes. In this instance, Crowther has hit upon a novel slant, by offering free tickets to patrons making the difficult last hole in "one." He received a lot of favorable publicity on a recent picture "The Kibitzer" by placing a card on the course which announced that the "Kibitzer" had made the "hole in one." The pass angle was worked in on this too.

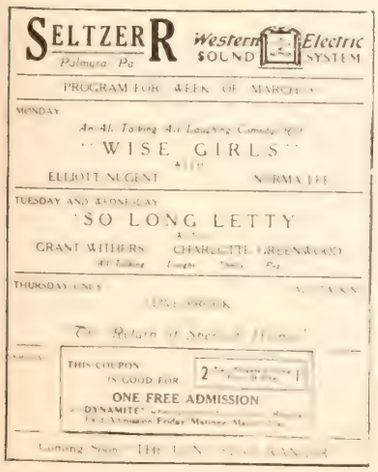
Thus you see that almost everything in the way of new slants is being uncovered to-day to make the patrons' stay in the theatre pleasant and profitable to the house and himself. It is a pleasure to us to note that Crowther is keeping right in step with the rest of the live-wire bunch of showmen who make up the Florida delegation of the Round Table Club and we hope in the near future to give you some more news about this showman. So what do you say Ted, it's only a matter of a few minutes to drop us a line giving us a photo.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Again We Have To Hand It To Shewell For His Fine Work

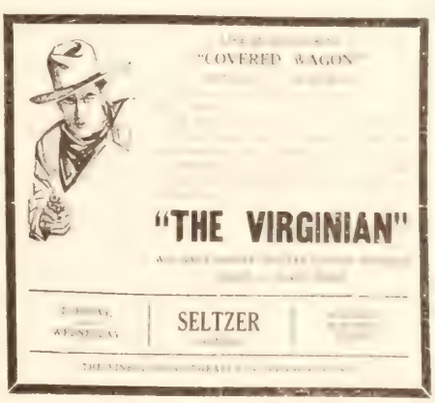
We can't recall offhand whether this is the nine hundredth or the nine hundredth and one story of George Shewell's work we have used on these pages but we just want to say that so long as we continue receiving work of the sort we are showing below, so long will we reproduce it, because we know that his fellow members are very much interested in seeing what the rest of the bunch is doing.

As you all know, Shewell is the publicity director for the York Theatres in York, Pa., and since we have known him he has always worked in a very showmanlike manner and his many activities have been very interesting. The cut-outs we are showing now were used on "Happy Days" and "Hit the Deck." The first cut-out had a background of a vivid blue with the side panels being painted in a brilliant yellow and lettered in red and black. The outline of the photos and stars, together with the title was done in white metallics. A brilliant white spot was focused upon the cut-out and reflected a glittering, dazzling display that created a lot of comment.



The other piece of art work was also very effective. This one was made up with blue as the "key" color in keeping with the Navy atmosphere, and was interspersed with yellow, orange and red. This type of display is typical of the work Shewell is always turning out and we are very glad to pass them along to the rest of the Club.

Chadwick Seems To Be Familiar With What Patrons Want



From another one of our live-wire members in George Shewell's district we have received a couple of novel slants that we believe have sufficient worth to merit being passed along the line to the rest of the Club. J. L. Chadwick, manager of the Seltzer Theatre in Palmyra, Pa., is the showman whose ideas we are relating at this time.

By using his heralds as a program, Chadwick saves a good deal of dough on printing. As you will note from the cut, the arrangement is well done and is very effective. On the back page, left blank by the production companies for the imprinting of playdates he makes use of ample space to plug his entire week's attractions. From one of his other heralds we have clipped a coupon he uses to stimulate matinee business, and pasted it onto the illustration so that the stunt will be more clearly seen.

This coupon entitles the holder to one free admission to the theatre on Friday matinee providing the bearer buys a regular admission ticket. The gag is the "two for the price of one" idea and is doubtless a very good medium for building good will and pepping up any lagging interest in the matinees. We are showing this in the event any of the Club members can find a spot for this angle (the herald-program and coupon) as it seems to us to be very valuable.

Another thing we want to point out is the way he advertises his attractions by using very effective and well laid out ads. You will notice that he has used the catch line, on top of the ad, "Like an All Talking 'Covered Wagon'." The thing we want to point out now is in line with a number of statements we made in connection with an article on localized advertising recently when we stressed the fact that you should know your patrons' likes and dislikes and work it into your advertising. This ad seems to tell us that the "Covered Wagon" and in fact all outdoor pictures are well received by the residents of the town and it is certainly gratifying to see that Chadwick is working from that angle.

We want to thank him for keeping us posted on what he is doing to bring them into his house and we know that we will have many more things to record concerning him in the future. Good work "J. L." and keep it up.

HOW ABOUT THIS ANGLE?

"Mrs. Chick" makes the suggestion that managers should pay a little more attention to the men's and ladies' toilets and not depend too much on the cleaning staff. Especially so, the ladies' rooms or lounges where they are so apt to judge the whole theatre by conditions as they find them in such places.

The thought was prompted by a recent visit to a theatre in one of New York's suburban communities. Driving back home she asked me what I thought of the theatre. I told her that whatever good impression I may have formed was completely erased after I visited the men's toilet.

Her comment was the same with respect to the ladies' room.

Have YOU given this angle any particular consideration recently? Do you still look over such places before the house opens and then check up on them during the day?

Foul-smelling toilets will murder your business quicker than any other part of the theatre suffering from neglect. They certainly require attention at very frequent intervals during the course of your theatre's operation hours and if they are not kept in a clean and well-ventilated condition, then you are leaving a rotten impression with your patrons.

We should hate to mention the number of theatres visited recently where similar poor supervision was exercised. We could even go further and cite a "mighty palace of cinema art" right here on Times Square where the smell in the men's room was enough to chase anybody out of the theatre.

"Chick."

H. M. Addison Sells Coming Attractions In This "Ace" Way

Here's the latest activities of H. M. Addison, manager of the Rochester Theatre in Rochester, N. Y., who turned out a very good campaign on "The Ship From Shanghai."

As a starter he decorated the theatre in a nautical manner which was carried throughout all parts of the house. A lot of comment was occasioned by the moving ship he featured on a cut-out stage, about ten feet wide and seven feet high, which had a depth of forty inches, into which was built the model ship, composed of compo board and moving on waves. We are reproducing a photo of this stage. The waves were of cloth with a sky effect and indirectly lighted with colored lamps. Around this was decorated a draped effect of silver and black cloth. And as we said before, the finished product was a knock-out.

Besides this "plug," Addison had another special cut-out sky with suitable colors blending in with the atmosphere of made, a clipper ship raised against a background of sea and the picture. This cut-out appears on the right hand side of the photo. Between the ship and the background a row of electric lights were set, with another special light blending in with the moon effect and making a very beautiful piece of art work stand out wonderfully.

In addition to selling the picture inside the house, many angles were used on the outside. Since the picture suggested travel, he tied-up with a local tourist agency and secured a number of window displays. And as luck would have it the agency show windows were located in what is known as the four busiest corners in Rochester. Street cars also carried copy on the picture. One of the banks featured a travel department and Addison made good use of this slant to grab off a lot more additional publicity. All in all the the campaign went over great and we want to compliment Addison on the fine things he is always accomplishing up there.

Winan's Campaign On "Hit The Deck" Hit High Business

An important sequence in "Hit the Deck," a party aboard ship, furnished Manager Clyde Winans and his staff, of the Madison Theatre, Peoria, Ill., with an idea for advertising the picture.

Winans prepared a quantity of "invitations," which told of a party to be held aboard the "S. S. Madison" docked at Main and Madison streets, Peoria, Ill. The invitation was prepared just as though the Madison Theatre were the ship and described the entertainment in store as a "rollicking cruise on the sea of music, mirth and merriment" with the names of the members of the cast of "Hit the Deck" as entertainers. Admission prices were given as "Purser's Rates" and quoted prices such as "Main Salon, 60c; Promenade Deck, 35c; Crow's Nest, 25c; Passengers under 12, 15c."

These "invitations" were distributed by attractive girls dressed in sailor uniforms, with white sailor caps and the title, "Hit the Deck," imprinted on them. The girls went from house to house and personally delivered the invitations, together with a greeting, "How Do You Do? Here's an invitation for you to a party aboard the Steamship Madison—be sure and come."

The stunt attracted much comment and interest and undoubtedly helped Peoria do an excellent week of business with "Hit the Deck," so Winans deserves a lot of credit for the entire gag.

Suppose you follow this right up with some of your more recent activities, Clyde, as we have every reason to suspect that you have been engineering some great stunts out in Peoria,

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

ANOTHER SLANT ON TRAILERS

You, no doubt, recall the article headed "Trailers, Trailers Trailers" which appeared a few weeks back on the Round Table pages, but in the event you did not happen to read it through, let us tell you it was a story about trailers written by Frank Whitbeck of the Fox West Coast Circuit.

Now we give you another's viewpoint on this important topic. For obvious reasons we will not mention the name of the gentleman who wrote it, but take our word for it: he knows trailers, in fact, we would even go a step further and say that he is a specialist on the subject. Having made trailers his life's work, he ought to know what he is talking about and after you read what he has to say, you will, in all probability, agree with us that he is all we claim.

Of course, we started the whole discussion, so it's up to us to see it through, but we're not complaining one bit, on the contrary, we are tickled that we did start it because it is showing signs of creating much more interest than seems to have been in vogue on this important phase of showmanship.

There are many fine points brought out in the story on this page and to those managers who really are anxious to improve the use of trailers, they will more than grasp the opportunity of cashing in on what the article brings out so plainly.

Trailers are too important to be accepted in a matter-of-fact way. They should be used with the utmost consideration for the pulling power they possess, not only for use on coming attractions, but for institutional copy, special announcements and other ways, all necessary in the operation of a theatre. Maybe you will think that we are emphasizing the subject too strenuously, perhaps we are, there's no harm done, but there is a possibility of a lot of good resulting from the entire discussion.

"Chick."

By "Someone Who Knows"

1. There is nothing wrong with the trailer situation, but there is something wrong with the man who refuses to recognize the important value of trailers, and there is bound to be something wrong with his business.

2. Yes. There is hardly any other medium of advertising that an exhibitor can use today that will give him such great results at such low cost. When you take into consideration the importance of reaching the largest amount of people that are interested in the product you have for sale, trailers reach one hundred per cent people that are interested in that which you have to sell, which is motion picture entertainment. Therefore, why should any exhibitor not be satisfied with using such a valuable medium?

3. The producers of talking trailers are specialists in screen advertising. They know that one of the basic principles is to keep up an element of suspense and to build the trailer in such manner that at no time is the story given away or to allow the star to be shown in any of his acting excepting that which is bound to create a favorable reaction. If you will observe closely, you will find that practically every trailer is in itself a miniature serial. It leads you up to a certain point, creates an element of suspense, and then leaves you with the desire to see the picture.

4. The spotting of trailers is a very important thing. Each exhibitor should give this considerable thought. It depends upon the schedule as to just which is the best place, preferably just before the feature, because, first of all, by putting it on at the very beginning of your show there is a certain percentage of your audience that comes in for the feature only and after the feature is over they will go out and you have missed them entirely. Secondly, after they have been entertained with short subjects of an interesting and humorous nature and they are in a receptive mood, that you have built up preparatory to the major part of your program which in reality they pay their admissions to see, you spot the trailer and it is bound to obtain a most favorable reaction. As a comparison: At a prize fight they put on their preliminaries just before the main bout, which is at the end, they will come out and announce what the next big fight is going to be and who is going to participate in same.

It is bad to use too many of them. If you have a number of changes it is better to run your trailer but four or five days in advance of your picture and concentrate upon fewer subjects than to run them on your entire week's coming program. If it is at all possible for you to do so, it is far better to concentrate upon the very next attraction, using perhaps only the main title of the trailer on the subsequent attraction until four or five days prior to the showing of same. In this manner you concentrate all of the force of your advertising on your next attraction and at the same time remind them of that which is following. This is very applicable to houses that have two or three changes a week.

5. With reference to using a silent trailer to advertise a talking picture for pictures like Garbo in "Anna Christie," etc., undoubtedly it is better to use a talking trailer. If anybody has noted, the trailer companies when making pictures in which for the first time the star's voice was to be heard built their trailer up to that point, had everybody else in the trailer but the star talking and led up and created that element of mystery and suspense as to what the star's voice was going to be like, or told how marvelous it was and that they have heard everybody else in the picture talk now come and see the picture and hear the star. At no time in the trailer itself did they have any scenes in which the star spoke.

6. As to pioneering a new method or a new kind of a trailer, pioneering is always a difficult and costly undertaking. It hardly behooves us at this time, when trailers have arisen to a degree of practically one hundred per cent perfection, inasmuch as they embody all of the essence, all of the essential qualifications of a one hundred per cent advertising medium, to wantonly throw overboard the thing that through years of specialization and study has arisen to this high degree of perfection merely for the sake of trying out a few theories. It would be far too dangerous and experimental, and would be apt to prove to be ruination to the business of him who tried it. Further, at this particular time when we are entering into a new entertainment world we need to support us every tried and true aid that we can possibly marshal to our support.

7. Regarding moving backgrounds, evidently what is referred to in this particular case is the type of a trailer that is made up of still scenes from the picture with copy superimposed over it. Sometimes the stills are animated to give an element of movement to the trailer to arrest attention.

This type of trailer, however, is only used by the smaller and cheaper houses, and can hardly be considered as a rival in any sense to the talking or actual scene type of trailer, and, whereas they serve their purpose inasmuch as they are at least better than the old still slide, the exhibitor that is using them would gain far more by paying the slight difference in cost and obtaining the actual scene trailer.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

"FRESH AIR"

It won't be long before fresh air and good ventilation will be of paramount importance to your theatre. But what are you doing about it now?

This, especially, to the boys whose houses have gone sound since last summer because, in such a case, you must be certain that your equipment is not noisy or apt to cause you trouble in connection with your sound apparatus.

No sense waiting until the last minute to find that attention or repairs are needed. Once your patrons are compelled to sit through a show in a stuffy, smelly atmosphere, you will have a heck of a time dispelling the impression that your house isn't poorly ventilated.

As for theatre with wall fans, you will have to get them in shape and adjust them to a speed that will not cause a "hum" in conflict with your talkies. You can only arrive at the happy medium on these matters by getting busy now. And DON'T leave it to some one else, even though the maintenance of ventilating equipment comes under one of your staff.

Marshall Used A Gag That Will Be Useful to Showmen

A tie-up with one of the local department stores was the means of enabling W. E. Marshall, manager of the Criterion Theatre in Oklahoma City, Okla., to use the "similar color" gag, in conjunction with his showing of "General Crack."

He placed a large sign containing many jumbled colors, designated by numbers, in a prominent window. A card informed the lookers-on that free tickets would be awarded to the persons guessing the two similar cards, the thing contained. Besides the card, circulars were distributed by the department store announcing the contest in the window. Besides plugging the contest the circular also carried a plug for the picture and the theatre.

Showmanship is seen in the way Marshall left space on the circular for the name and address of the contestant. When the circular was handed in or mailed to the theatre or department store, both institutions benefited by securing names which could be used for a mailing list. This color angle, we would like you to bear in mind can be used on a good many pictures and most certainly on films containing Technicolor sequences as the color scenes will be "naturals" for tie-ups.

Good work, Marshall, we are glad to note that you are applying real showmanlike methods to your show selling. Incidentally, we haven't a photo of you in our files and just to keep our records complete, why not send us one, together with a little note about yourself.

Creamer Continues To Click Out In Muscatine, Iowa

A good many showmen, we have found from our years of experience, are often enabled to do more selling of their shows through judicious newspaper advertising than through lots of other mediums. But then everybody isn't able to write advertising above the ordinary due to local conditions, etc., and other means must be used. At this time though, we want to pass along a story of the way John W. Creamer, manager of the Palace Theatre in Muscatine, Iowa, sold the town on a contest through his regular newspaper ad.

PALACE THEATRE

STARTS SUNDAY
2—DAYS ONLY—2

Think of All the Great Pictures You Have Seen and You'll Think of the Palace

Now! Comes the Finest Woman Picture of the Year.

"SARAH AND SON"
with
Ruth Chatterton

Famous! Acclaimed the world over! Yet a mother—with all a mother's love! SEE and HEAR her story.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S ESSAY CONTEST

The Palace is offering a framed painting of MOTHER by Whistler to the public grade schools for the best 25 word essay on the children's idea of Mother.

The prize goes to the winning room and not to a pupil. Each teacher will select the best essay from her pupils and mail it to the Palace to compete with those selected from other rooms. All entries must be in by 6 p. m. Wednesday March 26th.

See the Great Mother Love Picture "Sarah and Son" Then Write Your Essay.

By announcing the contest in his ad, Creamer did not have to ask the editor of the paper for any special favors or space and thus he could reserve the favors always granted him for some other time. Another angle that the ad presented was the way it livened up interest in the theatre's attraction. The stunt was a "School Children's Essay Contest" on "Mother." A framed painting of Whistler's famous work was offered as a prize, to be given to the writer of the best twenty-five word essay. The donation was given to the class and not to the individual student.

The teacher of each class was requested to select what he or she thought to be the best essay and submit it to Creamer. In this way he received only one essay from each room and the task of selecting it was lightened. The stunt, having the sanction of the Supt. of the Schools, went over very big and the house came in for a lot of good-will and publicity besides some extra box office revenue. We would like you to bear in mind that this stunt can be worked into a lot of other pictures as well and we want to thank Creamer for passing it along to his fellow members in the Round Table Club.

Lew Carroll Tries Plugging Pictures By Truck Ballyhoo

Another member of our hundred percent Round Table enrollment in Reading, Pa., is Lew Carroll, hustling manager of the Park Theatre, and the Club pages from time to time have borne accounts of his work which we are sure proved interesting to all, since Lew is one of Reading's most active showmen.

The photo we are reproducing will show you how he made good use of a teamster's wagon to ballyhoo his attractions by erecting two twenty-four sheet boards atop it. This wagon is a familiar sight along the streets of the city and no doubt secures more than just a passing glance.

We are sorry that we cannot tell you more about Lew's work at this time but as we know he has something concealed up his sleeve which he will spring on us in the near future (it's a secret but we'll tell you—he's giving away an electric radio, and knowing his work, he should have a couple of novel slants to the gag), so we'll just have to sign off for the present.

Thanks Lew, for keeping us posted on what you are doing to keep in step with the rest of the well known live-wires in your city. Give our regards to our many friends there and don't forget we're waiting to hear more from you.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

There May Be An Angle Or Two Here Of Benefit To You

Another of the Northwest showmen whom we think knows his business as well as any showman in this country is Herb Sobottka, manager of the Fox Liberty Theatre in Wenatchee, Wash., and when you finish reading this account of some of his work we believe that you too will agree.

When he played "The Love Parade," he gave away an expensive radio in conjunction with the showing of the picture. To secure a lot of publicity he ran a full page co-operative ad with the radio distribution company. He then persuaded every local advertiser to allow the insertion of cut up stills of the picture and radio in their ads. The contestants were supposed to match all of the loose parts correctly and submit the finished product to Sobottka. It clicked like nobody's business and the house came in for plenty of newspaper space and since the follow-up was obtained by announcing the winner from the stage, more publicity was obtained. The effectiveness of Sobottka's campaign was seen in the vast crowds which stormed the doors of the theatre on the night the winner was announced.

Not only does he do good work on this type of angle, but also on others, as is seen in the "Cracker Eating Contest" he promoted as a Saturday Matinee boost for Kiddie Trade. He tied up with a cracker company and they supplied crackers, displays, prizes and everything that went towards putting the stunt over successfully. With the beauty of the thing lying in the increased kiddie biz for that day and the non-cost to the theatre.

We ran, a short time ago, a box stating the advantages in securing the co-operation of dancing schools and presenting stage shows at no cost to your house. Sobottka has found another slant to this in his "Tap Dancing Contest." Sixteen entrants showed up for his first contest to compete for the valuable prizes offered by the local merchants, who donated the gifts in return for advertising on the screen and in the newspapers and lobby. The night of the finals found him with a crowd on his hands such as the house had never before encountered, all this despite the fact that he was holding over the same picture for the finals as he had shown when the entrants were first "doing their stuff." There's a lot of merit to this stunt and it would pay you to look into it further.

On "Sweetie," or rather in advance of "Sweetie," he used a girl to go up and down the aisles singing the theme song of the picture. She was beautifully outfitted from head to foot by a local shop and made quite a hit with everyone, as well as helping sell the picture. As a follow up stunt, during the run of the film, Sobottka tied up with a candy company and arranged to give away seventy-five boxes of candy daily to the first seventy-five women attending the matinee.

To keep this story from being too "long winded," we are going to hand you a laugh. As a gag for "This Thing Called Love," he inserted ads throughout the newspaper which read:

"Wanted—A Wife—Salary $25.00 a year. Strictly a business arrangement with understanding that you may keep your men friends and I keep my women friends. Address all replies to "This Thing Called Love."

Inserted only as a teaser, the gag must have been taken seriously by a lot of women, for a number of replies came in. And anyway, $25,000 a year (so it seemed to various femmes), was not to be "ka-chooed" at.

Opening his showing of "Rio Rita" with a Midnight Matinee, Sobottka secured permission from one of the local radio stations to broadcast the entire show over the air and as this was the first time the stunt had ever been used in Wenatchee, it created a sensation and did wonders towards selling the picture to the surrounding towns. Incidentally, he has another whiz of an angle in the local newsreel he "shoots" every week. At no cost to the house, one of the attaches goes about town and records on films the various local events. At times some real news shots are obtained. As an example, a short time ago there was a terrific forest fire high up in the Cascade Mountains. Using a plane from a local airport, which had placed it at his disposal for any time he cared to use it, Sobottka and his cameraman, G. H. Schubert, secured some marvelous action shots, which were shown as a "special" at the theatre.

We are sorry that we have no photographs with which to illustrate this story but we believe that Herb will keep us in mind next time he takes some and pass them along to us.

"WESTERNS!!!"

Sensing the importance and demand from exhibitors for Western pictures, MOTION PICTURE NEWS, in its issue of April 26th, will publish a special section devoted to Westerns.

Here, for the first time, we will set forth which producers and distributors are prepared to meet the demand for this type of picture, and from whose exchanges you can buy them.

If you are one of the showmen who expressed themselves on the need for Western productions, then you will greet the "Western Special" with open arms. And it will carry a wealth of material and information about this popular angle in entertainment.

Do you wish to say something on the subject yourself?

Oak! Just "shoot" it in to us right away. We want everyone's opinion and viewpoint. That's why MOTION PICTURE NEWS is always taking the lead in these matters.

Rowell Shows That He Knows Quite A Bit About Displays

It has been our aim in the past to shoot along to our Club members any examples of window displays that we thought had enough merit to be reproduced on these pages, and following that aim we've shown some corking tie-ups and will continue to show them. Which is why we would like to have you look at the display W. R. Rowell, manager of the El Dorado Theatre in Eldorado, Kansas, arranged for "Sunny Side Up."

Although the photo was poor, and we were unable to get a perfect reproduction, you can bet that the display looked one hundred per cent better than it now appears. After the first night's receipts were checked up there was no doubt as to its pulling power. This display was promoted by Rowell through a tie-up with the largest music dealer in town, whereby he secured two windows in which to plug the picture.

The cut-outs of the star in the picture were flanked on either side by miniature cards bearing a still and the play date, with phonograph records of the song hits placed in front of the big cut-out. What helped the beauty of the display was the fact that the whole thing was hand-painted and a great deal of care was taken by Rowell to see that every little detail was perfect.

It is too bad that the pictures were so dark, as we could have pointed out a couple of the highlights more clearly, but we hope that the next news we receive of Rowell and his work will contain some more interesting information and that we'll have better luck. Keep us posted, Rowell, and don't forget we are always glad to pass on the activities of every live wire showman in the country.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

Stewart B. Tucker Again Proves He Is Alert Showman

An alert showman operating down in Richmond, Va., is Stewart B. Tucker, manager of the Byrd Theatre.

In a recent issue of the Club's pages, we showed you how he cashed in by re-printing a trade paper ad as a change from the regular run of advertising. Today we are going to give you some more accounts of his live-wire work.

When the Byrd Theatre opened not so long ago, he let the house in for a lot of publicity by securing a co-operative page in the Sunday gravure section of one of Richmond's largest newspapers. The page, a photo of which we are reproducing, was paid for by all the contractors whose products went into the building of the theatre. It cost him absolutely nothing and the house received much favorable publicity. This stunt, though, constituted only one of his activities.

When the picture "Flight" played the house Stewart hustled out and secured the co-operation of the Marines stationed around the city. In fact, he did the job up so thoroughly that when he extended an invitation to General Smedley D. Butler to witness the performance the Marine Commandant offered to bring along a bunch of air "aces." Needless to say that a lot of publicity was secured on this angle Stewart burned up the ground going to the newspaper offices informing the press of the special feature.

The next day every paper in town carried stories to the effect that General Butler and his aces would be present at the Byrd. In addition to this, as arrangements had been made by Tucker to have the Marines stationed at the flying field to stunt over the city, pictures were also shown in the papers. The whole campaign went over with a bang and the result of it was seen in the second week hold-over that was necessitated, due to the tremendous crowds. And when you stop to figure out that this was only the second hold-over since the theatre opened, it must have been a "wow" of a campaign.

We are sorry that space will not permit us to give the whole thing in detail, so we endeavored to pick out the best features in order that you may see what Tucker is accomplishing down there, and since he is proving a very active member we will no doubt have many other interesting things to recount in the future.

Dave Lustig Turns Out Heralds That Sell Attractions

More examples of the way that live-wire circuit, the Manhattan Playhouses in New York City, keep right in step with the leaders is seen in these heralds used for the Hollywood and New Delancey Theatres. Dave Lustig hustling director of publicity for the circuit is responsible for the make-up of them and before we start off we want to say they certainly do his work justice.

The herald on the left was used in conjunction with the showing of "Street of Chance" and if you will look at the make-up you will notice the very effective copy and mats that are used to sell the show. The other herald contains a different angle in the way it is made up to resemble the front page of a tabloid, and bears a "newsy" heading. The heralds measured 12 x 10.

These two stunts of Dave's did a lot towards selling the picture to the circuit's patrons and are typical of his work.

Hugh Wallace Put This Gag Over In Showmanlike Style

To find showmen who are always keeping abreast of the times one has only to take a trip up to Canada and watch the activities of the live-wires who operate up there. One such showman is Hugh W. Wallace, who manages the Kitsilano Theatre in Vancouver, B. C.

Just to give you an example of Wallace's originality, we are going to describe a letter which he sent to every patron of the theatre. The missive was printed on blue paper, size eight by ten and enclosed in a large blue envelope. On the front of the envelope was imprintd the word "SUMMONS" and when opened it was found to contain a large sheet of paper which seemed to say, "Take Notice" "ARRESTED" "Big Fine" "Leaving Your Car" "Court" "Speed" "Miles," but upon closer inspection proved to be nothing more serious than a very clever arrangement of a herald on "Saturday Night Kid." Wallace had fashioned his selling copy around the words we have set forth and produced an arrangement that was a knockout, and sold the picture.

Another "wow" of a stunt we are setting forth below and since it speaks for itself we need not describe it, except to tell you that it adorned the front cover of the weekly program.

Passed Away

It is with deep regret we announce the passing of a tried and true friend of the people of Kitsilano, Men, Women, and Children.

You have all seen him, some of you more often than others, during his many years of useful and pleasure giving activity in your midst.

He passed away in the Kitsilano Theatre, Saturday night, December Twenty-first and was known to all of you as "The Silent Motion Picture," his demise is due entirely to the march of progress in the motion picture world.

His work will be carried on by his youthful but remarkably developed offspring, The Talking Picture at the Kitsilano Theatre, and he has in store for you a fund and variety of entertainment heretofore unheard of.

Further Information Read Inside

Wallace seems to be a crackerjack at arranging these little novelties as he has still another one in the program he made up in the form of a ballot requesting the people of the town to vote on the next week's show, and being a good showman he decided to vote for them by imprinting the question with X wherever occasion demanded. For instance, a box on the program would ask, "Should I bring the young folks to the special children's matinee on Saturday ?" and the answer would already be there in the form of an X marking the space devoted to the Yes box. This arrangement made quite a hit with the patrons and the house came in for some very effective publicity.

Thank you, Wallace, for keeping us posted on what you are doing up there in Vancouver and let's hear from you again in the near future, because we know that you will have something interesting which we can pass on to the rest of the CLUB.

Two Notable Boys From Fla. Are On Our Pages Again

Our famous incorporation, Al Weiss and Jonas Perlberg, known more familiarly as as Weiss-Perlberg, Inc., functioning at the Florida Theatre in Jacksonville, Fla., have been hitting on all eight cylinders again and now we record the reports.

As one of the highlights on "The Vagabond King" campaign, the duo went to work and tied-up a bus line that traveled all over Florida. On the back of the buses two color, 3x5 foot banners, were placed, and from examining one of the photos we are showing in the layout you can get an idea of how effective the stunt was. Through a tie-up with the libraries, ten thousand combination ruler-bookmarks were given out in all books.

A coloring contest sponsored by the schools was promoted by the pair and in nearly every window in town, the best examples of art work were placed on display, with a good many of the stores donating prizes. The five and tens by deciding to feature water colors and crayons in their windows also gave the theatre a break as it tied-in with the contest.

In the upper right photo you will note one-half of the live-wire team being congratulated. We don't know whether it is necessary to tell you that the smiling fellow holding the balloons in his hand is Jonas Perlberg, receiving well wishes from members of the Advertising Clubs and the Chamber of Commerce, on the completion of his first year in Jacksonville. If you look closely at the photo in the lower left you will see the pennant used to plug "Hell Harbor." These pennants, bearing copy on one side reading, "Ride The Trolley-Lupe Velez in 'Hell Harbor'," and on the other side, "Ride The Trolley-Florida Theatre," were placed on every trolley car in the city and did much to sell the picture.

The other two photos show you the creative work turned out by the two alert showmen to sell their coming and current attractions, and with such artistic displays it's small wonder that the residents of Jacksonville often comment upon it.

Thanks, fellows, for keeping us posted on your work and though we know you are very busy it wouldn't hurt us a bit to hear from you a bit more frequently.

FRANK J. HOLLAND is the Manager of the Murray Theatre in Richmond, Indiana. In the past Frank has secured many valuable ideas from the Round Table pages and now that he is a full-fledged member of the Club we may expect to see his name represented quite often. Don't keep your activities a secret now, Frank, let's see you add another letter to the mail man's pack.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

A. E. CAULEY manages the Capitol Theatre in Coburg, Ont., and is proposed for membership in the Club, by Jack Allan. Cauley manages a nice little 500 seater up in the Dominion and we feel sure that he will find time to shoot us in a little dope on how he keeps that house packed. And by the way "A. E." we'd like your photo, too.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

FRED R. PURSEL, managing the Lyric Theatre in Simcoe, Ont., is another Canadian showman to be proposed for membership by our hustling Regional Chairman, Jack Allan. Even though you are a number of miles away from us Fred you know that it takes only a two cent stamp to bring us in close contact with each other. Which is just our way of saying we hope you too will be as active as the rest of your brother members in the Club.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

JAMES URWIN is the manager of the Seneca Theatre in Seneca Falls, N. Y., we've been up around your location a couple of times James and we think that in a pretty little town like Seneca Falls you can put over some real high class examples of showmanship. How about letting us know what you are accomplishing up there and in order that we may give you a proper introduction, don't forget to include a photo.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

GEORGE L. DENTON is one of the latest Southern showmen to join our ranks. Mr. Denton is the manager of the Booth Theatre in Knoxville, Tenn. In the past many valuable ideas have born the Tennessee trade-mark and we'd like to see some of the future ones bearing George's signature. So what say George, when you send us in an account of your work, include your photo and a little note telling us about yourself.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

G. E. LE TARTE manages the Park Theatre in Ft. Fairfield, Maine. Mr. Le Tarte is another showman whose name has been represented on our pages before so all that we can say at this time is that we hope he will continue the active interest he is showing. And by the way "G. E." when you shoot us in your next contribution we hope you'll include your photo.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

DUNCAN CAMPBELL is the Assistant Manager of the Capitol Theatre in Guelph, Canada. Though young in years Mr. Campbell is old in experience and it is interesting to note that he has been working under the wing of Dave McMullen for a long time now, having risen from the uniformed ranks to his present position. Well Duncan, since you seem to be progressing so rapidly we are going to look forward to hearing some good accounts of you in the very near future.

CHRIS GEORGAS, managing the Classic Theatre in Owen Sound, Ont., Can., is one of the latest of the Dominion's showmen representatives to join. Mr. Georgas was proposed for membership by our Regional Chairman Jack Allan and through a bit of crystal gazing we learned that he is well able to put shows over with a bang. So before we reveal what we know about you Chris, wed'd like to have a photo of yourself and if you think we've slipped up on any "dope," why you can send us some.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

ERWIN GOLD manages the Lefferts Theatre in Richmond Hill, N. Y., for the Fox Met. Theatres. Just knowing so little about Mr. Gold will never do, so we hope he will favor us by dropping a line or two setting forth his past and present activities because we feel sure that it will be a very interesting item to pass along to his brother members in the Club.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BARNETT LAZARUS manager of the Manhattan Theatre in New York is no stranger to the Club pages, having been represented on them before. But as you know, Barnett, every member must at some time or another pass through these portals before reaching our "Hall of Fame." And now that you have entered through the door, all we want to say is that so long as you continue the active interest you have shown in the past, we'll be more than satisfied.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

NAT S. FERBER, managing the Crescent Theatre in Astoria, L. I., should, if we may be permitted to predict, be turning out some mighty good work. As we happen to know how hot competition is in Astoria we are enabled to make the above statement. Just to reassure us Nat drop us a little note setting forth the whys and wherefores of your show salesmanship.

———Wear Your Club Pin! ! !———

BUNNY BRYAN, we'd like you to know, is the Publicity Director for the Stadium Theatre in Woonsocket, R. I. The Club roll boasts a good many publicity directors "Bunny" and we don't mind revealing that you will certainly have to step to keep up with them. But since we have the goods on you and your work at the Stadium, it should be an easy matter for you to keep up. And listen "Bunny" every publicity man we have in the Club has had his picture published on our pages and we'd like yours too. How about it?

THE Club is anxious to publish photographs of every member and would, therefore, appreciate receiving as many as possible for use in future issues of the Club columns. If you have not already done so, PLEASE send us your own photo at once. Thank you.

The Exhibitors' HOME Trade Papers

NEW YORK may be the barometer for theatre owners in Chicago, Detroit, Los Angeles and other of the larger cities, but the barometer for exhibitors in the state of Kansas is Kansas City, Wichita, Topeka and some of the other key cities in their own state. While pictures are made in Hollywood and the executive offices of all companies are in New York, they are marketed through the branch exchanges scattered throughout the country. The exhibitors in Illinois are interested primarily in their "market place"—Chicago; and those in the state of Texas are interested in Dallas and the immediate territory. Thus each of the ten Associated Publications, being the exhibitors' HOME trade paper, is the closest exhibitor contact between producers and distributors next to their salesmen, and the buying guide for those in the section of the country it covers.

RODEO COMEDIES

With the public clamoring for talking pictures of the great outdoors, it took Pathé showmanship to produce a series with a new twist—two-reel comedies shot on the soil of the West! That's RODEO COMEDIES, just one of the 8 sensational comedy series peppered with audible talent on the Pathé 1930-31 program. For instance . . . "HEARTS AND HOOFS," a robust comedy featuring Cornelius Keefe, Mona Rico, Fred Warren and George Rigas, directed by Wallace Fox. Or "RANCH HOUSE BLUES"—a perfect gem of a short with an amusing story, mind you, an orchestra, comedians, dancers, horsemanship—with Don Douglas, Mildred Harris and Harry Woods, directed by Robert De Lacy. Or "HALF PINT POLLY," with an all-star cast including Tom Tyler, the great Western star, Mona Ray and others, directed by Robert De Lacy . . . These are just three of the SIX comedies you can expect in the series—and they're all as fresh, as breezy and as unique as the first three!

Planned and executed exclusively for

MOTION PICTURE NEWS

by JOHN F. RIDER

Famous writer on technical subjects connected with amplifiers, vacuum tubes and sound motion pictures.

Mr. Rider, who will continue to write exclusively for this publication in the motion picture periodical field, will contribute an article each week, beginning in the Showman for May, published in the issue of May 3rd.

Each article will be a chapter in a complete course.

The entire series has been outlined in advance, and for the first time offers projectionists, technical men and students a scientifically planned course of training in the principles and functions of sound projection equipment, its operation and servicing, and theatre acoustics.

JOHN F. RIDER

nationally known writer on technical subjects dealing with sound amplifiers and vacuum tubes has specialized in a study of those subjects since his graduation as an electrical engineer. His connection with radio goes back to the early days before broadcasting became a popular form of entertainment.

He is associate editor of RADIO ENGINEERING, editor, Technical Department of RADIO CRAFT, feature writer for the NEW YORK SUN, a director of the Radio Dealers' Association of America, associate member of both the American Institute of Electrical Engineers and the Institute of Radio Engineers.

Mr. Rider is the author of several text books, including MATHEMATICS OF RADIO, A. C. TUBES AND HOW TO USE THEM, TREATISE ON TESTING FOR SERVICE MEN, and co-author with James R. Cameron of SOUND PICTURES AND TROUBLE SHOOTERS MANUAL.

He began a thorough study of sound motion pictures, particularly with respect to their presentation in the regular motion picture theatre about two years ago, and in March, 1929, he became a contributor of technical articles on sound to MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

Party Crashers Ruined Compson-Cruze Home Life

Hollywood — Sunday house parties at their Flintridge home, where open house generally was the rule, is the reported cause of the split up between Betty Compson and James Cruze. Betty, it is said, is all fed up on the many friends and strangers who eliminated any chance for home life and rest.

The situation is the same as that which led to separation of the couple about a year ago, when Betty left and declared her intention of seeking a divorce. This was patched up, however.

"Railroad Man" Being Shot on Wide Film

Hollywood—RKO's first production on wide film via the Spoor-Bergden process is scheduled to be "The Railroad Man," with Robert Armstrong featured. Original plan to make "Dixiana" on wide film was discontinued some months ago, when difficulties arose which made production unwise at that time.

It is reported that the wide film shooting on "The Railroad Man" is more in the nature of an experiment by RKO, so that a true analysis of wide film under production conditions in the studio may be obtained. "The Railroad Man" is rated as a regulation program picture on the RKO schedule.

If the wide film shapes up satisfactory on this production, the company may launch into that field on a large scale.

Beery Vacations, But It's MGM Who Pays and Pays

Hollywood — Although Wallace Beery spent several idle months on his term contract with M-G-M, the company is now finding it possible to keep the player before the camera. After finishing his role in "The Big House," Beery was immediately assigned a featured spot in "Billy the Kid" under direction of King Vidor.

Purchasing Department Graft Leads Bankers to Probe Swollen Incomes

Itchy executive palms, being tickled with the U. S. Mint's latest shades of green, are apt to be scratched a deep red.

Mysterious tips have reached downtown financial quarters that executives in film concerns in which Wall Street is interested have bank and brokerage accounts out of proportion to their salaries. A private and very cautious check-up is reported to be under way to reveal the reasons.

Suspicion is definitely known to exist in banker minds about the ethics of certain film executives who have authority over, or actual control, of purchases.

The "Loan" Gag

The initial suspicion is said to have developed when a manufacturer of an accessory employed in new theatre construction bid on a particular contract and was told he could have the order providing he would make an unsecured cash loan for an indefinite period. Clinging to his hopes for the contract, he showed ignorance by suggesting six percent interest. The laugh he got is described as sufficient excuse for any gag writer to demand a raise. He lost the contract. Sore, and confident that his bid was as low as any one could go, he did the goat trick of butting in and learned that his bank was closely allied with one of the big downtown houses financially interested in the company whose executive had wanted the unsecured loan.

The manufacturer told his banker, who is said to have passed the story on to financial headquarters. Then came an investiga-

Shame!

Highly questionable social (?) activities of a well-known branch manager of a national distributor recently caused no end of trouble and embarrassment to the organization in the particular city over which the manager had jurisdiction.

Warnings by friends went unheeded, and an official squawk followed. A petition to the home-office sales chief, from powers-on-high who took exception to the manager's antics, brought instant dismissal—and a bad name.

The general sales chief took a licking when he fired the branch head because of the splendid sales performance by that manager in a territory which had been very weak until the bad boy stepped in.

Publix-RKO in Bitter Battle In Twin Cities

Minneapolis—Plenty of excitement is being looked for here and at St. Paul in the keen battle raging between Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum in the first-run field. Price cutting and two-for-one ticket sales have been resorted to. RKO sold the two-for-one ticket proposition to merchants, so Publix retaliated with special "courtesy tickets" to merchants, to give to customers. The merchants are billed weekly for tickets used. Joseph Plunkett, RKO general manager, and Dave Chatkin, head of Publix operation, recently visited here to map plans in the fight. Recently a shake-up of RKO forces in Minneapolis and St. Paul was completed.

Gilbert-Claire Romance Skids, Coast Insists

Hollywood—Off again, on again, Finnegan, is the tune they're whistling in discussing the Ina Claire-John Gilbert romance, which is again said to have struck the rocks. Miss Claire's trip East is reported to have been hurried and secret to confer with lawyers on a divorce, while in Hollywood, the dope is that John may rewed his former wife, Leatrice Joy. Miss Joy is quoted as saying that "when the time comes that John is washed up in the movies, he will know where his real home is."

Embezzled for Theatre Operations Is Charge

Edwardsville, Ill.—Theatre operations plunged Frank B. Sanders, bank cashier, into difficulties, resulting in alleged embezzlement of $143,000, used to finance a chain of picture houses. Sanders, who has been asked to resign, is said to have repaid most of the shortage and agreed to take care of the balance, so will not be prosecuted.

Sanders was president of United Operating Co.

Motion Picture News

Vol. XLI NEW YORK CITY, APRIL 26, 1930 No. 17

THERE'S LIFE FOR THE INDEPENDENT YET

THIS should be good news to some thousands of exhibitors scattered up, down and across the land:

The span of life allotted the independent, or unaffiliated, theatre operator is not over. As a matter of fact, some reasons present themselves as proof to indicate there is yet considerable hope.

This all revolves around the changing attitude of the producer-owned chains toward the men who operate one, two or three houses. Interest in them is rapidly on the wane.

The reasons are several:

Firstly, perhaps, the national chains have learned with considerable pain that manuals of operation, blue-print instructions and correspondence school managers don't seem to get over in theatres where the individual touch of the local manager has counted for so long.

Telling a chap in Iowa how to do it from behind a desk in New York or Chicago looks grand on paper, but in actual fact, it rarely works.

So it is your powerful circuits have discovered that the problem of the small and medium-sized town is one which they have been unable to adequately handle.

Move Is Under Way

Secondly, the profit is comparatively too slight for the trouble involved as a result of which big operators from now on may be expected to devote time and money to situations where they figure the return is commensurate with effort applied.

It is some weeks now since Motion Picture News first caught this trend and published the fact that several thousand houses will be returned to individual operation by the end of the year. The move is beginning to assert itself.

Nothing more vital from the independents' angle has developed in this business in many, many months. This does not mean that the wave of theatre acquisition is over. On the contrary, the campaign is aggressively on, and the news headlines of the next few months will demonstrate how accurate this observation is. But it does mean that below a certain level, the producer circuits will not go. What that level will be is difficult to gauge, but in the opinion of those who should know it appears that towns with populations of 20,000 to 25,000 will not be touched except where a concentration of industrial activity makes it smart business for the circuits to invade them. College towns fall into a similar category.

Not All Easy Sailing

What advantage of their breathing spell will the lone eagles take? To know that fear of producer domination is being gradually removed should mean worlds to them. At the same time, they must understand to the full the gravity of their situation. The towns free of circuit-owned houses will be in close proximity to the town or city that has one. And good roads will be the connecting link.

The sailing will not be easy. The fierce competition which rides rampant in all branches of this industry today has all but swept away the middle ground. You're either crashing through with the winning mob, or you're out of the running. We know of one instance where an exhibitor, playing a lone hand against big circuits, is whipping his all-powerful competitors regularly, and so badly that comparisons are well nigh pitiful.

He has plenty of competition. His theatres are good. The other fellow's are better. But the man whose story is merely hinted at here is a showman. He juggles his starring pictures with a psychological acumen that is uncanny. He maintains a booker and works hand in hand with him. And what he does apparently out of nothing at all is well nigh amazing. His full story is coming your way pretty soon.

This is an outstanding example, and one, perhaps, which leans backward and away from the argument here presented. But it has value in that it amply demonstrates that where cleverness and show sense prevail, the near-impossible can be put over.

Zukor Heads Pool to Make Films for Foreign Field; Warners Go it Alone

Phoney? Believe It Or Not

Hollywood—What is said to be the first trans-Atlantic collaboration of a talking picture play is in work with John Galsworthy, English author, and George Arliss, Warner star, as collaborators. The author recently closed with Warners for talker version of his play, stipulating, however, that Hollywood writers should not be permitted to tamper with his lines.

As changes are necessary in adapting the play, alterations are cabled to London daily by Arliss, and Galsworthy writes the new dialogue and cables it back to Hollywood—at regular rates.

'All Quiet' Stirs German Protest; Retakes Result?

Berlin—Universal's picturization of "All Quiet on the Western Front" has stirred up a hornets' nest here, and reprisals of some nature are threatened.

The seriousness with which officialdom is viewing the situation is evidenced by the fact that the Foreign Office has called the attention of the Reichstag to certain features in the production which it considers objectionable. It was authentically learned that the German Consul at San Francisco has been ordered to confer with Carl Laemmle regarding the obnoxious elements.

The contract by which the Ullstein publishing firm granted the film rights of "All Quiet" to Laemmle specified that the book was to be followed scrupulously without the shifting of important emphasis in any particular, although opposition to the novel has been encountered in this country. The Foreign Office asserts that in the "U" production the character of Sergt. Himmelstoss, a bully and a coward who plays a minor part in the book itself, has been portrayed as a typical German non-com, and contends that this is a deviation from the original form which will prove detrimental to Germany's reputation.

Motion Picture News reported exclusively last week that Carl Laemmle, Jr., had suddenly ordered retakes in "All Quiet," the reason being given that Zasu Pitts was too young to portray the role of the mother. The foregoing dispatch, however, throws further light on the subject and it is considered possible that the German reaction may have inspired the retakes.

"All Quiet" Very Big

"A great, dramatic epic of motion pictures and a positive money attraction."

This is how Walter R. Greene, West Coast correspondent for Motion Picture News describes "All Quiet on the Western Front," Universal's big war special.

Greene's tip-off on this attraction is worth reading. You'll find it on page 44

Foreign Concerns Unite to Fight U. S. Invasion

Paris—American distributors will have to step in their drive to maintain their position in European markets, due to the powerful combination of French and German producers and sound equipment firms recently completed. Twelve companies are associated in the combination, which is to be extended to other European countries.

The object of the combine is to exclude, so far as possible, companies associated with Western Electric from the French, Spanish, German and Czecho-Slovakian markets. Activities of the group will cover all phases of sound picture production, distribution and exhibition. In the alliance are: Klangfilm, Tobis Syndikat, Kuechenmeister International, French Tobis, Aubert Franco Films, Establissments Gaumont, Societe Continsonza and Societe Radio Cinema.

Stahl's Plan to Produce Dims; Joins "U" to Direct

Hollywood—Discontinuing his plans for independent production of a series of talkers, John M. Stahl has signed with Universal to direct the dialogue version of "Sincerity," from novel by John Erskine. Stahl is now preparing the adaptation, with the picture slated to be made in June.

Following this, Stahl moves to M-G-M to take over direction of "Dark Star," from current novel by Lorna Moon. He says he will then have plans completed for his own producing company.

Contract Conferences to Resume at Early Date

No date has been set as yet for resumption of the conferences on the new form of contract. S. R. Kent is chairman of the committee which is to continue sessions at an early date. The Hays office, the M. P. T. O. A. and Allied States Ass'n. are parties to the discussions on the proposed new contract form.

Paramount Chief in Europe to Put Plan into Effect; Lasky in Paris

Coordination and pooling of the resources of major American producers, excepting Warners, for production and distribution of films for the foreign market, is the purpose of the trip abroad of Adolph Zukor, Paramount president. While abroad Zukor will study the advisability and feasibility of the pool, plans for which he said are progressing "with some degree of success."

Paramount will make 20-odd features in French, Spanish and German during the coming year, in an effort to hold its present position in the European field, Zukor declared just prior to sailing for Europe, to study the problem of multi-linguals. He confirmed the exclusive Motion Picture News report that the company will make between 60 and 65 pictures for the 1930-31 season.

Strengthens Situation Abroad

"If this can be accomplished," said Zukor, "and some such agreement reached in the near future, the results would not only tend to strengthen the American position abroad, but would be far-reaching in the matter of economy to all concerned."

At present, it seems advisable to make foreign-language pictures here, but Zukor intends to go into all phases of the situation to determine whether it will not be more practical to make foreign-language films abroad.

Warners' deal with Tobis will have no bearing upon Paramount activities in that country, according to Zukor, who does not feel the German situation alarming.

Lasky Studies Situation

Paris—Jesse L. Lasky is here in connection with foreign-language talker plans of Paramount. Robert T. Kane now is making talkers here, reputedly for Paramount.

Howard Hughes Closely Guards "Hell's Angels"

Hollywood—Closely guarded, "Hell's Angels" now is in the cutting and editing stage, with final touches being applied by Howard Hughes, who has spent three years and a real fortune in making the film. Even Sid Grauman, who has a contract to road-show the picture, has not yet had a peak at the film.

Hughes wants to be very secretive about the production until its premiere. The reason is that he figures that certain material in it might be lifted by others for films which might beat "Hell's Angels" to general release

The Insiders' Outlook

THOSE usually mild eyes assumed a glitter. A determined jaw clamped down hard on what was once a cigar. One finger pointed aggresively by way of emphasizing the import of what was to come:

"I know I am right and I am determined to win."

Winnie Sheehan was talking.

The fight for control of Fox was reaching its climax. Big league lawyers at the time were bringing up long range guns and the odds were slowly, but inevitably swinging in the direction of Sheehan.

THIS INSIDER was in the latter's quarters at the Savoy Plaza. Sheehan had his home and office there in one. The sole topic of discussion, of course, was the memorably bitter struggle then tearing its way through the business. The man on the street was betting both ways and perhaps the truest commentary on what was transpiring was the frank admission from one of the bankers interested in the refinancing plans who said:

"The bankers—and the lawyers—don't know which way it will go."

On Two Fronts

Yet there sat Sheehan, placid and unworried, and by his own words, confident over the outcome. He was fighting it through along two lines. Three thousand miles away was a big studio, heavily committed on production and with a weekly payroll guaranteed to make any banker forget crocodile for the real kind of tears.

Flanking him on one side was an excitable chap named Grainger who had personally sold some millions of dollars in contracts to some hundreds of exhibitors while his sales boys in the field had swelled the total considerably beyond that. Grainger had to meet dates with showmen all over the country—release dates—and was perpetually worried over deliveries.

Flanking Sheehan on the other was his opposition, headed by William Fox and a retinue of legal talent. Statements were flying so fast and suits landing on Supreme Court dockets so frequently that even the two sides of the controversy had trouble in keeping the record clear. Then there were meetings with bankers. And lawyers. Then bankers again.

All through it, mind you, the ordinary conduct of business had to be maintained. Those pictures had to be delivered on time and the multiple wheels of a complex business machine kept humming.

The Inside of That Job

Sheehan won't talk about it. Grainger merely looks in the general direction of heaven. But it was a job—a tough, backbreaking job where the loyalty of the men at the studio, in the exchanges and in the home office meant everything. A danger spot in the entire messy situation was speculation over which way the deal would finally go. A sure death to morale unless steadying hands knew how and when to act.

These were some of the difficulties. And, in the face of them, Sheehan successfully and efficiently kept the production mill grinding. Grainger, with iron hand, did yeoman's work in preventing his men on the front lines from swerving. So much so, in fact, that in the six months from November through March, he actually added 1,031 new accounts to his ledgers.

Now it's all over. Some housecleaning remains to be done, but the companies' debts are cleared away and, reposing in the treasury are fourteen million iron men, awaiting beck and call.

Sheehan prefers to look back on the turmoil as a closed book. He speaks of the present and the future with an assurance that gets contagious. He is operating under what he terms happy auspices, knows where he is headed and is setting himself to travel that way.

Keep An Eye On Radio

Behind that deal, watch out. General Electric and Westinghouse—particularly G. E.—are to annex RCA and its subsidiary companies. Which means R-K-O Pictures, RCA Photophone. Looks like a cross word puzzle in bookkeeping. Some there are who curiously ask why, in view of how fatherly the interest of G. E. in its RCA offspring has always been.

Unless this watchtower is miles off shore, the expiration of the patent pool with A. T. and T. next year has far more to do with this new move than would appear on the surface. Run a mental stickpin through this rambling and see what the future brings.

The Busy Electric

The public is to be asked to invest two hundred and thirty-five million additional dollars in A. T. and T. That makes film flotations look like something considerably less than the dust.

Really, a lot of money. What THE INSIDERS are speculating over is what portion, if any, of that money will find its way into the picture business.

Answers will be handled in order of receipt.

Open Book Stuff

The film business is feminine. Proof! It can't keep a secret.

Advertising men have been surrounding their season's announcement plans with triple-extra precautions to prevent competitors from learning what stunts or especially clever ideas will be the foundation for their trade paper inserts.

It's the biggest chance of the year to show their stuff, and the dope is held as sacred as a fraternal oath. But it gets out. Two or three of the multiple-page copy writers would be amazed to know how well informed are their opponents about what the others are planning, while each figures he has kept his prize stunt safely hidden. There may be a couple of tragic discoveries when inserts blossom forth, with at least two well known ad men each finding that his unique treatment of art work and copy has a twin.

The Western Front—Not Quiet

Is the theatre battle-ground shifting?

Rumors are frequent, and increasingly emphatic, that a solid foundation is being poured in England, France and Germany, by known and unknown representatives of large American chain theatre organizations, on which to build companies in opposition to the Fox-Gaumont string of houses.

Few, if any, American names will appear in such flotsam as comes to the surface until the several deals now in process are so thoroughly set that nothing short of new laws in Parliament, the Chamber of Deputies or the Reichstag can upset the plans and futures of these internationalized ambitions.

Look who's over there now. Pleasure only? Not according to some of those who should know.

3 Month Production Holiday by End Of '30 Planned to Slash Overhead

Dishing the Dirt

Wash. Court House, O.—There's a mad scramble for Fayette Theatre programs each week. And here's why: Hoy O. Simons, manager, runs a full page of hot gossip about Hollywood folk on the display side of his program. Simons manages to dig up plenty of dirt and the fans go for it in a big way. Some of the yarns appearing in his newest sheet follow:

Helen Twelvetrees, one of the younger stars of Hollywood, has entered divorce action against her husband, accusing him of many misdemeanors.

Bert Lytell wears blue underwear.

Carmel Myers is titaning her hair and greening her eyelids.

Cliff Edwards is riding a horse in his next picture and it makes both of 'em sore.

Helen Kane, who went to a sanitarium for obesity, is getting thinner than a ham sandwich.

Marie Dressler looks so natural behind a mug of ale that everybody calls her The Female Chaney.

Charles Bickford won't emote with the same girl twice. He just loves 'em and leaves 'em when they cry for more.

Rin-Tin-Tin is going to make two more talkies before he retires to write his memoirs.

Peggy Hopkins says, "I have never known a husband to wear longer than six months."

With Mary Brian it has been Buddy Rogers, Arthur Lake, William Bakewell, Rudy Vallee and a host of football heroes. But now it is Phillip Holmes—until the next one comes along.

'Four Sons' Scene Costs Fox Loss of Newsreel Permit

Berlin—The Ministry of National Defense has revoked the Fox newsreel permit to photograph the German army because of a scene in "Four Sons," which, it alleges, was prejudicial to the reputation of German officers. The picture, which has Germany as its locale, was made three years ago, but has never been shown in this country. Its exhibition was also prohibited in Lisbon, Portugal, on the protest of the German consul there.

Zanft to Handle De Luxe Houses as New Division

John Zanft, deposed as the operating head of the Fox de luxe theatres shortly before William Fox sold his interests to Harley L. Clarke, returns to head a new division in theatre operation with Fox. Under his jurisdiction will be the original Fox theatres in Greater New York, including the Audubon, Academy of Music, Savoy, Folly and others, as well as de luxe operations in Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Washington. Zanft will book as well as operate.

It is reported the Fox houses in St. Louis and Detroit will be turned over to Harold B. Franklin and Fox West Coast to handle. West Coast is running the new Fox house in Atlanta, several thousand miles from Los Angeles headquarters.

Coast Studios Aim to Complete New Line-Ups by December—Then Comes Shutdown

Hollywood—The production drive for 1930-1931 is swinging into line at a pace perhaps never before achieved in Hollywood. Back of the intensive push now under way is the necessity for meeting release dates, but beyond that is a plan to clean up new schedules by the end of the year to permit a three months' shutdown at all major plants.

New season's product, as a general condition on most lots, will be out of the way by the end of October. Certainly, the end of the early days of 1931 will see production boards cleared of all pictures to be made. Except for fixed carrying charges, it will then be possible to trim overhead to the bone, to hand out vacations to those who rate them and to nab a breathing spell, during which trends and plans for 1931-1932 will be doped out.

Hays, Thalberg to Speak at S. M. P. E. Meeting

An extensive and diversified program of papers and entertainment will be offered at the Society of M. P. Engineers' spring meeting in Washington, May 5 to 8, at the Wardman Park Hotel.

The 52 papers cover practically every branch of the industry. Among the subjects are television, color, home radio movies, acoustics, medical cinemicrophotography, and many phases of sound recording and reproduction.

The list of speakers includes C. Francis Jenkins, Will Hays, Irving G. Thalberg and Harold B. Franklin. There will also be sound film speeches by a number of prominent men on the West Coast. Of special interest will be a visit to the Bureau of Standards.

Among the entertainment features will be a visit to the White House, a sight-seeing trip to Mount Vernon, pre-release showings of motion pictures and a banquet, with entertainment furnished by Washington theatres. Those planning to attend the meeting are urged to make reservations at the Wardman Park Hotel at once.

Warners' Combined Interests at Confab

Warners will hold an international sales convention in Atlantic City May 28-June 1. Representatives from all branches throughout the world are being called in to hear and discuss plans for the new season. Harry M. Warner estimates there are 16,847 employees on his combined payrolls.

The convention will cover Warner Bros. and allied and subsidiary companies in the picture, music and radio field.

More Truth Than Poetry

Hollywood—They're just children at heart, after all, these glittering stars. It takes so little to send them into stitches of mirth. Vincent Barnett is at it again. Barnett is the chap who, in the guise of a waiter or sometimes a guest, attends parties and insults people. Of course, his fee comes high—something like one hundred dollars a night.

Not long ago he appeared at the birthday dinner party given Carl Laemmle, Sr., by Carl, Jr. He began by doubting that Carl, Sr., was only sixty-three. "You look years older than that," he told the Universal producer. A little later he criticized the way the studio was run—"too many supervisors." Carl, Jr., said that a supervisor's job was to help a director make mistakes. "Your directors don't need any help," said the bogus guest. "They're too proficient now."

He also attended a dinner given by a Paramount executive. He started in on George Bancroft. "You are certainly lucky to get all the roles you do, because you can really only play yourself."

Ina Claire's turn came too. He told Ina that he had heard of her in Germany. "I had no idea my fame had gone that far," said Ina, much pleased. "Your fame?" he asked. "What do you do? I have only heard of you as the wife of Jack Gilbert." Ina was a good sport and laughed.

Warners Seeking Ten "U" Houses In Wisconsin

With the Harris circuit of 18 western Pennsylvania houses under the company's wing, negotiations now are under way by Warners for the circuit of ten Universal theatres in Wisconsin. Houses included are a first and a number of subsequent runs in Milwaukee and a number of houses in semi-keys throughout the state.

Theatres in the Harris chain are: Harris and People, Tarentum, Pa.; Harris South Hills, Dormont, Pa.; Harris Majestic, Findley, O.; Sixth Street, Coshocton, O.; William Penn and Harris, Pittsburgh, Pa.; J. P. Harris Memorial and Harris, McKeesport, Pa.; Harris Majestic and a new theatre now under construction, Butler, Pa.; State and Washington, Washington, Pa.; Harris, Donorah, Pa.; Harris, Wilmington, Del.; Harris, Etna, Pa., and Harris, Mt. Oliver, Pa. In addition Warners have purchased from the Harris interests a site at Monessen, Pa., for a theatre.

Warner Bros. is applying to list $15,759,000 additional 6% convertible debentures, making a total of $35,652,000 which will be outstanding. The purpose of this additional issue of debentures is to pay for the acquisition of the musical and radio division of Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co., to pay off approximately $1,625,000 in funded debt of subsidiaries, and to acquire 26 new theatres with a total capacity of about 33,000.

Unwired Houses Rehearsing Swan Song; 10,000 Sound-Equipped; Silents Dying

A Word to the Wise

Hollywood—"Eastern actors seem to be under the impression that railroad fare to Hollywood is all that is necessary to get in pictures," states Walter Weems, local representative for a New York paper, who believes "coming out here 'on spec' is about the silliest thing one can think of doing. There are hundreds of clever stage people out on the boulevard day after day wondering why they can't crash. The answer to that one is, it simply ISN'T BEING DONE. There are only two safe ways, no there are three, to invade Hollywood. The first one . . . come out here with a show. The producers, or their representatives, cover every stage play presented locally, and quite frequently cast players seen in legitimate offerings. Second, sign a contract in New York and know that you are going on a payroll whether you make good or not. Third, save your money until you are wealthy enough to retire, then head west. The latter is the best of the three ways suggested. Loafing in Southern California is delightful . . . and not at all conspicuous."

New Sound and Film Process Firms Launched

Formation in Delaware of Silvertone Theatres and Sound Corp., with 180,000 shares of common stock as capital, highlights a quiet week of corporation activities in Eastern states.

The Brunswick-Balke, in which Warners recently purchased an interest, organized a subsidiary unit, Argentine Brunswick Radio Corp. at Dover, to handle company activities in South America. New Jersey authorities granted a charter to Mechanical Amusement Corp., formed to operate a theatre at Bogota, and represented by U. S. Corp. Co., of New York City. Power Amusement Co., another theatre unit, was the second Delaware charter granted during the week.

New Jersey Charters

Papers were filed in New Jersey by Capitol Amusement Co., Inc., of Belvidere, represented by Harry Runyon, Belvidere, and Solomon Amusement Corp., Camden, likewise formed to operate theatres. E. George Aaron was attorney for the latter.

At Albany, secretary of state granted charters to Atlantic Sound Recording Corp., J. Hochstein, New York, attorney; Nazdac Realty & Amusement Corp., attorney: Suchman & Samuels, New York; Hartmann Film Processes, organized to process film, and represented by L. J. Jacoves, New York; and Movieland News, an advertising company, of which S. R. Weitz is attorney.

Elimination of Unwired Houses Predicted for End of Year; Competition Keen

With 10,000 theatres already wired, the supply of silent pictures diminishing rapidly and the competition of sound houses forcing them to the wall, indications are that the present year will sing the swan song of the unwired theatre as a factor in the industry.

In the group of 10,000 theatres now showing sound pictures are all major first and second run houses and a large percentage of subsequent runs and small town houses.

Where this year silent prints have been available in sufficient numbers for an unwired house to get by, there will be few silents on the market next year, it is indicated.

Unwired small town houses are finding the competition of nearby wired theatres too tough to meet, and are running in the red. As a result, they face the necessity of wiring or folding during the present year.

The cutting of prices on reproducing equipment also is expected to prove a strong factor in speeding up the wiring of the remaining silent houses.

Lack of Unwired Houses Kills Silent Production

"The day of the silent film is passed," in the opinion of M. J. Mintz, who claims "there are not enough unwired houses to make it profitable for the production of silent features or shorts."

Mintz has formed Affiliated Sound Recordings, headquarters at 1780 Broadway, New York, where he synchronizes silents with sound on disc and film, and adding English dialogue to foreign features.

Cleveland Territory Reports 63% Wired

Cleveland—Of 593 theatres now open and operating in northern Ohio, 370, or 63%, are wired for sound, according to a new theatre register compiled by the Cleveland Film Board of Trade. Of these, 145 have disc equipment, 21 have film equipment, and 204 have both disc and film. Ninety-four houses in the territory are reported closed.

Speed

Within an hour after signing by Radio Pictures of Amos 'n' Andy, Hy Daab, the company's advertising and publicity chief, had the story on the wires of all major press associations, had feature stories and photographs dispatched to picture editors of leading newspapers and had completed arrangements for a national NBC broadcast of the news, as well as to feature the event in the RKO radio hour.

"The Lost Chord"

Hollywood—Several near-casualties enlightened things at the last Mayfair Club dance—well, let Cal York tell it:

"It isn't very nice to mention it but the high point of the entertainment was provided quite unintentionally by one of the Sisters G.

"The two sisters, imported from Germany by Universal for a specialty in 'King of Jazz Revue' were guest dancers at the Mayfair party. In the more strenuous part of their dance routine one of the Gs lost her dancing trunks. She carried off the situation with magnificent aplomb, and finished the dance.

"Another near casualty occurred when the lady end of an adagio team almost missed her partner in one of those sensational whirls. More dignified entertainment was provided by Oscar Straus, the famous Venetian composer of light operas. He played his own composition, the 'My Hero' number from 'Chocolate Soldier.' And then the orchestra came in on the chorus. You couldn't hear Mr. Straus after that."

Radio Pictures Sales Convention In L. A., May 19

Radio Pictures have completed plans for the yearly sales convention to be held in Los Angeles beginning May 19. The migration of officials and salesmen will start from New York on May 14 to Chicago, where the Santa Fe will carry the convention special to the Coast. Arrangements have been made for a party of more than fifty.

One of the sleepers will be operated through from New York to take care of the party which will be joined by Philadelphia, New Haven, Boston and Albany members. This car will leave New York via New York Central on May 14. The party will be augmented by additional enthusiastic Radio men at Chicago, Kansas City, Newton, Kan., and La Junta, Colo.

Technicolor Labs Show a 700% Jump in Year

Technicolor has increased its printing capacity for color films 700 per cent within the last year, states Dr. Herbert T. Kalmus, president of the company.

Existing contracts with principal producers call for a campaign of expansion in the immediate future. Two pieces of land adjoining the present Technicolor plants in Hollywood and a site next to the huge Boston laboratories, were purchased recently, and additions will be built as demand necessitates. Eighteen new cameras have been ordered to supplement the thirty odd cameras at present in Hollywood.

Unwired Houses Face Serious Shortage By Drastic Cut to 100 Silents in 1930-31

Television Not Perfected, Says De Forest

Minneapolis—Television has not developed to the point where exhibitors should have fear of any immediate competition, Dr. Lee De Forest, inventor of De Forest Phonofilm, told exhibitors here at the Northwest unit's convention.

The veteran inventor addressed the complimentary luncheon of the Radio Trades Ass'n, and also spoke over two radio stations upon the development of sound pictures.

'Hot for Paris' So Hot It Scorches Her Tripewriter

Chicago—When "Hot for Paris" (Fox) began an indefinite run at McVickers (Publix-B. & K.), "The Girls" (Chicago's newspaper critics), looked it over and went blushingly to their tripewriters to pound out their raps.

Rob Reel (Hazel Flynn) of Hearst's American proved herself the most grievously offended of the lot. Her reactions elicited not a review, but a wholesale indictment of picture, star, director and exhibitor—all of whom she pronounces with the utmost assurance to be "dead"?

Ironically enough, however, her intended death-dealing barb landed at the box office gold-tipped. In damning the picture as "filth without rhyme or reason" and condemning the local censor board for having passed it, Hazel gave that same money-making glamour to "Hot for Paris" that is ordinarily only achieved by the objections of the censors themselves. The picture, which had opened to ultra modest business, perked up immediately, and at the end of the fifth day of its run had grossed $24,600 and was well on its way into the money.

Hazel Writes Obit

Hazel presented her "review" as a funeral account. "Laid out in elaborate state," she wrote, "are two corpses. One of them is the popularity of Victor McLaglen, another the directorial reputation of Raoul Walsh." Tragedy, in the form of blindness, she relates, entered their lives. So, from "a di-

Hammerstein Deserts Stage for Pictures

Arthur Hammerstein will desert the stage for pictures next spring, after presenting "The Bird of Paradise" and "Madeline" in New York.

He has just completed his first film, "Bride 66," for United Artists, with Jeanette MacDonald and Joe E. Brown heading the cast, and with Rudolph Friml composer of the music, and said he had made arrangements with Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists, to produce more pictures for that company.

Tin Pan Artist Gets Taste of 'Publicity Blues'

Hollywood—Add temperament of the song writer to the mad swirl which is Hollywood.

Con Conrad is the lyricist who is reported to have had the outburst, which came about when Con lamped the billboard at the studio on the new edition of Fox Movietone Follies. Con felt he wasn't given enough prominence in the billing 'tis said, so he went inside and laid down the law to Al Rockett. Al covered the play, and with an assist by Sol Wurtzel, Con was eased out and off the Fox payroll.

Heerman in New York for Marx Brothers Picture

Victor Heerman is in New York from the Coast. He was brought east by Paramount to direct the Four Marx Brothers in "Animal Crackers," which will be made at the Astoria studio.

Disagreement Caused Shakeup at "U" Studio

Hollywood—Disagreement over executive operation and policy led to resignation of J. J. Gain from Universal, with Henry Henigson returning. Henigson's misunderstanding with Carl Laemmle has been fixed up.

"Journey's End" Run

Toledo, O.—"Journey's End," Tiffany production, has been booked for a three weeks' engagement at the Vita-Temple by Jack O'Connell, who will road show it at $1.50 top. "Journey's End" will play the Hippodrome, Cleveland, at popular prices.

Discovered!

Houston—The original of the "Loew's for Good Shows" parrot plug may be found in the person of "Howard," who occupies a prominent perch in the lobby of Loew's State.

The bird calls an affectionate good-night after theatre patrons, and addresses W. V. Taylor, house manager, as "Pop."

Only 5 National Distributors To Date Have Included Silents In New Release Charts

Less than 100 silent features — and very few silent short subjects — will be made available in 1930-31, by national distributors, presaging a serious shortage of product for unwired houses of the United States.

Because of the rapidity with which theatres are being wired, the 12 national distributors are paying little or no attention to silents, or silent versions of talkers in their new production schedules. Five companies will release less than 70, with about 30 more expected from other organizations which at present are undecided as to what policy should be adopted with regard to silents next season.

Columbia will release 20 silents in 1930-31. First National has decided on 7, M-G-M approximately 20; Tiffany, about 5, and 15 from United Artists. Other distributors, including Fox, Paramount, Pathe, RKO, Sono Art, Universal and Warners, have made no silent plans whatsoever.

Approximately 407 features will be released by national distributors in 1930-31, as against 431 this season, of which 302 were either silent or silent versions of sound pictures. The latter figure represents 200 more silents than are expected on 1930-31 release charts. Independents, from present indications, will swell the 1930-31 total by two dozen sound-and-silents.

A recapitulation of national distributors' feature release activities in 1930-31, as compared with 1929-30, follows:

Dist.	Total 1930-31 Releases	1930-31 Silent Releases	Total 1929-30 Releases	1929-30 Silent Releases

Columbia and United Artists are the only two distributors who have not drastically cut silent production. There will be very few, if any, all silents in 1930-31, all features to be released in the latter form being silent versions of talkers.

M-G-M May Increase Quota

M-G-M, which released 17 silents this year, may top this total by three in 1930-31. Home office officials stated that "nearly one-half of the new schedule will have silent versions."

First National drops from a 100% silent version policy in 1929-30 to seven silents, out of 40 releases, in 1930-31.

Fox has 52 talkers scheduled for the new season, with no plans set for silent versions. Paramount is likewise undetermined on its silent schedule. Pathe's lineup of 20 talkers for both seasons will find a radical change in silent quotas in 1930-31. Last year, each of the 20 features carried silent versions. This season, plans are being held in abeyance.

Although RKO increased its 1929-30 total from 30 to 35, the company has not determined on any silents for this season as yet.

Sono Art-World Wide has definitely decided to discontinue all silent versions. Last year the company had 23, with 25 on the total schedule. The current chart shows 20 talkers.

Tiffany may release five silent versions out of a possible 26 releases. Only one of last year's 26 features was released without silent prints.

As previously announced, Universal will eliminate "program" pictures in 1930-31, in favor of "specials," cutting the total release schedule from 44 last season to 20 for this year. Forty-three silents and silent versions were listed in 1929-30.

Warners, pioneers in the sound field, have not decided upon a sound policy for the new season. There will be 42 talkers, as against 39 last year, of which 24 had silent versions.

Tampa Strand Switched To Full Week; Prices Up

Tampa, Fla.—When Publix closed the Victory for remodeling the full-week stand for Tampa was out, as all the other houses change programs from two to four times during the week.

The company decided Tampa was good for full weeks on big pictures and the Strand was switched from the three changes to full-week policy. The opening attraction is Al Jolson in "Mammy." Former prices at the Strand were 35c matinee and 40c nights. Under the new arrangement prices will be tilted to 40c matinee and 60c at night.

Lally Pleads Not Guilty

Plea of not guilty was made in General Sessions by Henry F. Lally, manager of Sound Studios, New York, on two second degree manslaughter indictments returned against him and John C. Flinn, Pathe vice-president, as a result of the Pathe studio fire last December. He was released on $5,000 bail.

"Immoralists" Also Attacked in Counsel's Address Before Indiana Body

Indianapolis—Will H. Hays sits between two fires, C. C. Pettijohn, Hays organization counsel, declared here Wednesday in addressing the convention of the Indiana Indorsers of Photoplays. These are, he said, "the professional moralists and the professional immoralists, Canon Chase and a group of smart alecks in the film industry."

C. C. Pettijohn

"I'm tired of listening to people discuss pro and con what Hays has done for the motion picture industry," Pettijohn told the convention. "He is confronted with one side wanting to take all the joy out of life and pictures and the other trying to inject bad taste and poor business judgment into the movies.

"Immorality cannot come from looking at motion pictures," he continued. "If that were true, censors would be the most immoral people in the world."

Sound pictures were approved by the convention by a two to one vote, with Pettijohn predicting that two years hence talkers of today will be considered crude affairs with apparatus which will be in use then then.

"You can't blame pictures for crime," was the substance of discussions at the convention, after the charge had been made that drinking scenes in pictures tend to encourage disobedience to the Eighteenth Amendment. "White Cargo," which is being shown here under the caption, "This picture was banned by Will Hays," came in for considerable discussion, but no condemnation.

rector and star who were so blind they could not see that another talkie emphasizing vulgarity might be fatal for all concerned, we have the release 'Hot for Paris.' Nice and Ladylike

Thus incensed at the production, Hazel appends this lady-like conclusion to her "review":

"At this point," she says, "Rob Reel (the writer) and the mourners all apply the thumb and forefinger to the 'schnozzle' and make a noise like a razzberry. . . . Then they chant the following:

"'Ashes to ashes and dust to dust.
If film musicrevues don't getcha, the vulgaries must. . . .
Requiescat, but not in Pace.
Here's hoping your insects are all centipedes.'"

Now wouldn't you know that a lady who could write as delicately and in as obvious good taste as that would be offended by so-called pictured vulgarity?

German Censorship Bill Expected to Pass Soon

Berlin—Passage of the new censorship bill is expected shortly, Dr. Reinhold Mumm, leader of the forces in the Reichstag, predicting that any changes in the measure will be minor ones. Provisions calling for complete censorship of foreign films, including American, are being opposed by the Socialists, who declare that they will interfere with foreign trade at a time when Germany needs all the commerce it can obtain.

The bill contains several stringent clauses. It prohibits the export from Germany of any picture which tends to hurt the country's reputation abroad; bars the admission to theatres of children under 6 and provides for punishment of parents or guardians, as well as the children, under this ruling. At present minors under 18 are admitted only to such films as have been certified specially.

Merger with R-K-O "Biggest Joke," Declares Warner; Retains Disc Plan

Chaplin Remains Silent

Hollywood—Charlie Chaplin will continue making silents and will produce at least five more before retiring, he is quoted as saying. Reports will not down that he made his decision to stick to silents after a secret voice test. He has been working for three years on "City Lights," which will be the only silent on next year's United Artists program. Its cost has passed the $1,000,000 mark, the comedian says.

Warners Get 50% Nakken Interest; Seeking DeForest

Acquisition by Warners of a fifty per cent interest in Nakken Patents Corp. and further negotiations to buy into General Talking Pictures (DeForest) are latest developments in the movement to further strengthen Warners' position in the sound patent field.

The Nakken deal gives Warners a royalty free license to use all patents of Theodore Nakken governing methods of producing sound-on-film, electric transmission of facsimile pictures and printed matter by both wire and radio and in the field of television.

The basic Nakken patent covers five fields in which the transformation of light impulses into electric current is required.

Although no deal has been closed with General Talking as yet, Warners are understood to have secured an option for purchase of an interest in that company.

Pacent to Market New Film Recording Apparatus

Combining features of both variable area and variable density recordings, Pacent Reproducer Corp. will market new recording and reproducing apparatus for sound-on-film.

Warners for some time have been generally understood to be backers of Pacent, although always emphatically denied.

Brunswick Deal to Speed New Dubuque, Ia. Theatre

Dubuque, Ia.—Announcement by Warners of the acquisition of the musical division of Brunswick-Balke-Collender Co. will speed work on the theatre projects planned here by Publix and Radio-Keith-Orpheum. Plans for the buildings have been under way for some time, but the Warner announcement will result in erection of the two houses sooner than anticipated.

Brunswick Board Okays Music Department Sale

Chicago—Executive offices of the musical division of Brunswick-Balke-Collender are to be moved to New York, but the personnel of the division will remain about the same, it was stated at the directors' meeting here. Sale of all assets of the division to Warners was approved unanimously by directors and without discussion.

Memorial Theatre To Sam Warner Is Opened on B'way

Tribute to the late Sam Warner and the part he played in the adoption by the industry of talking pictures was paid Tuesday, with opening of Warners' new Hollywood, Broadway and 51st St., New York, dedicated to the memory of Sam Warner.

"Hold Everything," was the opening attraction at the new house, which has a seating capacity of 1,608. It is the fifth Warner Broadway house, the others being the Warner, Winter Garden, Strand, Beacon and Central.

Notables of the political, screen and stage world attended the Tuesday opening, which was one of the most auspicious ever held in New York.

Rumor Aroused by Raskob and Meehan Purchases of Stock in Firms

Merger of Warners and R-K-O reported to be engineered although stock purchases in both corporations by John J. Raskob and Mike Meehan is "the biggest joke I have ever heard," Harry M. Warner told Motion Picture News.

"You've seen what we have had to say about selling out," he continued. "We are in this business to stay. The report you pass tying us in with R-K-O has no foundation whatsoever in fact."

Deal for a fifty per cent. interest in the Nakken patents, details of which are published elsewhere in this edition, is responsible for reports that the Warners are planning a switch from sound-on-record recording to sound-on-film.

The head of Warners denies this. He said experiments have and are being conducted, but that nothing so far discovered by the organization, in its opinion, equals the disc method.

"There is no more comparison than between day and night," Warner declared. "We are after the best in sound because it is the best only that we must have. Tests are being made constantly, but our method has come out on top. Therefore, we stick to the disc."

Warners Not Selling

Warner Bros. is not and never has been for sale, states Harry M. Warner, company president. Control is to remain in charge of the brothers, he asserts, pointing out that it cannot pass to others without the assent of those now in charge.

Kennedy Denies RKO-Pathe Deal As Stocks Move

Gymnastics and gyroscopics of Radio-Keith-Orpheum and Pathe stock this week were attributed to recurrent reports that a deal for amalgamation of the two concerns was under way. Shubert stock also was active, resulting in reports that that firm also was to be drawn into the proposed combination.

A number of brokerage firms Wednesday were buying the R-K-O stock with more than 370,000 shares changing hands.

No deal with R-K-O is on or under way, Joseph P. Kennedy Thursday told Motion Picture News.

5 Year Pacts for Sheehan, Grainger; Fox Forging Ahead Under New Regime

Honor "Bux"

New York exhibitors have organized a committee to tender Harry H. ("Bux") Buxbaum, local Fox manager, a dinner to be held at the Astor on May 19, or two days before Buxbaum entrains with his brother branch managers for the Fox convention in Hollywood.

The committee, composed of Charles L. O'Reilly, Rudy Sanders, Lee A. Ochs, William H. Hollander, Joe Lee and Eddie Schnitzer, is figuring on an assemblage of 400. The plan was voluntarily conceived on the part of Buxbaum's many exhibitor friends.

Financing Set, Studio Boom On—Decks Cleared For New Season

Carrying a definite assurance to the exhibitors of the country that production and sales are to continue under the Harley Clarke regime as in the past, and evidencing further that the organization is priming itself to move steadily forward, Winfield Sheehan and James R. Grainger are about to sign long-term contracts with Fox.

The agreements will keep them in the Fox ranks for a reported period of five years each, although with the unexpired portion of his contract yet to go, the time limit is raised in so far as Grainger is concerned.

His First Contract

It is understood Sheehan has never held a contract with Fox. This at his own insistence. The fact that the impending agreement is to run for such a long period of time and follows so quickly on the heels of the Clarke deal is considered by those on the inside as ample indication of how the new financial interests in Fox regard him.

Sheehan, who has been running the Hollywood studios via telephone and telegraph since he left the Coast last September on what was then figured as a combination business and pleasure trip abroad, expects to return West on the 5th, accompanied by Grainger. Final details of the company's 48-to-52 picture program for 1930-1931 will then be ironed out, after which Grainger will make a flying trip back to New York to gather his sales crew and re-embark for Hollywood on a second trip with divisional branch and sales managers in tow.

Eighteen or twenty pictures on the new schedule will be ready with prints in exchanges by September. The studio is now

Fox Centralizes

Hollywood—In eighteen months, all Fox production will be centered at Movietone City. The 26 acres which now comprise the studio on Western Avenue are expected to be sold for commercial purposes, netting the company a handsome profit on its original investment of some years ago. Realty value of the land has increased tremendously in the last few years.

New stages at Movietone City will be started May 1. Each building is to occupy an entire block, with the stage either divided into two or used as one as production may demand.

Opposition to Fox Financing Gets Only Yawn

Efforts on the part of Stanley M. Lazarus, acting as attorney for a committee of Class A stockholders of Fox Film, to thwart Halsey, Stuart & Co., Chase Securities Corp. and General Theatres Equipment Corp. in their refinancing of the Fox companies, are regarded as unimportant by attorneys speaking for Harley L. Clarke.

Lazarus' action filed in the Supreme Court of New York charges the plan would deprive stockholders of Fox Film of the right to subscribe for 1,600,000 shares of Class A at $20 under the Bancamerica financing plan. He alleges the plan violates the rights of stockholders and that is marked with illegal and fraudulent aspects.

He further charges that by taking 1,600,000 shares of Class A stock for a nominal consideration, thereby controlling the Class A and the Class B stock of the Fox Film Corp., "Mr. Clarke and his associates have a two-thirds control of both classes of stock of the film company as well as the complete control of the Fox Theatres through ownership of the Class B stock of the Theatres Corp., thereby receiving more than two-thirds of the dividends of the Fox Film Corp., if any are declared, and having the sole power to elect all of the directors, making the recent amendment to the charter giving the Class A stock a vote for directors practically meaningless."

Allvine Lines Up Dope on Fox List; Signs New Pact

Hollywood—Glendon Allvine, director of publicity and advertising for Fox, is here from New York to confer with Sol M. Wurtzel, plant superintendent for Fox, and Victor M. Shapiro, studio publicity chief, on the line-up for 1930-1931.

Glendon Allvine

Allvine is gathering data for preparation of the company's annual product announcement and will remain here about ten days before returning to New York. The trek West is his first official job under a new two-year contract just signed with Winfield Sheehan to continue in charge of his department.

Fox Financing Calls for Thirty Million Issue

Initial public financing whereby General Theatres Equipment, headed by Harley L. Clarke, acquires control of both the Fox Film and Fox Theatres, will consist of $30,000,000 ten-year six per cent. convertible gold debentures of General Theatres Equipment. The financing plan comes as a sequel to the announcement of steps for retirement of all the current obligations of Fox Film Co. and Fox Theatres, amounting to approximately $100,000,000.

As part of this plan Fox Film has sold $55,000,000 of secured 6 per cent. one-year gold notes and 1,600,000 shares of Class "A" common stock, which provides, in addition to the payment of current obligations, for the acquisition by Fox Film from Fox Theatres of 660,900 shares of common stock of Loew's, Inc., representing approximately 48 per cent. of the outstanding common stock of that company.

Fox Convention Set for May 26 in Hollywood

Those 52 pictures on which $22,000,000 is to be expended, together with plans of the organization for the next five years, will be outlined at the annual sales convention to be held at Hollywood May 26 by Fox. New regime of the organization, together with its expanded plans for the future under leadership of Harley L. Clarke, will be outlined at the Los Angeles meetings.

At the sessions, Winfield Sheehan, executive of production, will tell about the firm's plans for the new season and will give them an advance showing of the pictures they will have to sell for the new year.

Fox West Coast Battling Warners on Pacific Slope for Theatre Supremacy

E-K To Benefit?

Purchase of control of Fox by Harley L. Clarke of General Theatres Equipment, observes "Wall St. Tomorrow," means more to Eastman Kodak "than is generally realized."

"Eastman Kodak is to collect $8,000,000 from Fox which a short time ago had been listed in the minds of shrewd bankers as a doubtful asset," the publication asserts. "In addition, the company is to receive a tax rebate of around $2,500,000 from Uncle Sam. Here is $5 a share this year which had not been counted on. Fox Theatres under the General Theatre Equipment management will all be equipped with double dimension film, which requires twice the usual amount of raw film, which means a larger net profit by more than 100%. Eastman Kodak seems to be the latest candidate for the $300-a-share mark in short order."

Competition Becomes Hot as Rivals Race to Acquire New Houses

Los Angeles—The king pin of exhibition on the Pacific Slope plans to give ground to no contendor if it can help it.

Fox West Coast Theatres, strongly entrenched up and down the seaboard and well into the hinterlands, is preparing to give Warners the battle of a lifetime. It took Harold B. Franklin several years to build the properties whose destinies he guides to the point where an annual profit of $350,000 or thereabouts jumped close to $5,000,000 for 1929. And, while Franklin says nothing, the fact that West Coast is building in Beverly, where the field is crowded, as well as in Huntington Park and San Pedro, is evidence enough that wherever Warners go, Franklin will be there as well.

It may get a bit ruthless before the squabble ends, but toes are to be stepped on plenty as the situation stands today.

Behind the Warner theatre drive in this section of the country is a desire for bigger film rentals. Fox West Coast uses little Warner product. While W. B. breaks in, bulk business for any distributor must come from Fox West Coast. Warners are not getting that bulk. The rest of the background dope is obvious.

Suit Settled

Suit for $450,000 filed by Winfield Sheehan, against William Fox, which, at the time of filing, indicated how widespread was the breach which had developed between two business associates of many years' standing, fades out of the picture by an out-of-court settlement formally reached this week. That the action was to be dismissed was published in MOTION PICTURE NEWS several weeks ago.

Supreme Court Justice John Ford signed the order discontinuing the suit. It was signed on mutual consent of Nathan Burkan, attorney for Sheehan, and Samuel Untermyer, attorney for Fox. Untermyer has been Fox's close business and legal advisor since he was retained by Fox to succeed a long line of Fox attorneys who were "hired and fired" during the lengthy controversy for control of the Fox companies.

Arthur In; Leo Out as Head of Fox N. Y. Chain

While Joe Leo, president of Fox Metropolitan Playhouses, Inc., is yet to be notified of any change in operation of his circuit, it is generally expected that Harry C. Arthur, former Southern California divisional manager for Fox West Coast Theatres, will succeed him. Arthur is New York from Los Angeles.

The plan will make Arthur general manager of the circuit. That will make two executives holding the same post, the present incumbent being William Brandt, who holds that title under the Leo administration. What disposition will be made of Brandt remains to be seen, the odds along Film Row being that he is slated to go out with Leo.

At the Fox home office, Louis Rosenbluh, William Fox's brother-in-law and in recent years in charge of accessories, is no longer with the company. Charles Caballero, for some time with Fox West Coast, has been brought on to handle purchasing for the Fox companies.

Los Angeles—H. L. Hartman, former city manager in San Diego for Fox West Coast, succeeds Harry C. Arthur as Southern California division manager for the circuit.

Lester Fountain, former city manager in Long Beach, goes to San Diego as Hartman's successor.

475 Houses in Fox W. C. Chain; Eleven Building

Already heavily bulwarked in many of the Pacific Slope cities where the chain operates, Fox West Coast Theatres is further fortifying its position with new theatres.

When the current building program is finished, the chain will embrace 475 houses, Harold B. Franklin, president and general manager of the circuit, says. He is in New York for a conference with Harley L. Clarke and Winfield Sheehan.

In work is the Fiesta at Wilshire and the Beverly in the Beverly Hills section. This house will seat 1,600 on one floor and will have a parking space for 300 cars. At Vermont and Hollywood, the Los Feliz is under way. Ground has been broken for the Sunkist, a 1,700 seater at Florence and Compton in Los Angeles.

Wilshire to Seat 2,400

The Wilshire is the name determined upon for another project, this to be located at Wilshire and Hamilton. The scheme will be modern throughout, black being high lighted by coral coloring. Capacity to be 2,400 and opening date now tentatively set for July.

In San Pedro, where the circuit now operates the California and the Neptune, ground has been broken for a theatre to

Federal Trade Commission Scans 1927 Code in 'Price Fixing' Policy Change

Washington—Legal price discrimination and rebates, which will be taken off the unfair list by the Federal Trade Commission, will have an important bearing in the admission ticket industry, which last year held a Trade Practice Conference, and whose Code of Ethics is under consideration.

be known as the San Pedro. It will be Spanish in motif.

The California at Stockton has been demolished except for its walls. There a house to be called the Fox is in work. It will seat 2,300 and will be ready in a few months. West Coast also operates the State in that town.

Three in Berkeley

A 2,100-seat house known as the California will open in Berkeley in about thirty days. The theatre will swell the circuit's representation there to three houses, the others being the U. C. and the Berkely. Architects are preparing plans for a 2,500-seater to be built in Venice, where Franklin now operates the Dome and the Rose Marie. This house will be operating by the early days of 1931.

At Huntington Park, where present holdings include the California and the T. and D., the Fox is under way. Capacity of this house, 1900.

The Grandee at San Jose is another. This house will seat 2,100, will open in a few months and will increase West Coast representation in that city to three. Now operating are the California and the Mission.

Pendleton, Ore., is the last in the Pacific slope list. The Oregon, as this house will be dubbed, will seat 1,700. Two others in that town are now under the West Coast wing.

Winfield Sheehan Opens Fox Music Subsidiary

The Red Star Music Co., the first firm to be organized by a producer and distributor for the exploitation, publication and sale of the song hits from its productions, was officially opened Thursday by Winfield R. Sheehan, of Fox.

The reception was given at the headquarters of the corporation at 729 Seventh Avenue and attracted celebrities from every walk of life. Several hundred Broadway theatregoers crowded the front of the building to hear new Red Star song hits which were broadcast by a public-address system.

Attacks on Validity of Body's Rulings in Anti-Trust Cases Alarm

Washington—The Code of Ethics of the industry, adopted at the Trade Practice Conference in October, 1927, is being studied by the Federal Trade Commission to determine the possibility of its interpretation in such a way as to defeat the purpose of the anti-trust laws. The move is part of a general revision of trade practice procedure.

Charges in Congress that the commission, by its trade practice conference procedure, has given its approval to practices which border closely upon price fixing, and contentions by lawyers who have appeared before it that its rules in many instances were invalid and could not be supported in the courts, have resulted in a sharp revision of the commission's ideas as to these so-called codes of ethics.

While officials of the commission are loath to discuss recent developments which bid fair materially to hamper their efforts to achieve voluntary housecleaning by the industry and the results of those events, are certain of the rules adopted by the picture industry at its conference, are being studied. So far, the commission has made no announcement regarding past conferences, but has confined its revision to codes of ethics now before it for approval, but it is probable that some action will be taken in the near future to eliminate from codes already approved such resolutions as have been found, in the light of more recent knowledge, to be objectionable.

Discrimination Discussed

A controversy af long standing has waged around the commission's approval of resolutions condemning the giving of secret rebates, discrimination in price between purchasers, sales of goods below cost and other practices involving prices. In the past such resolutions have been approved as "Group I resolutions," that is, practices regarded as illegal and subject to punitive action by the commission. Now it is held that such practices are not subjects for prosecution unless actively under way on the line-up. Despite financial difficulties and inter-organization rows, the company has delivered every promised pictured on time.

Clarke in N. Y. Monday

Clarke, Mid-west financier and controlling factor in the Fox companies, is expected in New York from Chicago on Monday, at which time a series of meetings is scheduled. Halsey, Stuart is busily engaged in making a final draft of its refinancing plan. Plans for the annual convention are set and clear along the line, the new regime is getting itself set for a rush of activity, commencing almost immediately.

In a statement made to Motion Picture News Clarke said this week:

"I am preparing to pour the greatest amount of money and gather together the most outstanding aggregation of brain-power ever assembled for the purpose of producing box-office attractions."

Mergers in Air?

In financial circles, considerable interest has been aroused over the deal whereby Fox Theatres has sold to Fox Film its 660,000 shares of Loew's stock in exchange for 1,600,000 shares of Film "A" and $27,000,000 in cash. It was recalled that when William Fox secured the stock it was on behalf of Fox Theatres. The impression in banking circles is that assignment to Fox Film indicates the Government may have sanctioned merger of Loew's with Fox Film and that this was perhaps the first step in that direction.

May Prune Overhead

Emphasis was again placed on Clarke's record as a specialist in combine and the opinion ventured that it would be his natural business inclination to bring all properties into one structure in order to trim overhead, provided such a plan could be properly worked out.

Independent Exhibitors Walloped by New Policy on Price Discrimination they are such as to lessen competition, tend to create a monopoly or become an unreasonable restraint of trade.

It has been the contention that the commission, in approving such rules, has been invading the right of a person to determine the price and conditions under which he will sell his goods. At the same time, the commission, in approving such resolutions, in effect is countenancing practices which border upon price fixing, which is in violation of the antitrust laws.

Commission's Authority Limited

There is, it has been pointed out, nothing illegal in the sale of goods below cost, per se, and such sales violate the law only when made for the purpose of eliminating or restraining competition and trade or to create a monopoly. The same is true of many other practices which the commission has frowned upon. To hold that a man may not sell below cost, it is contended, is to, in effect, place a price limit below which members of an industry may not go; very similar agreements made voluntarily between business men without participation of government officials have been successfully prosecuted by the Dept. of Justice.

It is believed that previously approved codes of ethics will be brought within the scope of the commission's newly adopted limits of authority by the inclusion of a provision that certain of the practices heretofore unqualifiedly condemned will be considered unfair trade practices only when "the effect may be to substantially lessen competition or tend to create a monopoly or to unreasonably restrain trade," a clause which has been carried in the codes recently approved by the commission.

Silver in Old Job

Morris S. Silver, for some time assistant A. J. Balaban, erstwhile head of short subject production for Paramount, leaves the latter company May 3, simultaneously with departure of his chief. Silver is resuming his former activities as secretary and treasurer of the Morris agency of Chicago.

Distributors Win Victory as Commission Revises Its Anti-Trust Stand

New policy of the Federal Trade Commission on trade rules, abolishing the practice of branding as unfair price discrimination and rebates which may not be illegal under the anti-trust laws, delivers a body blow to the demands of independent exhibitors that the arbitrary allocation of product to affiliated houses be abolished.

Price discrimination as between independents and circuit operators for years has been a bone of contention in the industry. Distributors individually have contended that they have the right to use their own discretion in the prices they wish to accept from affiliated or unaffiliated exhibitors.

This right, upheld in effect by the Federal Trade Commission's new rules, so long as exercise of the right does not violate anti-trust laws, is attacked in the Brookhart bill, which aims to prevent blind and block booking and arbitrary allocation of product, without giving independents the right to bid on such product.

Independents' Claims

Independents have asserted that they are entitled to the right to bid on product against chain operators, but the latter's buying power prevented them from doing so. The chains, however, as is common in other lines of business, use their buying power to secure better prices on product, as well as priority of run, protection and other concessions.

The unaffiliated showmen assert that the condition is resulting in their elimination because they can't get the product they feel they need, or else can't get it in time, to make operation profitable. In line with this contention, unsuccessful effort was made at the Trade Practice Conference to make each theatre an individual unit, buying product separately.

No Doubt About It

Hollywood — Cedric Belfrage, the verbal dirt digger, describes the reactions of the two "Trader Horn" cannibals to cinemaland in this manner:

"I am profoundly impressed by the innate wisdom of the two cannibals who are Hollywood's honored guests just now. You know whom I mean, of course—the two chappies brought all the way from British East Africa to play in 'Trader Horn.'

"After they had been shown the wonders of Hollywood, and the glory thereof, an expression of great gloom was on their faces. In order to cheer them up, somebody said: 'But think of the wonderful things you will have to tell your friends about when you get home!'

"One of the cannibal gentlemen, horror-struck, replied: 'If we tried to describe this place, they would think we were possessed of devils and would kill us."

An Imaginative Cuss

Scenic beauties of Hollywood and its neighboring villages are touted in unusually brilliant and flowery phrases in a current novel captioned "Movieland." Its author, Senor Ramon, as he is known to his readers in Spain, has never set foot in Hollywood. Just an old Spanish custom!

Film Executives Demand Recall Of Restrictions

Revision of restrictions on studios and theatres in Greater New York is under consideration by the city council, following representations made by a delegation of film men. Present regulations, all of which are being enforced rigidly since the Pathe fire, need modification, the delegation asserted. Unless such revision is effected studios in the city will not be able to continue operation, it was stated.

Members of the delegation were: W. T. Powers, of Paramount; E. B. Leishman, of Universal; I. Fry, of Loew's, and J. C. Skelly, of RKO.

Audio-Cinema Completes First Opera, "Pagliacci"

Audio-Cinema, Inc., in association with Fortune Gallo, has completed a full-length presentation of "Pagliacci," Leoncavallo's grand opera, directed by Joe W. Coffman. "Pagliacci" was selected because its popularity is evidenced by many repetitions each season at the Metropolitan Opera House.

The role of Canio is played by Fernando Bertini, Nedda by Alba Novello, Silvio by Giuseppe Interrante, Beppo by Francesco Curci, and Tonio by Mario Valle. A chorus of 100 appears. The orchestra was under the direction of Carlo Peroni.

Paul C. Mooney, well known in film circles, is now making distribution arrangements. He has offices at 254 West 44th St.

Finish Fight on 'Blues' In U. of Florida Town

Sunday show question is anticipated here, as a result of Sunday opening of theatres and arrest of the managers. However, as the shows were not molested, they will be continued. Sunday shows were resorted to when it was found that 90 per cent of the 2,000 or more University of Florida students left week-ends for more liberal towns in the vicinity. Views published in the college newspaper show unanimous opinion for

$70,000,000 for Zukor's Expansion; Paramount Out After Houses in Bulk

Stock Increase to Provide Funds—Netoco in New England Latest Buy

Paramount-Publix expansion, provided for in the authorization of 1,000,000 new shares of stock, which will make available about $70,000,000, is under way with a flying start.

The company already has closed for a 50 per cent interest in the Netoco chain in New England, has pending a bid for acquisition of control of Famous Players Canadian Corp., and is reaching out in other directions to add to its theatre holdings.

Ten million dollars in stock is involved in the Netoco transaction, which brings 40 New England theatres under Paramount-Publix operating control. Publix Netoco Theatres has been organized as a holding company to take over the Netoco circuit. This company will own and operate all theatres owned outright, controlled or in which part interest is owned by Netoco. Twenty thousand no par shares have been authorized, of which Publix and Netoco each will own one-half.

Dembow Is President

Sam Dembow, Jr., vice-president of Publix, is president of the new company. Samuel Pinanski, president of Netoco, is vice-president of the new firm. Pinanski, Jacob Laurie and James Sullivan are Netoco's three directors in the new firm, and three are to be selected by Publix. No change of personnel of Netoco is contemplated, it is said. The Netoco houses in Massachusets, Maine, Rhode Island and Connecticut are included.

The Canadian offer of an exchange of four shares of Paramount-Publix for each five of the Canadian company was made some time ago. The deal is slated to be completed by June 1.

Buys Four More in Mass

Boston—Paramount-Publix is continuing its New England expansion and has acquired the four theatres of the Gills circuit, which has two houses each at Framingham and Gardner.

Ross Joins Inspiration

Hollywood—Robert Ross has joined Inspiration as production manager on the Harold Bell Wright unit. He recently finished as assistant director on "King of Jazz" for Universal.

Warner Name Change Filed

Albany—Secretary of State has received application of Warner Bros. Theatres to change the name of Picadilly Holding Corp. (New York subsidiary) to name of the parent company.

Wonderphone Distributor

Cincinnati—Rapid Film Company has been named distributor for Wonderphone, disc and film sound reproducer manufactured by Film Sound Corp. of Cleveland, for southern Ohio and Kentucky.

St. Louis Business Better

St. Louis—Business is looking up in St. Louis, so that early resumption of dividends by the St. Louis Amusement Co., owned by Warner-Skouras, is anticipated. The firm is said to have had a deficit in 1929, but rigid economy and closing of less profitable houses is said to have put the company in the black again. The city has just absorbed the 5,200 seats added to the total last year by opening of the Fox. That, coupled with better employment conditions, is seen as presaging a good season for the company's houses.

Country Okays Code of Ethics, Milliken Says

Washington—Evidence of overwhelming sentiment throughout the country in support of the recently adopted production code of the motion picture industry has been matched by indorsement from all branches of activity within the industry, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Hays organization, told the League of American Pen Women here.

"The ridiculous cry of a few professional liberals that the code will inhibit art," Mr. Milliken said, "could only have come from men who talk about art instead of creating it.

"There is always a neurotic fringe, sitting enviously outside the circle where art is produced, which confuses art and lack of standards. The American people have no patience with such tenets and the artist finds them laughable."

Ivan St. John, Assistant to Laemmle, Jr., at "U"

Hollywood—Ivan St. John, until now publicity head for Universal at the studio, has been made assistant to Carl Laemmle, Jr., and is now en route to New York with the Laemmle party. Milton Howe takes over St. John's job.

Vaude House Continuing

San Francisco—Radio-Keith-Orpheum is preparing to expend $50,000 in reseating and redecorating its Golden Gate, the city's one remaining vaudeville house. This indicates that stage acts will not be reintroduced at the Orpheum in conjunction with pictures, although reports that this change would be made have persisted for several weeks.

Spanish Actor Making Tests

Ernest Vilches, Spanish actor, is making film tests in New York, having recently completed a test at the R. L. A. studio for M-G-M. Vilches and his show played 24 weeks at Havana, but the New York engagement is held up because he was unable to secure entry into the United States for his company of 24 players.

Studio Staffs Study Code in School Classes

Hollywood—In order to acquaint writers, directors, producing executives and other studio employees with the newly adopted code of ethics, producing companies are holding group meetings of their staffs so that there will be no misinterpretations on just what is meant by the various clauses.

During the past ten days, five of the large studios have held gatherings, at which time Fred Beetson, executive vice-president of the producers' association, and Colonel Jason Joy, head of the studio relations department of the association, have addressed the gatherings on the specific requirements of the code and interpretations of various sections.

Dodging Misunderstandings

This method has been adopted in order that there may not be any misunderstanding in the future on the part of writers or directors as to what is proper and in good taste when writing or directing pictures.

Meetings have so far been held at Paramount, Warners, First National, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and RKO. Other studios will be covered with similar meetings upon the return of Colonel Joy from the East late in May.

Joy is scheduled to leave for New York during the coming week, and while there will check over the current crop of Broadway shows to familiarize himself with those plays which might later be purchased for production. Although Joy will not give detailed reports on these plays to individual producers, it is expected that dubious material will be checked into his department before screen rights are definitely purchased.

1929 B. & K. Net Nearly Doubles 1928 Earnings

Chicago—Net of $2,750,241 for 1929 is reported by Balaban & Katz, after interest, depreciation, amortization and Federal taxes, equivalent after dividends on 7 per cent preferred to $9.65 a share (par $25) on 264,206 shares of common. This compares with $1,860,798, or $6.28, on the common the preceding year.

Court Battle Looms as Paramount Seeks Control of F. P.—Canadian Corporation

Further Expansion

Montreal—A move is on for the absorption by Famous Players Canadian Corp. of its Montreal subsidiary, United Amusements, Ltd., operating 20 theatres in Quebec. Famous Players already owns a majority of common stock. United Amusements will come under direct control and will be included in the sale of Canadian Famous Players to Paramount Famous-Lasky, if consummated.

Paramount Buy Of F.P.-Can. Gets Bickell Approval

Toronto—Acceptance of Paramount's offer for purchase of Famous Players Canadian Corp. is expected by J. P. Bickell, vice-president of the Canadian company. No special meeting will be called for the purpose of voting on the offer, but circulars will be sent to shareholders detailing the proposal.

Bickell terms the offer to exchange four shares of Paramount for each five of Famous Players "exceptionally generous" and says he does not believe there will be any radical change of personnel if the deal goes through.

"One only has to place the balance sheets of the two companies side by side to see the great benefit the transfer will mean to Canadian shareholders," he declared.

Under the proposed sale, affairs of Famous Canadian would be carried on under the same policy and in "the same progressive manner" as heretofore, Bickell states. Dividend returns would be larger, he declares.

Underlying assets of the American company, "with its diversity of operations tends toward increased stability as well as possibility of enhancement in the value of the shares." Stockholders are asked by Bickell to deposit their stock certificates with the Montreal Trust Co., either at Montreal or Toronto, not later than May 25.

South Africa Increases Talker Duty as Subsidy

Johannesburg, S. Africa—Duty on sound films has been increased to three pence a foot, and on silent film to two pence a foot. This drastic increase came as a complete surprise to South African distributors and exhibitors who regard it as an indication of intention by the Government to encourage territorial production through subsidy. Just how the increase will be recovered has not been determined, but it is regarded probable that it will have to be absorbed through increased rentals, which, in turn, may be passed on to theatre-goers through the box office.

Directors Approve Sale but Minority Organizes to Oppose Move

Toronto—Whether stockholders will be willing to trade Canadian control of Famous Players Canadian Corp. for the higher dividends that are anticipated through sale of the circuit to Paramount-Publix is a question here, with a fight on the proposed deal pending. Meanwhile the exchange of shares is slated to take place on or before June 5, with Paramount giving four shares of its stock for each five of the Canadian firm.

Directors of the Canadian firm want the deal to go through, but minority stockholders already are being organized to oppose the sale. Arthur W. Roebuck, Toronto attorney, is organizing a protective committee, and says court action is planned to force the spirit of the voting trust, which was formed to keep control in Canadian hands.

Waving Canadian Flag

The voting trust controls 165,000 shares of common, sold one year ago by Paramount and resold to the shareholders on a non-voting basis. Roebuck says that the governments at Ottawa and Toronto will be solicited for legislation to "preserve the Canadian screen."

Roebuck declares that the non-voting shares were sold to the Canadian public on the representation that by purchasing these shares they would insure Canadian control of the country's dominant chain of theatres. A short time ago, an offer from Gaumont British for the Canadian company at $75 per share was rejected, whereupon N. L. Nathanson resigned as managing director.

The rejection was cinched by Adolph Zukor, Paramount president, and I. W. Killam, Montreal, who with Nathanson comprise the voting trustees. They blocked submission of the proposition to stockholders on the ground that acceptance of the plan would place Fox in control of the Canadian company. At the time it was stated repeatedly that the intention was to preserve Canadian control.

Rejected Canadian Offer

"As recently as last week an offer was made to Killam by one of the leading financiers of Canada of $60 cash per share for all shares offering," declares Roebuck, "and I am informed that this offer was refused on the ground that the shares were worth at least $75 per share. Such a sale would have left these Canadian theatres in Canadian ownership and control."

Roebuck objects because the sale to Paramount placed a market valuation of $58 on each share of common in the Canadian company.

Bruce Stays at Paramount

Hollywood—Robert C. Bruce, producer of Bruce Outdoor series for Paramount, has renewed his contract for next season.

Golfers! Goofers!

Dust off the old clubs and throw away the moth balls in favor of golf balls! The big motion picture golf event in the East ("Film Daily" Golf Tournament) is set for June 17 at Sound View, Long Island. Send in your entries early.

The committee is now lining up entertainment and prize features for the tourney to assure a record-breaking event.

Sale Attacked by Nathanson; Says Shareholders Lost

Toronto—N. L. Nathanson, former managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, and still a voting trustee of that company, in a statement declared that he is not a party to the proposed transfer of control of the Canadian chain to Paramount on a share exchange basis.

"I have always taken the position that shareholders may well ask Mr. Killam (another trustee) why they were not given the privilege of accepting or refusing the $60 cash offer made by the Canadian banking syndicate and why they are being asked to accept only an exchange of shares in the American company," he said. "The $60 offer was presented on April 8 by a group of prominent men in Canadian financial affairs who intended to retain control of the business and company in Canada."

On the street the gossip is that Paramount desires Canadian Famous Players because of the threat of direct competition in this country from Fox and Nathanson interests. Famous Players Canadian dropped to $55 on the Montreal stock exchange, but strengthened to $57.

Badger Starts "Bad Man" With Huston, Revier

Hollywood—"The Bad Man," from the play by Porter Emerson Brown, is in production at First National with Walter Huston and Dorothy Revier as leads. James Rennie, O. P. Heggie and Marion (Peanuts) Bryon are in the cast. Clarence Badger is directing.

Fire Damages Theatre at Stevenson, Wash.

Stevenson, Wash.—Fire originating in a projector caused a loss of more than $2,500 to the Wigwam. The operator stopped the machine, tore out the film and endeavored to stamp out the flames, but they spread to other reels. The house is owned and operated by R. R. Webster, who will make repairs at once.

Protection Jam Looms in Kansas City As "Pan" Cuts Prices Below Suburbans

Admission Dropped to 25 Cents; Higher-Priced Second Runs Hit by Policy

Kansas City—Protection, usually the bugbear of the subsequent run, may lead to a real "jam" here, as a result of cutting of prices at the Pantages. The theatre adopted a summer policy of pictures only and dropped its top to 25 cents. As most of the suburbans are getting 40 cents top, the subsequent runs find themselves threatened with a situation where they will be asking more for subsequent run than the picture gets first run.

Squawks already have been heard from neighborhood operators, but so far no remedy for the situation has been suggested. The "Pan" is playing Fox, First National, Columbia and Universal product.

Uptown in Kansas City Becomes First Run House

Kansas City—The Uptown, de luxe suburban house, has become a first-run house, the admission charge being 50 cents at night and 25 cents at matinees. Bernard Joffee is house manager.

The pictures booked will be from Fox, First National, and Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. The Uptown is owned by the City Theatres, Inc., subsidiary of the Midland Circuit.

Stagehands Would Force Hiring of Man on Stage

Omaha—Theatres of more than 1,000 capacity would be required to have a man on stage while the house is open to handle the electrical equipment and the fire curtain under an ordinance being given favorable consideration by the city council. The ordinance is designed as a protective measure for the public, claim stagehands, who are sponsoring the bill.

Uihlein Interests Plan Huge Milwaukee House

Milwaukee—Plans have been announced for another theatre and office building to be erected at Sixth street and Wisconsin avenue by the Henry Uihlein Realty Co. and associates. The new building would cost approximately $3,500,000. Actual construction work will be held up until the city decides concerning the widening of Sixth street.

Hackett in Fox Cast

Hollywood—Fox has signed Raymond Hackett for "On Your Back," which will feature Irene Rich. Wheeler Oakman and Rose Diane are in the cast. Guthrie McClintic will direct.

To Film "Broken Dishes"

Hollywood—First National will film Martin Flavin's play, "Broken Dishes," with Loretta Young and Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., as leads. Adaptation and dialogue are by Francis Faragoh.

Lichtman Foresees Television

San Francisco—"Television may revolutionize the motion picture industry," Al Lichtman, executive distribution chief for United Artists, stated while here for his western sales convention. "I believe that television will be a practical reality within the next five years," he added. "When movies are broadcast from the studio to the home, it is probable that the public will subscribe for monthly service." A program of entertainment for the visiting officials of United Artists was arranged by Herman Wobber and Charles Kurtzman of Paramount-Publix.

Tough Opposish For R. I. Houses Seen in Summer

Providence—Exhibitors here will face keener opposition this summer than they have had in several years. With the opening of the Publix Strand soon the downtown "big four" will be bucking against stock at the Carlton, usually dark during the summer, and burlesque at the Empire. Edward M. Fay will bring many former Albee stock favorites back to town to play at his Carlton. Shortly after the announcement of the opening of the new company R-K-O stated that it will bring back the famous Albee stock next season.

Shaw Turns Deaf Ear

London—George Bernard Shaw again is reported to have turned down an American offer to film his plays. Horace Liveright, American publisher, recently conveyed an offer to the dramatist from an American producer for $100,000 each for three Shaw plays, but Shaw stated he was not interested, although flattered by the offer. It was stated that Shaw never would sell the plays for American production.

New Tobis Equipment

London—Klangfilm Tobis is offering a new model of disc and sound-on-film reproducer. Installations now are being made on the Continent at the rate of from 15 to 20 weekly, it is claimed, with about 515 already installed. The apparatus costs from $6.000 to $10,000.

Alice in "College Mothers"

Hollywood—Alice White's next talker for First National will be "College Mothers," from an original by Earl Baldwin. Eddie Cline is slated to direct. Baldwin has written, adapted, and dialogued the last three White productions.

Buchanan to M-G-M

Hollywood—Jack Buchanan, British stage star, will begin work at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio as soon as he finishes his present assignment for Paramount.

Jesse James Duo Kidnap Manager And Rob Theatre

Marshall, Mo.—H. L. Golliday, manager of the Auditorium, was kidnaped in front of his home last Thursday night by two men. The kidnapers told Golliday they were going to take him to the theatre, where he was to open the safe and give the two men the receipts of the night performance. Golliday told them the key to the office was in his room and could not reach the safe without it.

After riding him around for an hour, the men told Golliday to go to his room and get the key, instructing him to be on a nearby corner in 15 minutes when they would be back for him. The kidnapers left the manager in front of his home and left, warning him that unless he complied with their orders, his house would be bombed. The men were not seen again.

Midland Theatre and Realty Co., which operates the Auditorium, has offered $500 reward for the arrest and conviction of any one connected with the abduction.

New Czech Company

Washington—According to advices received at the motion picture division of the Department of Commerce, the First Association for Czech Films was recently organized in Prague. The founders include several Czech and German artists, and the organization intends to construct a sound film studio on modern lines.

Columbia Club Fete

The Columbia Social Slub will hold its first function on April 28 in celebration of the company's tenth anniversary. It will be a dinner and dance at the Moscow Art Inn, New York. Joe Brandt, Jack Cohn, Harry Cohn, Abe Schneider and Joe Goldberg, executives of the company, were elected honorary officers of the club.

Corcoran Gets Contract

Hollywood—Fox has signed a long term contract with George (Red) Corcoran. He played the comedy lead in "Not Damaged," which features Lois Moran.

Cheating on Talker Footage Fostering Double Features and Killing Shorts

Squawks on Shorts

Philadelphia—Exhibitors here have been squawking about shorts for several weeks, declaring the situation is a serious one. Recently they took under consideration a proposed appeal to Congress for aid, suggesting that the Bureau of Standards set a minimum length for features.

Double Bills Do Harm Says Head Of Ohio Circuit

Cleveland—M. B. Horwitz, general manager of the Washington circuit, is one of the Cleveland exhibitors who oppose double-featuring on the ground that such a policy in the long run is detrimental to business.

"Two good features cost too much," says Horwitz, "even if there were enough of them to go around, which there aren't. And people are so constituted that if you offer a good feature and a weak feature on the same program, they will remember the weak one and forget the good one. So I believe it is cheaper to pay the higher cost of a single feature and a series of shorts, than to jeopardize one's business by paying less for double features."

Six M-G-M Releases in May, Setting New Record

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has scheduled six releases for the month of May, establishing a record. The productions are:

"The Rogue Song," the Lawrence Tibbett musical romance.

"Caught Short," Eddie Cantor's story, starring Marie Dressler and Polly Moran.

Marion Davies in "The Floradora Girl."

Ramon Novarro's "In Gay Madrid."

"Strictly Unconventional," from Somerset Maugham's play, "The Circle."

"The High Road," starring Ruth Chatterton.

Teaching Talker Operation

Course in the operation and administration of talking picture equipment has been launched at the West Side Y. M. C. A., New York, which has Western Electric equipment. Because it is an advanced course and highly technical, only those who hold an operator's license or completed a projection course are enrolled. The operating class is being continued.

Warner Signs Four

Warners have signed Charles Butterworth, Leslie Howard, Dudley Digges and Kay Strozzi to the roster of players signed for next year's productions. All are recruits from the Broadway stage.

Exhibitors Attack Shortening Of Running Time; Claim Overhead Increases

Cutting down of the length of features is resulting in a return to the double-featuring practice in a number of sections of the United States, it is stated. Exhibitors, who are double-featuring sound programs, claim that this procedure is less expensive than the playing of four or five shorts, in rounding out their programs.

However, this is bringing about another dilemma, exhibitors resorting to double featuring finding that there aren't sufficient good features available for double-featuring purposes.

Short-length features have resulted in cutting down on running time, to a degree which some exhibitors contend is alarming. With features running on an average of 60 to 70 minutes, several shorts are necessary in the building up of a two hour show, exhibitors say. This runs up the overhead, for, as pointed out last week by Motion Picture News, although exhibitors are paying more in the aggregate, they are paying less for the individual short, endangering the whole short subject structure.

"Her Man" on Pathe List

Hollywood — Tay Garnett is slated to launch production next week on his next for Pathe, "Her Man," an original by Garnett and Howard Higgin based on the "Frankie and Johnnie" theme. Tom Buckingham was responsible for adaptation screen play and dialogue.

Bomb Seen as "Warning"

New York police regard as a "warning" the placing of a bomb which damaged the booth of the Grand Opera House, 23rd St. and Eighth Ave. The house has been running open shop.

That Guy Asa Yoelson

Asa was born in Lithuania in 1866. Since then, he's made a barrel of jack singing Mammy songs, running on the bill as "Al Jolson."

Jolson "drinks a bucket of bromo-seltzer every day," to hear Sid Skolsky tell it in the "N. Y. Daily News," and, reports Sid, Al "likes to be patted on the back." He is "always surrounded by 'yes men.' His big passion in life is applause. Let an audience encourage him and he'll break a vocal cord. Although a surefire performer, he suffers from stage fright more than the rankest amateur. He is stage-struck." Sez you!

And wait till Ruby Keeler pipes this line about her Al: "Although he has been married three times, women play a small part in his life." (So small that Al put twenty-seven grand right on the line last week for the longest Minerva in Los Angeles for "Baby" Ruby.

Short of Shorts

Cleveland—Double-featuring is being resorted to by a number of exhibitors here, and the practice is growing. Scarcity of short features is the reason. The Lefkowitz and Gusdanovic circuits, the Lyceum and Cinema, are among houses where the double feature policy is in vogue.

Double Features "Poison" to N. Y. Neighborhoods

Double-featuring is a prevalent practice in New York neighborhood theatres. The situation was emphasized some weeks ago when the Beacon, Warner house at Broadway and 75th St., began double-featuring, showing a talker, directly following the Strand, plus a silent or one of the early sound pictures.

In the neighborhoods, double-featuring is the rule rather than the exception, except on week-ends. As one exhibitor puts its, double-featuring is "the saving grace, as well as the poison" of the smaller houses.

The practice is emphasizing the shortage of available quality product, and considerable difficulty is being experienced juggling shows to secure the desired balance.

Lenten Request Week Is Profitable Stunt

Cleveland—M. B. Horwitz turned Holy Week into a week of profit instead of a week of loss at his Heights theatre by putting on a week of request programs. Five weeks before Holy Week, Lee Berger, house manager at the Heights, started to run slides advertising Request Week and asking patrons to leave at the box office titles of pictures they want to see again. Trailers were shown daily, and newspaper space was used to advertise Request Week. A different picture was shown each night, with the result that the Heights had a profitable week during the seven days that are usually dead days in the theatre.

"Mammy" Reopens Strand

Akron, O.—The Strand, a Warner house, closed for the past three weeks for redecorating and making sound perfect, is operating again with "Mammy," the first showing of the new Jolson picture in this territory.

British Chain Expanding

London—Associated British Cinemas has taken over the Coronation, Manor Park; Palladium, Brixton, and Queen's Cinema, Forest Gate. The circuit now is engaged upon an expansion campaign in all sections of the country.

New Developer Improves Sound, Inventor Says

Universal City—C. Roy Hunter, director of sound and head of the photographic division, and Robert Pierce, superintendent of the Universal laboratory, have applied for patents on a new developing machine for positives and negatives, said to be revolutionary. Universal has the original and is building two more of the machines, which will be available to all producers. The machine, it is said, has a capacity of 1,000,000 feet per week.

Due to slower processing, smaller lines of the sound track can be developed, it is claimed, improving sound in developing the sound track. The film moves at the rate of ten feet per minute, permitting development of frequencies as high as 12,000 per second. A frame is completely dried, developed and on a reel ready for projection in 30 minutes, it is claimed.

A break in the film can be repaired without slowing up the machine, motive power for which is furnished through a single-sprocketed roller just ahead of the final reels. Twelve strands are run through the baths at one time. One third the manpower will operate the machine, it is stated.

B. & K. Gets Belmont $100,000 for Alterations

RKO will evacuate the Belmont, 3,000-seat Chicago house, May 5, on which date Publix-B. & K. take over the house. New sound equipment, new acoustical treatment and decorating, on which Publix-B. & K. will spend $100,000, will be begun immediately to put the theatre in readiness for reopening May 9. Al Binnenfeld, former manager of the Covent, will manage the Belmont for B. & K., and the picture and vaudeville policy under which it was operated by RKO will be supplanted with a straight all-talkie policy.

The B. & K. lease is from Lubliner & Trinz for 20 years at an annual rental of $100,000.

Sues Paramount Alleging Non-Delivery of Talker

Oklahoma City—Paramount is being sued for $2,150 by J. S. Worley, manager of the Ritz, in the district court at Erick, Okla., for failure to deliver the opening talker as per schedule, in Sayre, Okla. Worley claims a loss of $150 in ticket sales, and $2,000 for loss of prestige and reputation.

Glenn Hunter Returns

Hollywood—Glenn Hunter, Broadway stage player, is to be co-featured with Betty Compson in a James Cruze production for Sono-Art. His last film appearance was in 1923 when he played title role in "Merton of the Movies" for Paramount.

Buy Van Duzer Story

Columbia has acquired screen rights to "The Good Bad Girl," by Winifred Van Duzer.

Feted by Associates

Earle W. Hammons, president of Educational, was host Wednesday at a luncheon for Lowell V. Calvert, who is resigning to become general manager of recording for RCA-Photophone. Calvert, Hammons pointed out in paying tribute to the retiring Educational executive, has handled every picture Educational has released, either as a theatre operator or as an executive of the company. Calvert was presented with a silver cigarette case.

Calvert Named Recording Head For Photophone

Lowell V. Calvert, veteran production and distribution executive and showman, has been named general manager of recording operations for RCA-Photophone. He takes over the new post Monday, succeeding H. L. Sommerer, who has been named vice-president and general manager of the Victor Talking Machine Co. of Japan. Sommerer sails early in May to take over his new duties.

In his new capacity, Calvert will have executive supervision of seven divisions connected with RCA-Photophone recording, working with the executive in charge of each. These include the recording and re-recording on disc or film at both the Victor Camden studios and the RCA Gramercy studio, and the Victor plant on the Coast. He also will handle the clearance of music for picture recording work and will maintain contact with licensees.

Calvert has been in the industry since 1906, when he joined the Twin City Calcium Light Co., Minneapolis. Later he was with Essanay, Chicago, as operator and in the sales department, subsequently becoming manager for General at Minneapolis. Joining Finkelstein & Ruben in 1915, he was for three years director of circuit presentations and productions, and after the war was managing director of several Twin City first runs, as well as head of presentations, music and circuit personnel. Since 1925 he has been with Educational as general production manager and contact man between producers and the distributing organization.

Court Order as Ad Prompts Ban Of "Party Girl"

Chicago—Improper exploitation of his injunction restraining the police from interfering with the showing of Tiffany's "The Party Girl" was responsible for banning the picture from this city, Judge William J. Lindsay told the Motion Picture News. His action, he said, was not taken because of the picture's content, but "was due to the exploitation methods of the exhibitors" in using the court order as copy for advertising of the picture.

He added that such use of the injunction "could be construed as contempt of court."

Immediately after the injunction was dissolved the picture was withdrawn from the Marbro and Granada (Publix-B. & K.) and Avalon (Federal Theatres).

A second consideration which influenced the setting aside of the injunction, Judge Lindsay said, was the indiscriminate admission of minors to performances.

Film O.K. for Adults

"In my opinion," he said, "the picture is not detrimental to the morals of an adult audience of average intelligence, but it could be harmful to emotionally impressionable persons and to youth. I personally visited one of the theatres playing the picture and witnessed 88 young people who could be reasonably judged immature admitted without question."

"Party Girl" had a three weeks' run at the Woods, playing to record attendance. Notices of the injunction under which the picture was playing were liberally used in its initial advertising at this theatre, but were withdrawn immediately on the court's notification. When the picture opened at the three large outlying theatres the court's action was again made the basis for newspaper advertising.

Immediately on the dissolution of the injunction the pictures were withdrawn from the three large houses, where they had completed one screening for the day. The Tiffany exchange here offered the theatres "High Treason" as a substitute.

The court's action is a blow to Tiffany, locally. The picture demonstrated by its sensational Woods' run that it was a money-maker. It was verifying this in its early days at the outlying houses and ten prints were in readiness for bookings at the local exchange.

Mack Sennett to Make 26 On New Educ'l Program

Mack Sennett will produce 26 two-reel talking comedies for release through Educational during 1930-31. Previously it was stated 30 would be made. With several of the 30 Sennett comedies on the 1929-30 program still to be made before production can be started on the new line-up, Sennett's forces will continue working through the Spring without a break.

Andy Clyde and Marjorie Beebe have been signed for next year's product, and Sennett's production staff practically remains intact. Sennett will continue at the helm of his organization, with John A. Waldron, general manager of the Mack Sennett studios, working close to him.

Allied's Units Marshal Resources to Organize Buying Combines Everywhere

Cook-King

Paul Whiteman recently told an amusing story on himself, according to a "Motion Picture Magazine" writer. He was crossing the Universal lot en route to his revue stage, when a harassed assistant director rushed up and grabbed an arm. "Say, feller, are you an actor?" he queried. "Kinda," said Paul, after deep thought. "Yeah, I guess I am." "Well," said the assistant, "I've got a part for you. You're just the type for the camp cook in 'All Quiet on the Western Front' — Want it?" "Sure," drawled Paul, "but say"—he added as an afterthought . . . "can you wait till we finish the 'King of Jazz' revue first?"

Selig Handling Roadshowing of "Journey's End"

Handling of one of the few roadshow productions which have been produced since advent of talking pictures, in addition to his duties as advertising and publicity director, is the task undertaken by Al Selig of Tiffany. Selig last week took personal charge of the roadshowing of "Journey's End," which is to have $2 runs throughout the country.

Al Selig

Since assuming the new duties, Selig has opened the picture at the Tremont, Boston, has arranged for its opening at Cincinnati, May 4, and at Detroit, May 27, and now is routing companies to Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Boston. Meanwhile, "Journey's End" got $20,300 last week at the Gaiety, New York, despite bad weather and Holy Week, and this week was headed toward another record.

Work Resumed at Roach Studio After Layoff

Hollywood—Although Hal Roach is at the M-G-M studio making the multi-lingual, "Monsieur Le Fox," his force has returned to work at the Roach plant, after a month's layoff. Charley Chase is working on "Fast Work," with Julia Marlowe playing opposite; Laurel and Hardy are making "Hay Wire." Our Gang was slated to resume work this week. The new unit, consisting of several youngsters of high school age, some of them graduates of Our Gang, is starting its first comedy.

Film, Equipment Purchased in Bulk to Cut Prices, Is Motivation

Co-operative buying plans of Allied States Ass'n are being developed rapidly, since first report of the plan was made by Motion Picture News. Closing of the deal with Sentry Safety Control is declared to be the forerunner of other deals in the equipment field, with plans for film buying on a co-operative basis also being carried forward.

In Michigan, where a semi-official film buying combine was formed some months ago, exhibitors now are mapping out plans for a similar arrangement on equipment purchases. The association there for several years has been buying admission tickets for members in this manner.

The newly-formed Illinois unit is forming a booking combine, which is expected to be extended to include buying of equipment. Although the projected Iowa exhibitor booking combine is reported to have hit a snag, plans are under way for booking combines in other Allied centers, it is understood.

Collier in Cook Cast

Hollywood—William Collier, Jr., has been cast in Joe Cook's Columbia vehicle, "Rain or Shine."

"U" Party En Route

Carl Laemmle, Carl Laemmle, Jr., and other Universalites are en route to New York from the Coast for the premiere May 2 at the Roxy of "King of Jazz." Among those in the party are Lewis Milestone, John Wray and Ivan St. Johns. Paul Whiteman and his band already have arrived in New York for the premiere.

The Big Chief

Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, is on his way to New York to attend the company's annual sales meeting and the premieres of "All Quiet on the Western Front" and "King of Jazz."

Prattle and Tattle

A Page One elopement between a famous musical comedy star and a Social Registerite (just married) takes place any day now, with the star's hottottot ready to commit murder . . . Bessie Mack, the Capitol (N. Y.) exploiteer, and Jerry Solow, radio soloist, nuptialize shortly . . . Anna May Wong, the slant-eyed lass, is Berlin's big pash these moonlit nights . . . Roy D'Arcy is packing a rod these days . . . Warner's will pay Basil Sydney and Mary Ellis five grand weekly to make love to each other in the cinemachirpies.

"U's" Foreign Men Gather to Hear New Sales Plan

Universal's new production policy, calling for 20 pictures, all designed as specials, will be outlined starting Saturday to branch managers of the United States and Canada and delegates from throughout the world, at the company's first international sales convention to be held in New York. Lou B. Metzger, general manager, who also is handling sales, will preside at the convention, which continues for five days. Carl Laemmle heads a party in from the Coast to attend the sessions.

Lou Metzger

Arriving in New York early this week were:

James V. Bryson, of London, managing director of Universal Pictures, Ltd.; Al Szekler, of Berlin, general manager for Universal in Continental Europe; S. Frank Ditcham, Universal sales manager for the United Kingdom; William Jeapes, of London, Universal laboratory expert; and his son, Clifford; and Herbert Crisp, prominent British exhibitor.

The South American contingent, headed by Monroe Isen, arrived from Buenos Aires Thursday, while Herc McIntyre, general manager for Australia, arrived in San Francisco and is en route via airplane and train to attend the convention.

Branch managers from all sections of the United States were en route Friday to the meetings.

Confers With Field Crews

Jack Darrock, assignment editor of Pathe News, has returned to New York after conferences with the field staffs

Tax on Outdoor Ads Is Passed By R. I. Senate

Current crop of legislative activities directly affecting the industry includes a lone bill—a measure regulating outdoor advertising and requiring a bond and license, which was passed by the senate in Rhode Island. The bill is now up for final action. Gov. Allen in Massachusetts signed a bill which changes the status of book censorship in that state.

The usual line-up of legislative instruments changing workmen's compensation laws and tax rates on general business corporations are included in the group affecting the industry from a local business standpoint. In the current survey of both groups, which follows, appear the numbers of each bill, name of authors, brief descriptions and the committee to which they were referred for action:

Massachusetts

H. 1225. To provide for the payment of compensation under the workmen's compensation law during the entire period of total incapacity. (Based on H. 334 and H. 522.) Passed by house.

H. 1234. Relative to the payment of workmen's compensation in case of the death of the employe. Substituted by the house for H. 645 and passed.

Change in Status

Gov. Frank G. Allen signed a new book censorship law passed by the legislature, which changes present laws, and says:

Whoever imports, prints, publishes, sells or distributes a book, pamphlet, ballad, printed paper or other thing which, considered as a whole or considered with reference to any complete independent part thereof, is obscene, indecent or impure, or manifestly tends to corrupt the morals of youth, or an obscene, indecent or impure print, picture, figure, image or description, manifestly tending to corrupt the morals of youth, or introduces into a family, school or place of education, or buys, procures, receives, or has in his possession any such book, pamphlet, ballad, printed paper, obscene, indecent or impure print, picture, figure, image or other thing, either for the purpose of sale, exhibition, loan or circulation, or with intent introduce the same into a family, school or place of education, shall be punished by imprisonment for not more than two years or by a fine of not less than $100 nor more than $1,000, or both.

H. 141. To have compensation payable to persons injured in industrial accidents from day of injury. Report, leave to withdraw, accepted by senate. Killed.

S. 182. To provide equitable relief and to prevent hardship in certain cases under the workmen's compensation act. Passed by house.

S. 183. To limit the scope of the laws relative to the payment of workmen's compensation to employes of the Commonwealth or any political subdivision thereof. Signed by governor. Chapter 159.

S. 184. Relative to extension of benefits of medical and hospital services in certain cases. Report, leave to withdraw.

S. 316. Providing for an investigation relative to the time of payment of local taxes. Passed senate and house.

H. 520. To establish a State fund for workmen's compensation insurance. Report, leave to withdraw.

H. 521. Relative to conclusive presumption of dependency for support upon deceased employes under the law relating to industrial accidents. Report, leave to withdraw, accepted by senate. Killed.

H. 644. To increase funeral benefits under the workmen's compensation law. Rejected by senate.

H. 787. Relative to the period during which a lump sum award may be paid under the workmen's compensation act in the case of a minor. Passed by senate and signed by governor.

H. 886. Relative to payment of fees of employes' attorneys under the laws relative to employes injured in industrial accidents. Report, leave to withdraw, accepted.

H. 887. To amend the workmen's compensation law relative to payments for specific injuries. Report, leave to withdraw, accepted by senate. Killed.

H. 888. Relative to time at which compensation shall begin under the workmen's compensation law. Report, leave to withdraw, accepted by senate. Killed.

H. 1139. Bill relative to the taxation of foreign and domestic business corporations in case existing statutes applicable thereto are declared unconstitutional and inoperative. Passed house.

H. 1140. Bill to amend the law relating to the taxation of banks and trust companies and to place manufacturing corporations.

Mississippi

S. C. R. 26. Mr. Kiger. To amend section 112 of the constitution to provide for the imposition of a severance tax, fixing the limitations upon tax levies and bond issues, and for the classification of personal property for taxation.

H. 689. Mr. Satterfield. Amending the law providing for the method of appeal from tax assessments; Ways and Means.

New York

S. 481 (A. Reprint 1777). To amend sections 15, 25, 28, 54, workmen's compensation law, relative to compensation for disfigurement, determination of wage earning capacity, reimbursement of payments by employer, limitation of right to compensation, and to insurance of corporation officers. Signed by governor. Chapter 316.

S. 1536 (H. 1841). Relating to the construction of fire insurance contracts providing for automatic sprinklers or other fire prevention devices. Passed by both houses and signed by governor.

S. 1620. Mr. Crawford. Amends section 197, tax law, relative to corporation taxes, by providing that 30 days after notice, tax or fee shall be a lien on property of corporation or person liable to pay same; Taxation.

S. 1727. Mr. Mastick. Amends subdivision 10, section 214, tax law, by increasing from $10 to $25 minimum franchise tax on business corporations, other than those exempted by section 210, and not less than would be produced by applying the rate of 4½ per cent to base found by a prescribed formula; Taxation.

S. 1740. Mr. Mastick. Creates temporary commission to recommend revision of tax laws, and appropriates $75,000; Finance.

S. 1776. Mr. Gates. To amend subdivision 6, section 15, workmen's compensation law, by providing in case of permanent total disability caused by loss of both eyes, minimum compensation shall not be less than $15 a week; Labor.

A. 2005. Mr. Hawkins. Amends section 197, tax law, relative to corporation taxes, by providing 30 days after notice, tax or fee shall be a lien on property of corporation or person liable to pay same; Taxation.

A. 2118. Amends subdivision 10, section 214, tax law, by increasing from $10 to $25 minimum franchise tax on business corporations, other than those exempted by section 210, and not less than would be produced by applying the rate of 4½ per cent to base found by a prescribed formula: Taxation.

Change in Status

S. 750. To amend the labor law in relation to fireproof buildings. Signed by governor. Chapter 293.

Rhode Island

Change in Status

S. 134. Mr. Quinn. Regulating outdoor advertising. Requiring bond and license. Passed by senate.

S. 151. Amends law imposing corporate excess tax on corporations by changing classifications of liabilities to be included in basis; read and passed.

South Carolina

Change in Status

Among the tax bills passed by the general assembly of the State of South Carolina at its recent session were:

S. 1543, H. 1304. Joint resolution proposing an amendment to section 1, article X, of the constitution relating to taxation by permitting the imposition of a tax not to exceed 5 mills on intangible property, including moneys, credits, bank deposits, corporate stocks and bonds.

H. 1303, S. 1446. Amending the income tax by increasing rate on corporations from 4 per cent to 4½ per cent and providing for a minimum tax of 2 per cent on a base consisting of net income plus salaries and other compensation paid to all elected and appointed officers, and to any stockholders owning in excess of 5 per cent of the issued capital stock, deducting $6,000 and any deficit reported for the year. Changing rate of tax on individuals and providing reciprocal provision in case of non-residents deriving income in South Carolina. (V. U. S. Daily 474.)

S. 1381, H. 1355. To require all fire insurance companies doing business in the State to furnish to all applicants for losses sustained the proper blanks for making claims for such losses within five days after written notice therefor and to prevent non-waiver and similar agreement.

H. 1659, S. 1670. Tightening up the administrative provisions of the stamp tax on documents, including tax on transfer and original issue of corporate stock.

Castaways

Hollywood—Walter Ramsay, the studio scribe, tells of the "two ordinary little girls" who came to Hollywood about three years ago. "At first I noticed them working in one of the cheaper lunch-counters along the Boulevard. Then came the movie bug. It was hard sledding. They weren't as good-looking as a hundred others who were after the same jobs.

"One day, not long ago, I saw them selling small bunches of flowers on a side street near the business section. I was curious—where did the posies come from? I hung around until they had sold the last.

"Yesterday I saw them standing behind a very popular MORTUARY on the Boulevard waiting for their daily stock of flowers which come on wreaths—out the back door."

Thirty Rochester Theatres Wired, Survey Shows

Rochester, N. Y.—Rochester is as close to being all-sound in its film policy as any city of its size in the nation, a review of the theatre situation here by Julius Greenstone, president of the Rochester M. P. Exhibitors' Association, shows.

Thirty out of the city corporation area's 41 film theatres, both downtown and neighborhood, have audio equipment. Of the remaining 11 still running as silent houses, two are discussing installation of sound equipment. Three installed sound within the last two weeks. The town has approximately 337,000 population.

Rochester First Run Hits On Adopting Sound Film

Rochester, N. Y.—Minus its vaudeville, the Piccadilly, Publix house with 2,259 seats, staged its reopening as an all-sound, first run theatre to packed houses.

The house was redecorated. With the reopening Truman Moulder, formerly of the Toledo, O., Paramount, became assistant manager under Manager S. H. Solomon.

Universal Sending Unit to Borneo for Jungle Picture

Universal City—Harry Garson heads a company of 14 persons who leave April 30 for a five months' trip to Borneo to film "Ourang." A private yacht will be chartered at Singapore to carry the company and equipment to Borneo. The cast and director now are being selected. Fred de Gresac wrote the story with adaptation and dialogue by Winnifred Reeve and Isadore Bernstein.

Four British Companies Merged in Argosy Firm

London—Argosy Filmcraft, Ltd., is expected to be the name of the new company which is to be formed to absorb International Talking Screen Prod., British Filmcraft Prod., British Screen Prod., and the Argosy Film Co. George Pearson is to be chairman of the new company and Capt. George Banfield will be director of productions.

Hoffberg Deals Closed

Robinson Substituted

Hollywood—Edward G. Robinson will have the title role in First National's "Little Caesar," from the novel by W. R. Burnett and adapted by Robert N. Lee. Fred Kohler will not, as previously stated, appear in the picture.

Return of Arbitration "Fines" May Be Demanded by Northwest Showmen

"Cub's" Ham and Eggs

Minneapolis—It looked like old days here Tuesday when J. F. Cubberley, veteran exchange and theatre operator, threw one of his famous ham and egg breakfasts for exhibitors attending the annual convention of the Northwest unit. "Cub" now is handling De Forest sales in this territory. "Cub" started the early morning whoopee parties while with First National here years ago. His continued popularity was attested by the turnout at Tuesday's 8:30 A. M. repast. "Cub" also invited all exchange managers, bookers and salesmen, with the stipulation they "do not put it on the swindle sheet until the following week."

Better Relations Forecast as Result of 5-5-5 Confab

Dallas—Conferences of the 5-5-5 committees will do more than any other thing to bring about better understanding between distributors and exhibitors, Col. H. A. Cole, head of the Texas exhibitor unit, stated on his return from the Allied States Ass'n meetings in New York. The Texas head this week started a series of 15 regional meetings of the association.

H. B. Warner Signed for Two Fox Productions

Hollywood—H. B. Warner has been signed for two Fox productions. His first will be opposite Irene Rich in "On Your Back." Guthrie McClintic will direct. His second will be "Road House," Leo McCarey's first as a Fox director.

"Birth of a Nation" with Sound Score is Now Ready

Hollywood—Harry Aiken has completed the "soundization" of "Birth of a Nation." The picture will probably be re-issued in sound this summer. Besides complete orchestration, the sound includes negro song ensembles and sound effects.

Brown to Star in "High Life"

Hollywood—Joe E. Brown will be starred by First National in a screen version of "High Life," a play by Rex Beach and Paul Armstrong, which has been adapted by Matt Taylor and Paul Perez. Brown now is completing his role in "Top Speed," with Bernice Claire, Jack Whiting, Laura Lee and Frank McHugh.

Gets 7-Year Jail Term

Los Angeles—Jack Noonan, brother of Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day, was sentenced to seven years in prison following conviction on a charge of receiving stolen property. He was one of three defendants accused of taking $10,000 worth of furs and jewelry from the apartment of Ted Lewis.

Steffes Retires as President After 13 Years in Office; Now General Manager

Minneapolis—Efforts may be made by the Northwest exhibitor association to obtain return to exhibitors of assessments made against them by the local arbitration board. The association is expected to take the position that the Thacher decision branding arbitration illegal, makes illegal as well any fines and penalties levied by the arbitration board. Damages of three for one are to be asked under anti-trust statutes.

Al Steffes

W. A. Steffes, president of the Northwest unit, made good his threat to withdraw as association head at the annual meeting of the organization here Tuesday and Wednesday. The veteran leader, who has held the presidency since 1917, insisted that he was determined to resign and was succeeded in the post by W. A. Miller, Cloquet exhibitor, who last year staged an attack on the Steffes regime. Steffes for the last several years has sought to relinquish the office. Walter Arnold, Lakota, N. D., showman, was named secretary of the organization.

Named General Manager

Following Steffes' refusal to be a candidate for reelection, he was made general manager of the association, at a salary of $1 a year and expenses. He also was chosen as the association's member of the board of directors of Allied States Ass'n., which he formed, and is to continue as its representative at the 5-5-5 conference, where he is chairman of the Allied group.

Steffes has been head of the present organization since its inception in 1917, being returned to the office each year without opposition or molestation. During the past five years, Steffes has steadfastly made preconvention statements that he would prefer to retire, with the exception of last year, when an attempt was made to get an outside man and W. I. Nolan, then speaker at the Minnesota house, to accept the nomination to head the Northwest unit. Steffes opposed the move and threw his hat in the ring, but the Nolan bubble burst before convention time.

A New Service

Baltimore—Emergency sound service now is provided for members by the Maryland exhibitor association. The service is conducted by Ray Smith, formerly operator at the New. Recently Smith shot trouble at the Horn, kept the show going and then repaired the equipment in about an hour. Next day the equipment was running as usual.

Oh, How Dumb

Hollywood—Cal York, the scribbler, tells of an impromptu conference being held at Radio when the studio moguls were discussing a suitable story for Chic Sale. Nobody had an idea until Catherine, somebody's secretary, spoke up:

"May I suggest something?"

"Uh huh," uh-huhed everybody.

"Well," she said, "my boy friend told me last night that Mister Sale had written an awfully clever book, and I don't see why it mightn't be a good idea to film that. Of course, I haven't read it, but it's named 'The Specialist'."

So they told Catherine to go ahead with her typing.

Oklahoma Theatre Owners to Hold May Convention

Oklahoma City—The Oklahoma Associated Theatre Owners will hold their annual convention at the Huckins Hotel here May 13 and 14, according to John Brown, president. M. A. Lightman, national president, will be the principal speaker, and among the subjects to be discussed are "The Chain Competition Menace," film rentals for talkers and talking equipment and contents of the new sales contracts. New officers will be elected at the closing session.

Anderson Signs with "U"; Whiteman Film Is Reason

Hollywood—Universal has signed a term contract with John Murray Anderson to personally produce and direct at least two filmusicals yearly. Anderson, well known stager of Broadway musicals, produced "King of Jazz" for Universal, resulting in the new agreement.

Film Exchange Buys 26 Bonzo Sound Cartoons

Film Exchange, Inc., has purchased the world's rights to the series of 26 Bonzo synchronized cartoons. It is also negotiating for other product and will continue activities in the independent market as heretofore.

Chaney Cast Completed

Hollywood—The completed cast of "The Unholy Three," which will be Lon Chaney's first dialogue vehicle, includes Lila Lee, Ivan Linow, Harry Earles and Elliott Nugent. Jack Conway is directing and the dialogue has been prepared by the father-and-son playwriting team, J. C. and Elliott Nugent.

Gavin Gordon Recovers

Hollywood—After spending nearly two weeks in a hospital, Gavin Gordon has returned to the M-G-M studio to continue his role opposite Greta Garbo in "Romance."

'Advertise Shorts,' Says Clubwoman In Radio Speech

Call for the wider advertising of meritorious short features was sounded in a radio talk early this month by Mrs. Rita C. McGoldrick, LL.D., chairman of the motion picture bureau of the International Federation of Catholic Alumnae. The bureau which conducts a reviewing service, broadcasts a weekly radio talk on pictures. In her talk, Mrs. McGoldrick cited some requests from patrons for information on the short feature.

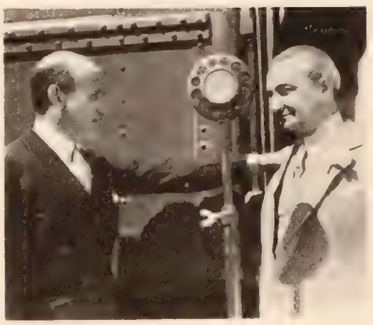
"In the past few months the review members of this Motion Picture Bureau," she said, "have watched with growing interest the development of the short feature from the insignificant "filler-in" on the average program to the high class products which, in many instances lately, have threatened to run away with the show.

"Sound has certainly given new life, new breath, new scope to the humble short features which are not even advertised as part of the program's attraction. It is our present belief that a new day has dawned for these step-children of the movies, and that before a very long time, we shall see the strange phenomena of a short feature deciding the fate of its full length companion on the same bill.

Patrons Want Information

"We have had an interesting example of this within the past week with the enormous response we have had to our radio talk on Educational's Mack Sennett golf comedy "Match Play." Letters have poured in—intelligent letters, nearly all from men, who have asked practically the same question: 'How can we find out where these worth while short pictures are showing?' A few of them are worth quoting to you, for we hope this discussion will encourage more of you to send us your opinions on this important topic. From Dr. Maurice Duffy in the Bronx this expression has come: He says: 'Your review of the clever golf comedy 'Match Play,' featuring Walter Hagan and Diegel, particularly interests me. Being somewhat of a golfer I am interested enough to want to know how I may learn where this picture will be shown. Why are features like this not advertised? Personally I think many people would be influenced to select their motion picture entertainment through advertised comedies such as you mention'."

"From Lynch, Ky., a letter from John Wells asks: 'Why not have an emphatic discussion on this short feature problem? If the shorts were advertised it would encourage the producers to make more of the higher class type and save us from so much that is inane on the average program."



Can't Find Out Where Playing

"From Brooklyn, a Richardson Jones, writing as spokesman for the family, says: 'There is a question which the four others in the family and myself have asked ourselves more than once. Is there an information bureau, or list printed anywhere telling where worth while, endorsed short features are playing? We would go out of our way to a theatre showing "Match Play" for instance. Last week we waded through Sunday papers, a magazine or two and a trade journal, but not a line did we find on short features. Isn't it time we had a change in this policy of ignoring good comedies and short features?"

Maybe Yes?

"The theatre-going public won't put up with the talkies. It won't stand having its ears hurt and its intelligence insulted," chirps Ethel Barrymore.

"Does she mean Brother John and Brother Lionel?" asks Jimmie Quirk.

Sam Goldwyn and Flo Ziegfeld are to "Whoopee" it together with Eddie Cantor as third conspirator. Business of Goldwyn and the stage producer looking pleased on meeting in Los Angeles.

Carter in Seattle

Seattle—F. B. Carter, veteran of the theatre business, has arrived here to assume the management of the local branch office of the National Theatre Supply Co. He was formerly manager of the Portland office for the same concern, and prior to that time was connected with the Southern Equipment Company of Atlanta and Dallas at the time that concern was purchased by the National organization.

Film Men Injured

Boston—Frank L. Madden, Fox salesman and former part owner of the Hudson (Mass.) Theatre, and T. Henry Burke, part owner of the Marlboro Theatre, were occupants of an auto struck by a Boston bound train at Hudson. The auto was hurled down a 20-foot embankment. Both occupants escaped with minor cuts and bruises.

New Des Moines Exchange

Des Moines—A new film exchange building is under erection at Twelfth and High streets, next door to the present Paramount exchange. The new building, which will house several exchanges, will be completed this summer. It will cost $45,000. Judge James A. Howe is erecting the building.

U. A. Signs Una Merkel

Hollywood—Although United Artists has decided to carry few contract players in the talker era, the company has placed Una Merkel under term agreement for featured spots, after a brief part in D. W. Griffith's "Abraham Lincoln."

Sticky Fingers To Get Wall St. Bath, Report

tion of the personal life of the executive in question. There is a reported difference of several thousand dollars a year between his estimated living expenses and his income —the difference being in favor of some income other than salary. What the other income is the bankers propose to learn, but with pretty definite ideas that it is graft received for favoring certain concerns selling supplies of various kinds to the company.

Enter the Detectives

When film men meet they talk shop. When bankers meet they talk shop. Hence, an innocent by-sitter, lunching at the Bankers' Club, overheard the three top signatures of three different banking houses, dining at an adjoining table, discuss two film concerns in terms of suspicion and distrust of the executives who control, or actually purchase, many producing, distributing and exhibiting accessories. The statements of the bankers left no doubts about the instructions that had been issued to a well-known private detective agency to investigate, with a concluding caustic comment:

"Many film salaries are out of reason, and if there is graft in addition we'll find it out, and that will provide ample excuse for firing some of these boys who are trying to match a corkscrew for straightness. Replacements will cost the payroll lots less."

Marilyn Miller Title Changed

Hollywood—"Sweethearts" is the title of Marilyn Miller's next First National picture. This title supersedes "The Bad Good Girl." The picture, a musical screen play by Herbert Fields, Richard Rodgers and Lorentz Hart, will be made entirely in Technicolor. Jack Whiting, of musical comedy, will play opposite Miss Miller.

Street Car Tie-Up

Lowell, Mass.—Securing a tie-up with the street railway company, Publix theatres here are now transporting patrons of their theatres at half rates. A one-way ride check is attached to each theatre ticket, good only on day and date stamped.

Enlarging Astor

Baltimore—The Astor is to have its seating capacity enlarged to 1,800 by rebuilding on the present site and one adjoining, purchased by Amusement Corp. of America. The improvements will cost about $130,000.

Deaf Get Break

Contract for 750 Western Electric Audiophones in 60 theatres of the Fox West Coast chain is the largest order to date for this equipment for the hard of hearing, according to C. W. Bunn, general sales manager of Electrical Research Products.

High and Low On Music Row

WHOEVER was responsible for the installation of a phonograph in the professional department of DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., must be a psychologist. Not only does the constant playing of "When the Little Red Roses Get the Blues for You" suggest itself as good material for the many performers who visit this house, but it also keeps the boys behind the counter in a musical state, with a perpetual whistle on their lips, and one must admit that the resulting charming atmosphere (music hath charms, you know) is a step in the right direction.

The Robbins Music Corp. has started to work on the songs in the newly released M-G-M productions and Jack Bregman, general manager of the firm, feels that it will enjoy a more successful season this year than last. That's a big order, but with the great start afforded by "Should I?" from "Lord Byron of Broadway" and the new songs "It Must Be You" and "Free and Easy," from the Buster Keaton picture, "Free and Easy," "The Moon Is Low" and "Montana Moon," from "Montana Moon," featuring Joan Crawford, and the numbers "Leave It That Way," "Dust," "The Whole Darned Thing's for You" and "Girl Trouble" from "Children of Pleasure," Jack's prediction looks like it's in the bag.

Here are just a few of the changes in the personnel of music publishing houses along the main stem during the past four weeks:

Elmore White, formerly professional manager for DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., is now general manager for Davis, Coots & Engel, Inc.; George Piantadosi, former professional manager for Remick, Inc., now in the same capacity for Robbins Music Corp.; Dave Ringle, from DeSylva, Brown & Henderson, Inc., now harmony man for Shapiro-Bernstein; Harry Bloom, of Irving Berlin, Inc., now publishing for himself as Harry Bloom, Inc.; Charles Bayha, from Shapiro-Bernstein to Red Star Music Co.; Bernie Pollack, formerly sales manager for M. Witmark & Sons, now in the same capacity with Mills Music Co.; Murray Baker, from Shapiro-Bernstein to Robbins Music Corp.; Al Friedman, from Green & Stept, Inc., to Joe Morris Music Co.; Max Rich, staff writer for Harms, Inc., now freelancing, and Tony Pace, formerly with Remick, Inc., now with Davis, Coots & Engel.

Murray Mencher and Billy Moll have a pair of songs in the Shapiro-Bernstein catalogue which have all the earmarks of stepping into the big-money class. The songs are "Me and the Girl Next Door" and "Ro Ro Rollin' Along." Bob King's—er—er—beg pardon—Mary Earle's (that's what we get for reading Rudy Vallee's book) "California Sunshine," a pretty waltz, also looks like the goods.

Monty Siegel, spying Jack Oakie in front of 745 Seventh Avenue the other day, walked up to the actor and said: "Hello, Jack, my name is Monty Siegel. I've written a lot of songs and I'd like to write some gags for you." "That's a good gag, too," answered Jack, and Monty missed a great chance to enter the movies.

* * *

Chalk up a hit for the Red Star Music Co., music publishers for Fox Film Corp. "I'm in the Market for You," written by Jimmy Hanley and Joe McCarthy for the Fox production, "High Society Blues," has taken like wildfire and already is listed with the best-sellers. "We're just beginning to hit our stride," says Jack McCoy, professional manager. PINCUS.

Jackie Coogan in Talker Remake Of 'Tom Sawyer'

Hollywood — Paramount will remake "Tom Sawyer" as a talker with Jackie Coogan in the title part and with Junior Durkin playing Huckleberry Finn. Company also plans to follow this picture with a remake of "Huckleberry Finn" with Durkin featured, and may later complete the series with a remake of "Huck and Tom." The three pictures were produced in silent form by Paramount about 12 years ago.

Tours Music Chief at Paramount N. Y. Studios

Frank Tours, who has been on the musical staff at the Paramount Long Island studios since the advent of sound, has been named general director of music at that studio. Tours has had a wide and varied career in music circles, having at times been associated with Ziegfeld, Berlin and Shubert. Last year he was loaned by Paramount to the producers of "Bittersweet" and went to London to study the original stage presentation. He formerly had been musical director and conductor at the Plaza, Paramount's London house. Phil Cohan, also associated with Paramount's music department, has been named assistant to Tours.

Witmark & Sons Celebrate 45th Anniversary in Field

M. Witmark & Sons, Warner Bros. music subsidiary, last week celebrated its forty-fifth year in the music publishing field. The first song published by Witmark was "I'll Answer That Question Tomorrow," written by Isadore Witmark, president of the firm, for Mlle. Rennee, star of the early nineties, who later became the wife of William A. Brady and Alice Brady's mother.

THE STUDIO SLEUTH.

IT IS TIME that this Industry stopped making Hays a scapegoat for all its virtues and vices; help him and his organization to help you. It is your duty, for although the Hays Organization is a Producers and Distributors unit, your means of keeping in business, of showing profits, is in the attitude which the public assumes toward the commodity, you, as exhibitors are selling to them.

One picture "gone astray" and the Reformers harp upon it; until the best they offer the Industry is hanging. Fifty clean pictures, preaching their "sugar-coated" morals; and the Reformers still harp on the one which has offended them.

Since motion pictures are always "news" for the press, let us make it Good News for the Industry. We have the public with us, we represent the public's most popular entertainment, let us talk to this public; and show it that, in the selection of motion pictures for its entertainment, it shows "good taste."—Canadian M. P. Digest, Toronto.

Now that, as Dame Rumor hath it, Howard Hughes has finally managed to finish the wellnigh legendary "Hell's Angels," it looks very much as if Gloria Swanson's "Queen Kelly" is going to take its place as the stock joke of the Hollywood rialto. Well, Hollywood has to have its little laugh.

Will Gloria succeed in spending as much of Joseph Kennedy's money as Howard has laid out on his air opus? The current odds are five to four on "Angels" to beat "Queen" (offered and taken), but there is plenty of good money also on the promising Swanson filly.—N. Y. Daily News.

Miss Gaynor is facing the same crisis that confronts many of the old silent stars who have failed to knock talkie audiences loose from their breath. She is drawing around $3,500 a week on the strength of past performances, notably in "Seventh Heaven," which was made to order for her plaintive appeal.

That figure is several times more than Fox's current best bets are receiving and it will have to be rectified some time. The present, therefore, is a bad time for Janet to wear an oversize hat. Sheehan has a quietly effective way of causing oblivion to enshroud restive stars.—N. Y. Daily News.

Sound, Mr. Hays tells us, has so revolutionized the motion picture industry that it was recently necessary for the producers to get together and adopt a code of ethics to deal with the speaking screen. Yet in the long list of taboos that the movie moguls have agreed upon, only two seem to have a direct bearing on the fact that pictures nowadays talk. * * *

Be that as it may, the action of the self-censoring producers has less reference to sound effects of the new movies than to the quelling power of our Mr. Hays, who is said to exercise a cross between Cotton Mather's invective against sin and the objection of a chamber of commerce to business methods that antagonize. The movies may not be good, but the movie actors have to be.—Dallas Morning News.

I HAVE NOT seen "Young Eagles" because of Buddy Rogers. I have seen him leap heroically in and out of airplanes. I have heard him manipulate a trombone with heroic virility, and I just can't see any point in going through it again. He seems to be a very nice young man and doubtless would be a useful fellow on a glee-club tour. I doubt not that he quickens the pulse of countless young ladies, and that alone must atone for his existence. But he has always retarded my circulation and given me a slight headache. It is possible that "Young Eagles" is a masterpiece. I doubt it.—Lorentz in Judge.

George Bancroft seems to have had another attack of temperament or something. He felt that he should have sole honors as the star in the new version of "The Spoilers." Motion picture premiers in Hollywood have been overdone to such an extent that even the major studios are compelled to resort to strong-arm methods among their employees to fill their theatres on opening nights with five-dollar customers.

Of course there will always be picture players who must be seen "in person," and the sappos who are willing to pay nimble prices for the privilege of rubbing elbows "with the stars." As a rule, on such nights (and they come often) the streets are blocked with tourists and autograph bugs. The "speeches" of the "stars" are laughable to radio-listeners-in. Rubber-stamp dialogue such as "Hello, everybody! . . . I just know this will be a wonderful picture. . . . I wish you could all be here to enjoy it the way I know I shall," etc., ad nauseum, becomes a pain under the Cluett-Peabody after hearing it

IF WE had only to deal with those frankly pornographic films that are shown clandestinely in certain private premises to an audience of initiates on the lookout for filth and accustomed to its putrescence, it might not be worth our while to call attention to the matter. But this is not the case. There is another class of films labelled "educational films," "hygiene films," or "popular instruction films," the only real purpose of which is to rake in money.

You can guess the kind of thing! And in instances of this sort has anyone the boldness to assert that the film has a single purpose—that of the diffusion of knowledge! Lies! Under the pretext of teaching the public, such films aim at exciting the sexual instinct; they stir up morbid curiosity; they only sully all ideals, all decency, all sense of modesty!

Newsreels Duty Free; No Change In Exposed Rate

Washington—The tariff conferees have agreed on free entry of newsreels of American manufacture, exposed abroad but not developed, and have adopted a rate of four-tenths of one cent per foot for imported exposed films of standard width, with duties on other widths to be in proportion.

The rate on unexposed film is the same as in the present tariff law. It was continued by the House, but the Senate adopted an amendment cutting the duty to two-tenths of one cent per foot, which the conferees rejected. The provision for free import of undeveloped newsreel negatives, for both silent and sound, was adopted by the Senate as an amendment to the film paragraph.

Whatever the reason may have been for his hermit-like existence in the past, it has apparently ceased to bother him. Ronald is now being observed at parties, romping with the best of 'em. It looks as if he may develop into Hollywood's new playboy —a sort of Marshall Neilan.

At one party recently Ronald was seen bantering gaily with Marilyn Miller, among other alluring females who were present. What progress, if any, Marilyn made toward the apparently stony heart of the man must remain in doubt. But Ronald was certainly bantering. And he hasn't had his bit of banter for years, so far as Hollywood has been able to see.

$350,000 for Remodeling

Rochester, N. Y.—Another $50,000 will be added to the remodeling cost of the Smith Opera House at Geneva to increase its seating capacity from 2,000 to 2,500, provide new side walls and a new roof, making it the largest film theatre in the Finger Lakes region. When the house is reopened in the Fall, a total of $350,000 will have been spent on it.

Releasing Sound Westerns

"Beyond the Rio Grande," independent sound-on-film Western, is being distributed by the Big Four Film Corp. The second of the series, "Ridin' Law," will be released May 12. Both were directed by Harry Webb.

Bally Good Idea

London — British exhibitors are studying the latest Hollywood slang at present. A large group is planning to visit the film capital this summer, the trip to consume four or five weeks.

Slipping

Hollywood—A producer who is a fight fan and keenly interested in the Friday night cards at the Legion stadium took one of the young pugs under his wing and, on the eve of a trip to New York, promised to hook him up with a promoter in the big city—if he refrained from dissipation. The eager scrapper promised faithfully. After a few days in New York the producer received the following message from him:

"Knocked the Kid out in three seconds. How's that?"

A week later came another:

"I guess you read that I put the Battler out for the count and I'm afraid that you'll think I was dissipating because it took me eleven seconds. Honestly, I wasn't."

Complete Chinese Talker

Hollywood—The first dialogue picture to be made entirely in Japanese has been completed by Tom White Prod. James Wong Howe, Herbert Brenon's Chinese cameraman for several years, handled the direction of the picture, using an all Japanese cast obtained locally. The picture will be released in various cities of the Pacific Coast which have large Japanese populations, besides being exported to Japan.

Tubman's Contest Plan

Hollywood—Columbia has signed Russell Gleason for "Sisters," which features Sally O'Neil and Molly O'Day.

'Lummox' On Top At Cleveland on Gross of $16,500

Cleveland—Holy week wasn't as bad this year as it has been previous years. While no heavy business was reported, none of the houses suffered any severe slump. On the whole, a pretty fair average was maintained, with "Lummox" leading on top money at the Allen, where $16,000 was grossed (91%) and closely followed by the 90% rating made by Tiffany's "Mamba," taking $18,000 at RKO's Hip.

Weather: Clear until Thursday, then showers Thursday; clear rest of week.

Opposition: "Across the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," Stillman; "The Lummox," Allen; "Roadhouse Nights," State; "Cohens and the Kelleys in Scotland," RKO Palace; "Mamba," RKO Hippodrome. Stage: The Freibera Passion Play, "The

Providence Likes Brice Film; Pay $18,900 at State

Providence—Holy Week interfered with grosses here, but exhibitors found business better for the pre-Easter season than in several years. Strong attractions were booked, differing in policy from some showmen's idea of listing anything at low cost on the supposition that trade will be had anyway.

Loew State total of $18,900 with Fanny Brice's "Be Yourself" was best for the week on a percentage of 95. The RKO Victory, with "The Other Tomorrow," was fair at $8,100, and the same at the Majestic with Bill Powell in "Behind the Makeup."

Weather: Cool, rain.

Opposition: "Be Yourself," Loew's State; "Other Tomorrow," RKO Victory; "Behind the Makeup," Majestic; "Three Sisters" (vaude. acts), Albee.

Natacha vs. Mae

Natacha Rambova, once Mrs. Rudolph Valentino, wants $1,594 from Mae Murray, and she has gone to court to get it. Natacha is now a New York modiste and says Mae forgot to pay that amount for clothing she bought. So when Mae arrived in the big town, Natacha slapped a summons on her.

"Oh, that suit!" said Mae languidly when questioned about the affair. "I suppose it's advertising for Miss Rambova. The reason I am always being sued is because I have a reputation for being too easy."

175% for 'Western Stars' in Frisco; Grosses $20,000

San Francisco—The local theatre week was a very good one, generally. Nat Holt, manager of the California, deserves credit for the manner in which he put over "Light of Western Stars," second week at his theatre, doing a business of $20,000 on a 175% rating. Good weather helped the situation.

Good business was witnessed by both Wagnon theatres, the Embassy, which played "Under a Texas Moon," and the Davies, where more than average business was produced in this house, which had a $12,000 gross, and a 150% rating. At the Orpheum, another good week was shown with "Ingagi." In fact, the second week was considered better than the first. A $25,000 take was reported for the week, which is much better than this theatre has been doing for months. It rated 160%.

Weather: Fair, good, then stormy.

Opposition: "Under a Texas Moon," vaudeville, Embassy; "The Aviator," Davies; "Mysterious Island," Warfield; "Ladies Love Brutes," Paramount Syncopators, revue, stage show, Paramount; "Be Yourself," St. Francis; "Light of Western Stars," and "Up the Congo," California; "Ingagi," Orpheum; "Other Tomorrow," presentation stage show, Casino; "Free and Easy," stage show, Fanchon & Marco "Idea," Fox.

$4,950 for 3 Days Of "Shows" Tops Flops in Ottawa

Ottawa—In some respects, the observance of Holy Week in Ottawa upset the even tenor of theatre business, patronage being spotty and attendance very irregular.

"Anna Christie" started off like a million dollars at the Regent, but performed a fade-out on Holy Thursday and Good Friday. On the other hand, "Show of Shows" registered capacity trade at B. F. Keith's on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The revised "Phantom of the Opera" held up to good average at the Imperial and probably would have cleaned up during any other week of the year. "The Great Gabbo" at the Avalon was a flop, but the people blamed Von Stroheim rather than religious duties.

Weather: Fair.

Opposition: "Ann Christie," Regent; "Dangerous Paradise," five RKO acts, B. F. Keith's; "Phantom of the Opera," Imperial; "Great Gabbo," Avalon; "Bishop Murder Case," Centre: "Show of Shows," B. F. Keith's; "The Furies," Avalon.

All Okla. City Runs Finish Week With Par Rating

Oklahoma City—Local picturegoers took their pennies and divided them equally among the five first runs downtown. They each finished the week on a 100% rating, an unusual occurrence, especially during Holy Week. Pleasant weather helped a lot.

Weather: Pleasant throughout the week.

Opposition: "Second Wife," Empress; "High Society Blues," Liberty; "Melody Man," Fanchon & Marco "Ideas" (4 days), Orpheum; "Light of Western Stars," Capitol; "Benson Murder Case," Criterion; "The Swellhead" (3 days), Orpheum.

All Runs Under In Balto; $4,180 For 'Sarah, Son'

Baltimore—During Holy Week patronage at big theatres here dropped heavily. Only one came near normal average—Loew's Parkway, where "Sarah and Son," was shown after one week at Loew's Parkway. Gross was figured at $4,180, giving it a 95 per cent rating.

All others showed low ratings, with Keith's being hit apparently hardest of all with "Swellhead," showing a gross of only $4,400 which gives it a rating of 55 per cent.

Weather: Rain and cold with snow one Tuesday and Thursday.

Opposition: Mystery Ranch," and Loew's unit "Pearls," (with Al Evans), Loew's Century; "Come Easy," First Nat'l Pictures on Hen-Pecked Henry," Hippodrome; "Swellhead," Keith's; "White Sister," Little; "Hello Sister," Metropolitan; "Double Cross Roads," New; "Love Racket," Rivoli; "Lummox," Loew's Stanley; "Playing Around," Valencia; "Sarah and Son," Loew's Parkway after one week at Stanley; Stage: The Singing Fools, Lights Tonight," Parkway, one week.

Razzing the Prince

Ottawa—The censors made wholesale cuts in "Show of Shows," a British production. A reference to the Prince of Wales, not considered as very complimentary, a wisecrack about perversion and a can-can dance were eliminated. When the feature played B. F. Keith's, before big crowds, a notice was screened to the effect that the discrepancies were not defects in the film nor projection faults.

Chi. Snubs "This Mad World" and House Stops Run

Chicago—Few houses withstood the brutal combination of Holy Week and six days of chill, rainy weather.

"Ladies of Leisure" (Col.) in at the Woods on a "pink" permit, did $20,800, for a 200% rating. "Ingagi" (Congo Pic.), featuring gorillas with "It" and native women without, by remaining steady in its four week at the Garrick, legit house, shunted Joe Howard's musical comedy, "The Time, the Place and the Girl," into the Harris theatre, by being held over for a fifth week and possibly longer. "Hot for Paris" (Fox) made chumps of the critics who were in competition to say the worst about it, by overcoming the week and the weather in addition for a gross of $32,600, or 105%. The rest acted as expected, with the exception of M-G-M's "This Mad World," which lasted only four days of a week's booking at the Castle.

Weather: rain and chilly.

Opposition: "Such Men Are Dangerous," stage show, Chicago; "Hot for Paris," McVickers; "Ladies of Leisure," Woods; "Free and Easy," stage show, Oriental; "Lummox," United Artists; "Under a Texas Moon," Roosevelt: "Loose Ankles, RKO vaude, State-Lake; "Isle of Escape," Orpheum; "Ingagi," Garrick; "Crazy that Way," 30 minutes of Newsreel, Monroe; "This Mad World," 4 days, "Her Unborn Child," 4 days, Castle.

McCormack Eases Off at Majestic; Drops to $9,500

[illegible] from day and date playing with the Olympia and returning to its former price scale of 75c top, hit the week's high with "Benson Murder Case," doing $14,000 business for a rating of 120%. Metropolitan, showing "Vagabond King," was a close second with 110% and $34,000. There was a slump which is always felt in Holy Week, but the effects were far less than anticipated and theatres were well satisfied with the week. A Saturday holiday (Patriots' Day, April 19th) helped to bring up the week's totals. Fifth week of John McCormack's "Song of My Heart" saw a decided slump at the Majestic, where the film has been knocking 'em dead.

Opposition: "Benson Murder Case," Uptown; "Under a Texas Moon," Olympia; revival of "Covered Wagon" and "Lady Lies," Repertory; "Song o' My Heart," Majestic; "Vagabond King," with Charles Davis and revue on stage, Metropolitan; "On the Border," Scollay Square; "Lummox," Loew's State; "Lord Byron on Broadway," Loew's Orpheum; "Prince of Diamonds," Park; "Ladies of Leisure," second week, Keith's; "Spring Is Here," Keith-Albee.

Johnson Film Is Low in K. C. in a Tough B. O. Week

Kansas City—The week was below normal for nearly all first-run houses, although slightly better than last week. The only house reporting 100% or better was the small Royal, with a gross of $4,500, from "Only the Brave." The Midland with "Be Yourself" took in $14,200, or 95%. The Mainstreet did about 92% on "Lovin' the Ladies," which amounted to $14,000. Pantages reported $9,500 for "Murder on the Roof," or 95%. Globe did not do so well with "Round the World with Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson," reporting 80% on a $3,-750 gross.

Weather: Changeable.

Opposition: "Be Yourself," vaude headlining Carl Shaw, Midland; "Benson Murder Case," Newman [illegible]

The Fatal Word

Berlin—"Room 107," a talker, has been banned by the Federal censor because of the word "previously."

Although harmless in itself, the word, when used in connection with certain portions of the dialogue, was pronounced objectionable and the entire production rejected. "Previously" only deletions have been made in talkers.

Congo Film Runs Away with Others On $11,675 Gross

Portland, Ore.—Before the end of first week the Congo novelty film, "Ingagi," with its many amazing and thrilling episodes, shot up new high attendance records at Hamrick's "Music Box," rolling a gross of $11,675 and rating 145%.

April showers brought slight increase in attendance generally. Popular juvenile stars, Gaynor and Farrell in "High Society Blues," ran a close second with a gross of $11,000 and 130%; RKO's Orpheum, in spite of lowered prices, fell off in matinee business, grossing but $9,875, 100% on the register. United Artist should have drawn better with "The Rogue Song."

Weather: April showers.

Opposition: "High Society Blues," Fox Broadway; "Ladies Love Brutes," Paramount; "Second Wife," Orpheum; "Peacock Alley," Blue Mouse; "Ingagi," Music Box; "Rogue Song," United Artists.

Omaha Shekels To "Cohens" on $17,500 Intake

Omaha—Rain and usual Lenten influence had no bearing on downtown stands, majority of which turned in exceptionally good receipts considering the pull of religious activities. "Cohens and Kellys in Scotland" was the highspot. The Universal comedy took a gross of $17,500, rating 125%. All other runs hit par, or over, with but one exception, M-G-M's "Montana Moon," which could not hurdle the par rating, on its $9,900 take.

Weather: Rain for most of the week.

"Ingagi" Clicks To Tune of 27 Grand at L. A.

Los Angeles—Paul Whiteman, turning in a knockout figure with "King of Jazz" at the Criterion, and "Song of the Flame," just topping it at Warners' Hollywood, could not stem the flow of b. o. patrons which fought and pushed their way into the Orpheum to see "Ingagi," the Congo flicker which grossed twenty-eight grand, $17,000 more than the theatre's intake last week when Columbia's "Ladies of Leisure" nosed in with $11,000. Even McCormack's first, "Song O' My Heart," suffered. The Irish tenor drew $21,000 at the Grauman's Chinese.

First three days of "All Quiet at the Western Front" grossed $10,000, an 80% rating at Fox's Carthay Circle.

Sunshiny, warm weather hurt most of the weekly changes considerably, with beaches playing to large night crowds.

Honored by Sales Force

Warners' sales force is expected this week to surpass the total of 12,000 playdates secured in last year's drive for Sam E. Morris Month, observed annually in May by the organization. Last week, more than 10,000 new dates were signed up, with the week ended with total of 37,013. This week's additions, plus those which will be signed up next week, presage a record for the observance in honor of the company's vice-president in charge of distribution.

Four Illinois Towns Vote for Sunday Shows

St. Louis—Sunday shows won in four out of five southern Illinois towns where the issue was voted upon. A majority of 200 was cast at Rushville, while the liberal Sabbath won out by 60 votes in a hot fight at Mason City. At Vandalia, where Sunday shows have been given despite a "blue" ordinance, and at Prophetstown, voters rejected the "Sour Sabbath," but nearby Erie went "blue" by a majority of 16.

Theatre for Mexicans

Edinburg, Tex.—In the completion of the Grande, the Mexican population of the Rio Grande valley has a picture house of its own. The theatre is in the heart of the Mexican section of this city. Pictures shown will have captions both in English and Spanish. While silent pictures will be shown for the time being, the theatre is equipped with sound.

The Grande has been constructed by Mrs. L. J. Mortague.

Richmond Business Good

Richmond, Va.—"Our business has run ahead for the first three months of this year," Ivan I. Rosenbaum, manager of the Capitol, reports. "Up to the Lenten season we had made a much better showing than we were in position to report in a similar period last year."

1st Nat'l on Top In Tough Studio Race vs. Warners

Hollywood—First National's studio crew is running leaps and bounds ahead of its corelated Warner unit in the hot race to pass the half-way mark on 1930-31 production schedules, with 14 of First National's scheduled 40 ready for shipment to exchanges. Five units are shooting new stuff and 10 more are preparing, a combined total of close to two-thirds of the new season's lineup.

All Quiet on the Western Front

(Universal—All Talker)

Great!

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

UNIVERAL'S film translation of Erich Maria Remarque's sensational novel of the World War is a great, dramatic epic of motion pictures—silent or sound.

There is a gigantic sweep of the world war background—plus a humanness and sincerity in characterizations perhaps seldom before equalled on the screen. Digging deep into the innermost thoughts of the group of German youths who were emotionalized into the war "to save the fatherland," the picture goes a lot further than merely transcribing incidents of the war to the eyes of audiences. It gets right down to the hearts and souls of those who battled through the mud of France—fought in the front line trenches—and suffered all the pains and horrors of the great conflict.

"All Quiet On The Western Front" is vivid, tense, drama—superbly transferred to the screen with brilliance. Its gripping situations held a coast preview audience for two hours and a half, even though that audience had sat through two hours of pictures prior to it.

Although the production shows what might be judged as Germany's side of the war, it tells a straight story which could have easily been based on experiences of English, Canadian, French or Belgium soldiers. There is no sympathy created for war. In fact, it's just the reverse. "All Quiet" stands as a great piece of anti-war propaganda.

Universal spared no expense in producing the picture. It looks to be well worth the negative cost, reported in the neighborhood of two million dollars. Even at that figure, the production rates as a winner for the company.

Lewis Milestone carved a niche in the hall of fame through his excellent direction and handling of what was admittedly a tremendously difficult task. Milestone has injected a warmth into every scene and situation, besides capably handling the mass battle sequences for the utmost in realism.

Out of every big production such as this, there generally emerges a potential star. Lewis Ayres is the candidate here. His portrayal of Paul, the German youth, is outstanding in its natural sincerity and humanness. Ayres will be a "name" bet within a year if carefully carried along by Universal, to whom he is under term contract.

Louis Wolheim is excellent as the corporal who lightens tense situations with comedy relief. Slim Summerville, veteran comedian, will likely get a fresh start through his splendid performance as a German soldier with a serio-comedy complex. Ayres, Wolheim and Summerville are standouts in a fine cast, every member of which is spotted in with fine judgment.

"All Quiet On The Western Front" is a positive "money" attraction. Its popularity is certain to build steadily for long runs anywhere.

Comedy and a touch of musical shorts required for balance.

Produced and distributed by Universal. From "All Quiet on the Western Front," by Erich Maria Remarque. Adaptation and dialogue by Maxwell Anderson. Screen play by George Abbott. Scenario by Del Andrews. Directed by Lewis Milestone. Photography by Arthur Edeson. Length about 11 reels.

Ingagi

(Congo Pict., Ltd.—Synchronized and Lecture)

Freak for Exploitation

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

"INGAGI" is one of those freaks of the show business that apear periodically and crash through to heavy box office grosses because of the novel exploitation angles presented to arouse public interest.

As a wild animal hunt picture of Africa, "Ingagi" is nothing more than ordinary. Viewed, however, as the clever handiwork of some smart boys in Hollywood, the picture looks like one of the biggest pieces of showmanship that has hit the business in years.

"Ingagi" is frankly a Barnum attraction. Just how much of the picture was actually made by Sir Hubert Winstead and his expedition into the Congo country, can only be roughly estimated. But there is a lot of the picture that was made a long way from the wilds of Africa—in fact pretty close to the oft-times touted "wild" place, called Hollywood.

It certainly looks as if the greatest climax of the production—and the incident upon which the whole punch is based—was cleverly staged in jungle settings in Southern California.

But it's a big show idea—the thought that women actually live with giant gorillas of the African jungle—and the story has been advanced without proof for many years in legend form. But, until now, there has been no pictorial record or other satisfactory evidence to fully satisfy the minds of the public. The picture presents that sort of incident on the screen, atmospherically correct and vivid through intercutting of long and medium shots.

Such a slant, presented as fact through the medium of a motion picture—hits the public like the Big Bertha. Audiences believe what is shown on the screen, with the result that talk is making "Ingagi" one of the big money attractions of several years.

After seeing the picture the first time, this reviewer was not satisfied with certain situations in it. A second and third visit resulted in the conviction that all was not quite authentic with the pictorial record of Sir Hubert's expedition. The big gorilla—looking more like a clever ape man in a monkey suit every time he appeared on the screen—was not exactly according to Hoyle. Admission was made that a "small number" of scenes of the picture were made in Hollywood several months ago. This was explained as dramatic license allowed to every producer, and no business of the general public.

That the big gorilla also had a double in the form of a man in a clever monkey suit, was another admission. This was claimed necessary on account of the fact that Sir Subert had not been able to secure any closeups of the gorilla in action, as he was reputedly not wise to the dramatic requirements of production. But to the writer, it did not seem as though the ape man did any doubling—rather it appeared that he carried through his part from start to finish.

There are other sequences and incidents that smack of studio staging and stock film, nearly each one of which is thrilling to the extreme. Without the insertion of this material, "Ingagi" would be nothing more than a poor specimen of an African travelogue that might never find a market.

The picture starts off as a travelogue, opening in Mombassa and swiftly moving to Narobi, where the safari is outfitted for a trip inland. Then follows a series of hunts; with leopards, hippos, rhinos, elephants and other big game falling under the fire of the marksmen.

Some of this is vivid, but for the most part—up until the time of the gorilla episode at the finish — the film is in particularly bad shape. Reason for this is advanced as due to the extreme heat of the region, which made developing of the negative very difficult from the quality standpoint. There are hypo marks and spots throughout the picture up until the time the gorilla steps into action. Then the negative is okay. There are several previous incidents, however, that show no heat signs on the negative and all of this film looks like studio or stock stuff.

There is sound in the picture, mostly an organ accompaniment that turns out a continual dirge that is supposed to represent African music of some sort. Then there is dialogue, or rather a lecture that explains the various scenes and incidents as they are flashed on the screen. The lecture part is particularly good, even though the musical background is poor, and interest is heightened by description of various wild beasts shown.

"Ingagi" is a sure fire Barnum attraction. The episode of African native women supposedly going out into the jungle to live with the giant gorillas is one of those things that will create a sensational storm of interest. The picture can be ballyhooed on that premise alone and hit for heavy grosses. But it will be best to soft pedal the authenticity of what is shown on the screen; better to sell the picture as a freak piece of entertainment—and let it go at that.

Comedies O. K. with this.

Produced by Sir Hubert Winstead. Released by Congo Pictures, Ltd. Adapted by Adam Hull Shirk, Supervised by William S. Campbell. Photographed by Joyce, Dillingham and Webster. Musical score by Edward Gage. Grace McKee, film director. Length, 7,200 feet. Running time, 80 minutes.

The Furies

(First National—All Talker)

Mediocre

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THERE is nothing to get excited about in this one, which hardly passes muster as fair entertainment. It's a mystery drama, with a murder committed and suspicion pointing to several of the principals.

The plot is not difficult of solution and the picture probably will prove a big disappointment to fans, who will be expecting more from H. B. Warner and Lois Wilson. They make the best of their parts, but the story and treatment are against them.

The sequences are jerky. There is some fairly good comedy in the questioning of the servants, whose testimony has been rehearsed to protect the principals at an apartment party. The investigation by the district attorney is one of the picture's best sequences.

Jane Winton, Theodore Von Eltz and Natalie Moorhead haven't a great deal to do. In fact, by the time the end is reached the spectators will be pretty tired of it all. There is an air of theatrics and unreality about it that just doesn't click.

You may get by with this on the strength of Warner and Miss Wilson, but steer clear of promises.

It will need plenty of help from shorts to get this over.

Produced and distributed by First National. From play by Zoe Akins. Scenario and dialogue by Forrest Halsey. Directed by Alan Crosland. Length, 6,606. Running time, 73 mins. Release date, March 16, 1930.

Three Sisters

(Fox—All Talker)

Weak

(Reviewed by Red Kann)

THIS will just about get by. No matter how you approach "Three Sisters," it fails to impress. The picture never appeals as being real.

One of the principal troubles revolves around the casting. The story takes place in Italy and New York with all the characters, except one, presumably dyed-in-the-wool natives of Sunny Italy. That is, the picture would make you believe they were, but the pronouncedly Americanese with which all members of the cast talk, Paul Porcasi excluded, makes it difficult to accept the illusion.

"Three Sisters" has a "Four Sons" theme minus one child and with sexes reversed. Joyce Compton, June Collyer and Addie McPhail are the sisters and Louise Dresser, the mother. All four of them couldn't have possibly been more un-Italian in appearance and performance.

Miss Dresser may usually be depended upon to come through with a pleasing characterization. Here she lives up to promise so far as the role permits her—which isn't far. The girls are all native U. S. A. and even Tom Patricola as Tony never gets over the temperament or the characteristics of the genus Italiano.

On her wedding night, Joyce Compton, one of the sisters, stabs the village banker. Porcasi, as the friend of the family, permits her to escape with Miss McPhail, sister number two, who had returned from her musical studies to attend the nuptials. Exit two of three daughters. June Collyer, as the third, marries Kenneth McKenna, a young Italian count the same night. And so, what was destined to be a festive occasion results in depriving Miss Dresser of all her children.

Then comes the war. The warbling daughter is in Vienna, married to her music teacher. Another is in America and the third dies at childbirth. With her grandson left, the mother goes to Rome, is befriended by Porcasi, who conveniently turns up at the necessary time and the child reverts to his ducal grandparents by court order. But the two daughters, now prosperous, meet miraculously enough in New York, travel to Rome and are reunited with their mother when everything looks darkest.

Pretty average stuff, punctuated here and there by a heart throb. Paul Sloane's direction is routine in character. He rarely succeeds in digging underneath the surface of his characters sufficiently to make them real.

Needs strongest possible support in shorts.

He Knew Women

(Radio Pictures—All Talker)

Clever but Appeal Doubtful

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

LOWELL SHERMAN certainly turns in a capital performance in this comedy. He is cast as a suave though cynical poet who has a way with women. So much so that he finds difficulty in trying to marry the rich widow of his choice, in preference to a poor girl who is infatuated with him. He finally succeeds in selling the girl and her sweetheart an idea, however, even though the girl had charged Sherman had betrayed her.

The story is adroitly told with clever lines, and the fine acting makes up for the slight story. It is liable to be considered too sophisticated by the rank and file of picture-goers. Sherman carries the picture, which is told in straight stage play fashion. Alice Joyce, Frances Dade and David Manners give fine support, but haven't a great deal to do.

Sherman makes a sympathetic character of the poet, who would deny love in order to marry a woman who could support him in luxury. The play was "The Second Man," so-named because of Sherman's inner self, which keeps him following the dictates of his heart. Practically all of the action takes place in the poet's apartment.

Novelty, dramatic and music shorts will help.

Produced by Radio Pictures. Distributed by RKO. From the stage play, "The Second Man," by S. N. Behrman. Directed by Hugh Herbert. Photographed by Edward Cronjager. Length, 6,317 feet. Running time, 70 mins. Release date, May 18, 1930.

The Swellhead

(Tiffany—All Talker)

Dandy Program Offering

(Reviewed by Charles F. Hynes)

THERE is a lot of heart interest, actions and laughs in this picture, which should prove a pleasing offering to any audience. It's a prize fight story, and Jimmy Gleason, as the manager, walks away with honors, although Johnnie Walker in the title role, Marion Shilling as the girl, and Lillian Elliott as the old landlady give fine support.

Walker is a ham prize fighter, whom Jimmie takes under his wing, after Walker's girl puts up the cash. There is a kick in this sequence, for she had only $100, which she wanted Jimmie to bet on Walker, but, instead, he took odds the other way, and the $500 resulting gave him a stake to put over Walker. The latter gets ritzy and finally breaks with his manager. Then, when the girl and the old landlady are insulted by Walker, they call quits. Johnnie hits the skids from then on, and in the crucial fight is being beat up when the old landlady induces Gleason to rush to the ring and manage Walker. Johnnie wins and everything is lovely.

The climax is novel, showing the old landlady, ill in bed, listening to a radio account of the fight. She's throwing a fit when she hears the boy is getting trimmed, and begs Gleason to go to his aid. Jimmie does and gives the boy the necessary advice to enable him to emerge victor.

There's not much depth to the story, which follows somewhat along the same line as "Iron Man," recently-published prize fight story. However, it has laughs and pathos and a slam-bang fight for a windup.

Particularly for your action fans. Use with musical and novelty shorts.

Produced and distributed by Tiffany. Story by A. P. Younger. Scenario by Richard Cahoon. Dialogue by Adele Buffington. Directed by James Flood. Photographed by Jackson Rose and Art Reeves. Length, 7,040 feet. Running time, 78 mins. Release date, Mar. 20, 1930.

Young Man of Manhattan

(Paramount—All Talker)

Splendid

(Reviewed by Robert Hader)

COMBINING a cast of unusual excellence, the directorial ability of Monta Bell and a story of delightful sophistication, "Young Man of Manhattan" packs an appeal that guarantees money at the box-office. While lacking production values as typified by mammoth settings and large casts, it nevertheless is entertainment of the type that creates word-of-mouth advertising. There is not a dull moment or a slackening of tempo throughout.

To Monta Bell should go the laurel wreath for another example of expert direction. The deft, light touch with which he unfolds the story is refreshing; sequences are carried along at a fast pace and ended with a punch climax, and he garners laughs through bits of pantomime as well as spoken gags.

Claudette Colbert is ideally cast as the writer of a "movie column" and her beauty and ability captivate. But it is Charles Ruggles who almost steals the show. As a "drink-a-minute" newspaperman, he gets a roar with almost every line he utters and he embellishes the character with a reality that is highly effective. Norman Foster, playing a sports writer who is always going to do big things, looks and acts the part with satisfaction, although a slight lisp impedes his speech. Ginger Rogers has a minor part as a baby vamp and does it justice.

Katharine Brush's story relates the adventures of the columnist and the sports writer whose marital happiness is wrecked on the shoals of liquor and misunderstood laiasons. The boy goes to the dogs, but is brought back to his senses when he learns that his wife has been blinded by liquor which he had left behind when they parted and which she had imbibed. Although believing that she has fallen in love with another, he goes on the water wagon, finally bats out the book he has been writing for years—and there's the usual clinch. The story is slight, but the treatment puts it over with a bang.

You can make promises for this. Every one will like it.

Cartoons and newsreels are sufficient to round out a program that will satisfy.

Produced and distributed by Paramount. Directed by Monta Bell. From the novel by Katharine Brush. Adapted by Robert Presnell. Photography by Larry William. Length, 7,621 feet. Running time, 85 minutes. Release date, May 17.

Spring Is Here

(First National—All Talker)

Lightweight Program Musical

(Reviewed by Walter R. Greene)

"SPRING IS HERE" is entirely too light and fluffy—with many draggy sequences—and cannot rate better than ordinary program classification. Aside from the comedy characterizations of Louise Fazenda and Ford Sterling, and a few good musical numbers, there is little to intrigue an audience.

As is the case with practically all stage musical comedies, the story plot is very thin. Neither the film adaptation nor direction added anything to materially heighten audience interest of the picture.

First National's singing team, Alexander Gray and Bernice Claire, have the featured spots. Both have good voices, but Gray has an unimpressive screen personality which is certain to limit his popularity in pictures. Miss Claire is okay in her part, but is completely overshadowed by both Louise Fazenda and Ford Sterling in comedy roles.

Inez Courtney, as the younger sister of Miss Claire, carried the comedienne spot most capably. Lawrence Gray is "the other man," and is just average.

Story concerns the love of Terry Clayton for Betty Braley. Clayton is a backward and bashful youth; with the girl falling hard for Steve Alden—full of pep and personality. The family is dominated by Peter Braley, who wants his daughter to marry Clayton. The latter, after Betty drops him overboard for Alden, is advised to make the girl jealous by making violent love to other women. The transition is instant—as always in musical comedies—and Clayton goes at his love making plenty hot. Betty's jealousy is aroused, but she carries through, but her father banishes Alden from the home. Alden returns that night ostensibly to elope with Betty, but Clayton steps in and carries the girl off to the preacher's himself.

Picture is retarded by attempt to follow closely musical comedy staging.

"Name" comedies with fast action are greatly needed here.

The Czar of Broadway

(Universal—All Talker)

Another Gangster Picture

(Reviewed by Don Ashbaugh)

THE Czar of Broadway," based on Arnold Rothstein's life, shows the notorious gambler in an entirely different light than previous productions based on the same subject. Although not outstanding in entertainment qualities, the picture nevertheless shapes up as all around good melodramatic entertainment for regulation program bookings. It will probably show greater box office strength in theatres outside of first runs.

Betty Compson as the girl is the "name" bet to put this one over. Although John Wray is excellent in the title spot, he is new to picture audiences and cannot be depended upon to help at the box office. The plot concerns the efforts of a newspaper editor to prove how villainous a gangster really is in his hold on the activities of a city. John Harron has the spot as the reporter. He is entirely satisfactory but the part is neither convincing nor consistent. The story tends to wander at times but manages on the whole to command interest.

There is a novel twist in the friendship of the gangster and the reporter with the former dying at the finish. Several sequences are above ordinary level, notably that of the poker game between the gangster and the boy.

Claude Allister, as the kid-glove gunman who bumps off victims without a qualm, handles a clever character bit excellently. Edmund Breese, Wilbur Mack and King Baggott also appear in worthwhile characterizations. Direction by William James Craft was satisfactory.

Short Subject Reviews

Yamekraw

(Vitaphone Varieties No. 1009—1 Reel)

Novel and Different

HERE is a short subject that gets far off the beaten track and leaves its many ordinary brethren in the same field considerably in the rear. "Yamekraw" is described as a negro symphony.

The subject is imaginative, photographically and musically. It is extremely modern, jazzy, hot and as expressive as a musical narrative can be when developed properly. This might be termed as a saga of negro life set to the rhythm of spirituals and the brashness of jazz saxaphones.

The sets, for instance, are lighted in the mood of the subject and are photographed entirely at angles in accordance with a recognized something-or-other in modern art. Murray Roth directed and injected into his treatment much imagination. Running time, 9 minutes.

Worth a play in advertising. It's different, if bewildering in its effect. Will help a weak feature.

Sid's Long Count

(Universal-Silent—2 Reels)

Lacks Laughs

THE cast works hard but it might as well be shoveling coal. Sid Saylor, after going through some stereotyped stuff as a prize fighter, becomes a demonstrater of an electrical reducing vibrator which he operates on the streets, apparently getting the current out of the air. Slow and pointless. Running time, 19 minutes.

Run it with a good feature.

School Mates

(Universal-Talker—2 Reels)

Fair

ANOTHER of the "Sporting Youth" series and mildly entertaining in spots. It's all about a fraternity initiation with a burglar butting in for a touch of melodramatics. Loosely directed and marked by considerable ham acting. Suitable for those who are not hard to please. Running time, 18 minutes. Director, Ray Taylor.

Needs strong support.

The Voice of Hollywood

(Tiffany—1 Reel)

NUMBER 8 and another of these entertaining series of Tiffany broadcasts from Station S-T-A-R. Ben Turpin is the master of ceremonies, and gets off some good laughs on his cross-eyes. He introduces Madge Bellamy, Alberta Vaughn, Kit Guard and Mickey McGuire. Running time, 11 minutes.

Good for any bill.

Kiddie Kabaret

(Mayfair—2 Reels)

Cute but Dull

AS a novelty this cabaret show staged by a bunch of Hollywood kids is cute, but gets tiresome due to the subject's length. With revue stuff being worked to death, it misses as entertainment, for although some of the kids are clever, the majority need more training. The staging is not so hot, either. On the strength of novelty, it may get by, but that's about all. Running time, 20 minutes.

For a kiddie entertainment, okeh.

Roman Punch

(Terrytoon-Educational—½ Reel)

Good Cartoon

PAUL TERRY is clicking regularly with these new sound cartoons. This one has plenty of laughs. It's all about an animal show staged in the Roman Coliseum, with gladiators and animals galore. There's plenty of excitement in the arena when the ferocious lion puts on his act. That sequence showing the gang giving a college cheer for the favorite is a wow. Running time, 8 minutes.

For any kind of bill where comedy fits.

Indian Pudding

(Terrytoon-Educational—½ Reel)

Terry Clicks Again

THESE Paul Terry cartoons are maintaining a consistently high average for laughs. This one is taken on the plains, where the Indians try to capture the fair young maiden. It has some wild bits which are good for laughs. Running time, 8 minutes.

Any spot where short comedy wanted.

Follow the Swallow

(Hamilton-Educational—2 Reels)

Not So Hot

This has some laughs, but they are few and far between. Accordingly, the subject drags. Hamilton is shown with friend wife and the kiddie at an amusement park, where the various mechanical tricks are used to get laughs. Lloyd wins a raffle on a Ford, but baby swallows the lucky coin. A doctor's aid then is solicited. Plenty of advertising for the Ford and few funny gags. Running time, 22 minutes.

This needs strong feature support.

Peek-a-Boo

(Universal-Silent—2 Reels)

Let's Cry

ARTHUR LAKE as a combination bell hop and amateur detective. You can guess the rest. It's the old formula with Lake exhibiting his St. Vitus acting in a conglomeration of episodes that are so feeble they ought to be chloroformed. Very sad. Running time, 20 minutes. Director, S. Newfield.

Use it with a good feature so the customers won't kick.

Honeymoon Zeppelin

(Sennett-Educational—2 Reels)

Another Sennett Hit

SOME great air stuff makes this comedy stand out. It hasn't as many or as hearty laughs as some of the other Sennetts, but it makes up for this with thrills. It's about a glider champ, who's continually battling with his sweetie. A rival sells the girl an idea, and she goes with him on a Zeppelin trip to Havana. They are slated to be married en route, but when the boy friend hears the marriage plans over the radio, he charters a plane and overtakes the airship. He drops to the top of the ship and then climbs into the cabin in time to halt the wedding, and take his leave with the girl via a parachute. Daphne Pollard provides a big share of the laughs, but she hasn't enough to do. Marjorie Beebe, Nick Stuart and Edward Earle comprise the remainder of the cast. This has a raft of exploitation possibilities. Running time 22 minutes.

Good for any bill.

Upholds Police Ban on "Alibi"; Exhibs Nicked

The state Supreme court has set aside the decision of Judge Harry Fisher which, six months ago, resulted in the issuance of an injunction restraining the Chicago police from interfering with the showing of "Alibi" (U.A.). In the meantime, however, "Alibi" has completed its Chicago bookings and the only hardship which will be effected by the court's decision will fall upon several lax exhibitors who failed to play the picture on the dates assigned them and, in consequence, will be obliged to pay, although restrained now from showing it.

Police Commissioner William Russell contested Judge Fisher's action on the grounds that the picture "tended to create contempt and hatred for the entire police force." "Alibi" has been refused a permit by the Chicago board of censors.

Evanston "Blues" Plot Overthrow of Election

The organized "blues" of Evanston, suburb, are girding to prevent repeal of the ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows on the grounds that only two wards returned a clear majority for Sunday movies in the recent election. The issue carried by a total of 56 votes, but organized opposition is so strong here there is some question as to whether or not the city council will be guided by the vote. The "blues" have retained Chas. Case, eminent Chicago attorney, to contest any effort to legalize Sunday movies. Theatre interests may precipitate action, in the event the city council does not effect the repeal, by providing a test case, it is said. One of the two Evanston theatres may remain open on Sunday and, in the event of an arrest, obtain an injunction restraining the police by invoking the authority of the popular ballot.

Knolack Explains Contract

Bookers in all Universal exchanges are being instructed in the provisions of the company's new contract and, in addition, are being taught proper disc inspection methods in order that imperfections may be discovered before the discs are shipped out of the exchange, thus avoiding costly delays for replacements and protecting the good will of satisfied customers. S. E. Knolack of the New York Universal office, was instructor at the local exchange this week.

Wabash Ave.—South

THE ballots had been counted and Illinois had placed its first woman candidate for United States senator on the Republican ticket. Charles S. Deneen, a power in Illinois politics for a decade, had been shouldered aside by a woman opponent, Ruth Hanna McCormick. The newspapers wanted to interview her; their photographers wanted pictures. So did the news reels. The Pathe cameraman 'phoned Gene Couer from the Republican candidate's office at the Palmer House. Mrs. McCormick was leaving for Washington immediately and would be in her office for only a few minutes on her way to the train. Had refused all requests for interviews emphatically. Nothing to say to anyone. Reporters, photographers and newsreel men had all left for the station in hopes of getting her as she boarded the train.

Gene had a plan. He convinced Mrs. McCormick's secretary that the lady candidate had agreed to read several congratulatory telegrams at the station for the benefit of the sound news and induced the secretary to entrust the telegrams to the cameraman who was to bring them to the train.

A few minutes later Mrs. McCormick entered her office. On her heels was the Pathe cameraman, protesting that the noise of trains and depot crowds made it impossible to record her voice at the station. It must be done in the office. Despite the fact that it was ten minutes to train time, Mrs. McCormick entered into the spirit of Gene's strategy and consented to read the messages to an imaginary phone caller. Mrs. McCormick's daughter decided that the phone must ring for the benefit of the sound recording devices, so she stepped into an adjacent room and called her mother's desk. Mrs. McCormick read the messages into the phone and the microphones while the cameras clicked, and the Pennsylvania's Golden Arrow surrounded by reporters and cameramen waited.

While they were still waiting prints were being made in the Pathe office and a screening was in progress. A surprise was being unfolded. Mrs. McCormick's phone rings. Her daughter's voice, caught from the next room by the enterprising "mikes," comes clearly:

"Is this Mrs. McCormick? Well, this is Mr. Deneen's little girl," the voice pronounces. "I wanted to tell you that I think you're a dirty old meanie for beating my papa." In answer to which, Mrs. McCormick reads a congratulatory cablegram from Charlie Dawes, American ambassador to England.

With the look of a martyr, Gene will tell you what a sacrifice it was to have to cut Miss McCormick's greeting to her mother.

Vandalia Sunday Battle

Sunday movies, which have been available in Vandalia, Ill., in spite of an ordinance prohibiting Sunday shows, may be formally legalized in the near future. A special election gave the theatres an eighty-vote majority. Ministers are fighting the city council's announced intention of repealing the old ordinance on the authority of the election.

CONDUCTED BY AN EXHIBITOR FOR EXHIBITORS

"Optimism"

IN EVERY business you will find pessimists and calamity-howlers. So why expect anything different from the show game? It is a fact that the business is overcrowded with such pests anyway.

But if you were to analyze conditions as they actually exist right now, plus the outlook for the immediate future, you would, in all probability, second our motion that everything looks brighter for the average showman.

Where, six months to a year ago, they were faced with gloomy prospects and a tremendous amount of uncertainty, they now are finding that business is improving and will, no doubt, continue to improve. The public's taste for sound and talkies has given the entire show-business an upward trend and with everything pointing to a continuation of such conditions, we all start developing that feeling of security which makes for happier surroundings and connections.

And where "pull" predominated, we are finding that "ability" is going much further. It's a fact boys, the die IS cast. The day of the showman is here and to those of you, capable of using showmanship in the right way, the avenue for progress is long and wide.

But it requires unity to not only keep up this great start, but to continue the march of progress towards the goal that we all seek and hope to attain before we reach an age that will find us left by the wayside.

We are proud to feel that we have done our little bit to help the great cause of the showman along. If our efforts for the interchanging of ideas have helped YOU as an individual or the whole of you as a group, we have achieved what the pessimists termed the impossible.

If brother showmen, all over the world, find a feeling of friendship through their contacts with each other on the pages of the Club each week, then we HAVE helped.

Never mind what the "crying-army of chronic kickers" try to tell you. Keep your shoulder to the wheel and you will reap the harvest of your energies. Keep your sunny side up all the time and unless we are greatly mistaken you will gradually get beneath the skin of the hardest boiled boss that ever bossed a showman. Once you get in right you need only keep up your fine work to win recognition.

If merchants in your town tell you things are rotten, smile and explain how a little showmanship can create business for them just the same as it does for you.

If you're floundering about and waiting for the "sorry we can't use you any more" announcement, it will come sooner than you expect. So try taking the other viewpoint and look for the "increase and advancement" notice. It's better all around. "Chick"

EXPLOITATION REVIEWS!

"MONTANA MOON"
M-G-M

What could be sweeter than a great audience picture to go out and rave to the customers about? Well, here you have one, possessed of a wealth of exploitation material, plus entertainment that will surely live up to anything you say in your advertising of the attraction.

Do you remember "Dancing Daughters"? Well, you can capitalize on that angle for this one because of the nature of the story. And when it comes to names, you have besides the star, Joan Crawford, the following: John Mack Brown, Benny Rubin, Cliff Edwards, Ricardo Cortez, Karl Dane and Dorothy Sebastian. My own suggestion, with the above cast, is to play up, after the star, Cliff Edwards and Benny Rubin. They are absolutely a riot and should afford you ample opportunity to plug them in all your advertising. A line such as: "Benny Rubin, plus Cliff Edwards, plus one flivver, minus one tooth——?"

Another angle you can work out is that this picture is a musical western comedy. I wouldn't overdo this phase because it is apt to give them a wrong impression or confuse them with the many filmusicals which are crowding the market right now.

For tie-ups, you can figure on using dress shops on quite a large scale, because while the background of the picture is western, Joan and her friends display some mighty neat looking frocks that will certainly appeal to the ladies of the audience.

Atmospheric fronts lend themselves to this one in great style. The fixing up of a lobby or foyer corner to represent a cowboy and Crawford at a typical camp-fire setting, should prove eye-arresting if worked out right, and a photograph, hidden in the same setting, to play the songs from the picture, especially "The Moon Is Low," would make it even more impressive.

Cut-outs of Joan, Brown and the two comedians, Edwards and Rubin, will help you on your marquee if you go in for this kind of stuff. Announcements calling attention to the star's past success will build up to the opening for this one. It will probably be voted the best of her "talkie" career by your patrons.

If you care to go into street ballyhoo stuff, you can assemble a group of cowboys and one girl (to resemble Joan as near as possible) and let them ride through the city and especially the downtown section where such a gag will make 'em stop and look.

A suggestion for a teaser campaign might be a line like this: "Girls, what would you do under a Montana moon?" "Let Joan Crawford show you the latest styles in love while under the 'Montana Moon.'"

Music stores will naturally co-operate because of the several songs used throughout the picture. Besides "The Moon Is Low," you have "Montana Call," "Happy Cowboy" and 'Sing a Song of Old Montana." Get your radio station to plug the "Moon Is Low" number because it is a peach of a crooning song. If you can work the different local orchestras, have them plug it as well and if possible get the announcement with such tie-ups to call attention to the picture. If they get that tune in their heads they will be humming it all the time.

You don't have to hesitate one moment about playing up Joan to the skies. Let her predominate in all your advertising, but don't forget to give Edwards and Rubin second play. Try to combine the two elements and use plenty of good teaser copy in all your advance campaigns. "Take a Lesson in Modern Love from Joan Crawford," "It Took a Great Big Cowboy to Tame the Wild Joan" and other lines of a similar character will answer the purpose.

The possibilities are unlimited. The picture is box office honey, so don't let anything stand in your way of putting it over. They'll like it and then some. But don't try letting the star's name do all the plugging for the picture. That may be well enough when a bum one comes along. With "Montana Moon" you want to make sure that every possible customer knows that you have a corking good picture and con-

In presenting these exploitation reviews, it was never our intention to make them parallel a press sheet or exploitation broadside. Our sole object was to pass on our own viewpoint about these different pictures and, if among all of the various suggestions offered, you find a thought, here and there, which appeals to you, then we have not labored in vain.

A very distinct line should be drawn between these reviews and any other material published or broadcast by the various companies, in that they are trying to get their points over to you and we are trying to get ours. If all the publicity departments in the show business were to function in the interests of the average house manager, who must be exploitation man besides, it would be a marvelous thing for the business. But since each is concerned with his own various problems, we have attempted to start something that would be really different, and apparently we are succeeding.

We have every hope that this phase of the Club's activities will not only continue, but expand and improve as we go along. It was certainly a man-sized chunk we bit off when we took this added burden onto ourselves, but we will try to feel that the ends justify the work involved. On such weeks as we can only pass along but one or two reviews, you must bear with us and try to remember that other matters of equal importance in the Club's operation have deprived us of the time needed to review pictures.

"Chick"

"LADIES OF LEISURE"
Columbia

There is hardly a town or hamlet on the map where the name David Belasco is unknown, so you will have a good name to start off with by connecting Belasco with this picture through advertising, extensively, the fact that it was adapted from his famous stage play. The more this angle means to you the more it should be plugged.

Some of the names in the cast should certainly mean something to your theatre. You have Lowell Sherman, Ralph Graves, Marie Prevost, Nance O'Neill, Barbara Stanwyck and Johnnie Walker. The same advice in the first paragraph applies here. Play up those names holding the greatest value to your b. o. They all play parts worthy of whatever billing you give them.

Teaser material, of the interest-creating type, might be worked out along lines as follows: "A Story of a Girl Who Went Through Hell to Find Happiness," "A Story of Real Love from Real Life That Will Thrill You." And similar lines all aimed at the same objective. The same thought could be applied to your first big announcement, but at any rate, make sure that your teaser material ties right in with your regular ads when they are run in the papers.

This type of story holds unusual appeal to the women-folks and should therefore be worked from every conceivable angle in this direction. Personal letters from the management of the theatre. Previews for the leading ladies' clubs of the city, with their opinions of the story, might be worked if YOU consider the idea feasible yourself. Get the ladies steamed up and anxious to see this picture and you will certainly increase your regular b. o. receipts.

Get a set of the stills and they will immediately give you an idea what kind of store tie-ups are possible on this attraction. From the picture itself, we should think that Furniture Stores (bedroom suites), Household Appliances, Jewelry Stores, Gents' Shops, Ladies' Wearing Apparel, Travel Bureaus (scenes show Stanwyck and Sherman on boat), Art Shops (Graves plays part of artist) and others besides. Good window displays, plus the right kind of copy for the picture plug in those windows should do lots in helping them want to see what it's all about on the screen.

Good teaser copy might include "What do they do, those 'Ladies of Leisure'?" "Dangerous, yet lovely, those 'Ladies of Leisure,'" "You'll hate, then pity these 'Ladies of Leisure.'"

Front displays could be worked out with life-size cutouts of Stanwyck and Prevost, beautifully gowned. Sherman in a full dress suit will most always get a second look from the femmes. Possibly the exchange posters will (by chance) give you stuff that will help you work the above cutout angle. If you happen to have a spare corner or space in your lobby or foyer, you could fix it up with borrowed figures from some shop in town, plus gorgeous gowns, to carry out the effect, and surely you can promote such things through a credit card on the display. Arrange it in a theatrical and showmanlike manner, as though the folks are witnessing a scene from the picture. The customers (especially the ladies) will stop, if only to take another look at the gowns.

A last minute thought: Try to work out a special ladies' tea matinee for every afternoon of the run. You can tie up a different ladies' club or society for each afternoon and they can sell tickets on a percentage plan. It will bring many new customers into the theatre and will also create some goodwill from an angle where it can be made to count for a whole lot in the future.

MANAGERS' ROUND TABLE CLUB

EXPLOITATION REVIEWS!

Don't run this one where it "hits" on days when you play to big kiddie business. Not only is the picture N.G. for them, but it won't mean a thing to 99 per cent of them anyway. It's an adult's picture in every sense of the word and your appeal in advertising, or otherwise, should be aimed in that direction. Trying to work in a high school night or anything else like it will be apt to bring you trouble and adverse criticism. Keep clear of "bum steers" and you should be able to bring some extra dollars into the theatre.

"THE BENSON MURDER CASE"

Paramount

If any of the other Van Dine stories pleased your patrons, then this one will go over. Pictures of this kind lend themselves to exploitations and publicity in a natural sort of a way and most any kind of a showman can do wonders with it.

Your best star bet is, of course, William Powell. And since he comes back in a role which he helped make famous on the screen, you would be crazy not to play it up from that angle in every possible way. Newspaper teaser lines, such as, "Here's Philo Vance Again," "Philo Vance solves another famous mystery" and similar stuff will surely lend to your interest-creating gags. Play up his work in the other stories. Tell them what Philo Vance accomplished in solving the famous "Canary Murder Case," "The Greene Murder Case," etc., etc. It offers vast possibilities and should be used to the best possible advantage because of the connection, not only in the series of stories, but because he played the same role in the others. Keep away from connecting him with "Street of Chance" because of the wide difference in the type of story and since it may detract from your intensive campaign connecting Powell with the character of Vance.

You have a stock market angle which should also add to your exploitation stuff, especially if you can tie it in to good advantage. Get yourself some tickers, fake 'em, build 'em, do anything to create that atmosphere in connection with the picture, as it adds to the interest of the other exploitation angles. A lobby or foyer display with the use of a ticker (in operation, if possible), cutouts of Powell and Pallette—the latter is also well known as Sergeant Heath in the previous Van Dine pictures.

Surround your entire trailer and house advertising stuff with as much mystery as possible. All sorts of effects can be worked out in this respect and it will do a lot towards building up more than passing interest. Cards passed out to departing patrons by your ushers should start the mystery-ball a rolling, by the use of good mysterious copy. This can be changed with each change of program for several weeks prior to the opening announcement. Mysterious copy on trolleys, busses and taxis will likewise contribute to the same impression and will make the customers wonder what it is all about. Then when the copy is changed to tie in with the picture you have already accomplished a whale of a lot of start-off material.

Ticker-tape in an envelope can be used for both teaser as well as current copy to plug the picture. Imprint the small envelope to read something like this: "Here is the reason for the 'Benson Murder Case,' coming to the Blank Theatre," etc. It will give them something to talk about besides fulfilling its purpose of creating interest.

Other sidelights worthy of consideration are, special previews for the police department, mayor, lawyers, etc. Tags to be worn by the kiddies with copy something like this: "DETECTIVE, trying to solve 'THE BENSON MURDER CASE,' coming to the Blank Theatre." A group of ballyhoo men, all dressed like Sherlock Holmes, with exaggerated magnifying glasses, typical Holmes pipes in their mouths and all the other trimmings necessary to carry out the effect. They can work individually or in groups. Down on their knees at busy intersections of the city. Staring at men or women and comparing them with, supposedly, printed descriptions. This sort of stuff is bound to get 'em laughing and with a little pull you should get a break from your newspapers. Same gag in lobby should prove effective. As to means of passing along the connection between such a ballyhoo and the picture, you can work that out to best suit your conditions. Cards, signs or sealed envelopes, are all feasible for this gag.

Store tie-ups can be effected by a co-operative arrangement, whereby every merchant in on the tie-up should prominently display signs reading: "Whether You're Shopping for...(merchandise)..., or Shopping for Thrills, See 'The Benson Murder Case' at the Blank Theatre." You furnish the signs and the merchant gives you the space in his window, either for just the sign, or for some sort of a good display tying the theatre and the store together. This one is workable in every line of business and if you stand in right with your tradespeople you should get some sort of help to put the idea over.

If your paper runs a financial page, you should use that page for good teaser copy. The greater the interest in your city in financial affairs, the more play this angle should receive.

The picture has everything a live-wire showman wants. So go to it.

"FREE AND EASY"

M-G-M

If you start out to sell this one, you should know right from the start that the title don't mean anything at all, other than that it's the title of a song which breaks along towards the finish.

The title and advance notices were supposed to convey the thought that this was a Buster Keaton picture, but when it opened at the Capitol in New York, the announcements, advertising and trailers carried his name among all the others, including William Haines, Lionel Barrymore, William Collier, Sr., Gwen Lee, Karl Dane and others. I should hate to pass along such advice to the boys throughout the country as it certainly represents poor judgment. Those characters, for the most part, make mighty small appearances in the picture.

The actual cast, if you want facts, consists of Buster Keaton, Anita Page, Trixie Friganza and Robert Montgomery (if that means anything to you). The rest are only seen in passing sequences and don't add one bit to the value of the production.

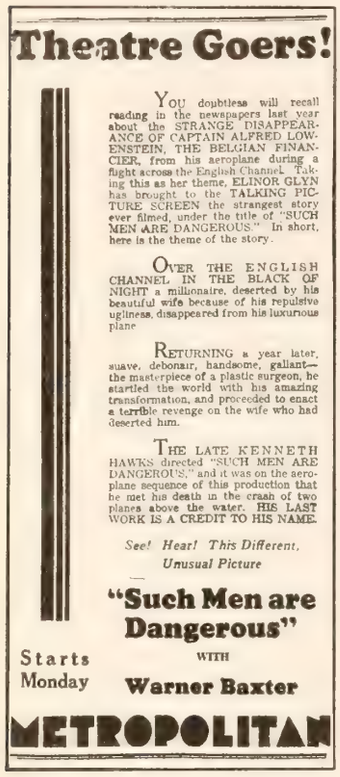
As for the exploitation possibilities of the picture itself, you can play up the "real" shots of the story taken right in the studio. The comedy slants, especially as put over by Keaton and Friganza, will get some mighty good laughs and surrounded with a real interest-provoking campaign, built up before the opening announcements, it ought to get over with pretty good results.

One line in the picture lends itself particularly well to both teaser and regular use, and that is "The Sween Has Cooned." I'd play it up for all it is worth, and it's worth plenty in this picture. The girls will feel bad about Anita not making good in Hollywood, but even they will get over that. Advertised properly, they won't care an awful lot because it is Buster Keaton's picture and what happens to him is of first importance to andience reaction, providing they know he is the star.

A tie-up with your Chamber of Commerce or other local organizations to sponsor a "Popularity Contest" for the prettiest girl in the town, works right in with this picture and by a series of eliminations on your stage, it will build up considerable interest if you make an announcement from the stage, each elimination night, that the winner will be selected on the opening evening of "Free and Easy," a picture in which Anita Page starts from her home-town as a beauty winner, to make a success of a movie career. Try to line up your merchants and combine a good Fashion Show with all the trimmings into this suggestion. If you can't engineer it along those lines, you can still try to work it as a straight theatre stunt.

For a display you might try to build a battery of fake movie cameras and erect them on top of the marquee. Some funny cutouts of Keaton along with the display will add to it considerably. The same idea could be worked out for front or lobby displays to plug the picture and fit the attraction perfectly.

"How Buster Messed Up the Movies," "Buster 'Busts' Up Hollywood," "How NOT to Be a Movie Actor," all constitute good copy for your teasers, house programs, trailers, or regular newspaper ads. Create and build up as much interest as possible on the Hollywood theme and sell it from both the background as well as the star angles. Keep away from any mention of the "supposedly" big name cast, other than to let them know that they appear in the picture, but DON'T emphasize it too much, unless you are willing to stand for whatever kickbacks you may get.



Another thought which may appeal to you is the idea of staging comedy screen tests on your stage for several nights, before and during the run of the picture. If you can work this suggestion out and handle it in a showmanlike manner it will certainly draw some extra money into the b. o.

This type of picture lends itself to street ballyhoo gags and of course one of the best bets along this line is an open, flat truck with either cutout figures or real ballyhoo men taking the parts of director, cameraman and actors. Suitable copy can be attached to such trucks, similar to the teaser lines above about Hollywood.

Borland Injects A Novel Slant In His Advertising

Novelty seems to be the keynote of the work being turned out on every new change of show by Dave Borland, live-wire manager of the Metropolitan Theatre in Regina, Sask., Canada, for it seems that whenever we come across any samples of his work there's a new slant or two in it.

All that you need do in order to agree with us is to take a look at the ad we are reproducing which Dave used as an advance plug for "Such Men Are Dangerous." By selecting a head that would immediately catch the eye, he had the readers of the paper perusing every line of the ad and as you will note from the make-up of the copy it surely sells. In addition to telling the readers a little about the picture he has injected a "news" angle into it, by comparing it with the mysterious disappearance of a former public figure. Ads like this should sell shows in any house and it is our guess that Dave is so well acquainted with his patrons' likes and dislikes that he knows the right medium of copy to use at all times.
